NOTE

THIS volume includes (1) the contents of the three-volume edition of Browning's poems published in 1863; (2) Pauline, taken from the first edition (1833); (3) the contents of the second edition of the 1864 volume entitled Dramatis Personae; (4) two short poems, a Sonnet and Ben Karshook's Wisdom, not reprinted by Browning in any collected edition of his poems; (5) Orpheus and Eurydice, which appeared first in the Royal Academy Catalogue for 1864; and (6) Deaf and Dumb, a poem which appeared in Vol. VI of the six-volume edition of 1868. A few obvious misprints have been corrected, and the 'elucidatory headings' to Sordello, which first appeared in the edition of 1863, have been discarded, in accordance with Browning's own omission of them in the final edition of his poems (1889). No other alterations have been made in the text.

[Dedication to the three volumes of 1863.]

I DEDICATE THESE VOLUMES

TO MY OLD FRIEND

JOHN FORSTER,

GLAD AND GRATEFUL THAT HE WHO, FROM THE FIRST PUBLICATION OF THE VARIOUS POEMS THEY INCLUDE, HAS BEEN THEIR PROMPTTEST AND STAUCHEST HELPER, SHOULD SEEM EVEN NEARER TO ME NOW THAN THIRTY YEARS AGO.

POEMS (1833-1868)

BY

ROBERT BROWNING

In this Volume [pp. 1-102 of this edition] are collected and redistributed the pieces first published in 1842, 1845, and 1855, respectively, under the titles of 'Dramatic Lyrics,' 'Dramatic Romances,' and 'Men and Women.'

Part of these were inscribed to my dear friend John Kenyon: I hope the whole may obtain the honour of an association with his memory.

LYRICS

CAVALIER TUNES :

I. MARCHING ALONG

I

KENTISH Sir Byng stood for his King, Bidding the crop-headed Parliament swing:

And, pressing a troop unable to stoop And see the rogues flourish and honest folk droop,

Marched them along, fifty-score strong, Great-hearted gentlemen, singing this song.

II

God for King Charles! Pym and such carles

To the Devil that prompts 'em their treasonous parles!

Cavaliers, up! Lips from the cup, Hands from the pasty, nor bite take nor sup

Till you're—

(Chorus) *Marching along, fifty-score strong,
Great-hearted gentlemen, singing this song.*

III

Hampden to Hell, and his obsequies' knell

Serve Hazelrig, Fiennes, and young Harry as well!

England, good cheer! Rupert is near!
Kentish and loyalists, keep we not here

(Chorus) *Marching along, fifty-score
strong,
Great-hearted gentlemen, singing this song?*

IV

Then, God for King Charles! Pym and his snarls

To the Devil that pricks on such pestilent carles!

Hold by the right, you double your might;

So, onward to Nottingham, fresh for the fight,

(Chorus) *March we along, fifty-score
strong,
ing this song!*

II. GIVE A ROUSE

I

King Charles, and who'll do him right
now?

King Charles, and who's ripe for fight
now?

Give a rouse: here's, in Hell's despite
now,

King Charles!

¹ Such Poems as the majority in this volume [pp. 1-102 of this edition] might also come properly enough, I suppose, under the head of 'Dramatic Pieces'; being, though often Lyric in expression, always Dramatic in principle, and so many utterances of so many imaginary persons, not mine.—R. B.

II

Who gave me the goods that went since?
Who raised me the house that sank
once?

Who helped me to gold I spent since?
Who found me in wine you drank once?

(Chorus) King Charles, and who'll do him right now?

*King Charles, and who's ripe
for fight now?*

Give a rouse: here's in Hell's despite now.

King Charles!

III

To whom used my boy George quaff else,
By the old fool's side that begot him?
For whom did he cheer and laugh else, While Noll's damned troopers shot him?

(Chorus) *King Charles, and who'll do
him right now?*

*King Charles, and who's ripe
for fight now?*

Give a rouse: here's, in Hell's despite now,

King Charles!

III. BOOT AND SADDLE

I

Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!
Rescue my Castle, before the hot day Brightens to blue from its silvery grey,

(Chorus) Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!

II

Ride past the suburbs, asleep as you'd say;

Many's the friend there, will listen and pray

'God's luck to gallants that strike up the lay—

(Chorus) *Boot, saddle, to horse, and
away!*

III

Forty miles off, like a roebuck at bay, Flouts Castle Brancepeth the Roundheads' array:

Who laughs, 'Good fellows ere this, by my fay,

away!*

IV

Who? My wife Gertrude; that, honest and gay,

Laughs when you talk of surrendering,
'Nay!

I've better counsellors; what counsel they?

away!*

THE LOST LEADER

I

Just for a handful of silver he left us, Just for a riband to stick in his coat—Found the one gift of which fortune bereft us,

Lost all the others she lets us devote;
They, with the gold to give, doled him out silver,

So much was theirs who so little allowed;

How all our copper had gone for his service!

Rage—were they purple, his heart had been proud!

We that had loved him so, followed him, honoured him,

Lived in his mild and magnificent eye, Learned his great language, caught his clear accents,

Made him our pattern to live and to die!

Shakespeare was of us, Milton was for
us,

Burns, Shelley, were with us,—they watch from their graves!

He alone breaks from the van and the freemen,

He alone sinks to the rear and the slaves!

II

We shall march prospering,—not thro' his presence;

Songs may inspirit us,—not from his lyre;

Deeds will be done,—while he boasts his quiescence,

Still bidding crouch whom the rest bade aspire:

Blot out his name, then, record one lost soul more,

One task more declined, one more footpath untrod,
One more triumph for devils and sorrow for angels,

One wrong more to man, one more insult to God !
Life's night begins : let him never come back to us !

There would be doubt, hesitation and pain, Forced praise on our part—the glimmer of twilight,

Never glad confident morning again !
Best fight on well, for we taught him,— strike gallantly,

Menace our heart ere we master his
own ;

Then let him receive the new knowledge and wait us,

Pardoned in Heaven, the first by the throne !

HOW THEY BROUGHT THE GOOD NEWS FROM GHENT TO AIX ' [16—]

I

I SPRANG to the stirrup, and Joris, and
he ;

I galloped, Dirck galloped, we galloped all three ;

'Good speed !' cried the watch, as the gate-bolts undrew ;

'Speed !' echoed the wall to us galloping through ;

Behind shut the postern, the lights sank to rest,

And into the midnight we galloped abreast.

II

Not a word to each other ; we kept the great pace

Neck by neck, stride by stride, never changing our place ;

I turned in my saddle and made its girths tight,

Then shortened each stirrup, and set the pique right,

Rebuckled the cheek-strap, chained slacker the bit,

Nor galloped less steadily Roland a whit.

'Twas moonset at starting ; but while we drew near

Lokeren, the cocks crew and twilight dawned clear ;

At Boom, a great yellow star came out to see ;

At Duffeld, 'twas morning as plain as could be ;

And from Mecheln church-steeple we heard the half-chime,

So Joris broke silence with, 'Yet there is time !'

At Aerschot, up leaped of a sudden the sun,

And against him the cattle stood black every one,

To stare thro' the mist at us galloping
past,

And I saw my stout galloper Roland at
last,

With resolute shoulders, each butting

The haze, as some bluff river headland its spray.

And his low head and crest, just one sharp ear bent back

For my voice, and the other pricked out on his track ;

And one eye's black intelligence,—ever that glance

O'er its white edge at me, his own master, askance !

And the thick heavy spume-flakes which aye and anon

His fierce lips shook upwards in galloping on.

VI

By Hasselt, Dirck groaned ; and cried Joris, 'Stay spur !

Your Roos galloped bravely, the fault's not in her,

We'll remember at Aix'—for one heard the quick wheeze

Of her chest, saw the stretched neck and staggering knees,

And sunk tail, and horrible heave of the flank,

As down on her haunches she shuddered and sank.

So we were left galloping, Joris and I, Past Looz and past Tongres, no cloud in the sky;
 The broad sun above laughed a pitiless laugh,
 'Neath our feet broke the brittle bright stubble like chaff; Till over by Dalhem a dome-spire sprang white,
 And 'Gallop,' gasped Joris, 'for Aix is in sight!'

VIII

'How they'll greet us!'—and all in a moment his roan Rolled neck and croup over, lay dead as a stone;
 And there was my Roland to bear the whole weight Of the news which alone could save Aix from her fate,
 With his nostrils like pits full of blood to the brim,
 And with circles of red for his eyesockets' rim.

IX

Then I cast loose my buffcoat, each holster let fall, Shook off both my jack-boots, let go belt and all, Stood up in the stirrup, leaned, patted his ear,
 Called my Roland his 'pet-name, my horse without peer; Clapped my hands, laughed and sang, any noise, bad or good, Till at length into Aix Roland galloped and stood.

And all I remember is, friends flocking round
 As I sat with his head 'twixt my knees on the ground;
 And no voice but was praising this Roland of mine,
 As I poured down his throat our last measure of wine, Which (the burgesses voted by common consent)
 Was no more than his due who brought good news from Ghent.

THROUGH THE METIDJA TO ABD-EL-KADR

1842

I

As I ride, as I ride,
 With a full heart for my guide,
 So its tide rocks my side,
 As I ride, as I ride,
 That, as I were double-eyed,
 He, in whom our Tribes confide, Is descried, ways untried
 As I ride, as I ride.

II

As I ride, as I ride
 To our Chief and his Allied,
 Who dares chide my heart's pride
 As I ride, as I ride?
 Or are witnesses denied—Through the desert waste and wide Do I glide unespied
 As I ride, as I ride?

III

As I ride, as I ride,
 When an inner voice has cried,
 The sands slide, nor abide
 (As I ride, as I ride)
 O'er each visioned homicide That came vaunting (has he lied?)
 To reside—where he died,
 As I ride, as I ride.

IV

As I ride, as I ride,
 Ne'er has spur my swift horse plied, Yet his hide, streaked and pied,
 As I ride, as I ride, Shows where sweat has sprung and dried,
 —Zebra-footed, ostrich-thighed—How has vied stride with stride
 As I ride as I ride!

V

As I ride, as I ride,
 Could I loose what Fate has tied,
 Ere I pried, she should hide
 (As I ride, as I ride)
 All that's meant me—satisfied
 When the Prophet and the Bride Stop veins I'd have subside
 As I ride, as I ride!

NATIONALITY IN DRINKS

I

My heart sank with our Claret-flask, Just now, beneath the heavy sedges That serve this pond's black face for mask;

And still at yonder broken edges
Of the hole, where up the bubbles glisten, After my heart I look and listen.

II

Our laughing little flask, compell'd Thro' depth to depth more bleak and shady;

As when, both arms beside her held,
Feet straightened out, some gay French lady

Is caught up from life's light and motion,
And dropped into death's silent ocean!

Up jumped Tokay on our table,
Like a pygmy castle-warder, Dwarfish to see, but stout and able,
Arms and accoutrements all in order;
And fierce he looked North, then, wheeling South, Blew with his bugle a challenge to Drouth, Cocked his flap-hat with the tosspotfeather,

Twisted his thumb in his red moustache, Jingled his huge brass spurs together, Tightened his waist with its Buda sash,
And then, with an impudence nought could abash,

Shrugged his hump-shoulder, to tell the beholder,
For twenty such khaves he should laugh but the bolder:

And so, with his sword-hilt gallantly jutting,
And dexter-hand on his haunch abutting,

Went the little man, Sir Ausbruch, strutting!

Here's to Nelson's memory!
'Tis the second time that I, at sea, Right off Cape Trafalgar here, Have drunk it deep in British Beer.
Nelson for ever—any time Am I his to command in prose or rhyme!

Give me of Nelson only a touch,
And I save it, be it little or much:
Here's one our Captain gives, and so Down at the word, by George, shall it go!
He says that at Greenwich they point the beholder

To Nelson's coat, 'still with tar on the shoulder, For he used to lean with one shoulder digging,

Jigging, as it were, and zig-zag-zigging Up against the mizen-rigging!

GARDEN FANCIES

I. THE FLOWER'S NAME

I

HERE's the garden she walked across, Arm in my arm, such a short while
since:

Hark, now I push its wicket, the moss Hinders the hinges and makes them wince!

She must have reached this shrub ere she turned,

As back with that murmur the wicket swung;

For she laid the poor snail, my chance foot spurned,

To feed and forget it the leaves among.

II

Down this side of the gravel-walk She went while her robe's edge brushed the box:

And here she paused in her gracious talk To point me a moth on the milk-white phlox.

Roses, ranged in valiant row,
I will never think that she passed you
by!

She loves you noble roses, I know;
But yonder, see, where the rock-plants lie!

III

This flower she stopped at, finger on lip, Stooped over, in doubt, as settling its claim;

Till she gave me, with pride to make no slip,

Its soft meandering Spanish name:

What a name ! was it love, or praise ?
Speech half-asleep, or song half-awake ?

I must learn Spanish, one of these days,
Only for that slow sweet name's sake.

IV

Roses, if I live and do well,
I may bring her, one of these days,
To fix you fast with as fine a spell, Fit you each with his Spanish phrase ; But do not detain me now ; for she lingers

There, like sunshine over the ground,
And ever I see her soft white fingers Searching after the bud she found.

V

Flower, you Spaniard, look that you grow not,

Stay as you are and be loved for ever !
Bud, if I kiss you 'tis that you blow not, Mind, the shut pink mouth opens never !

For while thus it pouts, her fingers wrestle,

Twinkling the audacious leaves between,
Till round they turn and down they nestle—

Is not the dear mark still to be seen ?

VI

Where I find her not, beauties vanish ; Whither I follow her, beauties flee ;

Is there no method to tell her in Spanish June's twice June since she breathed it with me ?

Come, bud, show me the least of her traces,

Treasure my lady's lightest footfall —Ah, you may flout and turn up your faces—

Roses, you are not so fair after all !

II. SIBRANDUS SCHAFNABURGENSIS

I

Plague take all your pedants, say I !
He who wrote what I hold in my hand,

Centuries back was so good as to die, Leaving this rubbish to cumber the land ;

This, that was a book in its time,
Printed on paper and bound in leather, Last month in the white of a matin-prime
Just when the birds sang all together.

II

Into the garden I brought it to read,
And under the arbut and laurustine Read it, so help me grace in my need,
From title-page to closing line.
Chapter on chapter did I count, As a curious traveller counts Stonehenge ;
Added up the mortal amount ;
And then proceeded to my revenge.

Yonder's a plum-tree with a crevice An owl would build in, were he but sage ;
For a lap of moss, like a fine pont-levis
In a castle of the middle age, Joins to a lip of gum, pure amber ; When he'd be private, there might he spend Hours alone in his lady's chamber :
Into this crevice I dropped our friend.

IV

Splash, went he, as under he ducked, —I knew at the bottom rain-drippings stagnate ;
Next a handful of blossoms I plucked To bury him with, my bookshelf's magnate ;
Then I went indoors, brought out loaf,
Half a cheese, and a bottle of Chablis ;
Lay on the grass and forgot the caf Over a jolly chapter of Rabelais.

V

Now, this morning, betwixt the moss And gum that locked our friend in limbo,
A spider had spun his web across,
And sat in the midst with arms akimbo :
So, I took pity, for learning's sake,
And, de profundis, accentibus tactis, Cantate ! quoth I, as I got a rake, And up I fished his delectable treatise.

VI

Here you have it, dry in the sun,
With all the binding all of a blister, And great blue spots where the ink has run,

And reddish streaks that wink and glisten

O'er the page so beautifully yellow :

Oh, well have the droppings played their tricks !

Did he guess how toadstools grow, this fellow ?

Here's one stuck in his chapter six !

VII

How did he like it when the live creatures

Tickled and toused and browsed him all over,

And worm, slug, eft, with serious features,

Came in, each one, for his right of trover ?

—When the water-beetle with great blind deaf face

Made of her eggs the stately deposit, And the newt borrowed just so much of the preface

As tiled in the top of his black wife's closet ?

VIII

All that life and fun and romping,

All that frisking and twisting and coupling,

While slowly our poor friend's leaves were swamping

And clasps were cracking and covers suppling !

As if you had carried sour John Knox To the play-house at Paris, Vienna or Munich,

Fastened him into a front-row box, And danced off the ballet with trousers and tunic.

IX

Come, old martyr ! What, torment enough is it ?

Back to my room shall you take your sweet self !

Good-bye, mother-beetle ; husband-eft, sufficit !

• See the snug niche I have made on my shelf.

A.'s book shall prop you up, B.'s shall cover you,

Here's C. to be grave with, or D. to be gay,

And with E. on each side, and F. right over you,

Dry-rot at ease till the Judgment-
day !

SOLILLOQUY OF THE SPANISH CLOISTER

I

GR-R-R—there go, my heart's abhor-rence !

Water your damned flower-pots, do !
If hate killed men, Brother Lawrence,

God's blood, would not mine kill you !
What ? your myrtle-bush wants trimming ?

Oh, that rose has prior claims—Needs its leaden vase filled brimming ?

Hell dry you up with its flames !

II

At the meal we sit together :

Salve tibi ! I must hear

Wise talk of the kind of weather,

Sort of season, time of year :

Not a plenteous cork-crop : scarcely

Dare we hope oak-galls, I doubt :

What's the Latin name for 'parsley' ?

What's the Greek name for Swine's Snout ?

III

Whew ! We'll have our platter burnished,

Laid with care on our own shelf !

With a fire-new spoon we're furnished,

And a goblet for ourself,

Rinsed like something sacrificial

Ere 'tis fit to touch our chaps—

Marked with L. for our initial !

(He-he ! There his lily snaps !)

IV

Saint, forsooth ! While brown Dolores

Squats outside the Convent bank,

With Sanchicha, telling stories,

Steeping tresses in the tank,

Blue-black, lustrous, thick like horse-hairs,

—Can't I see his dead eye glow,

Bright as 'twere a Barbary corsair's ?

(That is, if he'd let it show !)

When he finishes refection, Knife and fork he never lays Cross-wise, to my recollection, As do I, in Jesu's praise.
 I, the Trinity illustrate, Drinking watered orange-pulp—
 In three sips the Arian frustrate; While he drains his at one gulp!

VI

Oh, those melons! If he's able We're to have a feast; so nice!
 One goes to the Abbot's table,
 All of us get each a slice.
 How go on your flowers? None double?
 Not one fruit-sort can you spy?
 Strange!—And I, too, at such trouble, Keep them close-nipped on the sly!

There's a great text in Galatians, Once you trip on it, entails Twenty-nine distinct damnations, One sure, if another fails:
 If I trip him just a-dying, Sure of Heaven as sure as can be, Spin him round and send him flying Off to Hell, a Manichee?

VIII

Or, my scrofulous French novel
 On grey paper with blunt type!
 Simply glance at it, you grovel Hand and foot in Belial's gripe:
 If I double down its pages
 At the woeful sixteenth print, When he gathers his greengages, Ope a sieve and slip it in't?

IX

Or, there's Satan!—one might venture Pledge one's soul to him, yet leave Such a flaw in the indenture As he'd miss till, past retrieve, Blasted lay that rose-acacia We're so proud of! Hy, Zy, Hine...
 St, there's Vespers! Plena gratia Ave, Virgo! Gr-r-r—you swine!

THE LABORATORY

[ANCIEN RÉGIME]

I

Now that I, tying thy glass mask tightly, May gaze thro' these faint smokes curling whitely,
 As thou plicest thy trade in this devil's-smithy—
 Which is the poison to poison her, prithee?

II

He is with her; and they know that I
 know Where they are, what they do: they believe my tears flow While they laugh, laugh at me, at me fled to the drear Empty church, to pray God in, for them!—I am here.

Grind away, moisten and mash up thy paste, Pound at thy powder,—I am not in haste!
 Better sit thus, and observe thy strange things,
 Than go where men wait me and dance at the King's.

That in the mortar—you call it a gum?
 Ah, the brave tree whence such gold oozings come!
 And yonder soft phial, the exquisite blue,
 Sure to taste sweetly,—is that poison too?

Had I but all of them, thee and thy treasures,
 What a wild crowd of invisible pleasures!
 To carry pure death in an earring, a casket,
 A signet, a fan-mount, a filigree-basket!

Soon, at the King's, a mere lozenge to give
 And Pauline should have just thirty minutes to live!
 But to light a pastille, and Elise, with her head And her breast and her arms and her hands, should drop dead!

Quick—is it finished? The colour's too grim!
 Why not soft like the phial's, enticing and dim?
 Let it brighten her drink, let her turn it and stir,
 And try it and taste, ere she fix and prefer!

VIII

What a drop! She's not little, no minion like me—That's why she ensnared him: this never will free
 The soul from those masculine eyes,— say, 'no!'
 To that pulse's magnificent come-and-go.

IX

For only last night, as they whispered, I brought My own eyes to bear on her so, that I thought Could I keep them one half minute fixed, she would fall, Shrivelled; she fell not; yet this does it all!

Not that I bid you spare her the pain!
 Let death be felt and the proof remain;
 Brand, burn up, bite into its grace—
 He is sure to remember her dying face!

XI

Is it done? Take my mask off! Nay, be not morose
 It kills her, and this prevents seeing it close:
 The delicate droplet, my whole fortune's fee—
 If it hurts her, beside, can it ever hurt me?

XII

Now, take all my jewels, gorge gold to your fill,
 You may kiss me, old man, on my mouth if you will!
 But brush this dust off me, lest horror it brings Ere I know it—next moment I dance at the King's!

THE CONFESSIONAL

[SPAIN]

I

It is a lie—their Priests, their Pope, Their Saints, their . . . all they fear or hope
 Are lies, and lies—there! through my door
 And ceiling, there! and walls and floor, There, lies, they lie—shall still be hurled Till spite of them I reach the world!

II

You think Priests just and holy men!
 Before they put me in this den
 I was a human creature too,
 With flesh and blood like one of you,
 A girl that laughed in beauty's pride Like lilies in your world outside.

III

I had a lover—shame avant!
 This poor wrenched body, grim and gaunt,
 Was kissed all over till it burned, By lips the truest, love e'er turned His heart's own tint: one night they kissed
 My soul out in a burning mist.

IV

So, next day when the accustomed train
 Of things grew round my sense again,
 'That is a sin,' I said: and slow With downcast eyes to church I go,
 And pass to the confession-chair,
 And tell the old mild father there.

V

But when I falter Beltran's name, 'Ha?' quoth the father; 'much I blame

The sia ; yet wherefore idly grieve ?
Despair not,—strenuously retrieve !
Nay, I will turn this love of thine
To lawful love, almost divine.

VI

For he is young, and led astray,
This Beltran, and he schemes, men say,
To change the laws of church and state ;
So, thine shall be an angel's fate,
Who, ere the thunder breaks, should roll
Its cloud away and save his soul.

For, when he lies upon thy breast, Thou may'st demand and be possessed Of all his plans, and next day steal
To me, and all those plans reveal,
That I and every priest, to purge His soul, may fast and use the scourge.'

VIII

That father's beard was long and white, With love and truth his brow seemed bright ;
I went back, all on fire with joy,
And, that same evening, bade the boy,
Tell me, as lovers should, heart-free, Something to prove his love of me.'

IX

He told me what he would not tell For hope of Heaven or fear of Hell ;
And I lay listening in such pride !
And, soon as he had left my side,
'Tripped to the church by morning-light
'To save his soul in his desquite.

I told the father all his schemes, Who were his comrades, what their dreams ;
'And now make haste,' I said, 'to pray
The one spot from his soul away ;
'To-night he comes, but not the same Will look !' At night he never came,

XI

Nor next night : on the after-morn,
I went forth with a strength new-born.
The church was empty ; something drew
My steps into the street ; I knew It led me to the market-place :
Where, lo, on high, the father's face !

XII

That horrible black scaffold drest, That stapled block . . . God sink the rest !
That head strapped back, that blinding vest,
Those knotted hands and naked breast,
Till near one busy hangman pressed,
And, on the neck these arms caressed. . .

XIII

No part in aught they hope or fear !
No Heaven with them, no Hell !—and
here,
No Earth, not so much space as pens
My body in their worst of dens
But shall bear God and Man my cry, Lies—lies, again—and still, they lie !

CRISTINA

I

SHE should never have looked at me
If she meant I should not love her !
There are plenty . . . men, you call such,
I suppose . . . she may discover
All her soul to, if she pleases,
And yet leave much as she found
them :
But I'm not so, and she knew it When she fixed me, glancing round them.

II

What ? To fix me thus meant nothing ?
But I can't tell (there's my weakness)
What her look said !—no vile cant,
sure,
About 'need to strew the bleakness
Of some lone shore with its pearl-seed, That the sea feels'—no 'strange yearning
That such souls have, most to lavish Where there's chance of least returning.'

III

Oh, we're sunk enough here, God knows !
But not quite so sunk that moments,
Sure tho' seldom, are denied us,
When the spirit's true endowments

Stand out plainly from its false ones,
And apprise it if pursuing Or the right way or the wrong way,
To its triumph or undoing.

IV

There are flashes struck from mid-nights,
There are fire-flames noondays kindle, Whereby piled-up honours perish, Whereby sworn ambitions dwindle, While just this or that poor impulse Which for once had play unstified Seems the sole work of a lifetime That away the rest have trifled.

Doubt you if, in some such moment,
As she fixed me, she felt clearly,
Ages past the soul existed, Here an age 'tis resting merely,
And hence fleets again for ages, While the true end, sole and single,
It stops here for is, this love-way,
With some other soul to mingle ?

VI

Else it loses what it lived for And eternally must lose it ; Better ends may be in prospect, Deeper blisses (if you choose it) But this life's end and this love-bliss Have been lost here. Doubt you whether This she felt as, looking at me, Mine and her souls rushed together.

Oh, observe ! Of course, next moment,
The world's honours, in derision, Trampled out the light for ever :
Never fear but there's provision Of the Devil's to quench knowledge Lest we walk the earth in rapture !
—Making those who catch God's secret Just so much more prize their capture.

VIII

Such am I : the secret's mine now !
She has lost me, I have gained her ;
Her soul's mine : and thus, grown perfect,
I shall pass my life's remainder.

Life will just hold out the proving Both our powers, alone and blended ;
And then, come the next life quickly !
This world's use will have been ended.

THE LOST MISTRESS

I

ALL's over, then : does truth sound bitter
As one at first believes ?
Hark, 'tis the sparrows' good-night twitter
About your cottage eaves !

II

And the leaf-buds on the vine are woolly,
I noticed that, to-day ;
One day more bursts them open fully —You know the red turns grey.

III

To-morrow we meet the same then, dearest ?
May I take your hand in mine ?
Mere friends are we,—well, friends the merest
Keep much that I'll resign :

IV

For each glance of that eye so bright and black, Though I keep with heart's endeavour,— Your voice, when you wish the snowdrops back,
Though it stay in my soul for ever !—

V

Yet I will but say what mere friends say, Or only a thought stronger ;
I will hold your hand but as long as all may,
Or so very little longer !

EARTH'S IMMORTALITIES

SEE, as the prettiest graves will do in
time,
Our poet's wants the freshness of its prime :

Spite of the sexton's browsing horse, the sods Have struggled through its binding osier-rods ;
 Headstone and half-sunk footstone lean awry, Wanting the brick-work promised by-and-by ;
 How the minute grey lichens, plate o'er plate,
 Have softened down the crisp-cut name and date !

LOVE

So, the year's done with !
(Love me for ever !)
 All March begun with, April's endeavour ;
 May-wreaths that bound me June needs must sever ;
 Now snows fall round me, Quenching June's fever—

MEETING AT NIGHT

I

THE grey sea and the long black land ; And the yellow half-moon large and low ;
 And the startled little waves that leap In fiery ringlets from their sleep,
 As I gain the cove with pushing prow, And quench its speed in the slushy sand.

II

Then a mile of warm sea-scented beach ;
 Three fields to cross till a farm appears ;
 A tap at the pane, the quick sharp scratch
 And blue spurt of a lighted match, And a voice less loud, thro' its joys and fears,
 Than the two hearts beating each to each !

PARTING AT MORNING

ROUND the cape of a sudden came the sea,
 And the sun looked over the mountain's rim :
 And straight was a path of gold for him,
 And the need of a world of men for me.

SONG

I

NAY but you, who do not love her,
 Is she not pure gold, my mistress ?
 Holds earth aught—speak truth—above her ?
 Aught like this tress, see, and this tress,
 And this last fairest tress of all,
 So fair, see, ere I let it fall ?

II

Because, you spend your lives in prais-
 ing ;
 To praise, you search the wide world over :
 So, why not witness, calmly gazing, If earth holds aught—speak truth—
 above her ?
 Above this tress, and this I touch But cannot praise, I love so much !

A WOMAN'S LAST WORD

I

LET's contend no more, Love, Strive nor weep :
 All be as before, Love,
 —Only sleep !

II

What so wild as words are ?
 I and thou In debate, as birds are,
 Hawk on bough !

III

See the creature stalking While we speak !
 Hush and hide the talking,
 Cheek on cheek !

IV

What so false as truth is,
 False to thee ?
 Where the serpent's tooth is, Shun the tree—

V

Where the apple reddens Never pry—Lest we lose our Edens, Eve and I !

VI

Be a god and hold me
With a charm !
Be a man and fold me
With thine arm !

Teach me, only teach, Love !
As I ought
I will speak thy speech, Love, Think thy thought—

VIII

Meet, if thou require it, Both demands,
Laying flesh and spirit In thy hands.

IX

That shall be to-morrow Not to-night :
I must bury sorrow
Out of sight :

—Must a little weep, Love, (Foolish me !)
And so fall asleep, Love, Loved by thee.

EVELYN HOPE

I

BEAUTIFUL Evelyn Hope is dead !
Sit and watch by her side an hour.
That is her book-shelf, this her bed ;
She plucked that piece of geraniumflower,
Beginning to die too, in the glass ;
Little has yet been changed, I think :
The shutters are shut, no light may pass Save two long rays thro' the hinge's chink.

II

Sixteen years old when she died !
Perhaps she had scarcely heard my name ;
It was not her time to love ; beside,
Her life had many a hope and aim,
Duties enough and little cares,
And now was quiet, now astir, Till God's hand beckoned unawares,— And the sweet white brow is all of her.

III

Is it too late then, Evelyn Hope ?
What, your soul was pure and true,
The good stars met in your horoscope, Made you of spirit, fire and dew—
And, just because I was thrice as old And our paths in the world diverged so wide,
Each was nought to each, must I be told ?
We were fellow mortals, nought beside ?

IV

No, indeed ! for God above Is great to grant, as mighty to make,
And creates the love to reward the
love :
I claim you still, for my own love's sake !
Delayed it may be for more lives yet, Through worlds I shall traverse, not a few :
Much is to learn and much to forget Ere the time be come for taking you.

V

But the time will come,—at last it will,
When, Evelyn Hope, what meant,
I shall say,
In the lower earth, in the years long
still,
That body and soul so pure and gay ?
Why your hair was amber, I shall divine,
And your mouth of your own géranium's red—
And what you would do with me, in fine,
In the new life come in the old one's stead.

VI

I have lived, I shall say, so much since then,
Given up myself so many times,
Gained me the gains of various men, Ransacked the ages, spoiled the climes ;
Yet one thing, one, in my soul's full scope,
Either I missed or itself missed me :
And I want and find you, Evelyn Hope !
What is the issue ? let us see !

I loved you, Evelyn, all the while !
 My heart seemed full as it could hold—
 There was place and to spare for the frank young smile And the red young mouth and the hair's young gold.
 So, hush,—I will give you this leaf to keep—
 . See, I shut it inside the sweet cold
 hand.
 There, that is our secret ! go to sleep ;
 You will wake, and remember, and understand.

LOVE AMONG THE RUINS

I

WHERE the quiet-coloured end of evening smiles
 Miles and miles On the solitary pastures where our sheep Half-asleep Tinkle homeward thro' the twilight, stray or stop
 As they crop—

II

Was the site once of a city great and gay, (So they say)
 Of our country's very capital, its prince Ages since Held his court in, gathered councils, wielding far Peace or war.

III

Now—the country does not even boast a tree,
 As you see,
 To distinguish slopes of verdure, certain rills
 From the hills Intersect and give a name to, (else they run Into one)

Where the domed and daring palace shot its spires Up like fires

O'er the hundred-gated circuit of a wall Bounding all, Made of marble, men might march on nor be preest, Twelve abreast.

And such plenty and perfection, see, of grass
 Never was !
 Such a carpet as, this summer-time, o'erspreads
 And embeds
 Every vestige of the city, guessed alone, Stock or stone—

VI

Where a multitude of men breathed joy and woe
 Long ago ;
 Lust of glory pricked their hearts up, dread of shame Struck them tame ;
 And that glory and that shame alike, the gold Bought and sold.

VII

Now,—the single little turret that remains
 On the plains,
 By the caper overrooted, by the gourd Overscored, While the patching houseleek's head of blossom winks
 Through the chinks—

VIII

Marks the basement whence a tower in ancient time Sprang sublime, And a burning ring, all round, the chariots traced
 As they raced,
 And the monarch and his minions and his dames Viewed the games.

And I know, while thus the quiet-coloured eve Smiles to leave

To their folding, all our many-tinkling fleece
In such peace,
And the slopes and rills in undistinguished grey Melt away—

X

That a girl with eager eyes and yellow hair Waits me there In the turret whence the charioteers caught soul
For the goal,
When the king looked, where she looks now, breathless, dumb Till I come.

XI

But he looked upon the city, every side, Far and wide,
All the mountains topped with temples, all the glades' Colonnades,
All the causeys, bridges, aqueducts,— and then,
All the men !

XII

When I do come, she will speak not,
she will stand,
Either hand
On my shoulder, give her eyes the first embrace
Of my face, Ere we rush, ere we extinguish sight and speech
Each on each

XIII

In one year they sent a million fighters forth South and North,
And they built their gods a brazen pillar high
As the sky, Yet reserved a thousand chariots in full force—
Gold, of course.

XIV

Oh, heart ! oh, blood that freezes, blood that burns !
Earth's returns

For whole centuries of folly, noise and sin !
Shut them in,
With their triumphs and their glories and the rest.
Love is best !

A LOVERS' QUARREL

Oh, what a dawn of day !
How the March sun feels like May !
All is blue again
After last night's rain,
And the South dries the hawthornspray.
Only, my Love's away !
I'd as lief that the blue were grey.

II

Runnels, which rillels swell, Must be dancing down the dell With a foamy head
On the beryl bed Paven smooth as a hermit's cell ;
Each with a tale to tell,
Could my Love but attend as well.

III

Dearest, three months ago !
When we lived blocked-up with snow,— When the wind would edge
In and in his wedge,
In, as far as the point could go—
Not to our ingle, though,
Where we loved each the other so !

IV

Laughs with so little cause !
We devised games out of straws.
We would try and trace One another's face
In the ash, as an artist draws ;
Free on each other's flaws, Hoy we chattered like two church daws !

What's in the 'Times' ?—a scold At the Emperor deep and cold ;
He has taken a bride
To his gruesome side, That's as fair as himself is bold :
There they sit ermine-stoled,
And she powders her hair with gold.

VI

Fancy the Pampas' sheen !
 Miles and miles of gold and green Where the sunflowers blow
 In a solid glow,
 And to break now and then the screen—Black neck and eyeballs keen,
 Up a wild horse leaps between !

Try, will our table turn ?
 Lay your hands there light, and yearn Till the yearning slips Thro' the finger-tips
 In a fire which a few discern,
 And a very few feel burn,
 And the rest, they may live and learn !

VIII

Then we would up and pace,
 For a change, about the place,
 Each with arm o'er neck .
 'Tis our quarter-deck,
 We are seamen in woeful case.
 Help in the ocean-space !
 Or, if no help, we'll embrace.

IX

See, how she looks now, drest
 In a sledging-cap and vest !
 'Tis a huge fur cloak—Like a reindeer's yoke Falls the lappet along the breast :
 Sleeves for her arms to rest,
 Or to hang, as my Love likes best

Teach me to flirt a fan
 As the Spanish ladies can,
 Or I tint your lip
 With a burnt stick's tip
 And you turn into such a man !
 Just the two spots that span Half the bill of the young male swan.

XI

Dearest, three months ago
 When the mesmerizer Snow
 With his hand's first sweep Put the earth to sleep !
 'Twas a time when the heart could show
 All—how was earth to know,
 'Neath the mute hand's to-and-fro ?

XII

Dearest, three months ago
 When we loved each other so, Lived and loved the same Till an evening came When a shaft from the Devil's bow Pierced to our ingle-glow,
 And the friends were friend and foe !

XIII

Not from the heart beneath—
 'Twas a bubble born of breath, Neither sneer nor vaunt, Nor reproach nor taunt.
 See a word, how it severeth !
 Oh, power of life and death In the tongue, as the Preacher saith !

XIV

Woman, and will you cast For a word, quite off at last Me, your own, your You,— Since, as truth is true,
 I was You all the happy Past—Me do you leave aghast
 With the memories We amassed ?

XV

Love, if you knew the light That your soul casts in my sight, How I look to you For the pure and true,
 And the beauteous and the right,— Bear with a moment's spite
 When a mere mote threatens the white !

XVI

What of a hasty word ?
 Is the fleshly heart not stirred By a worm's pin-prick Where its roots are quick ?
 See the eye, by a fly's-foot blurred—Ear, when a straw is heard Scratch the brain's coat of curd !

XVII

Foul be the world or fair More or less, how can I care ?
 'Tis the world the same For my praise or blame,
 And endurance is easy there.
 Wrong in the one thing rare—Oh, it is hard to bear !

XVIII

Here's the spring back or close,
When the almond-blossom blows;
In that minor third
There is none but the cuckoo knows:
Heaps of the guelder-rose!
I must bear with it, I suppose.

XIX

Could but November come,
Were the noisy birds struck dumb At the warning slash
Of his driver's-lash—
I would laugh like the valiant Thumb Facing the castle glum
And the giant's fee-faw-fum!

XX

Then, were the world well stript
Of the gear wherein equipped We can stand apart, Heart dispense with heart
In the sun, with the flowers unripped,— Oh, the world's hangings ripped,
We were both in a bare-walled crypt!

XXI

Each in the crypt would cry
'But one freezes here! and why?
When a heart as chill
At my own would thrill Back to life, and its fires out-fly?
Heart, shall we live or die?
The rest, . . . settle it by and by!'

XXII

So, she'd efface the score,
And forgive me as before.
It is twelve o'clock:
I shall hear her knock
In the worst of a storm's uproar,
I shall pull her through the door,
I shall have her for evermore!

UP AT A VILLA—DOWN IN THE CITY

(AS DISTINGUISHED BY AN ITALIAN PERSON OF QUALITY)

I

HAD I but plenty of money, money enough and to spare, The house for me, no doubt, were a house in the city-square; Ah, such a life, such a life, as one leads at the window there!

II

Something to see, by Bacchus, something to hear, at least!
There, the whole day long, one's life is a perfect feast; While up at a villa one lives, I maintain it, no more than a beast.

Well now, look at our villa! stuck like the horn of a bull Just on a mountain's edge as bare as the creature's skull, Save a mere shag of a bush with hardly a leaf to pull!
—I scratch my own, sometimes, to see if the hair's turned wool.

IV

But the city, oh the city—the square with the houses! Why?
They are stone-faced, white as a curd, there's something to take the eye!
Houses in four straight lines, not a single front awry!
You watch who crosses and gossips, who saunters, who hurries by; Green blinds, as a matter of course, to draw when the sun gets high;
And the shops with fanciful signs which are painted properly.

What of a villa? Though winter be over in March by rights,
'Tis May perhaps ere the snow shall have withered well off the heights: You've the brown ploughed land before, where the oxen steam and wheeze, And the hills over-smoked behind by the faint grey olive-trees.

VI

Is it better in May, I ask you? you've summer all at once; In a day he leaps complete with a few strong April suns!
'Mid the sharp short emerald wheat, scarce risen three fingers well, The wild tulip, at end of its tube, blows out its great red bell Like a thin clear bubble of blood, for the children to pick and sell.

Is it ever hot in the square ? There's a fountain to spout and splash !
In the shade it sings and springs ; in the shine such foam-bows flash On the horses with curling fish-tails, that prance and paddle and pash Round the lady atop in the conch—fifty gazers do not abash, Though all that she wears is some weeds round her waist in a sort of sash !

VIII

All the year long at the villa, nothing's to see though you linger, Except yon cypress that points like Death's lean lifted forefinger.
Some think fireflies pretty, when they mix in the corn and mingle, Or thrud the stinking hemp till the stalks of it seem a-tingle.
Late August or early September, the stunning cicala is shrill, And the bees keep their tiresome whine round the resinous firs on the hill.
Enough of the seasons,—I spare you the months of the fever and chill.

IX

Ere opening your eyes in the city, the blessed church-bells begin :
No sooner the bells leave off, than the diligence rattles in :
You get the pick of the news, and it costs you never a pin.
By and by there's the travelling doctor gives pills, lets blood, draws teeth ; Or the Pulcinello-trumpet breaks up the market beneath.
At the post-office such a scene-picture —the new play, piping hot !
And a notice how, only this morning, three liberal thieves were shot.
Above it, behold the archbishop's most fatherly of rebukes, And beneath, with his crown and his lion, some little new law of the Duke's !
Or a sonnet with flowery marge, to the Reverend Don So-and-so
Who is Dante, Boccaccio, Petrarca, Saint Jerome, and Cicero,

'And moreover,' (the sonnet goes rhyming,) 'the skirts of Saint Paul has reached,

Having preached us those six Lent lectures more unctuous than ever he preached.'

Noon strikes,—here sweeps the procession ! our Lady borne smiling and smart

With a pink gauze gown all spangles, and seven swords stuck in her heart !

Bang, whang, whang goes the drum,
tootle-te-tootle the fife ;

No keeping one's haunches still : it's the greatest pleasure in life.

But bless you, it's dear—it's dear !
fowls, wine, at double the rate.

They have clapped a new tax upon salt, and what oil pays passing the gate It's a horror to think of. And so, the villa for me, not the city !

Beggars can scarcely be choosers : but still—ah, the pity, the pity !

Look, two and two go the priests, then the monks with cowls and sandals, And the penitents dressed in white shirts, a-holding the yellow candles ;

One, he carries a flag up straight, and another a cross with handles,

And the Duke's guard brings up the rear, for the better prevention of scandals :

Bang, whang, whang goes the drum,
tootle-te-tootle the fife.

Oh, a day in the city-square, there is no such pleasure in life !

A TOCCATA OF GALUPPI'S

I

Oh, Galuppi, Baldassaro, this is very sad to find !

I can hardly misconceive you ; it would prove me deaf and blind ;

But although I take your meaning, 'tis with such a heavy mind !

II

Here you come with your old music, and here 's all the good it brings.

What, they lived once thus at Venice where the merchants were the kings, Where St. Mark's is, where the Doges used to wed the sea with rings ?

III

Ay, because the sea's the street there ; and 'tis arched by . . . what you call
. . . Shylock's bridge with houses on it, where they kept the carnival :
I was never out of England—it's as if I saw it all !

IV

Did young people take their pleasure when the sea was warm in May ?
Balls and masks begun at midnight, burning ever to mid-day When they made up fresh adventures for the morrow, do you say ?

Was a lady such a lady, cheeks so round and lips so red,— On her neck the small face buoyant, like a bell-flower on its bed, O'er the breast's superb abundance where a man might base his head ?

VI

Well, (and it was graceful of them) they'd break talk off and afford —She, to bite her mask's black velvet, he, to finger on his sword, While you sat and played Toccatas, stately at the clavichord ?

What ? Those lesser thirds so plaintive, sixths diminished, sigh on sigh, Told them something ? Those suspensions, those solutions—'Must we
die ?'
Those commiserating sevenths—'Life might last ! we can but try !'

VIII

'Were you happy ?'—'Yes.'—'And are you still as happy ?'—'Yes. And you ?'

—'Then, more kisses !'—'Did I stop them, when a million seemed so few ?'

Hark ! the dominant's persistence, till it must be answered to !

IX

So an octave struck the answer. Oh, they praised you, I dare say !
'Brave Galuppi ! that was music ! good alike at grave and gay !
I can always leave off talking, when I hear a master play.'

Then they left you for their pleasure :
till in due time, one by one,
Some with lives that came to nothing, some with deeds as well undone, Death came tacitly and took them where they never see the sun.

XI

But when I sit down to reason, think to take my stand nor swerve, While I triumph o'er a secret wrung from nature's close reserve, In you come with your cold music, till I creep thro' every nerve.

XII

Yes, you, like a ghostly cricket, creaking where a house was burned—
'Dust and ashes, dead and done with—Venice spent what Venice earned !
The soul, doubtless, is immortal—where a soul can be discerned.

XIII

Yours for instance, you know physics, something of geology, Mathematics are your pastime ; souls shall rise in their degree ; Butterflies may dread extinction,— you'll not die, it cannot be !

XIV

As for Venice and its people, merely born to bloom and drop, Here on earth they bore their fruitage, mirth and folly were the crop : What of soul was left, I wonder, when the kissing had to stop ?

XV

'Dust and ashes!' So you creak it, and I want the heart to scold.
Dear dead women, with such hair, too —what's become of all the gold Used to hang and brush their bosoms?
I feel chilly and grown old.

OLD PICTURES IN FLORENCE

I

THE morn when first it thunders in March,
The eel in the pond gives a leap, they
say:
As I leaned and looked over the aloed arch
Of the villa-gate, this warm March
day,
No flash snapt, no dumb thunder rolled
In the valley beneath where, white and wide
And washed by the morning's water-gold, Florence lay out on the mountain side.

II

River and bridge and street and square Lay mine, as much at my beck and
call,
Through the live translucent bath of air,
As the sights in a magic crystal ball.
And of all I saw and of all I praised,
The most to praise and the best to see,
Was the startling bell-tower Giotto raised:
But why did it more than startle me?

III

Giotto, how, with that soul of yours, Could you play me false who loved you so?
Some slights if a certain heart endures Yet it feels, I would have your fellows know!
I faith, I perceive not why I should care
To break a silence that suits them
best,
But the thing grows somewhat hard to bear
When I find a Giotto join the rest.

On the arch where olives overhead Print the blue sky with twig and leaf, (That sharp-curled leaf which they never shed)
'Twixt the aloes, I used to lean in chief,
And mark through the winter afternoons,
By a gift God grants me now and then,
In the mild decline of those suns like moons, Who walked in Florence, besides her men.

V

They might chirp and chaffer, come and go
For pleasure or profit, her men alive—
My business was hardly with them,
I trow,
But with empty cells of the human hive;
—With the chapter-room, the cloister-porch,
The church's apsis, aisle or nave,
Its crypt, one fingers along with a torch,
Its face, set full for the sun to shave.

VI

Wherever a fresco peels and drops, Wherever an outline weakens and waned
Till the latest life in the painting stops, Stands One whom each fainter pulse-tick pains!
One, wishal each scrap should clutch the brick,
Each tinge not wholly escape the plaster,
—A lion who dies of an ass's kick,
The wronged great soul of an ancient Master.

For oh, this world and the wrong it does!
They are safe in Heaven with their backs to it,
The Michaels and Rafels, you hum and buzz Round the works of, you of the little wit!

Do their eyes contract to the earth's old scope,
Now that they see God face to face,
And have all attained to be poets, I hope?
'Tis their holiday now, in any case.

VIII

Much they reckon of your praise and you !
But the wronged great souls—can they be quit
Of a world where their work is all to do, Where you style them, you of the little wit, Old Master This and Early the Other, Not dreaming that Old and New are fellows :
A younger succeeds to an elder brother, Da Vincis derive in good time from Dellos.

IX

And here where your praise might yield returns,
And a handsome word or two give help, Here, after your kind, the mastiff grins
And the puppy pack of poodles yelp.
What, not a word for Stefano there,
Of brow once prominent and starry, Called Nature's Ape and the world's despair
For his peerless painting ? (see Vasari.)

There stands the Master. Study, my friends,
What a man's work comes to ! so he plans it, Performs it, perfects it, makes amends For the toiling and molling, and then, sic transit !
Happier the thrifty blind-folk labour, With upturned eye while the hand is busy,
Not sidling a glance at the coin of their neighbour !
'Tis looking downward that makes one dizzy.

XI

'If you knew their work you would deal your dole.'
May I take upon me to instruct you ?
When Greek Art ran and reached the goal,

Thus much had the world to boast in fructu—
The truth of Man, as by God first spoken,
Which the actual generations garble, Was re-uttered, and Soul (which Limbs betoken)
And Limbs (Soul informs) made new in marble.

XII

So, you saw yourself as you wished you were,
As you might have been, as you cannot be ;
Earth here, rebuked by Olympus
there :
And grew content in your poor degree
With your little power, by those statues' godhead,
And your little scope, by their eyes' full sway,
And your little grace, by their grace embodied,
And your little date, by their forms that stay.

XIII

You would fain be kinglier, say, than
I am ?
Even so, you will not sit like Theseus.
You'd fain be a model ? the Son of Priam Has yet the advantage in arms' and knees' use.
You're wroth—can you slay your snake like Apollo ?
You're grieved—still Niobe's the grander !
You live—there's the Racers' frieze to follow :
You die—there's the dying Alexander.

XIV

So, testing your weakness by their
strength,
Your meagre charms by their rounded beauty, Measured by Art in your breadth and
length,
You learned—to submit is a mortal's duty.

—When I say 'you 'tis the common soul,
The collective, I mean: the race of Man That receives life in parts to live in a whole,
And grow here according to God's clear plan.

xv

Growth came when, looking your last on them all,
You turned your eyes inwardly one fine day
And cried with a start—What if we so small

Be greater and grander the while than they!
Are they perfect of lineament, perfect of stature?

In both, of such lower types are we Precisely because of our wider nature;
For time, theirs—ours, for eternity.

xvi

To-day's brief passion limits their range;
It seethes with the morrow for us and more.

They are perfect—how else? they shall never change;
We are faulty—why not? we have time in store.

The Artificer's hand is not arrested With us—we are rough-hewn, nowise polished:
They stand for our copy, and, once invested With all they can teach, we shall see them abolished.

xvii

'Tis a life-long toil till our lump be leaven—
The better! what's come to perfection perishes.
Things learned on earth, we shall practise in Heaven.

Works done least rapidly, Art most cherishes.
Thyself shall afford the example, Giotto!

Thy one work, not to decrease or diminish,
Done at a stroke, was just (was it not?)
'O!

Thy great Campanile is still to finish.

xviii

Is it true that we are now, and shall be hereafter,
But what and where depend on life's minute?

Hails heavenly cheer or infernal laughter
Our first step out of the gulf or in it?
Shall Man, such step within his endeavour,
Man's face, have no more play and action

Than joy which is crystallized for ever,
Or grief, an eternal petrification?

xix

On which I conclude, that the early painters,
To cries of 'Greek Art and what more wish you?'—

Replied, 'To become now self-acquainters,
And paint man, man, whatever the issue!

Make new hopes shine through the flesh they fray,
New fears aggrandize the rags and tatters:

To bring the invisible full into play!
Let the visible go to the dogs—what matters?'

xx

Give these, I exhort you, their guerdon and glory For daring so much, before they well did it.

The first of the new, in our race's story,
Beats the last of the old, 'tis no idle quiddit.

The worthies began a revolution, Which if on earth you intend to acknowledge, Why, honour them now—(ends my allocution) Nor confer your degree when the folks leave college.

xxi

There's a fancy some lean to and others hate—
That, when this life is ended, begins
New work for the soul in another state, Where it strives and gets weary, loses and wins;

Where the strong and the weak, this world's congeries, Repeat in large what they practised in small,
Through life after life in unlimited series;
Only the scale's to be changed, that's all.

XXII

Yet I hardly know. When a soul has seen
By the means of Evil that Good is
best,
And through earth and its noise, what is Heaven's serene,— When its faith in the same has stood the test—
Why, the child grown man, you burn the rod,
The uses of labour are surely done:
There remaineth a rest for the people of God,
And I have had troubles enough for one.

XXIII

But at any rate I have loved the season Of Art's spring-birth so dim and dewy,
My sculptor is Nicolo the Pisan,
And painter—who but Cimabue?
Nor ever was man of them all indeed, From these to Ghiberti and Ghir-landajo, Could say that he missed my criticmeed.
So now to my special grievance—heigh ho!

XXIV

Their ghosts now stand, as I said
before,
Watching each fresco flaked and rasped, Blocked up, knocked out, or white-washed o'er —No getting again what the church has grasped!
The works on the wall must take their chance;
'Works never conceded to England's thick clime!
(I hope they prefer their inheritance Of a bucketful of Italian quick-lime.)

XXV

When they go at length, with such a shaking
Of heads o'er the old delusions, sadly Each master his way through the black streets taking,
Where many a lost work breathes though badly—Why don't they bethink them of who has merited?
Why not reveal, while their pictures dree Such doom, that a captive's to be outferretted?
Why is it they never remember me?

XXVI

Not that I expect the great Bigordi Nor Sandro to hear me, chivalric, bellicose;
Nor the wronged Lippino; and not a word I Say of a scrap of Fra Angelico's:
But are you too fine, Taddeo Gaddi, To grant me a taste of your intonaco—
Some Jerome that seeks the Heaven with a sad eye?
Not a churlish saint, Lorenzo Monaco?

XXVII

Could not the ghost with the close red cap,
My Pollajolo, the twice a craftsman, Save me a sample, give me the nap Of a muscular Christ that shows the draughtsman?
No Virgin by him, the somewhat petty,
Of finical touch and tempera crumbly—
Could not Alesso Baldovinetti Contribute so much, I ask him humbly?

XXVIII

Margheritone of Arezzo, With the grave-clothes garb and swaddling barret, (Why purse up mouth and beak in a pet so,
You bald, old, saturnine, poll-clawed parrot?)

Not a poor glimmering Crucifixion, Where in the foreground kneels the donor?
If such remain, as is my conviction, The hoarding it does you but little honour.

XXIX

They pass: for them the panels may thrill,
The tempera grow alive and tinglish—
Their pictures are left to the mercies
still
Of dealers and stealers, Jews and the English, Who, seeing mere money's worth in their prize,
Will sell it to somebody calm as Zeno
At naked High Art, and in ecstasies Before some clay-cold, vile Carlino!

XXX

No matter for these! But Giotto,
you,
Have you allowed, as the town-tongues babble it,— Oh, never! it shall not be counted
true—
That a certain precious little tablet Which Buonarroti eyed like a lover,— Was buried so long in oblivion's womb
And, left for another than I to discover, Turns up at last! and to whom?— to whom?

XXXI

I, that have haunted the dim San Spirito,
(Or was it rather the Ognissanti?) Patient on altar-steps planting a weary toe!
Nay, I shall have it yet! detur amanti!
My Koh-i-noor—or (if that's a platitude)
Jewel of Giamaschid, the Persian Sofi's
eye!
So, in anticipative gratitude, What if I take up my hope and prophecy?

When the hour grows ripe, and a certain dotard Is pitched, no parcel that needs invoicing,
To the worse side of the Mont Saint Gothard,
We shall begin by way of rejoicing; None of that shooting the sky (blank cartridge), Nor a civic guard, all plumes and lacquer, Hunting Radetzky's soul like a partridge Over Morello with squib and cracker.

XXXIII

This time we'll shoot better game and bag 'em hot—
No mere display at the stone of Dante,
But a kind of sober Witana-gemot (Ex: 'Casa Guidi,' quod videns ante) Shall ponder, once Freedom restored to Florence, How Art may return that departed with her.
Go, hated house, go each trace of the Lorraine's,
And bring us the days of Orgagna hither!

XXXIV

How we shall prologuize, how we shall perorate, Utter fit things upon art and history—Feel truth at blood-heat and the false at a zero rate,
—And make of the want of the age no mystery!
Contrasting the fructuous and sterilieras, Show, monarchy ever its uncouth oub licks
Out of the bear's shape into Chimaera's—While Pure Art's birth is still the republio's!

XXXV

Then one shall propose in a speech (curt Tuscan, Expurgate and sober, with scarce an 'issimo,')
To end now our half-told tale of Cam-buscan,

And turn the Bell-tower's alt to altissimo :
 And fine as the beak of a young becacaccia
 The Campanile, the Duomo's fit ally, Shall soar up in gold full fifty braccia, Completing Florence, as Florence, Italy.

XXXVI

Shall I be alive that morning the scaffold Is broken away, and the long-pent fire,
 Like the golden hope of the world, unbaflled Springs from its sleep, and up goes the spire While, 'God and the People' plain for its motto, Thence the new tricolour flaps at the sky ?
 At least to foresee that glory of Giotto And Florence together, the first am I !

'DE GUSTIBUS—'

I

YOUR ghost will walk, you lover of trees, (If our loves remain)
 In an English lane, By a cornfield-side a-flutter with poppies.
 Hark, those two in the hazel coppice—A boy and a girl, if the good fates
 please,
 Making love, say,—
 The happier they !
 Draw yourself up from the light of the moon,
 And let them pass, as they will too soon,
 With the beanflowers' boon,
 And the blackbird's tune,
 And May, and June !

II

What I love best in all the world,
 Is, a castle, precipice-encurled, In a gash of the wind-grieved Apennine.
 Or look for me, old fellow of mine,

(If I get my head from out the mouth O' the grave, and loose my spirit's bands,
 And come again to the land of lands)—
 In a sea-side house to the farther South,
 Where the baked cicalas die of drouth,
 And one sharp tree—'tis a cypress—
 stands,
 By the many hundred years red-rusted, Rough iron-spiked, ripe fruit-o'ercrusted,
 My sentinel to guard the sands To the water's edge. For, what expands
 Before the house, but the great opaque Blue breadth of sea without a break ?
 While, in the house, for ever crumbles
 Some fragment of the frescon walls,
 From blisters where a scorpion sprawls.
 A girl bare-footed brings, and tumbles Down on the pavement, green-flesh melons,
 And says there's news to-day—the king
 Was shot at, touched in the liver-wing, Goes with his Bourbon arm in a sling :
 —She hopes they have not caught the felons.
 Italy, my Italy !
 Queen Mary's saying serves for me—(When fortune's malice Lost her, Calais)
 Open my heart and you will see Graved inside of it, 'Italy.' Such lovers old are I and she ;
 So it always was, so shall ever be !

HOME-THOUGHTS, FROM ABROAD

I

Oh, to be in England
 Now that April's there,
 And whoever wakes in England Sees, some morning, unaware,
 That the lowest boughs and the brushwood sheaf Round the elm-tree bole are in tiny leaf,
 While the chaffinch sings on the orchard bough
 In England—now !

II

And after April, when May follows, And the whitethroat builds, and all the swallows !

Hark, where my blossomed pear-tree in the hedge

Leans to the field and scatters on the clover

Blossoms and dewdrops—at the bent spray's edge—

That's the wise thrush; he sings each song twice over,

Lest you should think he never could recapture

The first fine careless rapture !

And though the fields look rough with hoary dew,

All will be gay when noontide wakes anew

The buttercups, the little children's dower

—Far brighter than this gaudy melonflower !

HOME-THOUGHTS, FROM THE SEA

NOBLY, nobly Cape Saint Vincent to the North-West died away ;

Sunset ran, one glorious blood-red, reeking into Cadiz Bay ;

Bluish mid the burning water, full in face Trafalgar lay ;

In the dimmest North-East distance, dawned Gibraltar grand and gray ;

'Here and here did England help me :
how can I help England ?'—say,

Whoso turns as I, this evening, turn to God to praise and pray,

While Jove's planet rises yonder, silent over Africa.

SAUL

I

SAID Abner, 'At last thou art come !
Ere I tell, ere thou speak,

Kiss my cheek, wish me well !' Then I wished it, and did kiss his cheek.

And he, 'Since the King, O my friend, for thy countenance sent,

Neither drunken nor eaten have we ;
nor until from his tent

Thou return with the joyful assurance the King liveth yet,

Shall our lip with the honey be bright, with the water be wet.

For out of the black mid-tent's silence, a space of three days,

Not a sound hath escaped to thy servants, of prayer or of praise,

To betoken that Saul and the Spirit have ended their strife,

And that, faint in his triumph, the monarch sinks back upon life.

II

Yet now my heart leaps, O beloved !
God's child, with His dew

On thy gracious gold hair, and those lilies still living and blue

Just broken to twine round thy harp-strings, as if no wild heat

Were now raging to torture the desert !'

III

Then I, as was meet, Knelt down to the God of my fathers, and rose on my feet,

And ran o'er the sand burnt to powder.

The tent was unlooped ;
I pulled up the spear that obstructed, and under I stooped ; Hands and knees on the slippery grass-patch, all withered and gone, That extends to the second enclosure.

I groped my way on Till I felt where the foldskirts fly open.

Then once more I prayed,
And opened the foldskirts and entered, and was not afraid, But spoke, 'Here is David, thy servant !' And no voice replied.

At the first I saw nought but the blackness ; but soon I descried A something more black than the blackness—the vast the upright Main prop which sustains the pavilion :

and slow into sight Grew a figure against it, gigantic and blackest of all :

Then a sunbeam, that burst thro' the tent-roof, showed Saul.

IV

He stood as erect as that tent-prop ; both arms stretched out wide

On the great cross-support in the centre, that goes to each side; He relaxed not a muscle, but hung there, as, caught in his pangs And waiting his change, the king-serpent all heavily hangs, Far away from his kind, in the pine, till deliverance come With the spring-time,—so agonized Saul, drear and stark, blind and dumb.

Then I tuned my harp,—took off the lilies we twine round its chords Lest they snap 'neath the stress of the noontide—those sunbeams like swords!
And I first played the tune all our sheep know, as, one after one, So docile they come to the pen-door, till folding be done.
They are white and untorn by the bushes, for lo, they have fed Where the long grasses stifle the water within the stream's bed;
And now one after one seeks its lodging, as star follows star Into eve and the blue far above us,— so blue and so far!

VI

—Then the tune, for which quails on the cornland will each leave his mate
To fly after the player; then, what makes the crickets elate, Till for boldness they fight one another:
and then, what has weight To set the quick jerboa a-musing outside his sand house—There are none such as he for a wonder, half bird and half mouse!
God made all the creatures and gave them our love and our fear, To give sign, we and they are His children, one family here.

Then I played the help-tune of our reapers, their wine-song, when
hand Grasps at hand, eye lights eye in good friendship, and great hearts expand

And grow one in the sense of this world's life.—And then, the last song

When the dead man is praised on his journey—'Bear, bear him along With his few faults shut up like dead flowerets! are balm-seeds not here To console us? The land has none left such as he on the bier.

Oh, would we might keep thee, my brother!—And then, the glad chaunt

Of the marriage,—first go the young maidens, next, she whom we vaunt As the beauty, the pride of our dwelling.—And then, the great march

Wherein man runs to man to assist him and buttress an arch

Nought can break; who shall harm them, our friends?—Then, the chorus intoned
As the Levites go up to the altar in glory enthroned.

But I stopped here—for here in the darkness, Saul groaned.

VIII

And I paused, held my breath in such silence, and listened apart;
And the tent shook, for mighty Saul shuddered—and sparkles 'gan dart From the jewels that woke in his turban at once with a start—

All its lordly male-sapphires, and rubies courageous at heart.

So the head—but the body still moved not, still hung there erect.

And I bent once again to my playing, pursued it unchecked,

As I sang,—

IX

'Oh, our manhood's prime vigour!
no spirit feels waste,
Not a muscle is stopped in its playing, nor sinew unbraced.

Oh, the wild joys of living! the leaping from rock up to rock—

The strong rending of boughs from the fir-tree,—the cool silver shock

Of the plunge in a pool's living water,
—the hunt of the bear,

And the sultriness showing the lion is couched in his lair.

And the meal—the rich dates yellowed over with gold dust divine, And the locust's-flesh steeped in the pitcher! the full draught of wine, And the sleep in the dried river-channel where bulrushes tell That the water was wont to go warbling so softly and well.
 How good is man's life, the mere living!
 how fit to employ All the heart and the soul and the senses, for ever in joy!
 Hast thou loved the white locks of thy father, whose sword thou didst guard When he trusted thee forth with the armies, for glorious reward?
 Didst thou see the thin hands of thy mother, held up as men sung The low song of the nearly-departed, and heard her faint tongue Joining in while it could to the witness,
 'Let one more attest, I have lived, seen God's hand thro' a lifetime, and all was for best!'— Then they sung thro' their tears in strong triumph, not much—but the rest.
 And thy brothers, the help and the contest, the working whence grew Such result as, from seething grape-bundles, the spirit strained true!
 And the friends of thy boyhood—that boyhood of wonder and hope, Present promise, and wealth of the future beyond the eye's scope,— Till lo, thou art grown to a monarch;
 a people is thine;
 And all gifts, which the world offers singly, on one head combine!
 On one head, all the beauty and strength, love and rage (like the throe That, a-work in the rock, helps its labour and lets the gold go) High ambition and deeds which surpass it, fame crowning it,—all Brought to blaze on the head of one creature—King Saul!

x

And lo, with that leap of my spirit,— heart, hand, harp and voice, Each lifting Saul's name out of sorrow, each bidding rejoice

Saul's fame in the light, it was made for —as when, dare I say,
 The Lord's army, in rapture of service, strains through its array,
 And upsoareth the cherubim-chariot—
 'Saul!' cried I, and stopped.
 And waited the thing that should follow. Then Saul, who hung propped
 By the tent's cross-support in the centre, was struck by his name.
 Have ye seen when Spring's arrowy summons goes right to the aim,
 And some mountain, the last to withstand her, that held (he alone, While the vale laughed in freedom and flowers) on a broad bust of stone A year's snow bound about for a breast-plate,—leaves grasp of the sheet?
 Fold on fold all at once it crowds thunderously down to his feet, And there fronts you, stark, black, but alive yet, your mountain of old.
 With his rents, the successive bequeathings of ages untold—Yea, each harm got in fighting your battles, each furrow and scar Of his head thrust 'twixt you and the tempest—all hail, there they are!
 Now again to be softened with verdure, again hold the nest Of the dove, tempt the goat and its young to the green on its crest For their food in the ardours of summer!
 One long shudder thrilled All the tent till the very air tingled, then sank and was stilled At the King's self left standing before me, released and aware.
 What was gone, what remained? all to traverse 'twixt hope and despair; Death was past, life not come: so he waited. Awhile his right hand Held the brow, helped the eyes left too vacant forthwith to remand To their place what new objects should enter: 'twas Saul as before.
 I looked up and dared gaze at those eyes, nor was hurt any more Than by slow pallid sunsets in autumn, ye watch from the shore,

At their sad level gaze o'er the ocean—a sun's slow decline Over hills which, resolved in stern silence, o'erlap and entwine Base with base to knit strength more intense: so, arm folded in arm O'er the chest whose slow heavings subsided.

XI

What spell or what charm, (For, awhile there was trouble within me) what next should I urge To sustain him where song had restored him?—Song filled to the verge His cup with the wine of this life, pressing all that it yields Of mere fruitage, the strength and the beauty! Beyond, on what fields, Glean a vintage more potent and perfect to brighten the eye And bring blood to the lip, and commend them the cup they put by?
 He saith, 'It is good'; still he drinks not: he lets me praise life, Gives assent, yet would die for his own part.

XII

Then fancies grew rife Which had come long ago on the pastures, when round me the sheep Fed in silence—above, the one eagle wheeled slow as in sleep; And I lay in my hollow, and mused on the world that might lie
 'Neath his ken, though I saw but the strip 'twixt the hill and the sky:
 And I laughed—'Since my days are ordained to be passed with my flocks, Let me people at least, with my fancies, the plains and the rocks, Dream the life I am never to mix with,
 and image the show
 Of mankind as they live in those fashions
 I hardly shall know!
 Schemes of life, its best rules and right uses, the courage that gains, And the prudence that keeps what men strive for.' And now these old trains

Of vague thought came again; I grew surer; so, once more the string Of my harp made response to my spirit, as thus—

XIII

'Yea, my King,'
 I began—'thou dost well in rejecting mere comforts that spring From the mere mortal life held in common by man and by brute:
 In our flesh grows the branch of this life, in our soul it bears fruit.
 Thou hast marked the slow rise of the tree,—how its stem trembled first Till it passed the kid's lip, the stag's antler; then safely outburst The fan-branches all round; and thou mindedst when these too, in turn Broke a-bloom and the palm-tree seemed perfect: yet more was to learn, Ev'n the good that comes in with the palm-fruit. Our dates shall we slight,
 When their juice brings a cure for all sorrow? or care for the plight Of the palm's self whose slow growth produced them? Not so! stem and branch Shall decay, nor be known in their place, while the palm-wine shall staunch
 Every wound of man's spirit in winter.
 I pour thee such wine.
 Leave the flesh to the fate it was fit for! the spirit be thine!
 By the spirit, when age shall o'ercome thee, thou still shalt enjoy More indeed, than at first when in-conscious, the life of a boy.
 Crush that life, and behold its wine running! each deed thou hast done Dies, revives, goes to work in the world; until e'en as the sun Looking down on the earth, though clouds spoil him, though tempests efface,
 Can find nothing his own deed produced not, must everywhere trace The results of his past summer-prime,— so, each ray of thy will, Every flash of thy passion and prowess, long over, shall thrill

Thy whole people the countless, with ardour, till they too give forth A like cheer to their sons, who in turn, fill the South and the North With the radiance thy deed was the germ of. Carouse in the Past!
But the license of age has its limit;
thou diest at last:
As the lion when age dims his eyeball, the rose at her height, So with man—so his power and his beauty for ever take flight.
No! again a long draught of my soul-wine! look forth o'er the years—Thou hast done now with eyes for the actual; begin with the seer's!
Is Saul dead? in the depth of the vale make his tomb—bid arise A grey mountain of marble heaped foursquare, till, built to the skies, Let it mark where the great First King slumbers: whose fame would ye
know?
Up above see the rock's naked face, where the record shall go In great characters cut by the scribe,— Such was Saul, so he did;
With the sages directing the work, by the populace chid,— For not half, they'll affirm, is comprised there! Which fault to amend,
In the grove with his kind grows the cedar, whereon they shall spend (See, in tablets 'tis level before them) their praise, and record With the gold of the graver, Saul's story,—the statesman's great word Side by side with the poet's sweet comment. The river's a-wave With smooth paper-reeds grazing each ether when prophet-winds rave:
So the pen gives unborn generations their due and their part In thy being! Then, first of the mighty, thank God that thou art!

XIV

And behold while I sang . . . But O Thou who didst grant me that day,
And before it not seldom hast granted Thy help to essay

Carry on and complete an adventure,— my Shield and my Sword In that act where my soul was Thy servant, Thy word was my word,— Still be with me, who then at the summit of human endeavour And scaling the highest, man's thought could, gazed hopeless as ever On the new stretch of Heaven above me—till, mighty to save, Just one lift of Thy hand cleared that distance—God's throne from man's grave!
Let me tell out my tale to its ending—my voice to my heart Which can scarce dare believe in what marvels last night I took part, As this morning I gather the fragments, alone with my sheep,
And still fear lest the terrible glory evanish like sleep!
For I wake in the grey dewy covert, while Hebron upheaves The dawn struggling with night on his shoulder, and Kidron retrieves Slow the damage of yesterday's sunshine.

XV

I say then,—my song While I sang thus, assuring the monarch, and ever more strong Made a proffer of good to console him —he slowly resumed
His old motions and habitudes kingly.
The right hand replumed His black locks to their wonted composure, adjusted the swatches Of his turban, and see—the huge sweat that his countenance bathes, He wipes off with the robe; and he girds now his loins as of yore, And feels slow for the armlets of price, with the clasp set before.
He is Saul, ye remember in glory,—ere error had bent
The broad brow from the daily communion; and still, though much spent
Be the life and the bearing that front you, the same, God did choose, To receive what a man may waste, desecrate, never quite lose.

So sank he along by the tent-prop till, stayed by the pile Of his armour and war-cloak and garments, he leaned there awhile, And so sat out my singing,—one arm round the tent-prop, to raise His bent head, and the other hung slack—till I touched on the praise I foresaw from all men in all times, to the man patient there;
 And thus ended, the harp falling forward. Then first I was 'ware That he sat, as I say, with my head just above his vast knees Which were thrust out on each side around me, like oak roots which
 please
 To encircle a lamb when it slumbers.
 I looked up to know If the best I could do had brought solace: he spoke not, but slow Lifted up the hand slack at his side, till he laid it with care Soft and grave, but in mild settled will, on my brow: thro' my hair The large fingers were pushed, and he bent back my head, with kind power—
 All my face back, intent to peruse it, as men do a flower.
 Thus held he me there with his great eyes that scrutinized mine—And oh, all my heart how it loved him!
 but where was the sign?
 I yearned—'Could I help thee, my father, inventing a bliss, I would add to that life of the Past, both the Future and this;
 I would give thee new life altogether, as good, ages hence, As this moment,—had love but the warrant, love's heart to dispense!'

xvi

Then the truth came upon me. No harp more—no song more! outbroke—

xvii

'I have gone the whole round of Creation: I saw and I spoke!
 I, a work of God's hand for that purpose, received in my brain And pronounced on the rest of His handwork—returned Him again

His creation's approval or censure: I spoke as I saw.
 I report, as a man may of God's work
 —all's love, yet all's law!
 Now I lay down the judgeship He lent me. Each faculty tasked To perceive Him, has gained an abyss, where a dewdrop was asked.
 Have I knowledge? confounded it shrivels at Wisdom laid bare.
 Have I forethought? how purblind, how blank, to the Infinite Care!
 Do I task any faculty highest, to image success?
 I but open my eyes,—and perfection, no more and no less,
 In the kind I imagined, full-fronts me, and God is seen God In the star, in the stone, in the flesh, in the soul and the clod.
 And thus looking within and around me, I ever renew (With that stoop of the soul which in bending upraises it too)
 The submission of Man's nothing-perfect to God's All-Complete, As by each new obeisance in spirit,
 I climb to His feet!
 Yet with all this abounding experience, this Deity known,
 I shall dare to discover some province, some gift of my own.
 There's a faculty pleasant to exercise, hard to hoodwink, I am fain to keep still in abeyance, (I laugh as I think) Lest, insisting to claim and parade in it, wot ye, I worst E'en the Giver in one gift.—Behold!
 I could love if I durst!
 But I sink the pretension as fearing a man may o'ertake God's own speed in the one way of love:
 I abstain for love's sake.
 —What, my soul? see thus far and no farther? when doors great and small,
 Nine-and-ninety flew ope at our touch, should the hundredth appal?
 In the least things, have faith, yet distrust in the greatest of all?
 Do I find love so full in my nature, God's ultimate gift,

That I doubt His own love can compete with it ? here, the parts shift ?
Here, the creature surpass the Creator, the end, what Began ?— Would I fain in my impotent yearning do all for this man, And dare doubt He alone shall not help him, who yet alone can ?
Would it ever have entered my mind, the bare will, much less power, To bestow on this Saul what I sang of,
the marvellous dower Of the life he was gifted and filled with ? to make such a soul, Such a body, and then such an earth for inspiring the whole ?
And doth it not enter my mind (as my warm tears attest)
These good things being given, to go on, and give one more, the best ?
Ay, to save and redeem and restore him, maintain at the height This perfection,—succeed with life's dayspring, death's minute of night ?
Interpose at the difficult minute, snatch Saul, the mistake, Saul, the failure, the ruin he seems now,
—and bid him awake From the dream, the probation, the prelude, to find himself set Clear and safe in new light and new life,—a new harmony yet To be run, and continued, and ended—who knows ?—or endure !
The man taught enough by life's dream, of the rest to make sure ; By the pain-throb, triumphantly winning intensified bliss,
And the next world's reward and repose, by the struggles in this.

xviii

'I believe it ! 'tis Thou, God, that givest, 'tis I who receive :
In the first is the last, in Thy will is my power to believe.
All's one gift : Thou canst grant it moreover, as prompt to my prayer As I breathe out this breath, as I open these arms to the air.
From Thy will, stream the worlds, life and nature, thy dread Sabaoth :
I will ?—the mere atoms despise me !
why am I not loth

To look that, even that in the face too ?
why is it I dare Think but lightly of such impuissance ?
what stops my despair ?
This ;—'tis not what man Does which exalts him, but what man Would do !
See the King—I would help him but cannot, the wishes fall through.
Could I wrestle to raise him from sorrow, grow poor to enrich,
To fill up his life, starve my own out,
I would—knowing which.
I know that my service is perfect. Oh, speak through me now !
Would I suffer for him that I love ?
So wouldst Thou—so wilt Thou !
So shall crown Thee the topmost, ineffablest, uttermost crown—
And Thy love fill infinitude wholly, nor leave up nor down One spot for the creature to stand in !
It is by no breath, Turn of eye, wave of hand, that salvation joins issue with death !
As Thy Love is discovered almighty, almighty be proved Thy power, that exists with and for it, of being Beloved !
He who did most, shall bear most ; the strongest shall stand the most weak.
'Tis the weakness in strength, that I cry for ! my flesh, that I seek
In the Godhead ! I seek and I find it.
O Saul, it shall be A Face like my face that receives thee ;
a Man like to me, Thou shalt love and be loved by, for ever : a Hand like this hand Shall throw open the gates of new life to thee ! See the Christ stand !'

Saul's Vision, Act xix. 11

I know not too well how I found my way home in the night.
There were witnesses, cohorts about me, to left and to right, Angels, powers, the unuttered, unseen, the alive, the aware—I repressed, I got through them as hardly, as strugglingly there,

As a runner beset by the populace famished for news—Life or death. The whole earth was awakened, hell loosed with her crews;
And the stars of night beat with emotion, and tangled and shot Out in fire the strong pain of pent knowledge: but I fainted not, For the Hand still impelled me at once and supported, suppressed All the tumult, and quenched it with quiet, and holy behest, Till the rapture was shut in itself, and the earth sank to rest.
Anon at the dawn, all that trouble had withered from earth—Not so much, but I saw it die out in the day's tender birth;
In the gathered intensity brought to the grey of the hills;
In the shuddering forests' new awe;
in the sudden wind-thrills;
In the startled wild beasts that bore off, each with eye sidling still Though averted with wonder and dread; in the birds stiff and chill That rose heavily, as I approached them, made stupid with awe!
E'en the serpent that slid away silent,
—he felt the new Law.
The same stared in the white humid faces upturned by the flowers;
The same worked in the heart of the cedar, and moved the vine-borders:
And the little brooks witnessing murmured, persistent and low, With their obstinate, all but hushed voices—'E'en so, it is so!

MY STAR

ALL that I know
Of a certain star,
Is, it can throw (Like the angled spar)
Now a dart of red,
Now a dart of blue, Till my friends have said
They would fain see, too, My star that dartles the red and the blue!

Then it stops like a bird; like a flower, hangs furled:
They must solace themselves with the Saturn above it.
What matter to me if their star is a world?
Mine has opened its soul to me;
therefore I love it.

BY THE FIRE-SIDE

I

How well I know what I mean to do When the long dark Autumn evenings come,
And where, my soul, is thy pleasant hue?
With the music of all thy voices, dumb
In life's November too!

II

I shall be found by the fire, suppose, O'er a great wise book as besemeth
age,
While the shutters flap as the cross-wind blows,
And I turn the page, and I turn the page,
Not verse now, only prose!

Till the young ones whisper, finger on lip,
'There he is at it, deep in Greek:
Now, then, or never, out we slip To cut from the hazels by the creek A mainmast for our ship!'

I shall be at it indeed, my friends!
Greek puts already on either side Such a branch-work forth as soon extends
To a vista opening far and wide,
And I pass out where it ends.

The outside-frame, like your hazel-trees—
But the inside-archway narrows fast,
And a rarer sort succeeds to these,
And we slope to Italy at last And youth, by green degrees.

VI

I follow wherever I am led,
 Knowing so well the leader's hand :
 Oh, woman-country, wooed not wed, Loved all the more by earth's male-lands,
 Laid to their hearts instead !

Look at the ruined chapel again Half-way up in the Alpine gorge.
 Is that a tower, I point you plain,
 Or is it a mill, or an iron forge Breaks solitude in vain ?

VIII

A turn, and we stand in the heart of
 things ;
 The woods are round us, heaped and dim ;
 From slab to slab how it slips and springs—
 The thread of water single and slim, Through the ravage some torrent brings !

IX

Does it feed the little lake below ?
 That speak of white just on its marge
 Is Pella ; see, in the evening-glow, How sharp the silver spear-heads charge
 When Alp meets Heaven in snow.

X

On our other side is the straight-up rock ;
 And a path is kept 'twixt the gorge and it
 By boulder-stones where lichens mock The marks on a moth, and small ferns fit
 Their teeth to the polished block.

XI

Oh, the sense of the yellow mountain-flowers,
 And the thorny balls, each three in
 one,
 The chestnuts throw on our path in showers !
 —For the drop of the woodland fruit's begun,
 These early November hours,

XII

That crimson the creeper's leaf across Like a splash of blood, intense, abrupt,
 O'er a shield else gold from rim to boss,
 And lay it for show on the fairy-cupped
 Elf-needed mat of moss.

XIII

By the rose-flesh mushrooms, un-divulged
 Last evening—nay, in to-day's first dew
 Yon sudden coral nipple bulged Where a freaked, fawn-coloured, flaky crew
 Of toad-stools peep indulged.

XIV

And yonder, at foot of the fronting ridge That takes the turn to a range
 beyond,
 Is the chapel reached by the one-arched bridge
 Where the water is stopped in a stagnant pond
 Danced over by the midge.

XV

The chapel and bridge are of stone alike.
 Blackish-grey and mostly wet ; Cut hemp-stalks steep in the narrow dyke.
 See here again, how the lichens fret
 And the roots of the ivy strike !

XVI

Poor little place, where its one priest comes
 On a festa-day, if he comes at all.
 To the dozen folk from their scattered homes, Gathered within that precinct small
 By the dozen ways one roams—

XVII

To drop from the charcoal-burners' huts, Or climb from the hemp-dressers' low shed,
 Leave the grange where the woodman stores his nuts,
 Or the wattled cote where the fowler spread
 Their gear on the rock's bare jut.

XVIII

It has some pretension too, this front,
With its bit of fresco half-moon-wise Set over the porch, Art's early wont :
'Tis John in the Desert, I surmise, But has borne the weather's brunt—

XIX

Not from the fault of the builder,
though,
For a pent-house properly projects Where three carved beams make a certain show, Dating—good thought of our architect's—
'Five, six, nine, he lets you know.

XX

And all day long a bird sings there,
And a stray sheep drinks at the pond at times ;
The place is silent and aware ;
It has had its scenes, its joys and crimes,
But that is its own affair.

XXI

My perfect wife, my Leonor, Oh, heart my own, oh, eyes, mine too, Whom else could I dare look backward for,
With whom beside should I dare pursue
The path grey heads abhor ?

XXII

For it leads to a crag's sheer edge with
them ;
Youth, flowery all the way, there stops—
Not they ; age threatens and they contemn, Till they reach the gulf wherein youth drops,
One inch from our life's safe hem !

XXIII

With me, youth led . . . I will speak
now,
No longer watch you as you sit Reading by fire-light, that great brow
And the spirit-small hand propping it, Mutely, my heart knows how—

XXIV

When, if I think but deep enough, You are wont to answer, prompt as rhyme ;
And you, too, find without a rebuff The response your soul seeks many a time
Piercing its fine flesh-stuff.

XXV

My own, confirm me ! If I tread
This path back, is it not in pride To think how little I dreamed it led To an age so blest that by its side Youth seems the waste instead ?

XXVI

My own, see where the years conduct !
At first, 'twas something our two souls Should mix as mists do ; each is sucked Into each now : on, the new stream rolls, Whatever rocks obstruct.

XXVII

Think, when our one soul understands The great Word which makes all things new—When earth breaks up and Heaven expands—
How will the change strike me and you In the House not made with hands ?

XXVIII

Oh, I must feel your brain prompt mine,
Your heart anticipate my heart,
You must be just before, in fine, See and make me see, for your part,
New depths of the Divine !

XXIX

But who could have expected this,
When we two drew together first Just for the obvious human bliss,
To satisfy life's daily thirst With a thing men seldom miss ?

XXX

Come back with me to the first of all,
Let us lean and love it over again—
Let us now forget and now recall, Break the rosary in a pearly rain,
And gather what we let fall !

XXXI

What did I say?—that a small bird sings
All day long, save when a brown pair
Of hawks from the wood float with wide wings Strained to a bell; 'gainst the noonday glare
You count the streaks and rings.

XXXII

But at afternoon or almost eve
'Tis better; then the silence grows To that degree, you half believe It must get rid of what it knows,
Its bosom does so heave.

XXXIII

Hither we walked, then, side by side, Arm in arm and cheek to cheek,
And still I questioned or replied, While my heart, convulsed to really
speak,
Lay choking in its pride.

XXXIV

Silent the crumbling bridge we cross, And pity and praise the chapel
sweet,
And care about the fresco's loss,
And wish for our souls a like retreat,
And wonder at the moss.

XXXV

Stoop and kneel on the settle under—Look through the window's grated square:
Nothing to see! for fear of plunder,
The cross is down and the altar bare,
As if thieves don't fear thunder.

XXXVI

We stoop and look in through the grate, See the little porch and rustic door,
Read duly the dead builder's date, Then cross the bridge we crossed
before,
Take the path again—but wait!

XXXVII

Oh moment, one and infinite!
The water slips o'er stock and stone;
The West is tender, hardly bright: How gray at once is the evening grown—
One star, the chrysolite!

XXXVIII

We two stood there with never a third,
But each by each, as each knew well:
The sights we saw and the sounds we heard,
The lights and the shades made up a spell
Till the trouble grew and stirred.

XXXIX

Oh, the little more, and how much it is!
And the little less, and what worlds
away!
How a sound shall quicken content to bliss,
Or a breath suspend the blood's best play,
And life be a proof of this!

XL

Had she willed it, still had stood the screen
So slight, so sure, 'twixt my love and
her:
I could fix her face with a guard between,
And find her soul as when friends confer,
Friends—lovers that might have been.

XLI

For my heart had a touch of the woodland-time,
Wanting to sleep now over its best.
Shake the whole tree in the summer-
prime,
But bring to the last leaf no such test:
'Hold the last fast!' runs the rhyme.

XLII

For a chance to make your little much,
To gain a lover and lose a friend, Venture the tree and a myriad such,
When nothing you mar but the year can mend!
But a last leaf—fear to touch!

XLIII

Yet should it unfasten itself and fall Eddying down till it find your face At some slight wind—(best chance of
all)
Be your heart henceforth its dwelling-place
You trembled to forestal!

XLIV

Worth how well, those dark grey eyes, —That hair so dark and dear, how worth
 That a man should strive and agonize,
 And taste a very hell on earth,
 For the hope of such a prize !

XLV

Oh, you might have turned and tried
 a man,
 Set him a space to weary and wear And prove which suited more your plan,
 His best of hope or his worst despair,
 Yet end as he began.

XLVI

But you spared me this, like the heart you are,
 And filled my empty heart at a word.
 If you join two lives, there is oft a scar,
 They are one and one, with a shadowy third ;
 One near one is too far.

XLVII

A moment after, and hands unseen Were hanging the night around us
 fast ;
 But we knew that a bar was broken between Life and life : we were mixed at last In spite of the mortal screen.

XLVIII

The forests had done it ; there they stood ;
 We caught for a second the powers at play :
 They had mingled us so, for once and for good,
 Their work was done—we might go or stay,
 They relapsed to their ancient mood.

XLIX

How the world is made for each of us !
 How all we perceive and know in it Tends to some moment's product thus,
 When a soul declares itself—to wit,
 By its fruit—the thing it does !

L

Be Hate that fruit or Love that fruit, It forwards the General Deed of Man,
 And each of the Many helps to recruit The life of the race by a general plan ;
 Each living his own, to boot.

LI

I am named and known by that hour's feat ;
 There took my station and degree :
 So grew my own small life complete As nature obtained her best of me—One born to love you, Sweet !

LII

And to watch you sink by the fire-side
 now
 Back again, as you mutely sit Musing by fire-light, that great brow
 And the spirit-small hand propping it Yonder, my heart knows how !

LIII

So, the earth has gained by one man
 more,
 And the gain of earth must be Heaven's gain too,
 And the whole is well worth thinking o'er
 When the autumn comes : which I mean to do
 One day, as I said before.

ANY WIFE TO ANY HUSBAND

I

My love, this is the bitterest, that thou Who art all truth and who dost love me now
 As thine eyes say, as thy voice breaks to say—Shouldst love so truly and couldst love me still
 A whole long life through, had but love its will,
 Would death that leads me from thee brook delay !

II

I have but to be by thee, and thy hand Would never let mine go, nor heart withstand

The beating of my heart to reach its
place.
When should I look for thee and feel thee gone?
When cry for the old comfort and find none?
Never, I know! Thy soul is in thy face.

III

Oh, I should fade—'tis willed so!
might I save,
Gladly I would, whatever beauty gave Joy to thy sense, for that was precious too.
It is not to be granted. But the soul Whence the love comes, all ravage leaves that whole; Vainly the flesh fades; soul makes all things new.

And 'twould not be because my eye grew dim Thou couldst not find the love there, thanks to Him Who never is dishonoured in the spark
He gave us from His fire of fires, and bade Remember whence it sprang nor be afraid
While that burns on, though all the rest grow dark.

So, how thou wouldst be perfect, white and clean Outside as inside, soul and soul's demesne Alike, this body given to show it by!
Oh, three-parts through the worst of life's abyss,
What plaudits from the next world after this,
Couldst thou repeat a stroke and gain the sky!

VI

And is it not the bitterer to think That, disengage our hands and thou wilt sink

Although thy love was love in very deed?
I know that nature! Pass a festive
day Thou dost not throw its relic-flower
away Nor bid its music's loitering echo speed.

Thou let'st the stranger's glove lie where it fell;
If old things remain old things all is
well,
For thou art grateful as becomes man best:
And hadst thou only heard me play one tune,
Or viewed me from a window, not so
soon
With thee would such things fade as with the rest.

VIII

I seem to see! we meet and part;
'tis brief;
The book I opened keeps a folded leaf, The very chair I sat on, breaks the rank;
That is a portrait of me on the wall—Three lines, my face comes at so slight a call:
And for all this, one little hour's to thank.

IX

But now, because the hour through years was fixed,
Because our inmost beings met and mixed,
Because thou once hast loved me—wilt thou dare Say to thy soul and Who may list
beside,
'Therefore she is immortally my bride, Chance cannot change my love, nor time impair.

X

'So, what if in the dusk of life that's left,
I, a tired traveller, of my sun bereft,

Look from my path when, mimicking
the same,
The fire-fly glimpses past me, come and gone !
—Where was it till the sunset ? where anon
It will be at the sunrise ! what's to blame ?

XI

Is it so helpful to thee ? canst thou take
The mimic up, nor, for the true thing's
sake,
Put gently by such efforts at a beam ?
Is the remainder of the way so long Thou need'st the little solace, thou the strong ?
Watch out thy watch, let weak ones doze and dream !

XII

'—Ah, but the fresher faces ! Is it
true, Thou'lt ask, 'some eyes are beautiful and new ?
Some hair,—how can one choose but grasp such wealth ?
And if a man would press his lips to lips
Fresh as the wilding hedge-rose cup there slips
The dew-drop out of, must it be by stealth ?

XIII

'It cannot change the love still kept for Her,
Much more than, such a picture to prefer Passing a day with, to a room's bare
side :
The painted form takes nothing she possessed, Yet, while the Titian's Venus lies at
rest,
A man looks. Once more, what is there to chide ?'

XIV

So must I see, from where I sit and watch,
My own self sell myself, my hand attach

Its warrant to the very thefts from
me—
Thy singleness of soul that made me proud,
Thy purity of heart I loved aloud, Thy man's-truth I was bold to bid God see !

XV

Love so, then, if thou wilt ! Give all thou canst Away to the new faces—disentranced, (Say it and think it) obdurate no
more,
Re-issue looks and words from the old mint, Pass them afresh, no matter whose the print Image and superscription once they bore !

XVI

Re-coin thyself and give it them to spend,—
It all comes to the same thing at the end, Since mine thou wast, mine art and mine shalt be, Faithful or faithless, scaling up the sum Or lavish of my treasure, thou must come Back to the heart's place here I keep for thee !

XVII

Only, why should it be with stain at
all ?
Why must I, 'twixt the leaves of coronal,
Put any kiss of pardon on thy brow ?
Why need the other women know so
much,
And talk together, 'Such the look and
such
The smile he used to love with, then as now !'

XVIII

Might I die last and show thee ! Should I find
Such hardship in the few years left behind,

If free to take and light my lamp,
and go Into thy tomb, and shut the door and sit Seeing thy face on those four sides of it
The better that they are so blank, I know!

XIX

Why, time was what I wanted, to turn o'er Within my mind each look, get more
and more
By heart each word, too much to learn at first;
And join thee all the fitter for the pause
'Neath the low door-way's lintel. That were cause For lingering, though thou calledst, if I durst!

XX

And yet thou art the nobler of us two:
What dare I dream of, that thou canst not do, Outstripping my ten small steps with one stride?
I'll say then, here's a trial and a task—
Is it to bear?—if easy, I'll not ask: Though love fail, I can trust on in thy pride.

XXI

Pride?—when those eyes forestal the life behind
The death I have to go through!— when I find,
Now that I want thy help most, all of thee!
What did I fear? Thy love shall hold me fast
Until the little minute's sleep is past And I wake saved.—And yet it will not be!

TWO IN THE CAMPAGNA

I

I WONDER do you feel to-day
As I have felt, since, hand in hand, We sat down on the grass, to stray In spirit better through the land, This morn of Rome and May?

II

For me, I touched a thought, I know,
Has tantalized me many times, (Like turns of thread the spiders throw Mocking across our path) for rhymes To catch at and let go.

III

Help me to hold it! First it left
The yellowing fennel, run to seed There, branching from the brickwork's cleft,
Some old tomb's ruin; yonder weed Took up the floating weft,

IV

Where one small orange cup amassed Five beetles,—blind and green they groped
Among the honey-meal: and last, Everywhere on the grassy slope
I traced it. Hold it fast!

The champaign with its endless fleece
Of feathery grasses everywhere!
Silence and passion, joy and peace,
An everlasting wash of air—Rome's ghost since her decease.

VI

Such life there, through such lengths of hours,
Such miracles performed in play.
Such primal naked forms of flowers, Such letting Nature have her way While Heaven looks from its towers!

VII

How say you? Let us, O my dove, Let us be unashamed of soul,
As earth lies bare to heaven above!
How is it under our control
To love or not to love?

VIII

I would that you were all to me,
You that are just so much, no more.
Nor yours, nor mine,—nor slave nor free!
Where does the fault lie? what the core
Of the wound, since wound must be?

IX

I would I could adopt your will,
 See with your eyes, and set my heart Beating by yours, and drink my fill At your soul's springs,—your part, my part
 In life, for good and ill.

No. I yearn upward, touch you close,
 Then stand away. I kiss your cheek, Catch your soul's warmth,—I pluck the rose
 And love it more than tongue can
 speak—
 Then the good minute goes.

XI

Already how am I so far Out of that minute? Must I go Still like the thistle ball, no bar, Onward, whenever light winds blow, Fixed by no friendly star?

XII

Just when I seemed about to learn!
 Where is the thread now? Off
 again!
 The old trick! Only I discern—Infinite passion, and the pain Of finite hearts that yearn.

MISCONCEPTIONS

I

This is a spray the Bird clung to, Making it blossom with pleasure, Ere the high tree-top she sprung to,
 Fit for her nest and her treasure.
 Oh, what a hope beyond measure Was the poor spray's, which the flying feet hung to,— So to be singled out, built in, and sung to!

II

This is a heart the Queen leant on, Thrilled in a minute erratic, Ere the true bosom she bent on,
 Meet for love's regal dalmatic.
 Oh, what a fancy ecstatic Was the poor heart's, ere the wanderer went on—
 Love to be saved for it, proffered to,
 spent on!

A SERENADE AT THE VILLA

I

THAT was I, you heard last night
 When there rose no moon at all,
 Nor, to pierce the strained and tight Tent of heaven, a planet small:
 Life was dead, and so was light.

II

Not a twinkle from the fly,
 Not a glimmer from the worm.
 When the crickets stopped their cry,
 When the owls forbore a term,
 You heard music; that was I.

III

Earth turned in her sleep with pain, Sultrily suspired for proof:
 In at heaven and out again,
 Lightning!—where it broke the roof, Bloodlike, some few drops of rain.

IV

What they could my words expressed,
 O my Love, my All, my One!
 Singing helped the verses best,
 And when singing's best was done,
 To my lute I left the rest.

V

So wore night; the East was gray, White the broad-faced hemlock-
 flowers;
 There would be another day;
 Ere its first of heavy hours Found me, I had past away.

VI

What became of all the hopes,
 Words and song and lute as well?
 Say, this struck you—'When life gropes Feebly for the path where fell Light last on the evening slopes,

'One friend in that path shall be
 To secure my steps from wrong;
 One to count night day for me, Patient through the watches long, Serving most with none to see.'

VIII

Never say—as something bodes—
 'So, the worst has yet a worse!
 When life halts 'neath double loads, Better the task-master's curse
 Than such music on the roads!

IX

'When no moon succeeds the sun, Nor can pierce the midnight's tent Any star, the smallest one, While some drops, where lightning went,
Show the final storm begun—

X

'When the fire-fly hides its spot,
When the garden-voices fall In the darkness thick and hot,— Shall another voice avail, That shape be where these are not ?

XI

'Has some plague a longer lease Proffering its help uncouth ?
Can't one even die in peace ?
As one shuts one's eyes on youth,
Is that face the last one sees ?

XII

Oh, how dark your villa was,
Windows fast and obdurate !
How the garden grudged me grass Where I stood—the iron gate Ground its teeth to let me pass !

ONE WAY OF LOVE

I

ALL June I bound the rose in sheaves.
Now, rose by rose, I strip the leaves And strew them where Pauline may pass.
She will not turn aside ? Alas !
Let them lie. Suppose they die ?
The chance was they might take her eye.

II

How many a month I strove to suit
These stubborn fingers to the lute !
To-day I venture all I know.
She will not hear my music ? So !
Break the string ; fold music's wing :
Suppose Pauline had bade me sing !

III

My whole life long I learned to love.
This hour my utmost art I prove And speak my passion.—Heaven or Hell ?

She will not give me Heaven ? 'Tis well !
Lose who may—I still can say, Those who win Heaven, blest are they !

ANOTHER WAY OF LOVE

I

JUNE was not over,
Though past the full,
And the best of her roses Had yet to blow,
When a man I know (But shall not discover,
Since ears are dull,
And time discloses) Turned him and said with a man's true
air,
Half sighing a smile in a yawn, as 't
were,—
'If I tire of your June, will she greatly care ?'

II

Well, Dear, in-doors with you !
True, serene deadness Tries a man's temper.
What's in the blossom
June wears on her bosom ?
Can it clear scores with you ?
Sweetness and redness, Eadem semper !
Go, let me care for it greatly or slightly If June mends her bowers now, your hand left unsightly By plucking their roses,—my June will do rightly,

III

And after, for pastime,
If June be refulgent With flowers in completeness, All petals, no prickles, Delicious as trickles
Of wine poured at mass-time,— And choose One indulgent To redness and sweetness :
Or if, with experience of man and of spider, June use my June-lightning, the strong insect-riddler,
And stop the fresh spinning,—why, June will consider.

A PRETTY WOMAN

I

THAT fawn-skin-dappled hair of hers,
And the blue eye
Dear and dewy,
And that infantine fresh air of hers !

II
To think men cannot take you, Sweet,
And enfold you,
Ay, and hold you,
And so keep you what they make you,
Sweet!

III
You like us for a glance, you know—
For a word's sake,
Or a sword's sake,
All's the same, whate'er the chance,
you know.

IV
And in turn we make you ours, we
say—
You and youth too,
Eyes and mouth too,
All the face composed of flowers, we say.

V All's our own, to make the most of,
Sweet—
Sing and say for,
Watch and pray for,
Keep a secret or go boast of, Sweet!

VI
But for loving, why, you would not,
Sweet,
Though we prayed you,
Paid you, brayed you
In a mortar—for you could not, Sweet!

VII
So, we leave the sweet face fondly
there:
Be its beauty
Its sole duty!
Let all hope of grace beyond, lie there!

VIII
And while the face lies quiet there, Who shall wonder That I ponder
A conclusion? I will try it there.

IX
As,—why must one, for the love for-
gone,
Scout mere liking?
Thunder-striking Earth,—the Heaven, we looked above for, gone!

X
Why with beauty, needs there money
be—
Love with liking?
Crush the fly-king
In his gauze, because no honey-bee?

XI
May not liking be so simple-sweet, If love grew there
'Twould undo there
All that breaks the cheek to dimples sweet?

XII
Is the creature too imperfect, say?
Would you mend it
And so end it?
Since not all addition perfects aye!

XIII
Or is it of its kind, perhaps, Just perfection—
Whence, rejection
Of a grace not to its mind, perhaps?

XIV
Shall we burn up, tread that face at once Into tinder,
And so hinder Sparks from kindling all the place at once?

XV
Or else kiss away one's soul on her?
Your love-fancies!
—A sick man sees Truer, when his hot eyes roll on her!

XVI Thus the craftsman thinks to grace the rose,— Plucks a mould-flower
For his gold flower, Uses fine things that efface the rose:

XVII
Rosy rubies make its cup more rose, Precious metals
Ape the petals,— Last, some old king locks it up, morose!

XVIII
Then, how grace a rose? I know a way!
Leave it, rather.
Must you gather?
Smell, kiss, wear it—at last, throw
away!

RESPECTABILITY

I

DEAR, had the world in its caprice Deigned to proclaim 'I know you
both,

Have recognized your plighted troth, Am sponsor for you : live in peace !—
How many precious months and years Of youth had passed, that speed so
fast,

Before we found it out at last,
The world, and what it fears ?

II

How much of priceless life were spent With men that every virtue decks,
And women models of their sex, Society's true ornament,— Ere we dared wander, nights like this, Thro' wind and rain, and watch the Seine,
And feel the Boulevart break again To warmth and light and bliss ?

III

I know ! the world proscribes not love ;
Allows my finger to caress
Your lip's contour and downiness, Provided it supply a glove.
The world's good word !—the Institute !
Guizot receives Montalembert !
Eh ? down the court three lampions flare—
Put forward your best foot !

LOVE IN A LIFE

I

ROOM after room,
I hunt the house through
We inhabit together.
Heart, fear nothing, for, heart, thou shalt find her, Next time, herself !—not the trouble behind her Left in the curtain, the couch's perfume !
As she brushed it, the cornice-wreath blossomed anew :
Yon looking-glass gleamed at the wave of her feather.

II

Yet the day wears,
And door succeeds door ;
I try the fresh fortune—Range the wide house from the wing to the centre.
Still the same chance ! she goes out as I enter.
Spend my whole day in the quest,—
who cares ?
But 'tis twilight, you see,—with such suites to explore, Such closets to search, such alcoves to importune !

LIFE IN A LOVE

ESCAPE me ?

Never—Beloved !

While I am I, and you are you,
So long as the world contains us
both,
Me the loving and you the loth, While the one eludes, must the other pursue.

My life is a fault at last, I fear :
It seems too much like a fate, indeed Though I do my best I shall scarce succeed.
But what if I fail of my purpose here ?
It is but to keep the nerves at strain,
To dry one's eyes and laugh at a fall,
And baffled, get up and begin again,— So the chace takes up one's life, that's
all.

While, look but once from your farthest bound

At me so deep in the dust and dark,
No sooner the old hope drops to ground Than a new one, straight to the self-same mark,

I shape me—
Ever Removed !

IN THREE DAYS

I

So, I shall see her in three days And just one night, but nights are short,
Then two long hours, and that is morn.
See how I come, unchanged, unworn !

Feel, where my life broke off from thine, How fresh the splinters keep and
fine,—
Only a touch and we combine !

II

Too long, this time of year, the days !
But nights—at least the nights are short.
As night shows where her one moon is,
A hand's-breadth of pure light and bliss,
So life's night gives my lady birth And my eyes hold her ! what is worth The rest of heaven, the rest of earth ?

III

O loaded curls, release your store
Of warmth and scent as once before The tingling hair did, lights and darks Outbreaking into fairy sparks, When under curl and curl I pried
After the warmth and scent inside, Thro' lights and darks how manifold—
The dark inspired, the light controlled !
As early Art embrowned the gold.

IV

What great fear, should one say,
'Three days
That change the world, might change as well
Your fortune ; and if joy delays, Be happy that no worse befell.'
What small fear, if another says,
'Three days and one short night beside May throw no shadow on your ways ; But years must teem with change untried,
With chance not easily defied,
With an end somewhere undescried.'
No fear !—or if a fear be born This minute, it dies out in scorn.
Fear ? I shall see her in three days And one night, now the nights are
short,
Then just two hours, and that is morn.

IN A YEAR

I

NEVER any more While I live, Need I hope to see his face
As before.

Once his love grown chill, Mine may strive—Bitterly we re-embrace, Single still.

II

Was it something said, Something done,
Vexed him ? was it touch of hand,
Turn of head ?
Strange ! that very way Love begun :
I as little understand Love's decay.

III

When I sewed or drew,
I recall
How he looked as if I sung, —Sweetly too.
If I spoke a word,
First of all
Up his cheek the colour sprung,
Then he heard.

IV

Sitting by my side,
At my feet,
So he breathed the air I breathed, Satisfied !
I, too, at love's brim Touched the sweet :
I would die if death bequeathed Sweet to him.

'Speak, I love thee best !'
He exclaimed.
'Let thy love my own foretell,' I confessed :
'Clasp my heart on thine
Now unblamed,
Since upon thy soul as well Hangeth mine !'

VI

Was it wrong to own,
Being truth ?
Why should all the giving prove His alone ?
I had wealth and ease,
Beauty, youth—
Since my lover gave me love,
I gave these.

VII

That was all I meant,
 —To be just,
 And the passion I had raised,
 To content.
 Since he chose to change
 Gold for dust,
 If I gave him what he praised Was it strange ?

VIII

Would he loved me yet,
 On and on.
 While I found some way undreamed —Paid my debt !
 Gave more life and more,
 Till, all gone,
 He should smile 'She never seemed Mine before.

IX

'What—she felt the while,
 Must I think ?
 Love's so different with us men,'
 He should smile.
 'Dying for my sake—
 White and pink !
 Can't we touch these bubbles then But they break ?'

X

Dear, the pang is brief,
 Do thy part,
 Have thy pleasure. How perplex Grows belief !
 Well, this cold clay clod
 Was man's heart.
 Crumble it—and what comes next ?
 Is it God ?

WOMEN AND ROSES

I

I DREAM of a red-rose tree.
 And which of its roses three Is the dearest rose to me ?

II

Round and round, like a dance of snow
 In a dazzling drift, as its guardians, go Floating the women faded for ages, Sculptured in stone, on the poet's pages.

Then follow women fresh and gay,
 Living and loving and loved to-day, Last, in the rear, flee the multitude of maidens, Beauties unborn. And all, to one cadence,
 They circle their rose on my rose tree.

III

Dear rose, thy term is reached,
 Thy leaf hangs loose and bleached ;
 Bees pass it unimpeached.

IV

Stay then, stoop, since I cannot climb,
 You, great shapes of the antique time !
 How shall I fix you, fire you, freeze you, Break my heart at your feet to please
 you ?
 Oh, to possess, and be possessed !
 Hearts that beat 'neath each pallid
 breast !
 But once of love, the poesy, the passion, Drink once and die !—In vain, the same fashion,
 They circle their rose on my rose tree.

V

Dear rose, thy joy's undimmed ;
 Thy cup is ruby-rimmed,
 Thy cup's heart nectar-brimmed.

VI

Deep as drops from a statue's plinth
 The bee sucked in by the hyacinth, So will I bury me while burning, Quench like him at a plunge my yearn-
 ing,
 Eyes in your eyes, lips on your lips !
 Fold me fast where the cincture slips, Prison all my soul in eternities of pleasure !
 Girdle me once ! But no—in their old measure
 They circle their rose on my rose tree.

VII

Dear rose without a thorn, Thy bud's the babe unborn :
 First streak of a new morn.

VIII

Wings, lend wings for the cold, the clear !
 What's far conquers what is near.

Roses will bloom nor want beholders, Sprung from the dust where our own flesh moulders
 What shall arrive with the cycle's
 change ?
 A novel grace and a beauty strange.
 I will make an Eve, be the artist that began her,
 Shaped her to his mind !—Alas ! in like manner
 They circle their rose on my rose tree.

BEFORE

I

LET them fight it out, friend ! things have gone too far.
 God must judge the couple ! leave them as they are —Whichever one's the guiltless, to his glory,
 And whichever one the guilt's with to my story.

II

Why, you would not bid men, sunk in such a slough, Strike no arm out further, stick and stink as now, Leaving right and wrong to settle the embroilment, Heaven with snaky Hell, in torture and entoilment ?

III

Who's the culprit of them ? How must he conceive God—the queen he caps to, laughing in his sleeve,
 'Tis but decent to profess oneself beneath her :
 Still, one must not be too much in earnest, either !

IV

Better sin the whole sin, sure that God observes,
 Than go live his life out ! life will try his nerves, When the sky which noticed all, makes no disclosure,
 And the earth keeps up her terrible composure.

V

Let him pace at pleasure, past the walls of rose, Pluck their fruits when grape-trees graze him as he goes.
 For he 'gins to guess the purpose of the garden,
 With the sly mute thing beside, there, for a warden.

What's the leopard-dog-thing, constant at his side,
 A leer and lie in every eye of its obsequious hide ?
 When will come an end to all the mock obeisance,
 And the price appear that pays for the misfeasance ?

VII

So much for the culprit. Who's the martyred man ?
 Let him bear one stroke more, for be sure he can !
 He that strove thus evil's lump with good to leaven, Let him give his blood at last and get his Heaven !

VIII

All or nothing, stake it ! trusts he God or no ?
 Thus far and no farther ? farther ? be it so !
 Now, enough of your chicane of prudent pauses, Sage provisos, sub-intents and saving-clauses !

IX

Ah, 'forgive' you bid him ? While God's champion lives, Wrong shall be resisted : dead, why, he forgives.
 But you must not end my friend ere you begin him ;
 Evil stands not crowned on earth, while breath is in him !

Once more—Will the wronger, at this last of all,
 Dare to say, 'I did wrong,' rising in his fall ?

No ?—Let go, then ! both the fighters to their places !
While I count three, step you back as many paces !

AFTER

TAKE the cloak from his face, and at first
Let the corpse do its worst.

How he lies in his rights of a man !
Death has done all death can.

And, absorbed in the new life he leads,

He recks not, he heeds Nor his wrong nor my vengeance—both strike

On his senses alike,
And are lost in the solemn and strange Surprise of the change.

Ha, what avails death to erase His offence, my disgrace ?
I would we were boys as of old In the field, by the fold :
His outrage, God's patience, man's scorn
Were so easily borne.

I stand here now, he lies in his place :
Cover the face.

THE GUARDIAN-ANGEL

A PICTURE AT FANO

I

DEAR and great Angel, wouldst thou only leave

That child, when thou hast done with him, for me !

Let me sit all the day here, that when eve

Shall find performed thy special ministry

And time come for departure, thou, suspending

Thy flight, may'st see another child for tending,

Another still, to quiet and retrieve.

II

Then I shall feel thee step one step, no
more,

From where thou standest now, to where I gaze,

—And suddenly my head is covered o'er With those wings, white above the child who prays

Now on that tomb—and I shall feel thee guarding

Me, out of all the world ; for me, discarding

Yon Heaven thy home, that waits
, and opes its door !

I would not look up thither past thy
head

Because the door opes, like that child, I know,

For I should have thy gracious face
instead,

Thou bird of God ! And wilt thou bend me low

Like him, and lay, like his, my hands together,

And lift them up to pray, and gently tether

Me, as thy lamb there, with thy garment's spread ?

IV

If this was ever granted, I would rest My head beneath thine, while thy healing hands Close-covered both my eyes beside thy

breast,
Pressing the brain, which too much thought expands, Back to its proper size again, and smoothing Distortion down till every nerve had soothing,

And all lay quiet, happy and supprest.

V

How soon all worldly wrong would be repaired !

I think how I should view the earth and skies

And sea, when once again my brow was bared

After thy healing, with such different
eyes.

O, world, as God has made it! all is beauty:
And knowing this, is love, and love is duty.
What further may be sought for or declared?

VI

Guercino drew this angel I saw teach (Alfred, dear friend!)—that little child to pray,
Holding the little hands up, each to each Pressed gently,—with his own head turned away
Over the earth where so much lay before him
Of work to do, though Heaven was opening o'er him,
And he was left at Fano by the beach.

VII

We were at Fano, and three times we went
To sit and see him in his chapel there, And drink his beauty to our soul's content
—My angel with me too: and since I care For dear Guercino's fame (to which in power
And glory comes this picture for a
dower,
Fraught with a pathos so magnificent),

VIII

And since he did not work so earnestly At all times, and has else endured some wrong—
I took one thought his picture struck from me,
And spread it out, translating it to
song.
My Love is here. Where are you, dear old friend?
How rolls the Wairoa at your world's far end?
This is Ancona, yonder is the sea.

MEMORABILIA

I

AH, did you once see Shelley plain,
And did he stop and speak to you?
And did you speak to him again?
How strange it seems, and new!

II

But you were living before that,
And you are living after,
And the memory I started at—My starting moves your laughter!

III

I crossed a moor, with a name of its
own
And a use in the world no doubt, Yet a hand's-breadth of it shines alone
'Mid the blank miles round about:

IV

For there I picked up on the heather And there I put inside my breast A moulted feather, an eagle-feather—Well, I forget the rest.

POPULARITY

I

STAND still, true poet that you are!
I know you; let me try and draw
you.
Some night you'll fail us: when afar You rise, remember one man saw
you,
Knew you, and named a star!

II

My star, God's glow-worm! Why extend That loving hand of His which leads
you,
Yet locks you safe from end to end Of this dark world, unless He needs
you—
Just saves your light to spend?

III

His clenched Hand shall uncloset at
last,
I know, and let out all the beauty:
My poet holds the Future fast, Accepts the coming ages' duty,
Their Present for this Past.

IV

That day, the earth's feast-master's brow
Shall clear, to God the chalice raising;
'Others give best at first, but Thou Forever set'st our table praising, Keep'st the good wine till now!'

V

Meantime, I'll draw you as you stand,
With few or none to watch and wonder:
I'll say—a fisher, on the sand
By Tyre the Old, with ocean-plunder, A netful, brought to land.

VI

Who has not heard how Tyrian shells Enclosed the blue, that dye of dyes Whereof one drop worked miracles,
And coloured like Astarte's eyes Raw silk the merchant sells?

And each bystander of them all Could criticize, and quote tradition How depths of blue sublimed some pall —To get which, pricked a king's ambition;
Worth sceptre, crown and ball.

VIII

Yet there's the dye, in that rough mesh,
The sea has only just o'er-whispered!
Live welks, each lip's beard dripping fresh,
As if they still the water's lip heard Through foam the rock-weeds thresh.

IX

Enough to furnish Solomon Such hangings for his cedar-house, That, when gold-robed he took the throne
In that abyss of blue, the Spouse Might swear his presence shone

Most like the centre-spike of gold Which burns deep in the blue-bell's womb,
What time, with ardours manifold,
The bee goes singing to her groom, Drunken and overbold.

XI

Mere conchs! not fit for warp or woof!
Till cunning comes to pound and squeeze
And clarify,—refine to proof
The liquor filtered by degrees, While the world stands aloof.

XII

And there's the extract, flasked and fine,
And priced and saleable at last!
And Hobbs, Nobbs, Stokes and Nokes combine
To paint the Future from the Past, Put blue into their line.

XIII

Hobbs hints blue,—straight he turtle eats:
Nobbs prints blue,—claret crowns his cup:
Nokes outdares Stokes in azure feats,— Both gorge. Who fished the murex up?
What porridge had John Keats?

MASTER HUGUES OF SAXE- GOTHA

I

Hist, but a word, fair and soft!
Forth and be judged, Master Hugues!
Answer the question I've put you so oft—
What do you mean by your mountainous fugues?
See, we're alone in the loft,—

II

I, the poor organist here, Hugues, the composer of note—Dead, though, and done with, this many a year:
Let's have a colloquy, something to quote,
Make the world prick up its ear!

III

See, the church empties apace:
Fast they extinguish the lights—Hallo there, sacristan! five minutes'
grace!
Here's a crank pedal wants setting to rights,
Baulks one of holding the base.

IV

See, our huge house of the sounds, Hushing its hundreds at once, Bids the last loiterer back to his bounds!
—Oh, you may challenge them, not a response
Get the church-saints on their rounds!

v

(Saints go their rounds, who shall doubt ?
—March, with the moon to admire, Up nave, down chancel, turn transept about,
Supervise all betwixt pavement and spire, Put rats and mice to the rout—

vi

Aloys and Jurien and Just—Order things back to their place,
Have a sharp eye lest the candlesticks rust, Rub the church-plate, darn the sacrament-lace, Clear the desk-velvet of dust.)

vii

Here's your book, younger folks shelve !
Played I not off-hand and runningly, Just now, your masterpiece, hard number twelve ?
Here's what should strike,—could one handle it cunningly :
Help the axe, give it a helve !

Page after page as I played, Every bar's rest, where one wipes Sweat from one's brow, I looked up and surveyed, O'er my three claviers, yon forest of pipes Whence you still peeped in the shade.

ix

Sure you were wishful to speak,
You, with brow ruled like a score,
Yes, and eyes buried in pits on each cheek,
Like two great breves as they wrote them of yore Each side that bar, your straight beak !

x

Sure you said—'Good, the mere notes !
Still, couldst thou take my intent, Know what procured me our Company's votes—Masters being lauded and sciolists shent, Parted the sheep from the goats !'

xi

Well then, speak up, never flinch !
Quick, ere my candle's a snuff —Burnt, do you see ? to its uttermost inch—I believe in you, but that's not enough :
Give my conviction a clunch !

xii

First you deliver your phrase —Nothing propound, that I see, Fit in itself for much blame or much praise—Answered no less, where no answer needs be :
Off start the Two on their ways !

xiii

Straight must a Third interpose, Volunteer needlessly help—
In strikes a Fourth, a Fifth thrusts in his nose, So the cry's open, the kennel's a-yelp, Argument's hot to the close !

xiv

One dissertates, he is candid ;
Two must discept,—has distinguished ;
Three helps the couple, if ever yet man did ;
Four protests ; Five makes a dart at the thing wished :
Back to One, goes the case banded.

xv

One says his say with a difference—
More of expounding, explaining !
All now is wrangle, abuse and vociferance—Now there's a truce, all's subdued, self-restraining—Five, though, stands out all the stiffer hence.

xvi

One is incisive, corrosive ;
Two retorts, nettled, curt, crepitant ;
Three makes rejoinder, expansive, explosive ;
Four overbears them all, strident and strepitant : Five . . . O Danaides, O Sieve !

XVII

Now, they ply axes and crowbars;
 Now, they prick pins at a tissue Fine as a skein of the casuist Escobar's Worked on the bone of a lie. To what issue?
 Where is our gain at the Two-bars?

XVIII

Est fuga, volvitur rota!

On we drift. Where looms the dim port?
 One, Two, Three, Four, Five, contribute their quota—
 Something is gained, if one caught but the import—Show it us, Hugues of Saxe-Gotha!

XIX

What with affirming, denying,
 Holding, risposting, subjoining, All's like . . . it's like . . . for an instance I'm trying . . .
 There! See our roof, its gilt moulding and groining Under those spider-webs lying!

XX

So your fugue broadens and thickens, Greatens and deepens and lengthens, Till one exclaims—'But where's music, the dickens?
 Blot ye the gold, while your spider-web strengthens —Blacked to the stoutest of tickens?'

XXI

I for man's effort am zealous:
 Prove me such censure's unfounded!
 Seems it surprising a lover grows jealous—
 Hopes 'twas for something his organ-pipes sounded,
 Tiring three boys at the bellows?

XXII

Is it your moral of Life?
 Such a web, simple and subtle, Weave we on earth here in impotent strife,
 Backward and forward each throwing his shuttle,
 Death ending all with a knife?

XXIII

Over our heads Truth and Nature—
 Still our life's zigzags and dodges, Ins and outs, weaving a new legislature—God's gold just shining its last where that lodges, Palled beneath Man's usurpature!

XXIV

So we o'ershroud stars and roses, Cherub and trophy and garland.
 Nothings grow something which quietly closes Heaven's earnest eye,—not a glimpse of the far land
 Gets through our comments and glozes.

XXV

Ah, but traditions, inventions, (Say we and make up a visage) So many men with such various intentions Down the past ages must know more than this age!
 Leave the web all its dimensions!

XXVI

Who thinks Hugues wrote for the deaf, Proved a mere mountain in labour?
 Better submit—try again—what's the clef?
 'Faith, it's no trifle for pipe and for tabor—
 Four flats, the minor in F.

XXVII

Friend, your fugue taxes the finger:
 Learning it once, who would lose it?
 Yet all the while a misgiving will linger—Truth's golden o'er us although we refuse it—
 Nature, thro' dust-clouds we fling her!

XXVIII

Hugues! I advise mea poena (Counterpoint glares like a Gorgon) Bid One, Two, Three, Four, Five, clear the arena!
 Say the word, straight I unstop the Full-Organ,
 Blare out the mode Palestrina.

XXIX

While in the roof, if I'm right there,
 . . . Lo, you, the wick in the socket!
 Hallo, you sacristan, show us a light there!
 Down it dips, gone like a rocket!
 What, you want, do you, to come unawares,

Sweeping the church up for first morning-prayers,
 And find a poor devil has ended his cares
 At the foot of your rotten-runged ratriddled stairs?
 Do I carry the moon in my pocket?

ROMANCES

INCIDENT OF THE FRENCH CAMP

I

You know, we French stormed Ratis-bon:

A mile or so away
 On a little mound, Napoleon Stood on our storming-day;
 With neck out-thrust, you fancy how, Legs wide, arms locked behind,
 As if to balance the prone brow Oppressive with its mind.

II

Just as perhaps he mused 'My plans That soar, to earth may fall, Let once my army-leader Lannes Waver at yonder wall,'— Out 'twixt the battery-smokes there flew A rider, bound on bound Full-galloping; nor bridle drew Until he reached the mound.

III

Then off there flung in smiling joy,
 And held himself erect By just his horse's mane, a boy:
 You hardly could suspect—(So tight he kept his lips compressed, Scarce any blood came through) You looked twice ere you saw his
 breast
 Was all but shot in two.

IV

'Well,' cried he, 'Emperor, by God's grace
 We've got you Ratisbon!
 The Marshal's in the market-place,
 And you'll be there anon

To see your flag-bird flap his vans
 Where I, to heart's desire, Perched him!' The Chief's eye flashed; his plans
 Soared up again like fire.

The Chief's eye flashed; but presently Softened itself, as sheathes
 A film the mother-eagle's eye When her bruised eaglet breathes:
 'You're wounded!' 'Nay,' his soldier's pride Touched to the quick, he said:
 'I'm killed, Sir!' And his Chief beside, Smiling the boy fell dead.

THE PATRIOT

AN OLD STORY

I

It was roses, roses, all the way, With myrtle mixed in my path like mad:
 The house-roofs seemed to heave and sway,
 The church-spires flamed, such flags they had,
 A year ago on this very day!

II

The air broke into a mist with bells,
 The old walls rocked with the crowd and cries.
 Had I said, 'Good folk, mere noise repels—
 But give me your sun from yonder skies!'
 They had answered, 'And afterward, what else?'

III

Alack, it was I who leaped at the sun
To give it my loving friends to keep !
Nought man could do, have I left undone :

And you see my harvest, what I reap
This very day, now a year is run.

IV

There's nobody on the house-tops
now—

Just a palsied few at the windows set ;
For the best of the sight is, all allow,
At the Shambles' Gate—or, better
yet,
By the very scaffold's foot, I trow.

V

I go in the rain, and, more than needs,
A rope cuts both my wrists behind ;
And I think, by the feel, my forehead bleeds,

For they fling, whoever has a mind,
Stones at me for my year's misdeeds.

VI

Thus I entered, and thus I go !

In triumphs, people have dropped down dead.

'Paid by the World,—what dost thou owe

Me ?' God might question : now instead,

'Tis God shall repay ! I am safer so.

MY LAST DUCHESS

FERRARA .

THAT's my last Duchess painted on the wall,

Looking as if she were alive ; I call That piece a wonder, now : Frà Pandolf's hands

Worked busily a day, and there she stands.

Will't please you sit and look at her ?
I said

'Frà Pandolf' by design, for never read Strangers like you that pictured countenance,

The depth and passion of its earnest
glance,

But to myself they turned (since none puts by

The curtain I have drawn for you, but I)

And seemed as they would ask me, if they durst,

How such a glance came there ; so, not the first

Are you to turn and ask thus. Sir, 't was not

Her husband's presence only, called that spot

Of joy into the Duchess' cheek : perhaps

Frà Pandolf chanced to say 'Her mantle laps

Over my Lady's wrist too much,' or
'Paint

Must never hope to reproduce the faint Half-flush that dies along her throat ;'

such stuff
Was courtesy, she thought, and cause
enough

For calling up that spot of joy. She had A heart . . . how shall I say ? . . . too soon made glad,

Too easily impressed ; she liked whate'er

She looked on, and her looks went everywhere.

Sir, 't was all one ! My favour at her
breast,

The dropping of the daylight in the West,

The bough of cherries some officious fool

Broke in the orchard for her, the white mule

She rode with round the terrace—all and each

Would draw from her alike the approving speech,

Or blush, at least. She thanked men, —good ; but thanked

Somehow . . . I know not how . . . as if she ranked

My gift of a nine-hundred-years-old name

With anybody's gift. Who'd stoop to blame

This sort of trifling ? Even had you skill

In speech—(which I have not)—to make your will

Quite clear to such an one, and say 'Just
 this Or that in you disgusts me; here you miss,
 Or there exceed the mark'—and if she let Herself be lessened so, nor plainly set Her wits to yours, forsooth, and made excuse,
 —E'en then would be some stooping, and I chuse Never to stoop. Oh, Sir, she smiled, no
 doubt,
 Whene'er I passed her; but who passed without Much the same smile? This grew; I gave commands; Then all smiles stopped together. There she stands
 As if alive. Will't please you rise?
 We'll meet
 The company below, then. I repeat, The Count your Master's known munificence
 Is ample warrant that no just pretence
 Of mine for dowry will be disallowed; Though his fair daughter's self, as I avowed At starting, is my object. Nay, we'll go Together down, Sir! Notice Neptune,
 though,
 Taming a sea-horse, thought a rarity, Which Claus of Innsbruck cast in bronze for me.

COUNT GISMOND

AIX IN PROVENCE

I

CHRIST God, who savest man, save most Of men Count Gismond who saved me!
 Count Gauthier, when he chose his post, Chose time and place and company To suit it; when he struck at length My honour 'twas with all his strength.

II

And doubtlessly ere he could draw All points to one, he must have schemed!
 That miserable morning saw Few half so happy as I seemed, While being dressed in Queen's array To give our Tourney prize away.

III

I thought they loved me, did me grace To please themselves; 'twas all their
 deed;
 God makes, or fair or foul, our face;
 If showing mine so caused to bleed My Cousins' hearts, they should have dropped A word, and straight the play had stopped.

IV

They, too, so beauteous! Each a queen
 By virtue of her brow and breast;
 Not needing to be crowned, I mean,
 As I do. E'en when I was dressed, Had either of them spoke, instead Of glancing sideways with still head!

V

But no: they let me laugh, and sing My birthday-song quite through, adjust
 The last rose in my garland, fling
 A last look on the mirror, trust
 My arms to each an arm of theirs,
 And so descend the castle-stairs—

VI

And come out on the morning-troop
 Of merry friends who kissed my cheek, And called me Queen, and made me stoop
 Under the canopy—(a streak
 That pierced it, of the outside sun, Powdered with gold its gloom's soft dun)—

VII

And they could let me take my state
 And foolish throne amid applause Of all come there to celebrate My Queen's-day—Oh, I think the cause Of much was, they forgot no crowd Makes up for parents in their shroud!

VIII

Howe'er that be, all eyes were bent Upon me, when my cousins cast Thems down; 'twas time I should present
 The victor's crown, but . . . there,
 'twill last
 No long time . . . the old mist again Blinds me as then it did. How vain!

IX

See! Gismond's at the gate, in talk With his two boys: I can proceed.
 Well, at that moment, who should stalk Forth boldly (to my face, indeed) But Gauthier, and he thundered
 'Stay!'
 And all stayed. 'Bring no crowns, I say!'

Bring torches! Wind the penance-sheet
 About her! Let her shun the chaste, Or lay herself before their feet!
 Shall she, whose body I embraced A night long, queen it in the day?
 For Honour's sake no crowns, I say!'

XI

I? What I answered? As I live, I never fancied such a thing As answer possible to give.
 What says the body when they spring
 Some monstrous torture-engine's whole Strength on it? No more says the soul.

XII

Till out strode Gismond; then I knew That I was saved. I never met His face before, but, at first view, I felt quite sure that God hath set Himself to Satan; who would spend A minute's mistrust on the end?

XIII

He strode to Gauthier, in his throat Gave him the lie, then struck his mouth
 With one back-handed blow that wrote In blood men's verdict there. North,
 South, East, West, I looked. The lie was dead,
 And damned, and truth stood up instead.

XIV

This glads me most, that I enjoyed The heart of the joy, with my content
 In watching Gismond unalloyed
 By any doubt of the event:
 God took that on Him—I was bid Watch Gismond for my part: I did.

XV

Did I not watch him while he let His armourer just brace his greaves, Rivet his hauberk, on the fret The while! His foot... my memory leaves
 No least stamp out, nor how anon He pulled his ringing gauntlets on.

XVI

And e'en before the trumpet's sound Was finished, prone lay the false Knight,
 Prone as his lie, upon the ground:
 Gismond flew at him, used no sleight Of the sword, but open-breasted drove, Cleaving till out the truth he clove.

XVII

Which done, he dragged him to my feet
 And said 'Here die, but end thy breath
 In full confession, lest thou fleet
 From my first, to God's second death!
 Say, hast thou lied?' And, 'I have lied
 To God and her,' he said, and died.

XVIII

Then Gismond, kneeling to me, asked —What safe my heart holds, though no word Could I repeat now, if I tasked My powers for ever, to a third Dear even as you are. Pass the rest Until I sank upon his breast.

XIX

Over my head his arm he flung Against the world; and scarce I felt His sword (that dripped by me and swung)
 A little shifted in its belt:
 For he began to say the while How South our home lay many a mile

XX

So 'mid the shouting multitude We two walked forth to never more Return. My Cousins have pursued Their life, untroubled as before I vexed them. Gauthier's dwelling
 place
 God lighten! May his soul find grace

XXI

Our elder boy has got the clear Great brow; tho' when his brother's black Full eye shows scorn, it . . . Gismond
here?
And have you brought my tercel
back?
I just was telling Adela
How many birds it struck since May.

THE BOY AND THE ANGEL

MORNING, evening, noon and night,
'Praise God,' sang Theocrite, Then to his poor trade he turned,
By which the daily meal was earned.
Hard he laboured, long and well;
O'er his work the boy's curls fell:
But ever, at each period,
He stopped and sang, 'Praise God.'
Then back again his curls he threw,
And cheerful turned to work anew.
Said Blaise, the listening monk, 'Well
done;
I doubt not thou art heard, my son:
As well as if thy voice to-day Were praising God, the Pope's great
way.
This Easter Day, the Pope at Rome Praises God from Peter's dome.'
Said Theocrite, 'Would God that I Might praise Him, that great way, and
die!
Night passed, day shone,
And Theocrite was gone.
With God a day endures alway.
A thousand years are but a day.
God said in Heaven, 'Nor day nor night Now brings the voice of my delight.'
Then Gabriel, like a rainbow's birth, Spread his wings and sank to earth;
Entered in flesh, the empty cell, Lived there, and played the craftsman
well;
And morning, evening, noon and night,
Praised God in place of Theocrite.

And from a boy, to youth he grew:
The man put off the stripling's hue:
The man matured and fell away Into the season of decay:
And ever o'er the trade he bent,
And ever lived on earth content.
(He did God's will; to him, all one If on the earth or in the sun.)
God said, 'A praise is in mine ear;
There is no doubt in it, no fear:
So sing old worlds, and so
New worlds that from my footstool go.
Clearer loves sound other ways:
I miss my little human praise.'
Then forth sprang Gabriel's wings, off fell
The flesh disguise, remained the cell.
'Twas Easter Day: he flew to Rome,
And paused above Saint Peter's dome.
In the tiring-room close by The great outer gallery,
With his holy vestments dight, Stood the new Pope, Theocrite:
And all his past career Came back upon him clear, Since when, a boy, he plied his trade, Till on his life the sickness weighed;
And in his cell, when death drew near,
An angel in a dream brought cheer:
And rising from the sickness drear
He grew a priest, and now stood here.
To the East with praise he turned,
And on his sight the angel burned.
'I bore thee from thy craftsman's cell,
And set thee here; I did not well.
Vainly I left my angel-sphere, Vain was thy dream of many a year.
Thy voice's praise seemed weak; it dropped—Creation's chorus stopped!
Go back and praise again
The early way, while I remain.
With that weak voice of our disdain, Take up Creation's pausing strain.

Back to the cell and poor employ : Become the craftsman and the boy !
 Theocrite grew old at home ;
 A new Pope dwelt in Peter's Dome.
 One vanished as the other died :
 They sought God side by side.

INSTANS TYRANNUS

I

Of the million or two, more or less,
 I rule and possess,
 One man, for some cause undefined,
 Was least to my mind.

II

I struck him, he grovelled of course—
 For, what was his force ?
 I pinned him to earth with my weight.
 And persistence of hate :
 And he lay, would not moan, would not curse,
 As his lot might be worse.

III

'Were the object less mean, would he stand
 At the swing of my hand !
 For obscurity helps him and blots
 The hole where he squats.'
 So I set my five wits on the stretch
 To inveigle the wretch.
 All in vain ! gold and jewels I threw,
 Still he couched there perdue.
 I tempted his blood and his flesh, Hid in roses my mesh, Choicest cates and the flagon's best spilth :

Still he kept to his filth !

IV

Had he kith now or kin, were access To his heart, did I press—Just a son or a mother to seize !
 No such booty as these !
 Were it simply a friend to pursue 'Mid my million or two,
 Who could pay me in person or pelf
 What he owes me himself.
 No ! I could not but smile through my chafe :
 For the fellow lay safe
 As his mates do, the midge and the nit, —Through minuteness, to wit.

V

Then a humour more great took its
 place
 At the thought of his face,
 The droop, the low eares of the mouth,
 The trouble uncouth
 'Twixt the brows, all that air one is fain
 To put out of its pain—
 And, 'no !' I admonished myself,
 'Is one mocked by an elf,
 Is one baffled by toad or by rat ?
 The gravamen's in that !
 How the lion, who crouches to suit
 His back to my foot, Would admire that I stand in debate !
 But the Small turns the Great.
 If it vexes you,—that is the thing !
 Toad or rat vex the King ?
 Though I waste half my realm to unearth Toad or rat, 'tis well worth !'

VI

So, I soberly laid my last plan
 To extinguish the man.
 Round his creep-hole, with never a break
 Ran my fires for his sake ; Over-head, did my thunder combine With my under-ground mine :
 Till I looked from my labor content To enjoy the event.

VII

When sudden . . . how think ye, the
 end ?
 Did I say 'without friend ?'
 Say rather, from marge to blue marge
 The whole sky grew his targe With the sun's self for visible boss, While an Arm ran across Which the earth heaved beneath like
 a breast
 Where the wretch was safe prest !
 Do you see ? just my vengeance complete,
 The man sprang to his feet, Stood erect, caught at God's skirts, and prayed !
 —So, I was afraid !

MESMERISM

I

ALL I believed is true !
 I am able yet
 All I want to get By a method as strange as new :
 Dare I trust the same to you ?

II

If at night, when doors are shut,
 And the wood-worm picks,
 And the death-watch ticks,
 And the bar has a flag of smut,
 And a cat 's in the water-butt—

III

And the socket floats and flares,
 And the house-beams groan,
 And a foot unknown
 Is surmised on the garret-stairs,
 And the locks slip unawares—

IV

And the spider, to serve his ends,
 By a sudden thread,
 Arms and legs outspread,
 On the table's midst descends, Comes to find, God knows what friends !—

V

If since eve drew in, I say, I have sat and brought (So to speak) my thought To bear on the woman away, Till I felt my hair turn grey—

VI

Till I seemed to have and hold,
 In the vacancy
 'Twixt the wall and me,
 From the hair-plait's chestnut-gold
 To the foot in its muslin fold—

VII

Have and hold, then and there,
 Her, from head to foot, Breathing and mute, Passive and yet aware,
 In the grasp of my steady stare—

VIII

Hold and have, there and then,
 All her body and soul
 That completes my Whole,
 All that women add to men,
 In the clutch of my steady ken—

IX

Having and holding, till I imprint her fast
 On the void at last
 As the sun does whom he will
 By the calotypist's skill—

X

Then,—if my heart's strength serve,
 And through all and each Of the veils I reach
 To her soul and never swerve, Knitting an iron nerve—

XI

Commanding that to advance And inform the shape Which has made escape
 And before my countenance Answers me glance for glance—

XII

I, still with a gesture fit
 Of my hands that best Do my soul's behest, Pointing the power from it, While myself do steadfast sit—

XIII

Steadfast and still the same
 On my object bent,
 While the hands give vent
 To my ardour and my aim And break into very flame—

XIV

Then, I reach, I must believe,
 Not her soul in vain,
 For to me again
 It reaches, and past retrieve Is wound in the toils I weave—

XV

And must follow as I require,
 As befits a thrall, Bringing flesh and all,
 Essence and earth-attire,
 To the source of the tractile fire—

XVI

Till the house called hers, not mine,
With a growing weight Seems to suffocate
If she break not its leaden line And escape from its close confine—

XVII

Out of doors into the night !
On to the maze
Of the wild wood-ways,
Not turning to left nor right From the pathway, blind with sight—

XVIII

Making thro' rain and wind O'er the broken shrubs,
'Twixt the stems and stubs,
With a still, composed, strong mind,
Not a care for the world behind—

XIX

Swifter and still more swift,
As the crowding peace Doth to joy increase In the wide blind eyes uplift, Thro' the darkness and the drift !

XX

While I—to the shape, I too Feel my soul dilate
Not a whit abate
And relax not a gesture due,
As I see my belief come true.

XXI

For, there ! have I drawn or no Life to that lip ?
Do my fingers dip
In a flame which again they throw On the cheek that breaks a-glow ?

XXII

Ha ! was the hair so first ?
What, unfilleted,
Made alive, and spread Through the void with a rich outburst, Chestnut gold-interspersed ?

XXIII

Like the doors of a casket-shrine, See, on either side,
Her two arms divide Till the heart betwixt makes sign, Take me, for I am thine !

XXIV

'Now—now'—the door is heard !
Hark, the stairs ! and near—Nearer—and here—
'Now !' and at call the third She enters without a word.

XXV

On doth she march and on To the fancied shape ;
It is, past escape,
Herself, now : the dream is done
And the shadow and she are one.

XXVI

First I will pray. Do Thou That ownest the soul, Yet wilt grant control
To another, nor disallow
For a time, restrain me now !

XXVII

I admonish me while I may,
Not to squander guilt, Since require Thou wilt
At my hand its price one day !
What the price is, who can say ?

THE GLOVE

(PETER RONSARD loquitur.)

'HEIGHO,' yawned one day King Francis,
'Distance all value enhances !
When a man's busy, why, leisure Strikes him as wonderful pleasure :
'Faith, and at leisure once is he ?
Straightway he wants to be busy.
Here we've got peace ; and aghast I'm Caught thinking war the true pastime !
Is there a reason in metre ?
Give us your speech, master Peter !'
I who, if mortal dare say so, Ne'er am at loss with my Naso,
'Sire,' I replied, 'joys prove cloudlets Men are the merest Ixions'— Here the King whistled aloud, 'Let's . . . Heigho . . . go look at our lions !'
Such are the sorrowful chances
If you talk fine to King Francis.
And so, to the courtyard proceeding, Our company, Francis was leading,
Increased by new followers tenfold Before he arrived at the penfold ;

Lords, ladies, like clouds which bedizen
At sunset the western horizon.

And Sir De Lorge pressed 'mid the foremost

With the dame he professed to adore most—

Oh, what a face! One by fits eyed Her, and the horrible pitside;
For the penfold surrounded a hollow Which led where the eye scarce dared
follow,

And shelved to the chamber secluded Where Bluebeard, the great lion, brooded.

The King hailed his keeper, an Arab As glossy and black as a scarab, And bade him make sport and at once stir

Up and out of his den the old monster.
They opened a hole in the wire-work Across it, and dropped there a firework, And fled: one's heart's beating redoubled;

A pause, while the pit's mouth was troubled,
The blackness and silence so utter,
By the firework's slow sparking and sputter;

Then earth in a sudden contortion Gave out to our gaze her abortion!
Such a brute! Were I friend Clement Marot

(Whose experience of nature's but narrow,

And whose faculties move in no small mist

When he versifies David the Psalmist)
I should study that brute to describe you Illum Juda Leonem de Tribu!

One's whole blood grew curdling and creepy

To see the black mane, vast and heapy,
The tail in the air stiff and straining,
The wide eyes, nor waxing nor waning, As over the barrier which bounded His platform, and us who surrounded The barrier, they reached and they rested

On the space that might stand him in best stead:

For who knew, he thought, what the amazement,

The eruption of clatter and blaze meant,

And if, in this minute of wonder,
No outlet, 'mid lightning and thunder,
Lay broad, and, his shackles all shivered,
The lion at last was delivered?

Ay, that was the open sky o'erhead!
And you saw by the flash on his fore-
head,

By the hope in those eyes wide and steady,

He was leagues in the desert already,
Driving the flocks up the mountain,
Or catlike couched hard by the fountain
To waylay the date-gathering negress:
So guarded he entrance or egress.

'How he stands!' quoth the King:
'we may well swear, (No novice, we've won our spurs elsewhere,

And so can afford the confession,) We exercise wholesome discretion In keeping aloof from his threshold; Once hold you, those jaws want no fresh hold,

Their first would too pleasantly purloin
The visitor's brisquet or surloin:
But who's he would prove so foolhardy?

Not the best man of Marignan, pardie!'

The sentence no sooner was uttered, Than over the rails a glove fluttered, Fell close to the lion, and rested: The dame 'twas, who flung it and jested

With life so, De Lorge had been wooing For months past; he sat there pursuing

His suit, weighing out with nonchalance

Fine speeches like gold from a balance.

Sound the trumpet, no true knight's a tarrier!

De Lorge made one leap at the barrier, Walked straight to the glove,—while the lion

Ne'er moved, kept his far-reaching eye on

The palm-tree-edged desert-spring's sapphire,

And the musky oiled skin of the Kaffir,— Picked it up, and as calmly retreated, Leaped back where the lady was seated,

And full in the face of its owner Flung the glove.

'Your heart's queen, you dethrone her ?
So should I!'—cried the King—'twas mere vanity,
Not love, set that task to humanity !' Lords and ladies alike turned with loathing
From such a proved wolf in sheep's clothing.
Not so, I ; for I caught an expression In her brow's undisturbed self-possession
Amid the Court's scoffing and merriment,— As if from no pleasing experiment
She rose, yet of pain not much heedful
So long as the process was needful,— As if she had tried in a crucible,
To what 'speeches like gold' were reducible,
And, finding the finest prove copper, Felt the smoke in her face was but proper ;
To know what she had not to trust to,
Was worth all the ashes and dust too.
She went out 'mid hooting and laughter ; Clement Marot stayed ; I followed
after,
And asked, as a grace, what it all meant ?
If she wished not the rash deed's recalcitrant ?
'For I'—so I spoke—'am a Poet : Human nature,—behoves that I know
it !'

She told me, 'Too long had I heard Of the deed proved alone by the word :
For my love—what De Lorge would not dare !

With my scorn—what De Lorge could compare !

And the endless descriptions of death
He would brave when my lip formed a breath,

I must reckon as braved, or, of course, Doubt his word—and moreover, perforce,

For such gifts as no lady could spurn,
Must offer my love in return.

When I looked on your lion, it brought All the dangers at once to my thought, Encountered by all sorts of men, Before he was lodged in his den,— From the poor slave whose club or bare hands

Dug the trap, set the snare on the sands,
With no King and no Court to applaud, By no shame, should he shrink, overawed,

Yet to capture the creature made shift,
That his rude boys might laugh at the gift,

—To the page who last leaped o'er the fence

Of the pit, on no greater pretence Than to get back the bonnet he dropped, Lest his pay for a week should be stopped.

So, wiser I judged it to make One trial what "death for my sake" Really meant, while the power was yet
mine,

Than to wait until time should define Such a phrase not so simply as I,
Who took it to mean just "to die."
The blow a glove gives is but weak :
Does the mark yet discolour my cheek ?
But when the heart suffers a blow, Will the pain pass so soon, do you
know ?

I looked, as away she was sweeping,
And saw a youth eagerly keeping As close as he dared to the doorway ;
No doubt that a noble should more weigh

His life than befits a plebeian ;
And yet, had our brute been Nemean—(I judge by a certain calm fervour The youth stepped with, forward to serve her)

—He'd have scarce thought you did him the worst turn

If you whispered 'Friend, what you'd get, first earn !'

And when, shortly after, she carried Her shame from the Court, and they married,

To that marriage some happiness, maugre

The voice of the Court, I dared augur.

For De Lorge, he made women with men vie,
Those in wonder and praise, these in envy;
And in short stood so plain a head taller
That he wooed and won . . . how do you call her?
The Beauty, that rose in the sequel To the King's love, who loved her a week well.
And 'twas noticed he never would honour
De Lorge (who looked daggers upon
her)
With the easy commission of stretching His legs in the service, and fetching His wife, from her chamber, those straying
Sad gloves she was always mislaying, While the King took the closet to chat in,—
But of course this adventure came pat
in.
And never the King told the story, How bringing a glove brought such glory,
But the wife smiled—'His nerves are grown firmer:
Mine he brings now and utters no murmur!
Venienti occurrere morbo!
With which moral I drop my theorbo.

TIME'S REVENGES

I've a Friend, over the sea;
I like him, but he loves me.
It all grew out of the books I write:
They find such favour in his sight That he slaughters you with savage looks
Because you don't admire my books:
He does himself though,—and if some vein
Were to snap to-night in this heavy brain,
To-morrow month, if I lived to try,
Round should I just turn quietly, Or out of the bedclothes stretch my
hand
Till I found him. come from his foreign
land,

To be my nurse in this poor place,
And make my broth and wash my face And light my fire, and, all the while, Bear with his old good-humoured
smile
That I told him 'Better have kept
away
Than come and kill me, night and day, With, worse than fever's throbs and shoots,
The creaking of his clumsy boots.'
I am as sure that this he would do,
As that Saint Paul's is striking Two.
And I think I had rather . . . woe is
me!
—Yes, rather see him than not see,
If lifting a hand would seat him there Before me in the empty chair
To-night, when my head aches indeed,
And I can neither think nor read Nor make these purple fingers hold The pen; this garret's freezing cold!

And I've a Lady—There he wakes, The laughing fiend and prince of snakes
Within me, at her name, to pray Fate send some creature in the way Of my love for her, to be down-torn Upthrust and outward-borne
So I might prove myself that sea Of passion which I needs must be!
Call my thoughts false and my fancies quaint
And my style infirm and its figures faint,
All the critics say, and more blame yet,
And not one angry word you get!
But, please you, wonder I would put My cheek beneath that Lady's foot Rather than trample under mine
The laurels of the Florentine, And you shall see how the Devil spends A fire God gave for other ends!
I tell you, I stride up and down This garret, crowned with love's best crown,
And feasted with love's perfect feast,
To think I kill for her, at least,
Body and soul and peace and fame, Alike youth's end and manhood's aim,
—So is my spirit, as flesh with sin, Filled full, eaten out and in

With the face of her, the eyes of her,
 The lips, the little chin, the stir Of shadow round her mouth; and she —I'll tell you,—calmly would decree That I should roast at a slow fire,
 If that would compass her desire And make her one whom they invite To the famous ball to-morrow night.
 There may be Heaven; there must be Hell;
 Meantime, there is our Earth here—
 well!

THE ITALIAN IN ENGLAND

THAT second time they hunted me
 From hill to plain, from shore to sea,
 And Austria, hounding far and wide Her blood-hounds through the countryside Breathed hot and instant on my trace,—

I made six days a hiding-place
 Of that dry green old aqueduct Where I and Charles, when boys nave plucked
 The fire-flies from the roof above, Bright creeping through the moss they
 love.

—How long it seems since Charles was lost!

Six days the soldiers crossed and crossed

The country in my very sight;
 And when that peril ceased at night,
 The sky broke out in red dismay With signal-fires; well, there I lay Close covered o'er in my recess,
 Up to the neck in ferns and cress, Thinking on Metternich our friend,
 And Charles's miserable end,
 And much beside, two days; the third,
 Hunger o'ercame me when I heard The peasants from the village go To work among the maize; you know,
 With us in Lombardy, they bring Provisions packed on mules, a string With little bells that cheer their task,
 And casks, and boughs on every caak
 To keep the sun's heat from the wine;
 These I let pass in jingling line,
 And, close on them, dear noisy crew,
 The peasants from the village, too;

For at the very rear would troop Their wives and sisters in a group To help, I knew; when these had passed,

I threw my glove to strike the last,
 Taking the chance: she did not start,
 Much less cry out, but stooped apart
 One instant, rapidly glanced round,
 And saw me beckon from the ground;
 A wild bush grows and hides my crypt; She picked my glove up while she stripped

A branch off, then rejoined the rest
 With that; my glove lay in her breast:
 Then I drew breath: they disappeared:
 It was for Italy I feared.

An hour, and she returned alone Exactly where my glove was thrown, Meanwhile came many thoughts; on
 me

Rested the hopes of Italy;
 I had devised a certain tale Which, when 'twas told her, could not fail

Persuade a peasant of its truth;
 I meant to call a freak of youth
 This hiding, and give hopes of pay,
 And no temptation to betray.
 But when I saw that woman's face,
 Its calm simplicity of grace,
 Our Italy's own attitude In which she walked thus far, and
 stood,

Planting each naked foot so firm, To crush the snake and spare the worm—

At first sight of her eyes, I said,
 'I am that man upon whose head
 They fix the price, because I hate The Austrians over us: the State Will give you gold—oh, gold so much,
 If you betray me to their clutch
 And be your death, for aught I know, If once they find you saved their foe.
 Now, you must bring me food and drink,

And also paper, pen and ink,
 And carry safe what I shall write To Padua, which you'll reach at night

Before the Duomo shuts; go in,
 And wait till Tenebrae begin;

Walk to the Third Confessional, Between the pillar and the wall, And kneeling whisper, Whence comes peace?

Say it a second time, then cease;
And if the voice inside returns,
*From Christ and Freedom; what concerns
The cause of Peace?*—for answer, slip My letter where you placed your lip;
Then come back happy we have done
Our mother service—I, the son,
As you the daughter of our land!

Three mornings more, she took her
stand

In the same place, with the same eyes:
I was no surer of sun-rise Than of her coming: we conferred Of her own prospects, and I heard
She had a lover—stout and tall,
She said—then let her eyelids fall,
'He could do much'—as if some doubt Entered her heart,—then, passing out,
'She could not speak for others, who Had other thoughts; herself she knew.'

And so she brought me drink and food.
After four days, the scouts pursued Another path; at last arrived
The help my Paduan friends contrived To furnish me: she brought the news.
For the first time I could not choose But kiss her hand, and lay my own Upon her head—'This faith was shown To Italy, our mother; she Uses my hand and blesses thee!'
She followed down to the sea-shore;
I left and never saw her more.

How very long since I have thought Concerning—much less wished for—aught

Beside the good of Italy,
For which I live and mean to die!
I never was in love; and since Charles proved false, nothing could convince

My inmost heart I had a friend.
However, if I pleased to spend Real wishes on myself—say, three—I know at least what one should be;
I would grasp Metternich until I felt his red wet throat distil

In blood thro' these two hands: and next,

—Nor much for that am I perplexed—Charles, perjured traitor, for his part, Should die slow of a broken heart Under his new employers: last —Ah, there, what should I wish? For

fast

Do I grow old and out of strength.

If I resolved to seek at length

My father's house again, how scared

They all would look, and unprepared!

My brothers live in Austria's pay —Disowned me long ago, men say;

And all my early mates who used

To praise me so—perhaps induced

More than one early step of mine—

Are turning wise; while some opine

'Freedom grows License,' some suspect

'Haste breeds Delay,' and recollect

They always said, such premature

Beginnings never could endure!

So, with a sullen 'All's for best,'

The land seems settling to its rest.

I think, then, I should wish to stand

This evening in that dear, lost land,

Over the sea the thousand miles,

And know if yet that woman smiles

With the calm smile; some little farm

She lives in there, no doubt; what harm

If I sat on the door-side bench,

And, while her spindle made a trench

Fantastically in the dust,

Inquired of all her fortunes—just

Her children's ages and their names,

And what may be the husband's aims

For each of them. I'd talk this out,

And sit there, for an hour about,

Then kiss her hand once more, and lay

Mine on her head, and go my way.

So much for idle wishing—how

It steals the time! To business now!

THE ENGLISHMAN IN ITALY

PIANO DI SORRENTO

FORTÈ, Fortè, my beloved one,

Sit here by my side,

On my knees put up both little feet!

I was sure, if I tried,

I could make you laugh spite of Scirocco.

Now, open your eyes,
Let me keep you amused till he vanish
In black from the skies,
With telling my memories over
As you tell your beads;
All the Plain saw me gather, I garland
—The flowers or the weeds.
Time for rain! for your long hot dry Autumn

Had net-worked with brown
The white skin of each grape on the bunches,

Marked like a quail's crown, Those creatures you make such account of,

Whose heads,—specked with white Over brown like a great spider's back,
As I told you last night,—
Your mother bites off for her supper.
Red-ripe as could be,
Pomegranates were chapping and splitting

In halves on the tree:
And betwixt the loose walls of great flintstone,

Or in the thick dust
On the path, or straight out of the rock-
side,

Wherever could thrust Some burnt sprig of bold hardy rock-flower

Its yellow face up, For the prize were great butterflies fighting,

Some five for one cup.
So, I guessed, ere I got up this morning,
What change was in store,
By the quick rustle-down of the quail-nets

Which woke me before I could open my shutter, made fast
With a bough and a stone, And look thro' the twisted dead vinetwigs,

Sole lattice that's known.
Quick and sharp rang the rings down the net-poles,

While, busy beneath, Your priest and his brother tugged at
them,

The rain in their teeth.

And out upon all the flat house-roofs Where split figs lay drying,
The girls took the frails under cover:
Nor use seemed in trying To get out the boats and go fishing, For, under the cliff, Fierce the black water frothed o'er the blind-rock.

No seeing our skiff Arrive about noon from Amalfi,
—Our fisher arrive,
And pitch down his basket before us,
All trembling alive
With pink and grey jellies, your sea-fruit;

You touch the strange lumps,
And mouths gape there, eyes open, all manner

Of horns and of humps, Which only the fisher looks grave at,
While round him like imps Cling screaming the children as naked
And brown as his shrimps; Himself too as bare to the middle

—You see round his neck
The string and its brass coin suspended, That saves him from wreck.

But to-day not a boat reached Salerno,
So back, to a man, Came our friends, with whose help in the vineyards

Grape-harvest began.
In the vat, halfway up in our house-side,
Like blood the juice spins, While your brother all bare-legged is dancing

Till breathless he grins Dead-beaten in effort on effort To keep the grapes under,
Since still when he seems all but master,
In pours the fresh plunder From girls who keep coming and going With basket on shoulder, And eyes shut against the rain's driving;

Your girls that are older,— For under the hedges of aloe,
And where, on its bed Of the orchard's black mould, the love-apple

Lies pulpy and red,
All the young ones are kneeling and filling

Their laps with the snails Tempted out by this first rainy weather,— Your best of regales,
 As to-night will be proved to my sorrow,
 When, supping in state, We shall feast our grape-gleaners (two dozen,
 Three over one plate)
 With lasagne so tempting to swallow
 In slippery ropes,
 And gourds fried in great purple slices,
 That colour of popes.
 Meantime, see the grape bunch they've brought you :
 The rain-water slips O'er the heavy blue bloom on each globe
 Which the wasp to your lips Still follows with fretful persistence :
 Nay, taste, while awake, This half of a curd-white smooth cheese-ball
 That peels, flake by flake, Like an onion, each smoother and whiter ;
 Next, sip this weak wine From the thin green glass flask, with its stopper,
 A leaf of the vine ;
 And end with the prickly-pear's red flesh
 That leaves thro' its juice
 The stony black seeds on your pearl-teeth.
 Scirocco is loose !
 Hark ! the quick, whistling pelt of the olives
 Which, thick in one's track, Tempt the stranger to pick up and bite them, Tho' not yet half black !
 How the old twisted olive trunks shudder !
 The medlars let fall Their hard fruit, and the brittle great fig-trees
 Snap off, figs and all,
 For here comes the whole of the tempest !
 No refuge, but creep Back again to my side and my shoulder,
 And listen or sleep.

O how will your country show next week,
 When all the vine-boughs Have been stripped of their foliage to pasture
 The mules and the cows ?
 Last eve, I rode over the mountains ;
 Your brother, my guide, Soon left me, to feast on the myrtles That offered, each side, Their fruit-balls, black, glossy and luscious,—
 Or strip from the sorbs
 A treasure, so rosy and wondrous,
 Of hairy gold orbs !
 But my mule picked his sure, sober path out, Just stopping to neigh When he recognized down in the valley
 His mates on their way
 With the faggots, and barrels of water ;
 And soon we emerged From the plain, where the woods could scarce follow ;
 And still as we urged Our way, the woods wondered, and left us,
 As up still we trudged Though the wild path grew wilder each instant,
 And place was e'en grudged
 'Mid the rock-chasms and piles of loose stones
 Like the loose broken teeth Of some monster which climbed there to die
 From the ocean beneath—Place was grudged to the silver-grey fume-weed
 That clung to the path,
 And dark rosemary ever a-dying
 That, 'spite the wind's wrath, So loves the salt rock's face to seaward,
 And lentisks as staunch To the stone where they root and bear berries,
 And . . . what shows a branch Coral-coloured, transparent, with circlets
 Of pale seagreen leaves :
 Over all trod my mule with the caution
 Of gleaners o'er sheaves,

Still, foot after foot like a lady :
 So, round after round,
 He climbed to the top of Calvano,
 And God's own profound Was above me, and round me the mountains,
 And under, the sea,
 And within me, my heart to bear witness What was and shall be !
 Oh, heaven and the terrible crystal !
 No rampart excludes Your eye from the life to be lived In the blue solitudes !
 Oh, those mountains, their infinite movement !
 Still moving with you ;
 For, ever some new head and breast of
 them
 Thrusts into view
 To observe the intruder ; you see it If quickly you turn And, before they escape you, surprise
 them :
 They grudge you should learn How the soft plains they look on, lean over And love (they pretend) —Cover beneath them, the flat sea-pine crouches,
 The wild fruit-trees bend, E'en the myrtle-leaves curl, shrink and shut,
 All is silent and grave,
 'Tis a sensual and timorous beauty,
 How fair, but a slave !
 So, I turned to the sea ; and there slumbered
 As greenly as ever Those isles of the siren, your Galli ;
 No ages can sever
 The Three, nor enable their sister
 To join them,—halfway On the voyage, she looked at Ulysses—
 No further to-day, Tho' the small one, just launched in the wave,
 Watches breast-high and steady
 From under the rock, her bold sister Swum halfway already.
 Forth, shall we sail there together And see from the sides Quite new rocks show their faces, new haunts
 Where the siren abides ?

Shall we sail round and round them, close over
 The rocks, tho' unseen,
 That ruffle the grey glassy water To glorious green ?
 Then scramble from splinter to splinter, Reach land and explore,
 On the largest, the strange square black turret
 With never a door,
 Just a loop to admit the quick lizards ;
 Then, stand there and hear The birds' quiet singing, that tells us What life is, so clear ?
 —The secret they sang to Ulysses When, ages ago,
 He heard and he knew this life's secret
 I hear and I know !

Ah, see ! The sun breaks o'er Calvano ;
 He strikes the great gloom
 And flutters it o'er the mount's summit In airy gold fume !
 All is over ! Look out, see the gipsy,
 Our tinker and smith,
 Has arrived, set up bellows and forge,
 And down-squatted forthwith To his hammering, under the wall
 there ;
 One eye keeps aloof
 The urchins that itch to be putting His jews'-harps to proof, While the other, thro' locks of curled wire,
 Is watching how sleek Shines the hog, come to share in the windfall
 —An abbot's own cheek.
 All is over ! Wake up and come out
 now,
 And down let us go,
 And see the fine things got in order
 At Church for the show Of the Sacrament, set forth this evening ;
 To-morrow's the Feast Of the Rosary's Virgin, by no means Of Virgins the least,
 As you'll hear in the off-hand discourse
 Which (all nature, no art)
 The Dominican brother, these three weeks,
 Was getting by heart.

Not a pillar nor post but is dizen'd With red and blue papers ;
All the roof waves with ribbons, each altar

A-blaze with long tapers ; But the great masterpiece is the scaffold

Rigged glorious to hold
All the fiddlers and fifers and drummers
And trumpeters bold,
Not afraid of Bellini nor Auber,
Who, when the priest's hoarse,
Will strike us up something that's brisk
For the feast's second course.
And then will the flaxen-wigged Image Be carried in pomp Thro' the plain, while in gallant procession

The priests mean to stomp.
And all round the glad church lie old bottles

With gunpowder stopped, Which will be, when the Image re-enters,

Religiously popped.
And at night from the crest of Calvano Great bonfires will hang,
On the plain will the trumpets join chorus,

And more poppers bang !
At all events, come—to the garden,
As far as the wall ;
See me tap with a hoe on the plaster Till out there shall fall A scorpion with wide angry nippers !

—'Such trifles !' you say ?
Forth, in my England at home,
Men meet gravely to-day And debate, if abolishing Corn-laws Be righteous and wise —If 'twere proper, Scirocco should vanish
In black from the skies !

IN A GONDOLA

He sings

I SEND my heart up to thee, all my heart

In this my singing
For the stars help me, and the sea bears
part ;
The very night is clinging

Closer to Venice's streets to leave one space Above me, whence thy face May light my joyous heart to thee its dwelling-place.

She speaks

Say after me, and try to say My very words, as if each word Came from you of your own accord, In your own voice, in your own way :
'This woman's heart and soul and brain Are mine as much as this gold chain She bids me wear ; which' (say again)
'I choose to make by cherishing
A precious thing, or choose to fling Over the boat-side, ring by ring.' And yet once more say . . . no word
more !

Since words are only words. Give o'er !
Unless you call me, all the same, Familiarly by my pet-name Which, if the Three should hear you call,
And me reply to, would proclaim At once our secret to them all.
Ask of me, too, command me, blame—Do, break down the partition-wall
'Twixt us, the daylight world beholds Curtained in dusk and splendid folds.
What's left but—all of me to take ?
I am the Three's : prevent them, slake Your thirst ! 'Tis said, the Arab sage In practising with gems can loose Their subtle spirit in his cruce
And leave but ashes : so, sweet mage, Leave them my ashes when thy use Sucks out my soul, thy heritage !

He sings

I

Past we glide, and past, and past !
What's that poor Agnese doing Where they make the shutters fast ?
Grey Zanobi's just a-wooing
To his couch the purchased bride :
Past we glide !

II

Past we glide, and past, and past !
Why's the Pucci Palace flaring Like a beacon to the blast ?
Guests by hundreds, not one caring If the dear host's neck were wried :
Past we glide !

She sings

I

The Moth's kiss, first !
 Kiss me as if you made believe You were not sure, this eve, How my face, your flower, had pursed Its petals up ; so, here and there You brush it, till I grow aware Who wants me, and wide open burst.

II

The Bee's kiss, now !
 Kiss me as if you entered gay
 My heart at some noonday, A bud that dares not disallow
 The claim, so all is rendered up,
 And passively its shattered cup Over your head to sleep I bow.

He sings

I

What are we two ?
 I am a Jew,
 And carry thee, farther than friends can pursue,
 To a feast of our tribe ;
 Where they need thee to bribe The devil that blasts them unless he imbibe Thy . . . Scatter the vision for ever !
 And now,
 As of old, I am I, Thou art Thou !

II

Say again, what we are ?
 The sprite of a star,
 I lure thee above where the destinies bar
 My plumes their full play Till a ruddier ray Than my pale one announce there is withering away
 Some . . . Scatter the vision for ever !
 And now,
 As of old, I am I, Thou art Thou !

He muses

Oh, which were best, to roam or rest ?
 The land's lap or the water's breast ?
 To sleep on yellow millet-sheaves, Or swim in lucid shallows, just Eluding water-lily leaves,

An inch from Death's black fingers, thrust
 To lock you, whom release he must ;
 Which life were best on Summer eves ?

He speaks, musing

Lie back ; could thought of mine improve you ?
 From this shoulder let there spring
 A wing ; from this, another wing ; Wings, not legs and feet, shall move
 you !

Snow-white must they spring, to blend With your flesh, but I intend They shall deepen to the end, Broader, into burning gold,
 Till both wings crescent-wise enfold
 Your perfect self, from 'neath your feet
 To o'er your head, where, lo, they meet As if a million sword-blades hurled Defiance from you to the world !

Rescue me Thou, the only real !
 And scare away this mad Ideal That came, nor motions to depart !
 Thanks ! Now, stay ever as thou art !

Still he muses

I

What if the Three should catch at last Thy serenader ? While there 's cast Paul's cloak about my head, and fast Gian pinions me, Himself has past His stylet thro' my back ; I reel ;
 And . . . is it Thou I feel ?

II

They trail me, these three godless knaves,
 Past every church that sains and saves, Nor stop till, where the cold sea raves
 By Lido's wet accursed graves, They scoop mine, roll me to its brink,
 And . . . on Thy breast I sink !

She replies, musing

Dip your arm o'er the boat-side, elbow-deep,
 As I do : thus : were death so unlike sleep,
 Caught this way ? Death 's to fear from flame, or steel, Or poison doubtless ; but from water—feel !

Go find the bottom ! Would you stay me ! There !

Now pluck a great blade of that ribbon-grass

To plait in where the foolish jewel was,
I flung away : since you have praised my hair,

'Tis proper to be choice in what I wear.

He speaks

Row home ? must we row home ? Too surely

Know I where its front 's demurely

Over the Giudecca piled ;

Window just with window mating,

Door on door exactly waiting,

All 's the set face of a child :

But behind it, where 's a trace

Of the staidness and reserve,

And formal lines without a curve,

In the same child's playing-face ?

No two windows look one way

O'er the small sea-water thread

Below them. Ah, the autumn day

I, passing, saw you overhead !

First, out a cloud of curtain blew,

Then, a sweet cry, and last, came you—

To catch your loory that must needs

Escape just then, of all times then,

To peck a tall plant's fleecy seeds,

And make me happiest of men.

I scarce could breathe to see you reach

So far back o'er the balcony,

(To catch him ere he climbed too high Above you in the Smyrna peach)

That quick the round smooth cord of gold,

This coiled hair on your head, unrolled,

Fell down you like a gorgeous snake

The Roman girls were wont, of old,

When Rome there was, for coolness'
sake

To let lie curling o'er their bosoms.

Dear loory, may his beak retain Ever its delicate rose stain

As if the wounded lotus-blossoms

Had marked their thief to know again !

Stay longer yet, for others' sake

Than mine ! what should your chamber
do ?

—With all its rarities that ache

In silence while day lasts, but wake

At night-time and their life renew, Suspended just to pleasure you That brought against their will together These objects, and, while day lasts, weave

Around them such a magic tether That they look dumb : your harp, believe,

With all the sensitive tight strings

That dare not speak, now to itself

Breathes slumberously as if some elf

Went in and out the chords, his wings

Make murmur wheresoe'er they graze,

As an angel may, between the maze

Of midnight palace-pillars, on

And on, to sow God's plagues have gone Through guilty glorious Babylon.

And while such murmurs flow, the nymph

Bends o'er the harp-top from her shell

As the dry limpet for the lymph

Come with a tune he knows so well.

And how your statues' hearts must swell !

And how your pictures must descend

To see each other, friend with friend !

Oh, could you take them by surprise,

You'd find Schidone's eager Duke

Doing the quaintest courtesies

To that prim Saint by Haste-thee-Luke !

And, deeper into her rock den,

Bold Castelfranco's Magdalen

You'd find retreated from the ken

Of that robed counsel-keeping Ser—

As if the Tizian thinks of her,

And is not, rather, gravely bent

On seeing for himself what toys

Are these, his progeny invent,

What litter now the board employs

Whereon he signed a document

That got him murdered ! Each enjoys

Its night so well, you cannot break

The sport up, so, indeed must make

More stay with me, for others' sake

She speaks

I

To-morrow, if a harp-string, say,

Is used to tie the jasmine back

That overfloods my room with sweets,

Contrive your Zorzi somehow meets

My Zanze : if the ribbon 's black,

The Three are watching ; keep away.

II

Your gondola—let Zorzi wreath A mesh of water-weeds about Its prow, as if he unaware Had struck some quay or bridge-foot stair;

That I may throw a paper out
As you and he go underneath.

There 's Zanze's vigilant taper; safe are we!

Only one minute more to-night with
me?

Resume your past self of a month ago!
Be you the bashful gallant, I will be The lady with the colder breast than
snow:

Now bow you, as becomes, nor touch my hand

More than I touch yours when I step to
land,

And say, 'All thanks, Siora!'—

Heart to heart, And lips to lips! Yet once more, ere we part,

Clasp me, and make me thine, as mine thou art!

He is surprised, and stabbed

It was ordained to be so, Sweet,—and
best

Comes now, beneath thine eyes, and on thy breast

Still kiss me! Care not for the cowards!
Care

Only to put aside thy beauteous hair My blood will hurt! The Three, I do not scorn

To death, because they never lived:
but I

Have lived indeed, and so—(yet one more kiss)—can die!

WARING

I

I

WHAT 's become of Waring
Since he gave us all the slip, Chose land-travel or seafaring, Boots and chest or staff and scrip, Rather than pace up and down Any longer London-town?

II

Who'd have guessed it from his lip Or his brow's accustomed bearing,
On the night he thus took ship Or started landward?—little caring For us, it seems, who supped together (Friends of his too, I remember) And walked home thro' the merry weather,

The snowiest in all December.

I left his arm that night myself

For what 's-his-name's, the new prose-poet

That wrote the book there, on the shelf—

How, forsooth, was I to know it

If Waring meant to glide away

Like a ghost at break of day?

Never looked he half so gay!

III

He was prouder than the Devil:

How he must have cursed our revel!

Ay, and many other meetings,

Indoor visits, outdoor greetings,

As up and down he paced this London,

With no work done, but great works
undone,

Where scarce twenty knew his name.

Why not, then, have earlier spoken,

Written, bustled? Who 's to blame

If your silence kept unbroken?

'True, but there were sundry jottings, Stray-leaves, fragments, blurs and blottings,

Certain first steps were achieved

Already which'—(is that your meaning?)

'Had well borne out who'er believed

In more to come!' But who goes gleaning

Hedge-side chance-blades, while fullsheaved

Stand cornfields by him? Pride, c'er-weening

Pride alone, puts forth such claims

O'er the day's distinguished names.

IV

Meantime, how much I loved him,

I find out now I've lost him:

I, who cared not if I moved him,

Who could so carelessly accost him,

Henceforth never shall get free
Of his ghostly company,
His eyes that just a little wink
As deep I go into the merit Of this and that distinguished spirit—His cheeks' raised colour, soon to sink,

As long I dwell on some stupendous And tremendous (Heaven defend us !)
Monstr'-inform'-ingens-horrend-ous Demoniaco-seraphic Penman's latest piece of graphic.
Nay, my very wrist grows warm
With his dragging weight of arm !
E'en so, swimmingly appears,
Through one's after-supper musings,
Some lost Lady of old years With her beauteous vain endeavour
And goodness unrepaid as ever ;
The face, accustomed to refusings, We, puppies that we were . . . Oh
never

Surely, nice of conscience, scrupled Being aught like false, forsooth, to ?
Telling aught but honest truth to ?
What a sin, had we centupled Its possessor's grace and sweetness :
No ! she heard in its completeness Truth, for truth's a weighty matter,
And truth, at issue, we can't flatter !
Well, 'tis done with ; she's exempt From damning us thro' such a sally ;
And so she glides, as down a valley,
Taking up with her contempt, Past our reach ; and in, the flowers Shut her unregarded hours.

v

Oh, could I have him back once more,
This Waring, but one half-day more !
Back, with the quiet face of yore,
So hungry for acknowledgment Like mine ! I'd fool him to his bent !
Feed, should not he, to heart's content ?

I'd say, 'to only have conceived Your great works, though they ne'er make progress, Surpasses all we've yet achieved !'
I'd lie so, I should be believed.
I'd make such havoc of the claims Of the day's distinguished names
To feast him with, as feasts an ogress

Her sharp-toothed golden-crowned child !

Or, as one feasts a creature rarely Captured here, unreconciled To capture ; and completely gives Its pettish humours licence, barely Requiring that it lives.

VI

Ichabod, Ichabod,
The glory is departed !
Travels Waring East away ?
Who, of knowledge, by hearsay, Reports a man upstarted Somewhere as a God, Hordes grown European-hearted, Millions of the wild made tame
On a sudden at his fame ?
In Vishnu-land what Avatar ?
Or who, in Moscow, toward the Czar,
With the demurest of footfalls Over the Kremlin's pavement, bright With serpentine and syenite, Steps, with five other Generals That simultaneously take snuff,
For each to have pretext enough To kerchiefwise unfold his sash Which, softness' self, is yet the stuff
To hold fast where a steel chain snaps,
And leave the grand white neck no gash ?
Waring, in Moscow, to those rough Cold northern natures borne, perhaps,
Like the lambwhite maiden dear
From the circle of mute kings Unable to repress the tear, Each as his sceptre down he flings,
To Dian's fane at Taurica, Where now a captive priestess, she always Mingles her tender grave Hellenic
speech
With theirs, tuned to the hailstone-beaten beach,
As pours some pigeon, from the myrrhy lands
Rapt by the whirlblast to fierce Scythian strands Where breed the swallows, her melodious cry
Amid their barbarous twitter !
In Russia ? Never ! Spain were fitter !
Ay, most likely 'tis in Spain
That we and Waring meet again

Now, while he turns down that cool narrow lane
 Into the blackness, out of grave Madrid
 All fire and shine, abrupt as when there's slid Its stiff gold blazing pall From some black coffin-lid.
 Or, best of all,
 I love to think
 The leaving us was just a feint;
 Back here to London did he slink,
 And now works on without a wink Of sleep, and we are on the brink Of something great in fresco-paint:
 Some garret's ceiling, walls and floor,
 Up and down and o'er and o'er He splashes, as none splashed before Since great Caldara Polidore.
 Or Music means this land of ours
 Some favour yet, to pity won By Purcell from his Rosy Bowers,— 'Give me my so-long promised son, Let Waring end what I begun!'— Then down he creeps and out he steals Only when the night conceals His face; in Kent 'tis cherry-time, Or, hops are picking: or, at prime Of March, he wanders as, too happy, Years ago when he was young,
 Some mild eve when woods grew sappy
 And the early moths had sprung To life from many a trembling sheath Woven the warm boughs beneath;
 While small birds said to themselves
 What should soon be actual song,
 And young gnats, by tens and twelves, Made as if they were the throng That crowd around and carry aloft
 The sound they have nursed, so sweet and pure,
 Out of a myriad noises soft,
 Into a tone that can endure Amid the noise of a July noon
 When all God's creatures crave their boon, All at once and all in tune,
 And get it, happy as Waring then, Having first within his ken
 What a man might do with men:
 And far too glad, in the even-glow, To mix with the world he meant to take Into his head, he told you, so—
 And out of it his world to make,

To contract and to expand
 As he shut or oped his hand.
 Oh, Waring, what's to really be?
 A clear stage and a crowd to see!
 Some Garrick—say—out shall not he
 The heart of Hamlet's mystery pluck?
 Or, where most unclean beasts are rife,
 Some Junius—am I right?—shall tuck His sleeve, and forth with flaying-knife!

Some Chatterton shall have the luck
 Of calling Rowley into life!
 Some one shall somehow run a muck
 With this old world, for want of strife Sound asleep. Contrive, contrive To rouse us, Waring! Who's alive?
 Our men scarce seem in earnest now.
 Distinguished names!—but 'tis, somehow,

As if they played at being names Still more distinguished, like the games Of children. Turn our sport to earnest With a visage of the sternest!
 Bring the real times back, confessed Still better than our very best!

II

I

'WHEN I last saw Waring . . .
 (How all turned to him who spoke—You saw Waring? Truth or joke?
 In land-travel, or sea-faring?)

II

'We were sailing by Triest, Where a day or two we harboured:
 A sunset was in the West,
 When, looking over the vessel's side,
 One of our company espied
 A sudden speck to larboard.
 And, as a sea-duck flies and swims
 At once, so came the light craft up,
 With its sole lateen sail that trims And turns (the water round its rims Dancing, as round a sinking cup)
 And by us like a fish it curled, And drew itself up close beside,
 Its great sail on the instant furled,
 And o'er its planks, a shrill voice cried (A neck as bronzed as a Lascar's) "Buy wine of us, you English Brig?
 Or fruit, tobacco and cigars?"

A Pilot for you to Triest ?
Without one, look you ne'er so big,
They'll never let you up the bay !
We natives should know best."
I turned, and "just those fellows'
way,"

Our captain said, "The 'long-shore thieves Are laughing at us in their sleeves."

III

'In truth, the boy leaned laughing back;
And one, half-hidden by his side Under the furled sail, soon I spied, With great grass hat and kerchief
black,

Who looked up with his kingly throat,
Said somewhat, while the other shook His hair back from his eyes to look Their longest at us ; then the boat,
I know not how, turned sharply round, Laying her whole side on the sea
As a leaping fish does ; from the lee, Into the weather, cut somehow Her sparkling path beneath our bow ;
And so went off, as with a bound,
Into the rosy and golden half Of the sky, to overtake the sun And reach the shore, like the sea-calf Its singing cave ; yet I caught one Glance ere away the boat quite passed,
And neither time nor toil could mar Those features : so I saw the last Of Waring !—You ? Oh, never star Was lost here, but it rose afar !
Look East, where whole new thousands
are !

In Vishnu-land what Avatar ?

THE TWINS

'Give' and 'It-shall-be-given-unto-you.'

I

GRAND rough old Martin Luther Bloomed fables—flowers on furze,
The better the uncouth :
Do roses stick like burrs ?

II

A beggar asked an alms
One day at an abbey-door,
Said Luther ; but, seized with qualms,
The Abbot replied, 'We're poor !'

III

'Poor, who had plenty once,
When gifts fell thick as rain :
But they give us nought, for the nonce,
And how should we give again ?'

IV

Then the beggar, 'See your sins !
Of old, unless I err, Ye had brothers for inmates, twins,
Date and Dabitur.

V

'While Date was in good case Dabitur flourished too :
For Dabitur's lenten face.
No wonder if Date rue.

VI

'Would ye retrieve the one ?
Try and make plump the other !
When Date's penance is done, Dabitur helps his brother.

VII

'Only, beware relapse !'
The Abbot hung his head.
This beggar might be, perhaps,
An angel, Luther said.

A LIGHT WOMAN

I

So far as our story approaches the end, Which do you pity the most of us three ?—
My friend, or the mistress of my friend
With her wanton eyes, or me ?

II

My friend was already too good to lose,
And seemed in the way of improvment yet, When she crossed his path with her hunting-noose
And over him drew her net.

III

When I saw him tangled in her toils, A shame, said I, if she adds just him
To her nine-and-ninety other spoils,
The hundredth, for a whim !

A LIGHT WOMAN

IV

And before my friend be wholly hers,
How easy to prove to him, I said,
An eagle's the game her pride prefers, Though she snaps at the wren instead!

V

So, I gave her eyes my own eyes to
take,
My hand sought hers as in earnest
need,
And round she turned for my noble
sake,
And gave me herself indeed.

VI

The eagle am I, with my fame in the
world,
The wren is he, with his maiden face.
—You look away and your lip is curled?
Patience, a moment's space!

For see—my friend goes shaking and
white;
He eyes me as the basilisk:
I have turned, it appears, his day to
night,
Eclipsing his sun's disk.

VIII

And I did it, he thinks, as a very thief:
'Though I love her—that he comprehends—
One should master one's passions, (love, in chief)
And be loyal to one's friends!'

IX

And she,—she lies in my hand as tame
As a pear late basking over a wall;
Just a touch to try and off it came;
'Tis mine,—can I let it fall?

With no mind to eat it, that's the worst!
Were it thrown in the road, would the case assist?
'Twas quenching a dozen blue-flies' thirst
When I gave its stalk a twist.

XI

And I,—what I seem to my friend, you
see—
What I soon shall seem to his love, you guess.
What I seem to myself, do you ask of
me?
No hero, I confess.

XII

'Tis an awkward thing to play with souls,
And matter enough to save one's
own.
Yet think of my friend, and the burning coals
He played with for bits of stone!

XIII

One likes to show the truth for the truth;
That the woman was light is very
true:
But suppose she says,—Never mind that youth—
What wrong have I done to you?

XIV

Well, any how, here the story stays,
So far at least as I understand;
And, Robert Browning, you writer of plays,
Here's a subject made to your hand!

THE LAST RIDE TOGETHER

I

I SAID—Then, Dearest, since 'tis so, Since now at length my fate I know, Since nothing all my love avails, Since all, my life seemed meant for,
fails, Since this was written and needs must be—
My whole heart rises up to bless Your name in pride and thankfulness!
Take back the hope you gave,—I claim
Only a memory of the same,
—And this beside, if you will not
blame,
Your leave for one more last ride with me.

II

My mistress bent that brow of hers ; Those deep dark eyes where pride demurs

When pity would be softening through, Fixed me a breathing-while or two With life or death in the balance :
right !

The blood replenished me again ;
My last thought was at least not vain :
I and my mistress, side by side Shall be together, breathe and ride, So one day more am I deified—Who knows but the world may end to-night.

III

Hush ! if you saw some western cloud All billowy-bosomed, over-bowed By many benedictions—sun's And moon's and evening-star's at
once—

And so, you, looking and loving
best,

Conscious grew, your passion drew Cloud, sunset, moonrise, star-shine too, Down on you, near and yet more near, Till flesh must fade for heaven was
here !—

Thus leant she and lingered—joy and fear !

Thus lay she a moment on my breast.

IV

Then we began to ride. My soul Smoothed itself out—a long-cramped scroll

Freshening and fluttering in the wind.
Past hopes already lay behind.

What need to strive with a life awry ?
Had I said that, had I done this,
So might I gain, so might I miss.
Might she have loved me ? just as well
She might have hated,—who can tell ?
Where had I been now if the worst befell ?

And here we are riding, she and I.

V

Fail I alone, in words and deeds ?
Why, all men strive and who succeeds ?
We rode ; it seemed my spirit flew, Saw other regions, cities new,

As the world rushed by on either
side.

I thought,—All labour, yet no less Bear up beneath their unsuccess.
Look at the end of work, contrast The petty Done, the Undone vast,
This Present of theirs with the hopeful
Past !

I hoped she would love me : here we ride.

VI

What hand and brain went ever paired ?

What heart alike conceived and dared ?
What act proved all its thought had been ?

What will but felt the fleshly screen ?
We ride and I see her bosom heave.
There's many a crown for who can reach.

Ten lines, a statesman's life in each !
The flag stuck on a heap of bones,
A soldier's doing ! what atones ?
They scratch his name on the Abbey-stones.

My riding is better, by their leave.

VII

What does it all mean, poet ? well, Your brains beat into rhythm—you tell

What we felt only ; you expressed You hold things beautiful the best,
And pace them in rhyme so, side by
side.

'Tis something, nay 'tis much—but
then,

Have you yourself what's best for
men ?

Are you—poor, sick, old ere your
time—

Nearer one whit your own sublime Than we who never have turned a rhyme ?

Sing, riding's a joy ! For me,
I ride.

VIII

And you, great sculptor—so, you gave A score of years to Art, her slave, And that's your Venus—whence we turn

To yonder girl that fords the burn !

You acquiesce, and shall I repine ?
 What, man of music, you, grown grey With notes and nothing else to say, Is this your sole praise from a friend,
 'Greatly his opera's strains intend,
 But in music we know how fashions
 end !'

I gave my youth—but we ride, in fine.

IX

Who knows what's fit for us ? Had fate

Proposed bliss here should sublimate
 My being ; had I signed the bond—Still one must lead some life beyond, —Have a bliss to die with, dimdesered.

This foot once planted on the goal,
 This glory-garland round my soul, Could I desory such ? Try and test !
 I sink back shuddering from the quest—Earth being so good, would Heaven seem best ?

Now, Heaven and she are beyond this ride.

And yet—she has not spoke so long !
 What if Heaven be that, fair and
 strong

At life's best, with our eyes upturned Whither life's flower is first discerned, We, fixed so, ever should so abide ?
 What if we still ride on, we two,
 With life for ever old yet new,
 Changed not in kind but in degree,
 The instant made eternity,—

And Heaven just prove that I and she Ride, ride together, for ever ride ?

THE PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN

A CHILD'S STORY

(WRITTEN FOR, AND INSCRIBED TO, W. M.
 THE YOUNGER)

I

HAMELIN Town's in Brunswick,
 By famous Hanover city ;
 The river Weser, deep and wide, Washes its wall on the southern side ;
 A pleasanter spot you never spied ;

But, when begins my ditty, Almost five hundred years ago,
 To see the townsfolk suffer so From vermin, was a pity.

II

Rats !
 They fought the dogs, and killed the cats,
 And bit the babies in the cradles,
 And ate the cheeses out of the vats,
 And licked the soup from the cooks' own ladies,
 Split open the kegs of salted sprats,
 Made nests inside men's Sunday hats,
 And even spoiled the women's chats,
 By drowning their speaking With shrieking and squeaking In fifty different sharps and flats.

III

At last the people in a body To the Town Hall came flocking :
 'Tis clear,' cried they, 'our Mayor's a noddy ;
 And as for our Corporation—shocking
 To think we buy gowns lined with ermine
 For dolts that can't or won't determine
 What's best to rid us of our vermin !
 You hope, because you're old and obese,
 To find in the furry civic robe ease ?
 Rouse up, Sirs ! Give your brains a racking
 To find the remedy we're lacking, Or, sure as fate, we'll send you packing !'
 At this the Mayor and Corporation Quaked with a mighty consternation.

IV

An hour they sate in council, At length the Mayor broke silence :
 'For a guilder I'd my ermine gown sell ;
 I wish I were a mile hence !
 It's easy to bid one rack one's brain—
 I'm sure my poor head aches again
 I've scratched it so, and all in vain.

Oh for a trap, a trap, a trap !'
Just as he said this, what should hap At the chamber door but a gentle tap ?
' Bless us,' cried the Mayor, ' what's that ?'

(With the Corporation as he sat, Looking little though wondrous fat ;
Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister Than a too-long-opened oyster, Save when at noon his paunch grew mutinous

For a plate of turtle green and glutinous)

' Only a scraping of shoes on the mat ?
Anything like the sound of a rat Makes my heart go pit-a-pat !'

v

' Come in !'—the Mayor cried, looking bigger :

And in did come the strangest figure !
His queer long coat from heel to head Was half of yellow and half of red ;
And he himself was tall and thin,
With sharp blue eyes, each like a pin,
And light loose hair, yet swarthy skin,

No tuft on cheek nor beard on chin, But lips where smiles went out and in—There was no guessing his kith and kin !

And nobody could enough admire
The tall man and his quaint attire : Quoth one : ' It's as my great-grand-sire,

Starting up at the Trump of Doom's tone,

Had walked this way from his painted tomb-stone !'

vi

He advanced to the council-table :
And, ' Please your honours,' said he,
' I'm able,

By means of a secret charm to draw
All creatures living beneath the sun,
That creep or swim or fly or run, After me so as you never saw !
And I chiefly use my charm On creatures that do people harm, The mole and toad and newt and viper ;

And people call me the Pied Piper.'

(And here they noticed round his neck
A scarf of red and yellow stripes, To match with his coat of the self-same cheque ;

And at the scarf's end hung a pipe ;
And his fingers, they noticed, were ever straying

As if impatient to be playing Upon this pipe, as low it dangled Over his vesture so old-fangled.)

' Yet,' said he, ' poor piper as I am, In Tartary I freed the Cham, Last June, from his huge swarms of gnats ;

I eased in Asia the Nizam
Of a monstrous brood of vampire-bats :
And as for what your brain bewilders,
If I can rid your town of rats

Will you give me a thousand guilders ?'
' One ? fifty thousand !'—was the exclamation

Of the astonished Mayor and Corporation.

vii

Into the street the Piper stept, Smiling first a little smile,

As if he knew what magic slept In his quiet pipe the while ;

Then, like a musical adept,
To blow the pipe his lips he wrinkled, And green and blue his sharp eyes twinkled

Like a candle-flame where salt is sprinkled ;

And ere three shrill notes the pipe uttered,

You heard as if an army muttered ;
And the muttering grew to a grumbling ;

And the grumbling grew to a mighty rumbling ;

And out of the houses the rats came tumbling.

Great rats, small rats, lean rats, brawny
rats,

Brown rats, black rats, grey rats, tawny rats,

Grave old plodders, gay young friskers, Fathers, mothers, uncles, cousins,

Cocking tails and pricking whiskers, Families by tens and dozens,

Brothers, sisters, husbands, wives—Followed the Piper for their lives.

From street to street he pined advancing,
And step for step they followed dancing,
Until they came to the river Weser Wherein all plunged and perished!

—Save one who, stout as Julius Caesar, Swam across and lived to carry (As he, the manuscript he cherished)
To Rat-land home his commentary: Which was, 'At the first shrill notes of the pipe,

I heard a sound as of scraping tripe,
And putting apples, wondrous ripe,
Into a cider-press's gripe:

And a moving away of pickle-tub-boards,

And a leaving ajar of conserve-cupboards,

And a drawing the corks of train-oilflasks,

And a breaking the hoops of butter-casks;
And it seemed as if a voice (Sweeter far than by harp or by psaltery

Is breathed) called out, Oh rats, rejoice!

The world is grown to one vast dry-saltery!

So, munch on, crunch on, take your nunccheon,

Breakfast, supper, dinner, luncheon!
And just as a bulky sugar-puncheon,

All ready staved, like a great sun shone Glorious scarce an inch before me,

Just as methought it said, Come, bore
me!

—I found the Weser rolling o'er me.'

VIII

You should have heard the Hamelin people

Ring the bells till they rocked the steeple.

'Go,' cried the Mayor, 'and get long poles!

Poke out the nests and block up the holes!
Consult with carpenters and builders,

And leave in our town not even a trace Of the rats!'—when suddenly, up the
face

Of the Piper perked in the market-
place,

With a, 'First, if you please, my thousand guilders!'

IX

A thousand guilders! The Mayor looked blue;

So did the Corporation too.
For council dinners made rare havoc

With Claret, Moselle, Vin-de-Grave, Hock;

And half the money would replenish Their cellar's biggest butt with Rhenish.

To pay this sum to a wandering fellow With a gipsy coat of red and yellow!

'Beside,' quoth the Mayor with a knowing wink,

Our business was done at the river's brink;

We saw with our eyes the vermin sink,
And what's dead can't come to life,

I think.

So, friend, we're not the folks to shrink

From the duty of giving you something for drink,

And a matter of money to put in your poke;

But as for the guilders, what we spoke Of them, as you very well know, was in joke.

Beside, our losses have made us thrifty: A thousand guilders! Come, take fifty!

X

The piper's face fell, and he cried,
'No trifling! I can't wait, beside!

I've promised to visit by dinner time Bagdat, and accept the prime

Of the Head-Cook's pottage, all he's rich in,

For having left, in the Caliph's kitchen,
Of a nest of scorpions no survivor—

With him I proved no bargain-driver, With you, don't think I'll bate a stiver!

And folks who put me in a passion May find me pipe to another fashion.'

XI

'How?' cried the Mayor, 'd'ye think I'll brook

Being worse treated than a Cook?
Insulted by a lazy rascal

With idle pipe and vesture piebald?

You threaten us, fellow? Do your worst, Blow your pipe there till you burst!

XII

Once more he stept into the street;
And to his lips again
Laid his long pipe of smooth straight cane;
And ere he blew three notes (such sweet Soft notes as yet musician's cunning Never gave the enraptured air) There was a rustling, that seemed like a bustling Of merry crowds justling at pitching and hustling, Small feet were pattering, wooden shoes clattering, Little hands clapping and little tongues chattering,
And, like fowls in a farm-yard when barley is scattering, Out came the children running.
All the little boys and girls,
With rosy cheeks and flaxen curls, And sparkling eyes and teeth like pearls, Tripping and skipping, ran merrily
after
The wonderful music with shouting and laughter.

XIII

The Mayor was dumb, and the Council
stood
As if they were changed into blocks of wood,
Unable to move a step, or cry To the children merrily skipping by—
And could only follow with the eye That joyous crowd at the Piper's back.
But how the Mayor was on the rack,
And the wretched Council's bosoms beat,
As the Piper turned from the High Street
To where the Weser rolled its waters Right in the way of their sons and daughters!
However he turned from South to West,
And to Koppelberg Hill his steps addressed,

And after him the children pressed;
Great was the joy in every breast.
'He never can cross that mighty top!
He's forced to let the piping drop,
And we shall see our children stop!'
When, lo, as they reached the mountain's side,
A wondrous portal opened wide,
As if a cavern was suddenly hollowed;
And the Piper advanced and the children followed,
And when all were in to the very last,
The door in the mountain-side shut
fast.
Did I say, all? No! One was lame, And could not dance the whole of the
way;
And in after years, if you would blame His sadness, he was used to say,—
'It's dull in our town since my playmates left!

I can't forget that I'm bereft
Of all the pleasant sights they see,
Which the Piper also promised me.
For he led us, he said, to a joyous
land,
Joining the town and just at hand, Where waters gushed and fruit-trees grew,
And flowers put forth a fairer hue,
And everything was strange and new;
The sparrows were brighter than peacocks here,
And their dogs outran our fallow deer,
And honey-bees had lost their stings, And horses were born with eagles'
wings:
And just as I became assured
My lame foot would be speedily cured,
The music stopped and I stood still,
And found myself outside the Hill, Left alone against my will,
To go now limping as before,
And never hear of that country more!'

XIV

Alas, alas for Hamelin!
There came into many a burgher's pate
A text which says, that Heaven's Gate
Opes to the Rich at as easy rate
As the needle's eye takes a camel in!

The Mayor sent East, West, North and South,

To offer the Piper, by word of mouth, Wherever it was men's lot to find him,

Silver and gold to his heart's content,
If he'd only return the way he went,
And bring the children behind him.

But when they saw 'twas a lost endeavour,

And Piper and dancers were gone for ever,

They made a decree that lawyers never Should think their records dated duly If, after the day of the month and year,

These words did not as well appear,
'And so long after what happened here

On the Twenty-second of July, Thirteen hundred and seventy-six : '
And the better in memory to fix
The place of the children's last retreat, They called it, the Pied Piper's Street—Where any one playing on pipe or tabor Was sure for the future to lose his labour.

Nor suffered they hostelry or tavern To shock with mirth a street so solemn ;

But opposite the place of the cavern
They wrote the story on a column,
And on the great Church-Window painted

The same, to make the world acquainted

How their children were stolen away ;
And there it stands to this very day.
And I must not omit to say That in Transylvania there's a tribe Of alien people that ascribe
The outlandish ways and dress

On which their neighbours lay such stress,

To their fathers and mothers having risen

Out of some subterraneous prison Into which they were trepanned Long time ago in a mighty band
Out of Hamelin town in Brunswick land,

But how or why, they don't understand

xv

So, Willy, let me and you be wipers
Of scores out with all men—especially pipers :

And, whether they pipe us free, from rats or from mice,
If we've promised them aught, let us keep our promise.

THE FLIGHT OF THE DUCHESS

I

You're my friend :

I was the man the Duke spoke to ;
I helped the Duchess to cast off his yoke, too ;

So, here's the tale from beginning to end,
My friend !

II

Ours is a great wild country :
If you climb to our castle's top,
I don't see where your eye can stop ;
For when you've passed the corn-field country,

Where vineyards leave off, flocks are packed,

And sheep-range leads to cattle-tract,
And cattle-tract to open-chase,
And open-chase to the very base Of the mountain, where, at a funeral pace,

Round about, solemn and slow,

One by one, row after row,

Up and up the pine-trees go,

So, like black priests up, and so

Down the other side again

To another greater, wilder country, That's one vast red drear burnt-up plain,

Branched through and through with many a vein

Whence iron's dug, and copper's dealt ;

Look right, look left, look straight before,—

Beneath they mine, above they smelt, Copper-ore and iron-ore,

And forge and furnace mould and melt,
And so on, more and ever more,

Till, at the last, for a bounding belt, Comes the salt sand hoar of the great sea-shore,

—And the whole is our Duke's country !

III

I was born the day this present Duke was—

(And O, says the song, ere I was old !) In the castle where the other Duke
was—

(When I was happy and young, not old !)

I in the Kennel, he in the Bower :
We are of like age to an hour.
My father was Huntsman in that day ;
Who has not heard my father say That, when a boar was brought to bay, Three times, four times out of five,
With his huntspear he'd contrive
To get the killing-place transfixed, And pin him true, both eyes betwixt ?
And that's why the old Duke would rather

He lost a salt-pit than my father,
And loved to have him ever in call ; That's why my father stood in the hall

When the old Duke brought his infant
out

To show the people, and while they passed

The wondrous banfling round about,
Was first to start at the outside blast
As the Kaiser's courier blew his horn, Just a month after the babe was born.
'And,' quoth the Kaiser's courier,
'since

The Duke has got an Heir, our Prince Needs the Duke's self at his side :'
The Duke looked down and seemed to
wince,

But he thought of wars o'er the world wide,

Castles a-fire, men on their march,
The toppling tower, the crashing arch ;
And up he looked, and awhile he eyed The row of crests and shields and banners,

Of all achievements after all manners,
And 'ay,' said the Duke with a surly
pride.

The more was his comfort when he died

At next year's end, in a velvet suit, With a gilt glove on his hand, and his foot

In a silken shoe for a leather boot,

Petticoated like a herald,
In a chamber next to an ante-room, Where he breathed the breath of page and groom,
What he called stink, and they, perfume :

—They should have set him on red Berold,

Mad with pride, like fire to manage !
They should have got his cheek fresh tannage

Such a day as to-day in the merry sunshine !

Had they stuck on his fist a rough-foot merlin !

(Hark, the wind's on the heath at its game !

Oh for a noble falcon-lanner
To flap each broad wing like a banner, And turn in the wind, and dance like flame !)

Had they broached a cask of white beer from Berlin !

—Or if you incline to prescribe mere wine

Put to his lips when they saw him pine,
A cup of our own Moldavia fine, Cotnar, for instance, green as May sorrel,
And ropy with sweet,—we shall not quarrel. -

IV

So, at home, the sick tall yellow Duchess

Was left with the infant in her clutches, She being the daughter of God knows who :

And now was the time to revisit her
tribe,

So, abroad and afar they went, the two,

And let our people rail and gibe At the empty Hall and extinguished
fire,

As loud as we liked, but ever in vain,
Till after long years we had our desire,
And back came the Duke and his mother again.

And he came back the pertest little ape
That ever affronted human shape ;
Full of his travel, struck at himself.

You'd say, he despised our bluff old ways ?

—Not he ! For in Paris they told the elf

That our rough North land was the Land of Lays,

The one good thing left in evil days ;
Since the Mid-Age was the Heroic
Time,

And only in wild nooks like ours Could you taste of it yet as in its prime,

And see true castles, with proper towers,

Young-hearted women, old-minded
men,

And manners now as manners were
then.

So, all that the old Dukes had been, without knowing it,

This Duke would fain know he was, without being it ;

'Twas not for the joy's self, but the joy of his showing it,

Nor for the pride's self, but the pride of our seeing it,

He revived all usages thoroughly worn-
out,

The souls of them fumed-forth, the hearts of them torn-out :

And chief in the chase his neck he perilled,

On a lathy horse, all legs and length, With blood for bone, all speed, no
strength ;

—They should have set him on red Berold,

With the red eye slow consuming in fire,

And the thin stiff ear like an abbey spire !

VI

Well, such as he was, he must marry, we heard :

And out of a convent, at the word, Came the Lady, in time of-spring.

—Oh, old thoughts they cling, they cling !

That day, I know, with a dozen oaths I clad myself in thick hunting-clothes

Fit for the chase of urox or buffle In winter-time when you need to muffle.

But the Duke had a mind we should cut a figure,

And so we saw the Lady arrive :

My friend, I have seen a white crane bigger !

She was the smallest lady alive,
Made, in a piece of Nature's madness, Too small, almost, for the life and glad-
ness

That over-filled her, as some hive Out of the bears' reach on the high trees

Is crowded with its safe merry bees :

In truth, she was not hard to please !

Up she looked, down she looked, round at the mead,

Straight at the castle, that's best
indeed

To look at from outside the walls :

As for us, styled the ' serfs and thralls,' She as much thanked me as if she had said it,

(With her eyes, do you understand ?) Because I patted her horse while I led
it ;

And Max, who rode on her other hand,
Said, no bird flew past but she inquired

What its true name was, nor ever seemed tired—

If that was an eagle she saw hover, And the green and grey bird on the field was the plover.

When suddenly appeared the Duke :

And as down she sprung, the small foot pointed

On to my hand,—as with a rebuke,
And as if his backbone were not jointed,

The Duke stepped rather aside than forward,

And welcomed her with his grandest
smile ;

And, mind you, his mother all the while Chilled in the rear, like a wind to Nor'ward ;

And up, like a weary yawn, with its pullies

Went, in a shriek, the rusty portcullis ; And, like a glad sky the north-wind sullies,

The Lady's face stopped its play,
As if her first hair had grown grey—

For such things must begin some one day !

VII

In a day or two she was well again ; As who should say, ' You labour in vain !
 This is all a jest against God, who meant
 I should ever be, as I am, content And glad in His sight ; therefore, glad I will be !'
 So, smiling as at first went she.

VIII

She was active, stirring, all fire—
 Could not rest, could not tire—To a stone she might have given life !
 (I myself loved once, in my day) —For a Shepherd's, Miner's, Hunts-man's wife, (I had a wife, I know what I say) Never in all the world such an one !
 And here was plenty to be done,
 And she that could do it, great or small,
 She was to do nothing at all.
 There was already this man in his post, This in his station, and that in his office,
 And the Duke's plan admitted a wife, at most,
 To meet his eye, with the other trophies,
 Now outside the Hall, now in it,
 To sit thus, stand thus, see and be seen, At the proper place in the proper minute,
 And die away the life between.
 And it was amusing enough, each infraction
 Of rule (but for after-sadness that came)
 To hear the consummate self-satisfaction
 With which the young Duke and the old Dame
 Would let her advise, and criticise,
 And, being a fool, instruct the wise,
 And, child-like, parcel out praise or
 blame :
 They bore it all in complacent guise,
 As though an artificer, after contriving
 A wheel-work image as if it were living, Should find with delight it could motion to strike him !
 So found the Duke, and his mother like
 him :

The Lady hardly got a rebuff—That had not been contemptuous
 enough,
 With his cursed smirk, as he nodded applause,
 And kept off the old mother-cat's claws.

IX

So, the little Lady grew silent and thin, Paling and ever paling,
 As the way is with a hid chagrin ;
 And the Duke perceived that she was ailing,
 And said in his heart, ' 'Tis done to spite me, But I shall find in my power to right
 me !'
 Don't swear, friend—the Old One,
 many a year,
 Is in Hell, and the Duke's self . . . you shall hear.

Well, early in autumn, at first winter-warning,
 When the stag had to break with his foot, of a morning, A drinking-hole out of the fresh tender ice,
 That covered the pond till the sun, in a trice, Loosening it, let out a ripple of gold,
 And another and another, and faster and faster, Till, dimpling to blindness, the wide water rolled :
 Then it so chanced that the Duke our master Asked himself what were the pleasures in season,
 And found, since the calendar bade him be hearty,
 He should do the Middle Age no treason
 In resolving on a hunting-party.
 Always provided, old books showed the way of it !
 What meant old poets by their strictures ?
 And when old poets had said their say
 of it,
 How taught old painters in their pictures ?
 We must revert to the proper channels, Workings in tapestry, paintings on panels,

And gather up Woodcraft's authentic traditions :

Here was food for our various ambitions,
As on each case, exactly stated,

—To encourage your dog, now, the properest chirrup,

Or best prayer to St. Hubert on mounting your stirrup—

We of the household took thought and debated.

Blessed was he whose back ached with the jerkin

His sire was wont to do forest-work in ;
Blesseder he who nobly sunk 'ohs'

And 'ahs' while he tugged on his grandsire's trunk-hose ;

What signified hats if they had no rims on,

Each slouching before and behind like the scallop,

And able to serve at sea for a shallop, Loaded with lacquer and looped with crimson ?

So that the deer now, to make a short rhyme on't,

What with our Venerers, Prickers, and Verderers,

Might hope for real hunters at length, and not murderers,

And oh, the Duke's tailor—he had a hot time on't !

XI

Now you must know, that when the first dizziness

Of flap-hats and buff-coats and jack-boots subsided,

The Duke put this question, 'The Duke's part provided,

Had not the Duchess some share in the business ?'

For out of the mouth of two or three witnesses

Did he establish all fit-or-unfitnesses :
And, after much laying of heads together,

Somebody's cap got a notable feather
By the announcement with proper unction

That he had discovered the lady's function ;

Since ancient authors gave this tenet,
'When horns wind a mort and the deer is at siege,

Let the dame of the Castle prick forth on her jennet,

And with water to wash the hands of her hege

In a clean ewer with a fair toweling, Let her preside at the disemboweling.'

Now, my friend, if you had so little religion

As to catch a hawk, some falcon-lanner,

And thrust her broad wings like a banner

Into a coop for a vulgar pigeon ;
And if day by day, and week by week,

You cut her claws, and sealed her eyes,
And clipped her wings, and tied her beak,

Would it cause you any great surprise If, when you decided to give her an airing,

You found she needed a little preparing ?

—I say, should you be such a cur-mudgeon,

If she clung to the perch, as to take it in dudgeon ?

Yet when the Duke to his lady signified,

Just a day before, as he judged most dignified,

In what a pleasure she was to participate,—

And, instead of leaping wide in flashes,
Her eyes just lifted their long lashes,

As if pressed by fatigue even he could not dissipate,

And duly acknowledged the Duke's forethought,

But spoke of her health, if her health were worth aught,

Of the weight by day and the watch by night,

And much wrong now that used to be right,

So, thanking him, declined the hunting,—

Was conduct ever more affronting ?
With all the ceremony settled—

With the towel ready, and the sewer Polishing up his oldest ewer,

And the jennet pitched upon, a piebald,

Black-barred, cream-coated and pink eye-ball'd,—

No wonder if the Duke was nettled !
 And when she persisted nevertheless,— Well, I suppose here's the time to confess That there ran half round our Lady's chamber A balcony none of the hardest to clamber ;
 And that Jacynth the tire-woman, ready in waiting, Stayed in call outside, what need of relating ?
 And since Jacynth was like a June rose, why, a fervent Adorer of Jacynth, of course, was your servant ;
 And if she had the habit to peep through the casement, How could I keep at any vast distance ?
 And so, as I say, on the Lady's persistence,
 The Duke, dumb stricken with amazement, Stood for a while in a sultry smother,
 And then, with a smile that partook of the awful, Turned her over to his yellow mother To learn what was decorous and lawful ;
 And the mother smelt blood with a cat-like instinct,
 As her cheek quick whitened thro' all its quince-tint.
 Oh, but the Lady heard the whole truth at once !
 What meant she ?—Who was she ?—Her duty and station,
 The wisdom of age and the folly of youth, at once,
 Its decent regard and its fitting relation—In brief, my friend, set all the devils in hell free
 And turn them out to carouse in a belfry,
 And treat the priests to a fifty-part canon,
 And then you may guess how that tongue of hers ran on !
 Well, somehow or other it ended at last And, licking her whiskers, out she passed ;

And after her,—making (he hoped) a face Like Emperor Nero or Sultan Saladin, Stalked the Duke's self with the austere grace Of ancient hero or modern paladin, From door to staircase—oh, such a solemn Unbending of the vertebral column !

XII

However, at sunrise our company mustered ;
 And here was the huntsman bidding unkennel,
 And there 'neath his bonnet the pricker blustered,
 With feather dank as a bough of wet fennel ;
 For the court-yard's four walls were filled with fog
 You might cut as an axe chops a log.
 Like so much wool for colour and bulkiness ;
 And out rode the Duke in a perfect sulkiness, Since, before breakfast, a man feels but queasily,
 And a sinking at the lower abdomen Begins the day with indifferent omen.
 And lo, as he looked around uneasily,
 The sun ploughed the fog up and drove it asunder This way and that from the valley under ;
 And, looking through the court-yard arch, Down in the valley, what should meet him
 But a troop of Gipsies on their march,
 No doubt with the annual gifts to greet him.

XIII

Now, in your land, Gipsies reach you, only After reaching all lands beside ;
 North they go, South they go, trooping or lonely,
 And still, as they travel far and wide,
 Catch they and keep now a trace here, a trace there,
 That puts you in mind of a place here, a place there.

But with us, I believe they rise out of the ground,
And nowhere else, I take it, are found With the earth-tint yet so freshly embrowned ;
Born, no doubt, like insects which breed
on
The very fruit they are meant to feed
on.
For the earth—not a use to which they don't turn it,
The ore that grows in the mountain's
womb,
Or the sand in the pits like a honeycomb,
They sift and soften it, bake it and burn
it—
Whether they weld you, for instance, a snaffle With side-bars never a brute can baffle ;
Or a lock that's a puzzle of wards within wards ;
Or, if your colt's fore-foot inclines to curve inwards, Horseshoes they'll hammer which turn on a swivel
And won't allow the hoof to shrivel.
Then they cast bells like the shell of the winkle,
That keep a stout heart in the ram with their tinkle ;
But the sand—they pinch and pound it like otters ; Commend me to Gipsy glass-makers and potters !
Glasses they'll blow you, crystal-clear, Where just a faint cloud of rose shall appear,
As if in pure water you dropped and let
die
A bruise black-blooded mulberry ;
And that other sort, their crowning
pride,
With long white threads distinct in-
side,
Like the lake-flower's fibrous roots which dangle
Loose such a length and never tangle, Where the bold sword-lily cuts the clear waters,
And the cup-lily couches with all the white daughters :

Such are the works they put their hand
to,
And the uses they turn and twist iron and sand to.
And these made the troop, which our Duke saw sally Towards his castle from out of the valley,
Men and women, like new-hatched spiders,
Come out with the morning to greet our riders.
And up they wound till they reached the ditch,
Whereat all stopped save one, a witch, That I knew, as she hobbled from the group,
By her gait, directly, and her stoop, I, whom Jacynth was used to importune
To let that same witch tell us our fortune.
The oldest Gipsy then above ground ;
And, so sure as the autumn season came round,
She paid us a visit for profit or pastime, And every time, as she swore, for the last time.
And presently she was seen to sidle Up to the Duke till she touched his bridle,
So that the horse of a sudden reared up As under its nose the old witch peered
up
With her worn-out eyes, or rather eye-holes
Of no use now but to gather brine,
And began a kind of level whine
Such as they used to sing to their viols
When their ditties they go grinding Up and down with nobody minding : And, then as of old, at the end of the humming
Her usual presents were forthcoming —A dog-whistle blowing the fiercest of trebles, (Just a sea-shore stone holding a dozen fine pebbles,) Or a porcelain mouth-piece to screw on a pipe-end,—
And so she awaited her annual stipend.
But this time, the Duke would scarcely vouchsafe

A word in reply ; and in vain she felt With twitching fingers at her belt
For the purse of sleek pine-martin pelt, Ready to put what he gave in her pouch safe,—

Till, either to quicken his apprehension, Or possibly with an after-intention,
She was come, she said, to pay her duty To the new Duchess, the youthful beauty.

No sooner had she named his Lady,
Than a shine lit up the face so shady,
And its smirk returned with a novel meaning—

For it struck him, the babe just wanted weaning ;

If one gave her a taste of what life was and sorrow,
She, foolish to-day, would be wiser tomorrow ;

And who so fit a teacher of trouble As this sordid crone bent wellnigh double ?

So, glancing at her wolf-skin vesture, (If such it was, for they grow so hirsute That their own fleece serves for natural fur-suit)

He was contrasting, 'twas plain from his gesture,
The life of the Lady so flower-like and delicate

With the loathsome squalor of this helicat.

I, in brief, was the man the Duke beckoned

From out of the throng, and while I drew near

He told the crone, as I since have reckoned

By the way he bent and spoke into her ear

With circumspection and mystery,
The main of the Lady's history,
Her frowardness and ingratitude ;
And for all the crone's submissive attitude

I could see round her mouth the loose plaits tightening,

And her brow with assenting intelligence brightening.

As though, she engaged with hearty goodwill

Whatever he now might enjoin to fulfil,

And promised the Lady a thorough frightening.

And so, just giving her a glimpse Of a purse, with the air of a man who imps

The wing of the hawk that shall fetch the hernshaw,

He bade me take the Gipsy mother And set her telling some story or other Of hill or dale, oak-wood or fernshaw, To while away a weary hour
For the Lady left alone in her bower, Whose mind and body craved exertion And yet shrank from all better diversion.

XIV

Then clapping heel to his horse, the mere curveter,

Out rode the Duke, and after his hollo Horses and hounds swept, huntsman and servitor,

And back I turned and bade the crone
follow.

And what makes me confident what 's to be told you

Had all along been of this crone 's devising,

Is, that, on looking round sharply, behold you,

There was a novelty quick as surprising :

For first, she had shot up a full head in stature,

And her step kept pace with mine nor faltered,

As if age had foregone its usurpature, And the ignoble mien was wholly altered,

And the face looked quite of another nature,

And the change reached too, whatever the change meant,

Her shaggy wolf-skin cloak's arrangement :

For where its tatters hung loose like sedges,

Gold coins were glittering on the edges,

Like the band-roll strung with toman's Which proves the veil a Persian woman's :

And under her brow, like a snail's horns newly

Come out as after the rain he paces, Two unmistakeable eye-points duly Live and aware looked out of their places.

So, we went and found Jacynth at the entry

Of the Lady's chamber standing sentry ; I told the command and produced my companion,

And Jacynth rejoiced to admit any one,
For since last night, by the same token,

Not a single word had the Lady
spoken :

They went in both to the presence
together,

While I in the balcony watched the weather.

xv

And now, what took place at the very first of all,

I cannot tell, as I never could learn it : Jacynth constantly wished a curse to
fall

On that little head of hers and burn it, If she knew how she came to drop so soundly

Asleep of a sudden and there continue
The whole time sleeping as profoundly As one of the boars my father would pin
you

'Twixt the eyes where the life holds garrison,

—Jacynth forgive me the comparison !
But where I begin my own narration Is a little after I took my station To breathe the fresh air from the balcony,

And, having in those days a falcon eye,
To follow the hunt thro' the open country,

From where the bushes thinner crested The hillocks, to a plain where's not one tree.

When, in a moment, my ear was arrested

By—was it singing, or was it saying,
Or a strange musical instrument playing

In the chamber ?—and to be certain
I pushed the lattice, pulled the curtain,
And there lay Jacynth asleep, Yet as if a watch she tried to keep,

In a rosy sleep along the floor
With her head against the door ;
While in the midst, on the seat of state,
Was a queen—the Gipsy woman late,
With head and face downbent
On the Lady's head and face intent : For, coiled at her feet like a child at ease,

The Lady sat between her knees And o'er them the Lady's clasped hands met,

And on those hands her chin was set,
And her upturned face met the face of the crone

Wherein the eyes had grown and
grown

As if she could double and quadruple At pleasure the play of either pupil —Very like, by her hands, slow fanning,

As up and down like a gor-crow's flappers

They moved to measure, or bell clappers.

I said, is it blessing, is it banning,
Do they applaud you or burlesque
you—

Those hands and fingers with no flesh
on ?

But, just as I thought to spring in to the rescue,

At once I was stopped by the Lady's expression :

For it was life her eyes were drinking From the crone's wide pair above unwinking,

—Life's pure fire received without shrinking,

Into the heart and breast whose heaving Told you no single drop they were leaving,

—Life, that filling her, passed redundant

Into her very hair, back swerving Over each shoulder, loose and abundant, As her head thrown back showed the white throat curving,

And the very tresses shared in the pleasure,

Moving to the mystic measure, Bounding as the bosom bounded.

I stopped short, more and more confounded,

As still her cheeks burned and eyes glistened,
As she listened and she listened :
When all at once a hand detained me,
And the selfsame contagion gained me,
And I kept time to the wondrous chime,
Making out words and prose and
rhyme,
Till it seemed that the music furled Its wings like a task fulfilled, and dropped From under the words it first had propped,
And left them midway in the world, And word took word as hand takes
hand,
I could hear at last, and understand,
And when I held the unbroken thread,
The Gipsy said :—

'And so at last we find my tribe,
And so I set thee in the midst,
And to one and all of them describe What thou saidst and what thou didst, Our long and terrible journey through,
And all thou art ready to say and do In the trials that remain :
I trace them the vein and the other vein

That meet on thy brow and part again, Making our rapid mystic mark ;
And I bid my people prove and probe Each eye's profound and glorious globe Till they detect the kindred spark In those depths so dear and dark, Like the spots that snap and burst and flee, Circling over the midnight sea.
And on that round young cheek of thine

I make them recognise the tinge,
As when of the costly scarlet wine
They drip so much as will impinge And spread in a thinnest scale afloat
One thick gold drop from the olive's coat Over a silver plate whose sheen Still thro' the mixture shall be seen.
For so I prove thee, to one and all,
Fit, when my people ope their breast,
To see the sign, and hear the call,
And take the vow, and stand the test Which adds one more child to the rest—

When the breast is bare and the arms are wide,
And the world is left outside.
For there is probation to decree,
And many and long must the trials be Thou shalt victoriously endure, If that brow is true and those eyes are
sure ;

Like a jewel-finder's fierce assay Of the prize he dug from its mountain tomb,—

Let once the vindicating ray Leap out amid the anxious gloom,
And steel and fire have done their part
And the prize falls on its finder's heart ;
So, trial after trial past, Wilt thou fall at the very last Breathless, half in trance
With the thrill of the great deliverance, Into our arms for evermore ;
And thou shalt know, those arms once curled

About thee, what we knew before, How love is the only good in the
world.

Henceforth be loved as heart can love,
Or brain devise, or hand approve !
Stand up, look below,

It is our life at thy feet we throw
To step with into light and joy ;
Not a power of life but we'll employ To satisfy thy nature's want ;
Art thou the tree that props the plant, Or the climbing plant that seeks the tree—

Canst thou help us, must we help thee ?
If any two creatures grew into one,
They would do more than the world has done ;

Though each apart were never so
weak, Yet vainly through the world should ye seek

For the knowledge and the might Which in such union grew their right :
So, to approach, at least, that end,
And blend,—as much as may be, blend Thee with us or us with thee,
As climbing-plant or propping-tree, Shall some one deck thee, over and down,

Up and about, with blossoms and
leaves ?

Fix his heart's fruit for thy garland-crown, Cling with his soul as the gourd-vine cleaves, Die on thy boughs and disappear While not a leaf of thine is sere ?
 Or is the other fate in store,
 And art thou fitted to adore,
 To give thy wondrous self away,
 And take a stronger nature's sway ?
 I foresee and I could foretell Thy future portion, sure and well—But those passionate eyes speak true, speak true,
 And let them say what thou shalt do !
 Only, be sure thy daily life,
 In its peace, or in its strife, Never shall be unobserved ;
 We pursue thy whole career,
 And hope for it, or doubt, or fear,— Lo, hast thou kept thy path or swerved,
 We are beside thee, in all thy ways,
 With our blame, with our praise,
 Our shame to feel, our pride to show,
 Glad, angry—but indifferent, no !
 Whether it is thy lot to go,
 For the good of us all, where the haters meet In the crowded city's horrible street ;
 Or thou step alone through the morass Where never sound yet was Save the dry quick clap of the stork's bill, For the air is still, and the water still,
 When the blue breast of the dipping coot Dives under, and all is mute.
 So at the last shall come old age, Decrepit as befits that stage ;
 How else wouldst thou retire apart
 With the hoarded memories of thy heart,
 And gather all to the very least Of the fragments of life's earlier feast, Let fall through eagerness to find The crowning dainties yet behind ?
 Ponder on the entire Past Laid together thus at last,
 When the twilight helps to fuse
 The first fresh, with the faded hues,
 And the outline of the whole,
 As round eve's shades their framework roll, Grandly fronts for once thy soul.

And then as, 'mid the dark, a gleam Of yet another morning breaks,
 And like the hand which ends a dream,
 Death, with the might of his sunbeam Touches the flesh and the soul awakes,
 Then—'

Ay, then, indeed, something would happen !
 But what ? For here her voice changed like a bird's ;
 There grew more of the music and less of the words ;
 Had Jacynth only been by me to clap pen To paper and put' you down every syllable
 With those clever clerkly fingers, All that I've forgotten as well as what lingers
 In this old brain of mine that's but ill able
 To give you even this poor version Of the speech I spoil, as it were, with stammering —More fault of those who had the hammering
 Of prosody into me and syntax, And did'it, not with hobnails but tin-tacks !
 But to return from this excursion,— Just, do you mark, when the song was sweetest,
 The peace most deep and the charm completest,
 There came, shall I say, a snap—
 And the charm vanished !
 And my sense returned, so strangely banished,
 And, starting as from a nap, I knew the crone was bewitching my lady,
 With Jacynth asleep ; and but one spring made I, Down from the casement, round to the portal,
 Another minute and I had entered,— When the door opened, and more than mortal Stood, with a face where to my mind centred
 All beauties I ever saw or shall see,
 The Duchess—I stopped as if struck by palsy.

She was so different, happy and beautiful,

I felt at once that all was best,
And that I had nothing to do, for the rest,

But wait her commands, obey and be dutiful.

Not that, in fact, there was any commanding,

—I saw the glory of her eye,
And the brow's height and the breast's expanding,

And I was hers to live or to die.
As for finding what she wanted,
You know God Almighty granted
Such little signs should serve his wild creatures

To tell one another all their desires,
So that each knows what its friend requires,

And does its bidding without teachers.

I preceded her; the crone

Followed silent and alone;

I spoke to her, but she merely jabbered

In the old style; both her eyes had slunk Back to their pits; her stature shrunk;
In short, the soul in its body sunk Like a blade sent home to its scabbard.

We descended, I preceding;
Crossed the court with nobody heeding;

All the world was at the chase,

The court-yard like a desert-place,

The stable emptied of its small fry;

I saddled myself the very palfrey

I remember patting while it carried her,
The day she arrived and the Duke married her.

And, do you know, though it's easy deceiving

Oneself in such matters, I can't help believing

The Lady had not forgotten it either, And knew the poor devil so much beneath her

Would have been only too glad for her service

To dance on hot ploughshares like a Turk dervise,

But unable to pay proper duty where owing it

Was reduced to that pitiful method of showing it:

For though the moment I began setting His saddle on my own nag of Berold's begetting,

(Not that I meant to be obtrusive) She stopped me, while his rug was shifting,
ing,

By a single rapid finger's lifting,
And, with a gesture kind but conclusive,

And a little shake of the head, refused
me,—

I say, although she never used me, Yet when she was mounted, the Gipsy
behind her,

And I ventured to remind her,
I suppose with a voice of less steadiness

Than usual, for my feeling exceeded me, —Something to the effect that I was in readiness

Whenever God should please she needed me,—

Then, do you know, her face looked down on me

With a look that placed a crown on me,
And she felt in her bosom,—mark, her bosom—

And, as a flower-tree drops its blossom, Dropped me . . . ah, had it been a purse

Of silver, my friend, or gold that's worse, Why, you see, as soon as I found myself

So understood,—that a true heart so may gain

Such a reward,—I should have gone home again,

Kissed Jacynth, and soberly drowned
myself!

It was a little plait of hair

Such as friends in a convent make

To wear, each for the other's sake,—

This, see, which at my breast I wear, Ever did (rather to Jacynth's grudge-ment),

And ever shall, till the Day of Judgment.

And then,—and then,—to cut short,— this is idle,

These are feelings it is not good to foster,—

I pushed the gate wide, she shook the bridle,

And the palfrey bounded,—and so we lost her.

XVI

When the liquor's out, why clink the cannakin ?
I did think to describe you the panic in The redoubtable breast of our master the mannikin,
And what was the pitch of his mother's yellowness, How she turned as a shark to snap the spare-rib Clean off, sailors say, from a pearl-diving Carib, When she heard, what she called, the flight of the feloness
—But it seems such child's play, What they said and did with the Lady
away !
And to dance on, when we've lost the music, Always made me—and no doubt makes you—sick.
Nay, to my mind, the world's face looked so stern
As that sweet form disappeared through the postern,
She that kept it in constant good humour,
It ought to have stopped ; there seemed nothing to do more.
But the world thought otherwise and went on,
And my head's one that its spite was spent on :
Thirty years are fled since that morning,
And with them all my head's adorning.
Nor did the old Duchess die outright,
As you expect, of suppressed spite,
The natural end of every adder Not suffered to empty its poison-bladder :
But she and her son agreed, I take it,
That no one should touch on the story to wake it,
For the wound in the Duke's pride rankled fiery,
So, they made no search and small inquiry—
And when fresh Gipsies have paid us a visit, I've Noticed the couple were never inquisitive,

But told them they're folks the Duke don't want here,
And bade them make haste and cross the frontier.
Brief, the Duchess was gone and the Duke was glad of it,
And the old one was in the young one's
stead,
And took, in her place, the household's
head,
And a blessed time the household had
of it !
And were I not, as a man may say, cautious How I trench, more than needs, on the nauseous,
I could favour you with sundry touches Of the paint-smutches with which the Duchess
Heightened the mellowness of her cheek's yellowness (To get on faster) until at last her Cheek grew to be one master-plaster Of mucus and fucus from mere use of ceruse :
In short, she grew from scalp to udder
Just the object to make you shudder.

XVII

You're my friend—
What a thing friendship is, world without end !
How it gives the heart and soul a stir-up
As if somebody broached you a glorious runlet,
And poured out, all lovelily, sparkingly, sunlit,
Our green Moldavia, the streaky syrup, Cotnar as old as the time of the Druids—Friendship may match with that monarch of fluids ; Each supple a dry brain, fills you its ins-and-outs, Gives your life's hour-glass a shake when the thin sand doubts Whether to run on or stop short, and guarantees Age is not all made of stark sloth and arrant ease.
I have seen my little Lady once more, Jacynth, the Gipsy, Berold, and the rest of it,

For to me spoke the Duke, as I told you
before ;

I always wanted to make a clean breast
of it :

And now it is made—why, my heart'sblood, that went trickle,

Trickle, but anon, in such muddy dribbles,

Is pumped up brisk now, through the main ventricle,

And genially floats me about the giblets.

I'll tell you what I intend to do :

I must see this fellow his sad life through—

He is our Duke, after all,
And I, as he says, but a serf and thrall.

My father was born here, and I inherit His fame, a chain he bound his son
with :

Could I pay in a lump I should prefer it, But there's no mine to blow up and get done with,

So, I must stay till the end of the chapter.

For, as to our middle-age-mannersadapter,

Be it a thing to be glad on or sorry on,
Some day or other, his head in a morion,

And breast in a hauberk, his heels he'll kick up,

Slain by an onslaught fierce of hiccup.
And then, when red doth the sword of our Duke rust,

And its leathern sheath lie o'ergrown with a blue crust,

Then, I shall scrape together my earnings ;

For, you see, in the churchyard Jacynth reposes,

And our children all went the way of the roses :

It's a long lane that knows no turnings.

One needs but little tackle to travel in ;
So, just one stout cloak shall I indue :

And for a staff, what beats the javelin With which his boars my father pinned
you ?

And then, for a purpose you shall hear presently,

Taking some Cotnar, a tight plump, skinfull,

I shall go journeying, who but I, pleasantly !

Sorrow is vain and despondency sinful.
What's a man's age ? He must hurry more, that's all ;

Cram in a day, what his youth took a year to hold :

When we mind labour, then only, we're too old—

What age had Methusalem when he begat Saul ?

And at last, as its haven some buffeted ship sees,

(Come all the way from the north-parts with sperm oil)

I hope to get safely out of the turmoil And arrive one day at the land of the Gipsies,

And find my Lady, or hear the last news of her

From some old thief and son of Lucifer, His forehead chapleted green with wreathy hop,

Sunburned all over like an Æthiop.
And when my Cotnar begins to operate And the tongue of the rogue to run at a proper rate,

And our wine-skin, tight once, shows each flaccid dent,

I shall drop in with—as if by accident—
' You never knew then, how it all ended,

What fortunes good or bad attended The little Lady your Queen befriended ?' —And when that's told me, what's remaining ?

This world's too hard for my explaining.

The same wise judge of matters equine Who still preferred some slim four-year-old

To the big-boned stock of mighty Berold,

And, for strong Cotnar, drank French weak wine,

He also must be such a Lady's scorner !
Smooth Jacob still robs homely Esau :

Now up, now down, the world's one see-saw.

—So, I shall find out some snug corner

Under a hedge, like Orson the wood-knight, Turn myself round and bid the world
 good night;
 And sleep a sound sleep till the trumpet's blowing Wakes me (unless priests cheat us lay-
 men)
 To a world where will be no further throwing Pearls before swine that can't value them. Amen!

A GRAMMARIAN'S FUNERAL

[Time—Shortly after the revival of learning in Europe.]

LET us begin and carry up this corpse, Singing together.
 Leave we the common crofts, the vulgar thorpes,
 Each in its tether Sleeping safe on the bosom of the plain,
 Cared-for till cock-crow:
 Look out if yonder be not day again Rimming the rook-row!
 That's the appropriate country; there, man's thought,
 Rarer, intenser,
 Self-gathered for an outbreak, as it ought,
 Chafes in the censer!
 Leave we the unlettered plain its herd and crop;
 Seek we sepulture
 On a tall mountain, citied to the top, Crowded with culture!
 All the peaks soar, but one the rest excels;
 Clouds overcome it;
 No, yonder sparkle is the citadel's Circling its summit!
 Thither our path lies; wind we up the heights:
 Wait ye the warning?
 Our low life was the level's and the night's;
 He's for the morning!
 Step to a tune, square chests, erect the
 head,
 'Ware the beholders!

This is our master, famous, calm, and dead, Borne on our shoulders.

Sleep, crop and herd! sleep, darkling thorpe and croft, Safe from the weather!
 He, whom we convoy to his grave aloft,
 Singing together,
 He was a man born with thy face and throat, Lyric Apollo!
 Long he lived nameless: how should spring take note Winter would follow?
 Till lo, the little touch, and youth was
 gone!
 Cramped and diminished, Moaned he, 'New measures, other feet
 anon!
 My dance is finished?' No, that's the world's way! (keep the mountain-side, Make for the city,) He knew the signal, and stepped on with pride Over men's pity; Left play for work, and grappled with the world
 Bent on escaping:
 'What's in the scroll,' quoth he, 'thou keepest furled?
 Show me their shaping, Theirs, who most studied man, the bard and sage,— Give!'—So he gowned him, Straight got by heart that book to its last page:
 Learned, we found him!
 Yea, but we found him bald too—eyes like lead, Accents uncertain:
 'Time to taste life,' another would have said,
 'Up with the curtain!'— This man said rather, 'Actual life comes next?
 Patience a moment!
 Grant I have mastered learning's crabbed text,
 Still, there's the comment.
 Let me know all! Prate not of most or least,
 Painful or easy:

Even to the crumbs I'd fain eat up the feast,
Ay, nor feel queasy !'
Oh, such a life as he resolved to live,
When he had learned it, When he had gathered all books had to give !
Sooner, he spurned it.
Image the whole, then execute the parts—
Fancy the fabric Quite, ere you build, ere steel strike fire from quartz, Ere mortar dab brick !
(Here 's the town-gate reached : there 's the market-place Gaping before us.)
Yea, this in him was the peculiar grace (Hearten our chorus) That before living he 'd learn how to live—
No end to learning : Earn the means first—God surely will contrive
Use for our earning.
Others mistrust and say—' But time escapes !
Live now or never !'
He said, ' What 's time ? leave Now for dogs and apes !
Man has Forever.' Back to his book then : deeper drooped his head :
Calculus racked him :
Leaden before, his eyes grew dross of lead :
Tussis attacked him.
' Now, Master, take a little rest !'—not
he !
(Caution redoubled !
Step two a-breast, the way winds narrowly)
Not a whit troubled,
Back to his studies, fresher than at first,
Fierce as a dragon He (soul-hydroptic with a sacred thirst)
Sucked at the flagon.
Oh, if we draw a circle premature, Heedless of far gain,
Greedy for quick returns of profit, sure,
Bad is our bargain !

Was it not great ? did not he throw on
God,
(He loves the burthen)— God's task to make the heavenly period Perfect the earthen ?
Did not he magnify the mind, show
clear
Just what it all meant ?
He would not discount life, as fools do
here,
Paid by instalment !
He ventured neck or nothing—Heaven's success
Found, or earth's failure :
' Wilt thou trust death or not ? ' He answered ' Yes !
Hence with life's pale lure !'
That low man seeks a little thing to do, Sees it and does it :
This high man, with a great thing to pursue,
Dies ere he knows it.
That low man goes on adding one to
one,
His hundred 's soon hit :
This high man, aiming at a million, Misses an unit.
That, has the world here—should he need the next,
Let the world mind him !
This, throws himself on God, and un-perplexed Seeking shall find Him.
So, with the throttling hands of Death at strife,
Ground he at grammar ; Still, thro' the rattle, parts of speech were rife :
While he could stammer
He settled Hott's business—let it
be !— Properly based Oun— Gave us the doctrine of the enclitic De, Dead from the waist down.
Well, here 's the platform, here 's the proper place.
Hail to your purlieus,
All ye highfliers of the feathered race, Swallows and curlews !
Here 's the top-peak ! the multitude below
Live, for they can, there.

This man decided not to Live but
Know—

Bury this man there ?

Here—here 's his place, where meteors shoot, clouds form,

Lightnings are loosened, Stars come and go ! let joy break with the storm,

Peace let the dew send !
Lofty designs must close in like effects :

Loftily lying,
Leave him—still loftier than the world suspects,
Living and dying.

JOHANNES AGRICOLA IN MEDI- TATION

THERE 's heaven above, and night by
night,

I look right through its gorgeous roof ;

No suns and moons though e'er so bright

Avail to stop me ; splendour-proof
I keep the broods of stars aloof :

For I intend to get to God,

For 'tis to God I speed so fast,

For in God's breast, my own abode,

Those shoals of dazzling glory, past.
I lay my spirit down at last.

I lie where I have always lain,

God smiles as He has always smiled ;

Ere suns and moons could wax and wane,

Ere stars were thundergirt, or piled The heavens, God thought on me His
child ;

Ordained a life for me, arrayed

Its circumstances, every one

To the minutest ; ay, God said

This head this hand should rest upon Thus, ere He fashioned star or sun.

And having thus created me,

Thus rooted me, He bade me grow, Guiltless for ever, like a tree

That buds and blooms, nor seeks to
know

The law by which it prospers so :
But sure that thought and word and
deed

All go to swell His love for me, Me, made because that love had need

Of something irrevocably

Pledged solely its content to be.

Yes, yes, a tree which must ascend,

No poison-gourd foredoomed to stoop !

I have God's warrant, could I blend

All hideous sins, as in a cup,

To drink the mingled venoms up,

Secure my nature will convert

The draught to blossoming gladness
fast,

While sweet dew turns to the gourd's hurt,

And bloat, and while they bloat it, bloat,

As from the first its lot was cast.

For as I lie, smiled on, full fed

By unexhausted power to bless,

I gaze below on Hell's fierce bed,

And those its waves of flame oppress,

Swarming in ghastly wretchedness ;

Whose life on earth aspired to be

One altar-smoke, so pure !—to win

If not love like God's love to me,

At least to keep His anger in ;

And all their striving turned to sin.

Priest, doctor, hermit, monk grown
white

With prayer, the broken-hearted nun,

The martyr, the wan acolyte,

The incense-swinging child,—undone

Before God fashioned star or sun !

God, whom I praise ; how could I
praise,

If such as I might understand,

Make out and reckon on His ways,

And bargain for His love, and stand,

Paying a price, at His right hand ?

I

PREADMONISHETH THE ABBOT DEODAETH

The Lord, we look to once for all,
Is the Lord we should look at, all at
once:

He knows not to vary, saitha Saint Paul,

Nor the shadow of turning, for the nonce.

See Him no other than as He is!

Give both the Infinitudes their due—Infinite mercy, but, I wis,
As infinite a justice too.

[Organ: plagal-cadence.
As infinite a justice too.

II

ONE SINGETH

John, Master of the Temple of God, Falling to sin the Unknown Sin,
What he bought of Emperor Aldabrod,
He sold it to Sultan Saladin:

Till, caught by Pope Clement, a-buzzing
there,

Hornet-prince of the mad wasps'
hive,

And clipt of his wings in Paris square, They bring him now to be burned alive.

[And wanteth there grace of lute or clavicithern, ye shall say to confirm him who singeth—

We bring John now to be burned alive.

III

In the midst is a goodly gallows built;
'Twixt fork and fork, a stake is stuck;
But first they set divers tumbrils a-tilt, Make a trench all round with the city muck

Inside they pile log upon log, good store;

Faggots not few, blocks great and small,

Reach a man's mid-thigh, no less, no
more,—

For they mean he should roast in the sight of all.

CHORUS

We mean he should roast in the sight of all.

IV

Good sappy bavins that kindle forth-
with;

Billets that blaze substantial and slow;

Pine-stump split deftly, dry as pith; Larch-heart that chars to a chalk-white glow:

Then up they hoist me John in a chafe, Sling him fast like a hog to scorch, Spit in his face, then leap back safe, Sing 'Laudes' and bid clap-to the torch.

CHORUS

Larus Deo—who bids clap-to the torch.

V

John of the Temple, whose fame so bragged,

Is burning alive in Paris square!

How can he curse, if his mouth is gagged?

Or wriggle his neck, with a collar
there?

Or heave his chest, while a band goes
round?

Or threat with his fist, since his arms are spliced?

Or kick with his feet, now his legs are bound?

—Thinks John, I will call upon Jesus Christ.

[Here one crosseth himself.

VI

Jesus Christ—John had bought and sold,

Jesus Christ—John had eaten and drunk;

To him, the Flesh meant silver and
gold.

[Salvâ reverentiâ.]

Now it was, 'Saviour, bountiful lamb, I have roasted Thee Turks, though men roast me.

See Thy servant, the plight wherein I am!

Art Thou a Saviour? Save Thou
me!

CHORUS

'Tis John the mocker cries, Save Thou me!

VII

Who maketh God's menace an idle
word?

—Saith, it no more means what it proclaims,
Than a damsel's threat to her wanton bird?—

For she too prattles of ugly names.
—Saith, he knoweth but one thing,— what he knows?

That God is good and the rest is
breath;
Why else is the same styled, Sharon's
rose?

Once a rose, ever a rose, he saith.

CHORUS

O, John shall yet find a rose, he saith!

VIII

Alack, there be roses and roses, John!
Some, honied of taste like your leman's tongue:

Some, bitter—for why? (roast gaily
on!)

Their tree struck root in devil's dung!

When Paul once reasoned of righteousness

And of temperance and of judgment
to come,

Good Felix trembled, he could no less—John, snickering, crook'd his wicked thumb.

CHORUS

What cometh to John of the wicked thumb?

IX

Ha ha, John plucketh now at his rose To rid himself of a sorrow at heart!

Lo,—petal on petal, fierce rays un-
close;

Anther on anther, sharp spikes outstart;

And with blood for dew, the bosom boils;

And a gust of sulphur is all its smell;
And lo, he is horribly in the toils

Of a coal-black giant flower of Hell!

CHORUS

What maketh Heaven, That maketh Hell.

X

So, as John called now, through the fire
again,

On the Name, he had cursed with, all his life—

To the Person, he bought and sold
again—

For the Face, with his daily buffets rife—

Feature by feature It took its place!

And his voice, like a mad dog's choking bark,

At the steady Whole of the Judge's
Face—

Died. Forth John's soul flared into the dark.

SUBJOINETH THE ABBOT DEODAET God help all poor souls lost in the dark!

HOLY-CROSS DAY

ON WHICH THE JEWS WERE FORCED TO ATTEND AN ANNUAL CHRISTIAN SERMON IN ROME.

['Now was come about Holy-Cross Day, and now must my lord preach his first sermon to the Jews: as it was of old cared for in the merciful bowels of the Church, that, so to speak, a crumb at least from her conspicuous table here in Rome, should be, though but once yearly, cast to the famishing dogs, under-trampled and bespitten-upon beneath the feet of the guests.
And a moving sight in truth, this, of so many of the besotted, blind, restive and ready-to-perish Hebrews! now maternally brought—nay, (for He saith, "Compel them to come in") haled, as it were, by the head and hair, and against their obstinate hearts, to partake of the heavenly grace. What awakening, what striving with tears, what working of a yeasty conscience!
Nor was my lord wanting to himself on so apt an occasion; witness the abundant conversions which did incontinent reward him: though not to my lord be altogether the glory.'— Diary by the Bishop's Secretary, 1600.]

Though what the Jews really said, on thus being driven to church, was rather to this effect :—

I

FEE, faw, fum ! bubble and squeak !
Blessedest Thursday's the fat of the week.

Rumble and tumble, sleek and rough,
Stinking and savoury, smug and gruff, Take the church-road, for the bell's due chime

Gives us the summons—'tis sermon-
time.

II

Boh, here's Barnabas ! Job, that's
you ?

Up stumps Solomon—bustling too ?

Shame, man ! greedy beyond your years

To handsel the bishop's shaving-shears ?

Fair play's a jewel ! leave friends in the lurch ?

Stand on a line ere you start for the church.

III

Higgledy piggedly, packed we lie, Rats in a hamper, swine in a sty, Wasps in a bottle, frogs in a sieve, Worms in a carcase, fleas in a sleeve.

Hist ! square shoulders, settle your thumbs

And buzz for the bishop—here he comes.

IV

Bow, wow, wow—a bone for the dog !
I liken his Grace to an acorned hog.

What, a boy at his side, with the bloom of a lass,

To help and handle my lord's hourglass !

Didst ever behold so lithe a chine ?

His cheek hath laps like a fresh-singed swine.

V

Aaron's asleep—shove hip to haunch, Or somebody deal him a dig in the paunch !

Look at the purse with the tassel and knob,

And the gown with the angel and thingumbob.

What's he at, quotha ? reading his text !

Now you've his curtesy—and what comes next ?

VI

See to our converts—you doomed black dozen—

No stealing away—nor cog nor cozen !
You five that were thieves, deserve it fairly ;

You seven that were beggars, will live less sparely ;

You took your turn and dipped in the hat,

Got fortune—and fortune gets you ;
mind that !

VII

Give your first groan—compunction's at work ;

And soft ! from a Jew you mount to a Turk.

Lo, Micah,—the selfsame beard on chin

He was four times already converted
in !

Here's a knife, clip quick—it's a sign of grace—

Or he ruins us all with his hanging-
face.

VIII

Whom now is the bishop a-leering at ?
I know a point where his text falls pat.

I'll tell him to-morrow, a word just
now

Went to my heart and made me vow I meddle no more with the worst of trades—

Let somebody else pay his serenades.

IX

Groan all together now, whee—hee—hee !

It's a work, it's a-work, ah, wee is
me !

It began, when a herd of us, picked and placed,

Were spurred through the Corso, stripped to the waist ;

Jew-brutes, with sweat and blood well
spent
To usher in worthily Christian Lent.

It grew, when the hangman entered our bounds,
Yelled, pricked us out to his church like hounds.
It got to a pitch, when the hand indeed Which gutted my purse, would throttle my creed.
And it overflows, when, to even the odd, Men I helped to their sins, help me to their God.

XI

But now, while the scapegoats leave our flock,
And the rest sit silent and count the clock,
Since forced to muse the appointed
time
On these precious facts and truths sublime,—
Let us fitly employ it, under our breath,
In saying Ben Ezra's Song of Death.

XII

For Rabbi Ben Ezra, the night he died, Called sons and sons' sons to his side,
And spoke, 'This world has been harsh and strange;
Something is wrong: there needeth a
change.
But what, or where? at the last, or
first?
In one point only we sinned, at worst.

XIII

'The Lord will have mercy on Jacob yet,
And again in his border see Israel set.
When Judah beholds Jerusalem, The stranger-seed shall be joined to
them:
To Jacob's House shall the Gentiles cleave.
So the Prophet saith and his sons believe.

XIV

'Ay, the children of the chosen race Shall carry and bring them to their
place:

In the land of the Lord shall lead the
same, Bondsmen and handmaids. Who shall
blame,
When the slaves enslave, the oppressed ones o'er
The oppressor triumph for evermore?

XV

'God spoke, and gave us the word to keep:
Bade never fold the hands nor sleep
'Mid a faithless world,—at watch and ward,
Till Christ at the end relieve our guard.
By His servant Moses the watch was
set:
Though near upon cock-crow, we keep it yet.

XVI

'Thou! if Thou wast He, who at mid-watch came,
By the starlight, naming a dubious
Name!
And if, too heavy with sleep—too rash With fear—O Thou, if that martyr-gash Fell on Thee coming to take Thine
own,
And we gave the Cross, when we owed the Throne—

XVII

'Thou art the Judge. We are bruised
thus.
But, the judgment over, join sides with us!
Thine too is the cause! and not more Thine Than ours, is the work of these dogs and swine,
Whose life laughs through and spits at their creed,
Who maintain Thee in word, and defy Thee in deed!

XVIII

'We withstood Christ then? be mindful
how
At least we withstand Barabbas now!
Was our outrage sore? but the worst we spared,
To have called these—Christians, had we dared!

Let defiance to them pay mistrust of
Thee,
And Rome make amends for Calvary!

'By the torture, prolonged from age to
age,
By the infamy, Israel's heritage, By the Ghetto's plague, by the garb's
disgrace,
By the badge of shame, by the felon's
place,
By the branding-tool, the bloody whip,
And the summons to Christian fellowship,—

XX

'We boast our proof that at least the Jew
Would wrest Christ's name from the Devil's crew.
Thy face took never so deep a shade
But we fought them in it, God our aid!
A trophy to bear, as we march, Thy band
South, East, and on to the Pleasant
Land!'

[The present Pope abolished this bad business of the sermon.—R. B.]

PROTUS

Among these latter busts we count by scores,
Half-emperors and quarter-emperors, Each with his bay-leaf fillet, loosethonged vest, Loric' and low-browed Gorgon on the
breast,—
One loves a baby face, with violets
there,
Violets instead of laurel in the hair, As those were all the little locks could
bear.
Now read here. 'Protus ends a period Of empery beginning with a god; Born in the porphyry chamber at Byzant, Queens by his cradle, proud and ministrant:
And if he quickened breath there,
'twould like fire Panting through the dim vast realm transpire.

A fame that he was missing, spread afar—

The world, from its four corners, rose in war,

Till he was borne out on a balcony
To pacify the world when it should see.
The captains ranged before him, one,
his hand

Made baby points at, gained the chief command.

And day by day more beautiful he grew

In shape, all said, in feature and in hue, While young Greek sculptors gazing on the child

Became, with old Greek sculpture, reconciled.

Already sages laboured to condense
In easy tomes a life's experience:

And artists took grave counsel to impart

In one breath and one hand-sweep, all their art—

To make his graces prompt as blossom-
ing

Of plentifully-watered palms in spring:
Since well besseems it, whoso mounts

the throne,
For beauty, knowledge, strength, should stand alone,

And mortals love the letters of his name.'

—Stop! Have you turned two pages?
Still the same.

New reign, same date. The scribe goes on to say

How that same year, on such a month and day,

'John the Pannonian, groundedly beheved

A blacksmith's bastard, whose hard hand reprieved

The Empire from its fate the year
before,—

Came, had a mind to take the crown, and wore

The same for six years, (during which the Huns

Kept off their fingers from us) till his sons

Put something in his liquor'—and so
forth.

Then a new reign. Stay—'Take at its just worth'

(Subjoins an annotator) 'what I give As hearsay. Some think, John let Protus live

And slip away. 'Tis said, he reached man's age

At some blind northern court; made, first a page,

Then, tutor to the children; last, of use About the hunting-stables. I deduce He wrote the little tract "On worming dogs,"

Whereof the name in sundry catalogues Is extant yet. A Protus of the race Is rumoured to have died a monk in Thrace,—

And if the same, he reached senility.'

Here's John the Smith's roughhammered head. Great eye Gross jaw and gripped lips do what granite can

To give you the crown-grasper. What a man!

THE STATUE AND THE BUST

THERE's a palace in Florence, the world knows well,
And a statue watches it from the square,
And this story of both do our townsmen
tell.

Ages ago, a lady there,
At the farthest window facing the East Asked, 'Whorides by with the royal air?'

The brides-maids' prattle around her ceased;

She leaned forth, one on either hand;
They saw how the blush of the bride increased—

They felt by its beats her heart expand—
As one at each ear and both in a breath Whispered, 'The Great-Duke Ferdinand.'

That selfsame instant, underneath,
The Duke rode past in his idle way, Empty and fine like a swordless sheath.
Gay he rode, with a friend as gay, Till he threw his head back—'Who is she?'

—'A Bride the Riccardi brings home to-day.'

Hair in heaps lay heavily Over a pale brow spirit-pure—Carved like the heart of the coal-black
tree,

Crisped like a war-steed's encloure—
And vainly sought to dissemble her eyes Of the blackest black our eyes endure.

And lo, a blade for a knight's emprise Filled the fine empty sheath of a man,— The Duke grew straightway brave and wise.

He looked at her, as a lover can;
She looked at him, as one who awakes,—
The Past was a sleep, and her life began.

Now, love so ordered for both their sakes,

A feast was held that selfsame night In the pile which the mighty shadow makes.

(For Via Larga is three-parts light,
But the Palace overshadows one, Because of a crime which may God requite!

To Florence and God the wrong was
done,

Through the first republic's murder
there

By Cosimo and his cursed son.)

The Duke (with the statue's face in the square)

Turned in the midst of his multitude At the bright approach of the bridal pair.

Face to face the lovers stood
A single minute and no more, While the bridegroom bent as a man subdued—

Bowed till his bonnet brushed the floor—
For the Duke on the lady a kiss conferred,

As the courtly custom was of yore.

In a minute can lovers exchange a word?
If a word did pass, which I do not think,

Only one out of the thousand heard.

That was the bridegroom. At day's brink

He and his bride were alone at last
In a bed-chamber by a taper's blink.

Calmly he said that her lot was cast,
That the door she had passed was shut on her

Till the final catafalk repassed.

The world meanwhile, its noise and stir, Through a certain window facing the East

She could watch like a convent's chronicler.

Since passing the door might lead to a feast,

And a feast might lead to so much
beside,

He, of many evils, chose the least.

'Freely I choose too,' said the bride—
'Your window and its world suffice.'

Replied the tongue, while the heart replied—

'If I spend the night with that devil twice,

May his window serve as my loop of hell Whence a damned soul looks on Paradise !

'I fly to the Duke who loves me well, Sit by his side and laugh at sorrow Ere I count another ave-bell.

'Tis only the coat of a page to borrow,
And tie my hair in a horse-boy's trim,
And I save my soul—but not tomorrow'—

(She checked herself and her eye grew dim)—

'My father tarries to bless my state :
I must keep it one day more for him.

'Is one day more so long to wait ?
Moreover the Duke rides past, I know ;
We shall see each other, sure as fate.'

She turned on her side and slept. Just so !

So we resolve on a thing and sleep :
So did the lady, ages ago.

That night the Duke said, 'Dear or cheap

As the cost of this cup of bliss may prove To body or soul, I will drain it deep.'

And on the morrow, bold with love, He beckoned the bridegroom (close on
call,

As his duty bade, by the Duke's alcove)

And smiled 'Twas a very funeral, Your lady will think, this feast of ours,—
A shame to efface, whate'er befall !

'What if we break from the Arno bowers,
And try if Petraja, cool and green, Cure last night's fault with this morn-ing's flowers ?'

The bridegroom, not a thought to be seen

On his steady brow and quiet mouth, -
Said, 'Too much favour for me so mean !

'But, alas ! my lady leaves the South ; Each wind that comes from the Apennine

Is a menace to her tender youth :

'Nor a way exists, the wise opine,
If she quits her palace twice this year,
To avert the flower of life's decline.'

Quoth the Duke, 'A sage and a kindly
fear.

Moreover Petraja is cold this spring ;
Be our feast to-night as usual here !'

And then to himself—'Which night shall bring

Thy bride to her lover's embraces,
fool—

Or I am the fool, and thou art the king !

'Yet my passion must wait a night, nor cool—

For to-night the Envoy arrives from France,

Whose heart I unlock with myself, my tool.

'I need thee still and might miss per-
chance.

To-day is not wholly lost, beside,
With its hope of my lady's countenance :

'For I ride—what should I do but ride ?
And passing her palace, if I list,
May glance at its window—well betide !'

So said, so done : nor the lady missed One ray that broke from the ardent
brow,

Nor a curl of the lips where the spirit kissed.

Be sure that each renewed the vow,
No morrow's sun should arise and set And leave them then as it left them
now.

But next day passed, and next day yet,
With still fresh cause to wait one day
more

Ere each leaped over the parapet.

And still, as love's brief morning wore,
With a gentle start, half smile, half sigh,
They found love not as it seemed before.

They thought it would work infallibly,
But not in despite of heaven and earth—
The rose would blow when the storm passed by.

Meantime they could profit in winter's dearth

By winter's fruits that supplant the
rose :

The world and its ways have a certain
worth !

And to press a point while these oppose Were a simple policy ; better wait :
We lose no friends and we gain no foes.

Meantime, worse fates than a lover's
fate,

Who daily may ride and pass and look Where his lady watches behind the grate !

And she—she watched the square like a book

Holding one picture and only one,
Which daily to find she undertook :

When the picture was reached the book was done,

And she turned from the picture at night to scheme

Of tearing it out for herself next sun.

So weeks grew months, years—gleam by gleam

The glory dropped from their youth and
love,

And both perceived they had dreamed a dream ;

Which hovered as dreams do, still above,—

But who can take a dream for a truth ?
Oh, hide our eyes from the next remove !

One day as the lady saw her youth Depart, and the silver thread that streaked

Her hair, and, worn by the serpent's tooth,

The brow so puckered, the chin so peaked,—

And wondered who the woman was,
Hollow-eyed and haggard-cheeked,

Fronting her silent in the glass—

'Summon here,' she suddenly said,

'Before the rest of my old self pass,

'Him, the Carver, a hand to aid,

Who fashions the clay no love will
change,

And fixes a beauty never to fade.

'Let Robbia's craft so apt and strange Arrest the remains of young and fair,

And rivet them while the seasons range.

'Make me a face on the window there,

Waiting as ever, mute the while,

My love to pass below in the square !

'And let me think that it may beguile

Dreary days which the dead must spend

Down in their darkness under the aisle,

'To say, "What matters it at the end ?

I did no more while my heart was warm

Than does that image, my pale-faced friend."

'Where is the use of the lip's red charm,

The heaven of hair, the pride of the

brow,

And the blood that blues the inside arm—

'Unless we turn, as the soul knows how,

The earthly gift to an end divine ?

A lady of clay is as good, I trow.'

But long ere Robbia's cornice, fine

With flowers and fruits which leaves enlace,

Was set where now is the empty shrine—

(And, leaning out of a bright blue space,

As a ghost might lean from a chink of
sky,

The passionate pale lady's face—

Eyeing ever with earnest eye

And quick-turned neck at its breathless stretch,

Some one who ever is passing by—)

The Duke had sighed like the simplest wretch

In Florence, 'Youth—my dream escapes!

Will its record stay?' And he bade them fetch

Some subtle moulder of brazen shapes—
'Can the soul, the will, die out of a man Ere his body find the grave that gapes?

'John of Douay shall effect my plan, Set me on horseback here aloft, Alive, as the crafty sculptor can,

'In the very square I have crossed so oft!

That men may admire, when future suns Shall touch the eyes to a purpose soft,

'While the mouth and the brow stay brave in bronze—

Admire and say, "When he was alive, How he would take his pleasure once!"

'And it shall go hard but I contrive To listen the while and laugh in my tomb

At idleness which aspires to strive.'

So! while these wait the trump of doom,

How do their spirits pass, I wonder, Nights and days in the narrow room?

Still, I suppose, they sit and ponder What a gift life was, ages ago, Six steps out of the chapel yonder.

Only they see not God, I know, Nor all that chivalry of His,
The soldier-saints who, row on row,

Burn upward each to his point of bliss—
Since, the end of life being manifest, He had burned his way thro' the world to this.

I hear you reproach, 'But delay was
best,

For their end was a crime.'—Oh, a crime will do

As well, I reply, to serve for a test,

As a virtue golden through and through,
Sufficient to vindicate itself And prove its worth at a moment's view!

Must a game be played for the sake of pelf?

Where a button goes, 'twere an epigram

To offer the stamp of the very Guelph.
The true has no value beyond the sham:

As well the counter as coin, I submit, When your table's a hat, and your prize, a dram.

Stake your counter as boldly every
whit,

Venture as truly, use the same skill, Do your best, whether winning or losing it,

If you choose to play!—is my principle.

Let a man contend to the uttermost For his life's set prize, be it what it will!

The counter our lovers staked was lost
As surely as if it were lawful coin:
And the sin I impute to each frustrate ghost

Is, the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin, Though the end in sight was a vice, I
say.

You of the virtue, (we issue join) How strive you? De te, fabula!

PORPHYRIA'S LOVER

THE rain set early in to-night,

The sullen wind was soon awake,

It tore the elm-tops down for spite,

And did its worst to vex the lake,

I listened with heart fit to break.

When glided in Porphyria; straight

She shut the cold out and the storm,

And kneeled and made the cheerless grate

Blaze up, and all the cottage warm;

Which done, she rose, and from her form

Withdrew the dripping cloak and shawl,

And laid her soiled gloves by, untied

Her hat and let the damp hair fall,

And, last, she sat down by my side

And called me. When no voice replied,

She put my arm about her waist,

And made her smooth white shoulder bare,

And all her yellow hair displaced,
And, stooping, made my cheek lie
there,

And spread o'er all her yellow hair, Murmuring how she loved me—she Too weak, for all her heart's endeavour,

To set its struggling passion free
From pride, and vainer ties dissever,
And give herself to me for ever.

But passion sometimes would prevail, Nor could to-night's gay feast restrain

A sudden thought of one so pale For love of her, and all in vain; So, she was come through wind and rain.

Be sure I looked up at her eyes Happy and proud; at last I knew Porphyria worshipped me; surprise Made my heart swell, and still it grew

While I debated what to do.
That moment she was mine, mine,
fair,

Perfectly pure and good: I found A thing to do, and all her hair

In one long yellow string I wound Three times her little throat around,
And strangled her. No pain felt she;
I am quite sure she felt no pain.

As a shut bud that holds a bee,
I warily oped her lids; again Laughed the blue eyes without a stain.
And I untightened next the tress

About her neck; her cheek once
more Blushed bright beneath my burning kiss:

I propped her head up as before;
Only, this time my shoulder bore Her head, which droops upon it still:

The smiling rosy little head,
So glad it has its utmost will,
That all it scorned at once is fled,
And I, its love, am gained instead!
Porphyria's love: she guessed not
how

Her darling one wish would be heard.
And thus we sit together now,

And all night long we have not stirred,

And yet God has not said a word!

'CHILDE ROLAND TO THE DARK TOWER CAME'

(See Edgar's song in 'LEAR')

I

My first thought was, he lied in every
word,

That hoary cripple, with malicious
eye

Askance to watch the working of his lie

On mine, and mouth scarce able to afford

Suppression of the glee that pursed and scored

Its edge at one more victim gained thereby.

II

What else should he be set for, with his staff?

What, save to waylay with his lies, ensnare

All travellers that might find him posted there,

And ask the road? I guessed what skull-like laugh

Would break, what crutch 'gin write my epitaph

For pastime in the dusty thoroughfare,

III

If at his counsel I should turn aside Into that ominous tract which, all agree,

Hides the Dark Tower. Yet ac-quiescingly

I did turn as he pointed; neither pride Nor hope rekindling at the end desecred, So much as gladness that some end might be.

For, what with my whole world-wide wandering,

What with my search drawn out thro' years, my hope

Dwindled into a ghost not fit to cope With that obstreperous joy success would bring,—

I hardly tried now to rebuke the spring

My heart made, finding failure in its scope.

V

As when a sick man very near to death Seems dead indeed, and feels begin and end
The tears and takes the farewell of each friend,
And hears one bid the other go, draw
breath Freelier outside, (‘since all is o’er,’ he saith,
‘And the blow fallen no grieving can amend;’)

VI

While some discuss if near the other graves
Be room enough for this, and when a day
Suits best for carrying the corpse
away,
With care about the banners, scarves and staves,—
And still the man hears all, and only craves
He may not shame such tender love and stay.

VII

Thus, I had so long suffered in this quest,
Heard failure prophesied so oft, been writ
So many times among ‘The Band’—
to wit,
The knights who to the Dark Tower’s search addressed Their steps—that just to fail as they, seemed best,
And all the doubt was now—should I be fit.

VIII

So, quiet as despair, I turned from him, That hateful cripple, out of his high-
way Into the path he pointed. All the
day
Had been a dreary one at best, and
dim
Was settling to its close, yet shot one grim Red leer to see the plain catch its estrays.

IX

For mark! no sooner was I fairly
found Pledged to the plain, after a pace or two,
Than, pausing to throw backward a last view
To the safe road, ’twas gone; grey plain all round:
Nothing but plain to the horizon’s
bound.
I might go on; nought else remained to do.

X

So, on I went. I think I never saw Such starved ignoble nature; nothing throve:
For flowers—as well expect a cedar grove!
But cockle, spurge, according to their law Might propagate their kind, with none to awe, You’d think; a burr had been a treasure-trove.

XI

No! penury, inertness and grimace, In some strange sort, were the land’s portion. ‘See Or shut your eyes,’ said Nature peevishly,
‘It nothing skills: I cannot help my case:
’Tis the Last Judgment’s fire must cure this place, Calcine its clods and set my prisoners free.’

XII

If there pushed any ragged thistle-stalk
Above its mates, the head was chopped —the bents
Were jealous else. What made those holes and rents
In the dock’s harsh swarth leaves—bruised as to baulk All hope of greenness? ’tis a brute must walk Pashing their life out, with a brute’s intents.

XIII

As for the grass, it grew as scant as hair In leprosy; thin dry blades pricked the mud

Which underneath looked kneaded up with blood.

One stiff blind horse, his every bone a-stare,

Stood stupified, however he came there :
Thrust out past service from the devil's stud !

XIV

Alive ? he might be dead for aught I
know,

With that red, gaunt and colloped neck a-strain,

And shut eyes underneath the rusty mane ;

Seldom went such grotesqueness with such woe ;

I never saw a brute I hated so ;
He must be wicked to deserve such pain.

XV

I shut my eyes and turned them on my
heart.

As a man calls for wine before he fights,

I asked one draught of earlier, happier sights,

Ere fitly I could hope to play my part.
Think first, fight afterwards—the soldier's art :

One taste of the old time sets all to rights !

XVI

Not it ! I fancied Cuthbert's reddening face

Beneath its garniture of curly gold,

Dear fellow, till I almost felt him fold An arm in mine to fix me to the place, That way he used. Alas, one night's disgrace !

Out went my heart's new fire and left it cold.

XVII

Giles, then, the soul of honour—there he stands

Frank as ten years ago when knighted
first.

What honest men should dare (he said) he durst.

Good—but the scene shifts—faugh !
what hangman's hands

Pin to his breast a parchment ? his own bands

Read it. Poor traitor, spit upon and curs't !

XVIII

Better this Present than a Past like
that ;

Back therefore to my darkening path
again.

No sound, no sight as far as eye could strain.

Will the night send a howlet or a bat ?

I asked : when something on the dismal flat

Came to arrest my thoughts and change their train.

XIX

A sudden little river crossed my path
As unexpected as a serpent comes.

No sluggish tide congenial to the glooms—

This, as it frothed by, might have been a bath

For the fiend's glowing hoof—to see the wrath

Of its black eddy bespate with flakes and spumes.

XX

So petty yet so spiteful ! all along, Low scrubby alders kneeled down over it ; Drenched willows flung them headlong in a fit

Of mute despair, a suicidal throng :
The river which had done them all the wrong, Whate'er that was, rolled by, deterred no whit.

XXI

Which, while I forded,—good saints, how I feared

To set my foot upon a dead man's cheek,

Each step, or feel the spear I thrust to seek

For hollows, tangled in his hair or beard!
—It may have been a water-rat I speared,
But, ugh! it sounded like a baby's shriek.

XXII

Glad was I when I reached the other bank.
Now for a better country. Vain presage!
Who were the strugglers, what war did they wage Whose savage trample thus could pad the dank Soil to a plash? toads in a poisoned tank,
Or wild cats in a red-hot iron cage—

XXIII

The fight must so have seemed in that fell cirque.
What penned them there, with all the plan to choose?
No foot-print leading to that horrid mews, None out of it. Mad brewage set to work
Their brains, no doubt, like galley-slaves the Turk Pits for his pastime, Christians against Jews.

XXIV

And more than that—a furlong on—why, there!
What bad use was that engine for,
that wheel,
Or brake, not wheel—that harrow fit to reel
Men's bodies out like silk? with all the air
Of Tophet's tool, on earth left unaware, Or brought to sharpen its rusty teeth of steel.

XXV

Then came a bit of stubbed ground, once a wood, Next a marsh, it would seem, and now mere earth Desperate and done with; (so a fool finds mirth,

Makes a thing and then mars it, till his mood Changes and off he goes!) within a rood—Bog, clay and rubble, sand and stark black dearth.

XXVI

Now blotches rankling, coloured gay and grim, Now patches where some leanness of the soil's Broke into moss or substances like boils;
Then came some palsied oak, a cleft in
him Like a distorted mouth that splits its rim Gaping at death, and dies while it recoils.

XXVII

And just as far as ever from the end!
Nought in the distance but the evening, nought To point my footstep further! At the thought,
A great black bird, Apollyon's bosom-
friend,
Sailed past, nor beat his wide wing dragon-penned That brushed my cap—perchance the guide I sought.

XXVIII

For, looking up, aware I somehow
grew,
'Spite of the dusk, the plain had given place All round to mountains—with such name to grace Mere ugly heights and heaps now stolen in view.
How thus they had surprised me,— solve it, you!
How to get from them was no clearer case.

XXIX

Yet half I seemed to recognise some trick
Of mischief happened to me, God knows when—
In a bad dream perhaps. Here ended, then,

Progress thus way. When, in the very nick
 Of giving up, one time more, came a click As when a trap shuts—you're inside the den!

xxx

Burningly it came on me all at once,
 This was the place! those two hills on the right, Crouched like two bulls locked horn in horn in fight; While to the left, a tall scalped mountain . . . Dunce, Fool, to be dozing at the very nonce, After a life spent training for the sight!

xxxi

What in the midst lay but the Tower itself?
 The round squat turret, blind as the fool's heart, Built of brown stone, without a counterpart
 In the whole world. The tempest's mocking elf Points to the shipman thus the unseen shelf
 He strikes on, only when the timbers start.

xxxii

Not see? because of night perhaps?— Why, day
 Came back again for that! before it left,
 The dying sunset kindled through a
 cleft:
 The hulls, like giants at a hunting lay, Chin upon hand, to see the game at bay,— 'Now stab and end the creature—to the heft!'

xxxiii

Not hear? when noise was everywhere!
 it tolled Increasing like a bell. Names in my ears,
 Of all the lost adventurers my peers,— How such a one was strong, and such was bold,
 And such was fortunate, yet each of old Lost, lost! one moment knelled the woe of years.

xxxiv

There they stood, ranged along the hillsides, met
 To view the last of me, a living frame For one more picture! in a sheet of flame
 I saw them and I knew them all. And yet Dauntless the slug-horn to my lips I set,
 And blew. 'Childe Roland to the Dark Tower came.'

MEN, AND WOMEN

'TRANSCENDENTALISM'

A POEM IN TWELVE BOOKS

STOP playing, poet! may a brother
 speak?
 'Tis you speak, that's your error.
 Song's our art:
 Whereas you please to speak these naked thoughts Instead of draping them in sights and sounds.
 —True thoughts, good thoughts, thoughts fit to treasure up!
 But why such long prolusion and display,

Such turning and adjustment of the harp,
 And taking it upon your breast, at
 length,
 Only to speak dry words across its strings?
 Stark-naked thought is in request
 enough:
 Speak prose and hollo it till Europe hears!
 The six-foot Swiss tube, braced about with bark,
 Which helps the hunter's voice from Alp to Alp—Exchange our harp for that,—who hinders you?

But here's your fault; grown men want thought, you think; Thought's what they mean by verse, and seek in verse:
Boys seek for images and melody, Men must have reason—so, you aim at
men.
Quite otherwise! Objects throng our youth, 'tis true;
We see and hear and do not wonder
much:
If you could tell us what they mean,
indeed!
As Swedish Boehme never cared for plants
Until it happened, a-walking in the fields, He noticed all at once that plants could
speak,
Nay, turned with loosened tongue to talk with him.
That day the daisy had an eye indeed—Colloquised with the cowslip on such themes!
We find them extant yet in Jacob's prose.
But by the time youth slips a stage or two While reading prose in that tough book he wrote, (Collating and emendating the same And settling on the sense most to our mind)
We shut the clasps and find life's summer past.
Then, who helps more, pray, to repair our loss—
Another Boehme with a tougher book And subtler meanings, of what roses
say,— Or some stout Mage like him of Halberstadt, John, who made things Boehme wrote thoughts about?
He with a 'look you!' vents a brace of rhymes,
And in there breaks the sudden rose herself,
Over us, under, round us every side, Nay, in and out the tables and the chairs
And musty volumes, Boehme's book
and all,—

Buries us with a glory, young once
more, Pouring Heaven into this shut house of life.

So come, the harp back to your heart
again!
You are a poem, though your poem's naught.
The best of all you did before, believe,
Was your own boy's-face o'er the finer chords Bent, following the cherub at the top That points to God with his paired half-moon wings.

HOW IT STRIKES A CONTEM- PORARY

I ONLY knew one poet in my life:
And this, or something like it, was his
way.

You saw go up and down Valladolid, A man of mark, to know next time you saw.

His very serviceable suit of black Was courtly once and conscientious still,
And many might have worn it, though none did:

The cloak, that somewhat shone and showed the threads,
Had purpose, and the ruff, significance.
He walked and tapped the pavement with his cane,

Scenting the world, looking it full in
face,
An old dog, bald and blindish, at his heels.

They turned up, now, the alley by the church,
That leads no whither; now, they breathed themselves

On the main promenade just at the wrong time:

You'd come upon his scrutinizing hat, Making a peaked shade blacker than itself

Against the single window spared some house

Intact yet with its mouldered Moorish
work,—

Or else surprise the ferule of his stick

Trying the mortar's temper 'tween the chinks
Of some new shop a-building, French and fine.
He stood and watched the cobbler at his trade,
The man who slices lemons into drink,
The coffee-roaster's brasier, and the boys That volunteer to help him turn its winch.
He glanced o'er books on stalls with half an eye,
And fly-leaf ballads on the vendor's string,
And broad-edge bold-print posters by the wall.
He took such cognisance of men and
things,
If any beat a horse, you felt he saw ;
If any cursed a woman, he took note ; Yet stared at nobody,—they stared at
him,
And found, less to their pleasure than surprise,
He seemed to know them and expect as
much.
So, next time that a neighbour's tongue was loosed,
It marked the shameful and notorious fact,
We had among us, not so much a spy,
As a recording chief-inquisitor, The town's true master if the town but
knew !
We merely kept a Governor for form, While this man walked about and took account
Of all thought, said and acted, then went home,
And wrote it fully to our Lord the King Who has an itch to know things, He knows why,
And reads them in His bed-room of a
night.
Oh, you might smile ! there wanted not a touch,
A tang of . . . well, it was not wholly ease
As back into your mind the man's look came—Stricken in years a little,—such a brow His eyes had to live under !—clear as flint

On either side the formidable nose Curved, cut and coloured like an eagle's claw.
Had he to do with A.'s surprising fate ?
When altogether old B. disappeared And young C. got his mistress,—was 't our friend,
His letter to the King, that did it all ?
What paid the bloodless man for so much pains ?
Our Lord the King has favourites manifold,
And shifts His ministry some once a month ;
Our city gets new Governors at whiles,— But never word or sign, that I could hear,
Notified to this man about the streets
The King's approval of those letters conned
The last thing duly at the dead of night.
Did the man love his office ? frowned our Lord, Exhorting when none heard—' Beseech Me not !
Too far above My people,—beneath
Me !
I set the watch,—how should the people
know ?
Forget them, keep Me all the more in
mind !'
Was some such understanding 'twixt
the Two ?
I found no truth in one report at least—
That if you tracked him to his home, down lanes
Beyond the Jewry, and as clean to pace, You found he ate his supper in a room Blazing with lights, four Titians on the wall,
And twenty naked girls to change his plate !
Poor man, he lived another kind of life In that new, stuccoed, third house by the bridge,
Fresh-painted, rather smart than otherwise !
The whole street might o'erlook him as he sat,
Leg crossing leg, one foot on the dog's
back,

Playing a decent cribbage with his maid (Jacynth, you're sure her name was) o'er the cheese
And fruit, three red halves of starved winter-pears,
Or treat of radishes in April ! nine, Ten, struck the church clock, straight to bed went he.

My father, like the man of sense he
was,
Would point him out to me a dozen times ;
'St—St,' he'd whisper, 'the Corregidor !'
I had been used to think that personage Was one with lacquered breeches, lustrous belt,
And feathers like a forest in his hat, Who blew a trumpet and proclaimed the news, Announced the bull-fights, gave each church its turn,
And memorized the miracle in vogue !
He had a great observance from us boys ;
We were in error ; that was not the man.

I'd like now, yet had haply been afraid,
To have just looked, when this man came to die,
And seen who lined the clean gay garret's sides
And stood about the neat low truckle-bed,
With the heavenly manner of relieving guard.
Here had been, mark, the general-in-
chief,
Thro' a whole campaign of the world's life and death, Doing the King's work all the dim day
long,
In his old coat and up to his knees in mud, Smoked like a herring, dining on a crust,—
And, now the day was won, relieved at
once !
No further show or need for that old coat,

You are sure, for one thing ! Bless us, all the while How sprucely we are dressed out, you and I !
A second, and the angels alter that.
Well, I could never write a verse,— could you ?
Let's to the Prado and make the most of time.

ARTEMIS PROLOGIZES

I AM a Goddess of the ambrosial courts, And save by Here, Queen of Pride, surpassed
By none whose temples whiten this the
world.
Through Heaven I roll my lucid moon along ;
I shed in Hell o'er my pale people
peace ;
On Earth I, caring for the creatures,
guard
Each pregnant yellow wolf and foxbitch sleek,
And every feathered mother's callow brood,
And all that love green haunts and loneliness.
Of men, the chaste adore me, hanging crowns
Of poppies red to blackness, bell and stem,
Upon my image at Athenai here ;
And this dead Youth, Asclepios bends
above,
Was dearest to me. He, my buskined step
To follow through the wild-wood leafy
ways,
And chase the panting stag, or swift with darts
Stop the swift ounce, or lay the leopard
low,
Neglected homage to another God :
Whence Aphrodite, by no midnight smoke
Of tapers lulled, in jealousy dispatched A noisome lust that, as the gadbee stings, Possessed his stepdame Phaidra for himself

The son of Theseus her great absent spouse.
 Hippolotos exclaiming in his rage Against the fury of the Queen, she judged Life insupportable; and, pricked at heart An Amazonian stranger's race should dare To scorn her, perished by the murderous cord:
 Yet, ere she perished, blasted in a scroll
 The fame of him her swerving made not swerve.
 And Theseus read, returning, and believed,
 And exiled, in the blindness of his wrath,
 The man without a crime who, last as first,
 Loyal, divulged not to his sire the truth.
 Now Theseus from Poseidon had obtained That of his wishes should be granted
 Three,
 And one he imprecated straight—alive
 May ne'er Hippolotos reach other lands!
 Poseidon heard, ai ai! And scarce the prince Had stepped into the fixed boots of the car That give the feet a stay against the strength Of the Henetian horses, and around His body flung the reins, and urged their speed Along the rocks and shingles of the shore, When from the gaping wave a monster flung His obscene body in the coursers' path.
 These, mad with terror, as the sea-bull sprawled Wallowing about their feet, lost care of him That reared them; and the master-chariot-pole Snapping beneath their plunges like a reed, Hippolotos, whose feet were trammelled fast,
 Was yet dragged forward by the circling rein

Which either hand directed; nor they quenched
 The frenzy of their flight before each trace, Wheel-spoke and splinter of the woeful car, Each boulder-stone, sharp stub and spiny shell, Huge fish-bone wrecked and wreathed amid the sands
 On that detested beach, was bright with blood And morsels of his flesh: then fell the steeds Head-foremost, crashing in their mooned fronts, Shivering with sweat, each white eye horror-fixed.
 His people, who had witnessed all afar, Bore back the ruins of Hippolotos.
 But when his sire, too swollen with pride, rejoiced (Indomitable as a man foredoomed) That vast Poseidon had fulfilled his prayer,
 I, in a flood of glory visible, Stood o'er my dying votary and, deed
 By deed, revealed, as all took place, the truth.
 Then Theseus lay the woefullest of men,
 And worthily; but ere the death veils hid His face, the murdered prince full pardon breathed To his rash sire. Whereat Athenai wails.
 So I, who ne'er forsake my votaries, Lest in the cross-way none the honey-cake Should tender, nor pour out the dog's hot life;
 Lest at my fane the priests disconsolate Should dress my image with some faded poor Few crowns, made favours of, nor dare object Such slackness to my worshippers who turn The trusting heart and loaded hand elsewhere,
 As they had climbed Olumpus to report Of Artemis and nowhere found her throne—

I interposed : and, this eventful night, While round the funeral pyre the populace Stood with fierce light on their black robes to blind
 Each sobbing head, while yet their hair they clipped O'er the dead body of their withered prince,
 And, in his palace, Theseus prostrated On the cold hearth, his brow cold as the slab
 'Twas bruised on, groaned away the heavy grief—
 As the pyre fell, and down the cross logs crashed Sending a crowd of sparkles through the
 night,
 And the gay fire, elate with mastery, Towered like a serpent o'er the clotted jars
 Of wine, dissolving oils and frankincense,
 And splendid gums like gold,—my potency Conveyed the perished man to my retreat
 In the thrice-venerable forest here.
 And this white-bearded sage who squeezes now
 The berried plant, is Phoibos' son of fame, Asclepius, whom my radiant brother taught
 The doctrine of each herb and flower and root,
 To know their secret'st virtue and express
 The saving soul of all: who so has soothed With lavers the torn brow and murdered cheeks,
 Composed the hair and brought its gloss
 again,
 And called the red bloom to the pale skin back,
 And laid the strips and jagged ends of flesh
 Even once more, and slacked the sinew's knot
 Of every tortured limb—that now he lies As if mere sleep possessed him underneath

These interwoven oaks and pines. Oh, cheer,
 Divine presenter of the healing rod.
 Thy snake, with ardent throat and lulling eye, Twines his lithe spires around! I say, much cheer!
 Proceed thou with thy wisest pharmacies!
 And ye, white crowd of woodland sisternymphs, Ply, as the sage directs, these buds and leaves
 That strew the turf around the twain!
 While I Await, in fitting silence, the event.

AN EPISTLE

CONTAINING THE STRANGE MEDICAL EXPERIENCE OF KARSHISH, THE ARAB PHYSICIAN

KARSHISH, the picker-up of learning's crumbs,
 The not-incurious in God's handiwork (This man's-flesh He hath admirably made,
 Blown like a bubble, kneaded like a paste,
 To coop up and keep down on earth a space
 That puff of vapour from His mouth, man's soul)
 —To Abib, all-sagacious in our art, Breeder in me of what poor skill I boast, Like me inquisitive how pricks and cracks Befall the flesh through too much stress and strain, Whereby the wily vapour fain would slip Back and rejoin its source before the term,—
 And aptest in contrivance, under God, To baffle it by deftly stopping such :— The vagrant Scholar to his Sage at home Sends greeting (health and knowledge, fame with peace) Three samples of true snake-stone—rarer still,
 One of the other sort, the melon-shaped,

(But fitter, pounded fine, for charms than drugs)
And writeth now the twenty-second
time.

My journeyings were brought to Jericho :

Thus I resume. Who studious in our art Shall count a little labour unrepaid ?
I have shed sweat enough, left flesh and bone

On many a flinty furlong of this land.
Also, the country-side is all on fire With rumours of a marching hither-
ward :

Some say Vespasian cometh, some, his son.

A black lynx snarled and pricked a tufted ear ;

Lust of my blood inflamed his yellow balls :

I cried and threw my staff and he was
gone.

Twice have the robbers stripped and beaten me,

And once a town declared me for a spy,
But at the end, I reach Jerusalem, Since this poor covert where I pass the
night,

This Bethany, lies scarce the distance thence

A man with plague-sores at the third degree

Runs till he drops down dead. Thou laughest here !

'Sooth, it elates me, thus reposed and
safe,

To void the stuffing of my travel-scrip
And share with thee whatever Jewry yields.

A viscid choler is observable
In tertians, I was nearly bold to say,
And falling-sickness hath a happier cure Than our school wots of : there's a spider here

Weaves no web, watches on the ledge of tombs,

Sprinkled with mottles on an ash-grey
back ;

Take five and drop them . . . but who knows his mind,

The Syrian run-a-gate I trust this to ?
His service payeth me a sublimate

Blown up his nose to help the ailing eye.
Best wait : I reach Jerusalem at morn, There set in order my experiences, Gather what most deserves, and give thee all—

Or I might add, Judaea's gum-tragacanth

Scales off in purer flakes, shines clearer-grained,

Cracks 'twixt the pestle and the porphyry,

In fine exceeds our produce. Scalp-disease

Confounds me, crossing so with lep-rosy—

Thou hadst admired one sort I gained at Zoar—

But zeal outruns discretion. Here I
end.

Yet stay : my Syrian blinketh gratefully,

Protesteth his devotion is my price—Suppose I write what harms not, though he steal ?

I half resolve to tell thee, yet I blush,

What set me off a-writing first of all.
An itch I had, a sting to write, a tang

For, be it this town's barrenness—or e'se

The Man had something in the look of
him—

His case has struck me far more than
'tis worth.

So, pardon if—(lest presently I lose In the great press of novelty at hand

The care and pains this somehow stole
from me)

I bid thee take the thing while fresh in
mind,

Almost in sight—for, wilt thou have the
truth ?

The very man is gone from me but now Whose ailment is the subject of discourse.

Thus then, and let thy better wit help
all.

'Tis but a case of mania—subinduced By epilepsy, at the turning-point

Of trance prolonged unduly some three days,

When, by the exhibition of some drug Or spell, exorcization, stroke of art

Unknown to me and which 'twere well
to know,
The evil thing out-breaking all at once Left the man whole and sound of body
indeed,—
But, flinging, so to speak, life's gates too
wide,
Making a clear house of it too suddenly,
The first concert that entered might inscribe
Whatever it was minded on the wall So plainly at that vantage, as it were, (First come, first served) that nothing subsequent Attaineth to erase those fancy-scrawls The just-returned and new-established soul
Hath gotten now so thoroughly by
heart
That henceforth she will read or these or none.
And first—the man's own firm conviction rests
That he was dead (in fact they buried
him)
—That he was dead and then restored to life
By a Nazarene physician of his tribe :
—'Sayeth, the same bade 'Rise,' and he did rise.
'Such cases are diurnal,' thou wilt cry.
Not so this figment!—not, that such a
fume, Instead of giving way to time and health,
Should eat itself into the life of life,
As saffron tingeth flesh, blood, bones
and all !
For see, how he takes up the after-life.
The man—it is one Lazarus a Jew, Sanguine, proportioned, fifty years of age,
The body's habit wholly laudable,
As much, indeed, beyond the common health
As he were made and put aside to show.
Think, could we penetrate by any drug And bathe the wearied soul and worried flesh,
And bring it clear and fair, by three days' sleep !
Whence has the man the balm that brightens all ?

This grown man eyes the world now like a child.
Some elders of his tribe, I should premise,
Led in their friend, obedient as a sheep, To bear my inquisition. While they spoke,
Now sharply, now with sorrow,—told the case,—
He listened not except I spoke to him, But folded his two hands and let them talk, Watching the flies that buzzed : and yet no fool.
And that's a sample how his years must go.
Look if a beggar, in fixed middle-life, Should find a treasure, can he use the
same
With straitened habits and with tastes starved small,
And take at once to his impoverished
brain
The sudden element that changes
things,
That sets the undreamed-of rapture at
his hand,
And puts the cheap old joy in the scorned dust ?
Is he not such an one as moves to mirth—Warily parsimonious, when no need, Wasteful as drunkenness at undue
times ?
All prudent counsel as to what befits
The golden mean, is lost on such an one :
The man's fantastic will is the man's
law.
So here—we'll call the treasure knowledge, say,
Increased beyond the fleshly faculty—Heaven opened to a soul while yet on earth,
Earth forced on a soul's use while seeing Heaven.
The man is witless of the size, the sum,
The value in proportion of all things,
Or whether it be little or be much.
Discourse to him of prodigious armaments
Assembled to besiege his city now, And of the passing of a mule with gourds—

'Tis one ! Then take it on the other side, Speak of some trifling fact—he will gaze rapt
 With stupor at its very littleness, (Far as I see)—as if in that indeed He caught prodigious import, whole results ;
 And so will turn to us the bystanders
 In ever the same stupor (note this point)
 That we too see not with his opened eyes.
 Wonder and doubt come wrongly into play, Preposterously, at cross purposes.
 Should his child sicken unto death,— why, look
 For scarce abatement of his cheerfulness, Or pretermission of his daily craft—
 While a word, gesture, glance, from that same child At play or in the school or laid asleep,
 Will startle him to an agony of fear, Exasperation, just as like ! demand
 The reason why—'tis but a word,' object—
 'A gesture'—he regards thee as our lord
 Who lived there in the pyramid alone,
 Looked at us, dost thou mind ?—when being young We both would unadvisedly recite Some charm's beginning, from that book of his,
 Able to bid the sun throb wide and burst
 All into stars, as suns grown old are wont.
 Thou and the child have each a veil alike Thrown o'er your heads, from under which ye both Stretch your blind hands and trifle with a match Over a mine of Greek fire, did ye know !
 He holds on firmly to some thread of life—(It is the life to lead perforceably) Which runs across some vast distracting orb Of glory on either side that meagre thread,

Which, conscious of, he must not enter yet—
 The spiritual life around the earthly life !
 The law of that is known to him as this—
 His heart and brain move there, his feet stay here.
 So is the man perplex with impulses Sudden to start off crosswise, not straight on, Proclaiming what is Right and Wrong across,
 And not along, this black thread through the blaze—
 'It should be' balked by 'here it cannot be'
 And off the man's soul springs into his face
 As if he saw again and heard again His sage that bade him 'Rise' and he did rise.
 Something, a word, a tick of the blood within Admonishes—then back he sinks at once To ashes, that was very fire before,
 In sedulous recurrence to his trade Whereby he earneth him the daily bread ;
 And studiously the humbler for that pride, Professedly the faultier that he knows God's secret, while he holds the thread of life.
 Indeed the especial marking of the man Is prone submission to the Heavenly will—Seeing it, what it is, and why it is.
 'Sayeth, he will wait patient to the last For that same death which must restore his being To equilibrium, body loosening soul Divorced even now by premature full growth :
 He will live, nay, it pleaseth him to live
 So long as God please, and just hew God please.
 He even seeketh not to please God more (Which meaneth, otherwise) than as God please.
 Hence I perceive not he affects to preach

The doctrine of his sect whate'er it be, Make proselytes as madmen thirst to
do :

How can he give his neighbour the real ground,

His own conviction ? ardent as he is—Call his great truth a lie, why, still the old

'Be it as God please' reassureth him.
I probed the sore as thy disciple should—

'How, beast,' said I, 'this stolid carelessness

Sufficeth thee, when Rome is on her march

To stamp out like a little spark thy town,

Thy tribe, thy crazy tale and thee at
once ?

He merely looked with his large eyes on me.

The man is apathetic, you deduce ?

Contrariwise he loves both old and young,

Able and weak—affects the very brutes And birds—how say I ? flowers of the field—

As a wise workman recognises tools

In a master's workshop, loving what they make.

Thus is the man as harmless as a lamb :
Only impatient, let him do his best,

At ignorance and carelessness and sin—An indignation which is promptly
curbed :

As when in certain travels I have feigned

To be an ignoramus in our art

According to some preconceived design, And happened to hear the land's practitioners

Steeped in conceit sublimed by ignorance,

Prattle fantastically on disease,

Its cause and cure—and I must hold my peace !

Thou wilt object—why have I not ere
this

Sought out the sage himself, the Nazarene

Who wrought this cure, inquiring at the source,

Conferring with the frankness that befits ?

Alas ! it grieveth me, the learned leech Perished in a tumult many years ago, Accused,—our learning's fate,—of wizardry,

Rebellion, to the setting up a rule And creed prodigious as described to
me.

His death which happened when the earthquake fell

(Prefiguring, as soon appeared, the loss To occult learning in our lord the sage
Who lived there in the pyramid alone)
Was wrought by the mad people—that's their wont—

On vain recourse, as I conjecture it, To his tried virtue, for miraculous help—

How could he stop the earthquake ?
That's their way !

The other imputations must be lies :
But take one—though I loathe to give it thee,

In mere respect to any good man's fame !

(And after all, our patient Lazarus Is stark mad ; should we count on what he says ?

Perhaps not : though in writing to a leech

'Tis well to keep back nothing of a case.)

This man so cured regards the curer
then,

As—God forgive me—who but God
himself,

Creator and Sustainer of the world, That came and dwelt in flesh on it awhile !

—'Sayeth that such an One was born and lived,

Taught, healed the sick, broke bread at his own house,

Then died, with Lazarus by, for aught
I know,

And yet was . . . what I said nor choose repeat,

And must have so avouched himself, in
fact,

In hearing of this very Lazarus

Who saith—but why all this of what he saith ?

Why write of trivial matters, things of price Calling at every moment for remark ?
 I noticed on the margin of a pool Blue-flowering borage, the Aleppo sort, Aboundeth, very nitrous. It is strange !

Thy pardon for this long and tedious case, Which, now that I review it, needs must seem Unduly dwelt on, prolixly set forth !
 Nor I myself discern in what is writ Good cause for the peculiar interest And awe indeed this man has touched me with.
 Perhaps the journey's end, the weariness Had wrought upon me first. I met him thus :
 I crossed a ridge of short sharp broken hills Like an old lion's cheek-teeth. Out there came A moon made like a face with certain spots Multiform, manifold and menacing :
 Then a wind rose behind me. So we met In this old sleepy town at unaware,
 The man and I. I send thee what is writ.
 Regard it as a chance, a matter risked
 To this ambiguous Syrian—he may lose, Or steal, or give it thee with equal good.
 Jerusalem's repose shall make amends
 For time this letter wastes, thy time and mine ;
 Till when, once more thy pardon and farewell !

The very God ! think, Abib ; dost thou think ?
 So, the All-Great, were the All-Loving too—So, through the thunder comes a human voice Saying, ' O heart I made, a heart beats here !
 Face, My hands fashioned, see it in Myself.
 Thou hast no power nor may'st conceive of Mine,

But love I gave thee, with Myself to love,
 And thou must love Me who have died for thee !'
 The madman saith He said so : it is strange.

PICTOR IGNOTUS

[FLORENCE, 15—]

I COULD have painted pictures like that youth's Ye praise so. How my soul springs up ! No bar Stayed me—ah, thought which saddens while it soothes !
 —Never did fate forbid me, star by star,
 To outburst on your night with all my gift Of fires from God : nor would my flesh have shrunk From seconding my soul, with eyes uplift
 And wide to heaven, or, straight like thunder, sunk To the centre, of an instant ; or around Turned calmly and inquisitive, to scan
 The licence and the limit, space and bound, Allowed to Truth made visible in Man.
 And, like that youth ye praise so, all I saw,
 Over the canvas could my hand have flung,
 Each face obedient to its passion's law,
 Each passion clear proclaimed without a tongue ;
 Whether Hope rose at once in all the blood,
 A-tiptoe for the blessing of embrace,
 Or Rapture drooped the eyes, as when her brood Pull down the nesting dove's heart to its place ;
 Or Confidence lit swift the forehead up,
 And locked the mouth fast, like a castle braved,— O human faces, hath it spilt, my cup ?
 What did ye give me that I have not saved ?

Nor will I say I have not dreamed (how well !) Of going—I, in each new picture,—
 forth,
 As, making new hearts beat and bosoms
 swell,
 To Pope or Kaiser, East, West, South or North, Bound for the calmly satisfied great State,
 Or glad aspiring little burgh, it went, Flowers cast upon the car which bore the freight, Through old streets named afresh from its event, Till it reached home, where learned Age should greet My face, and Youth, the star not yet distinct
 Above his hair, lie learning at my feet !— Oh, thus to live, I and my picture, linked
 With love about, and praise, till life should end,
 And then not go to heaven, but linger
 here,
 Here on my earth, earth's every man
 my friend,—
 The thought grew frightful, 'twas so wildly dear !
 But a voice changed it ! Glimpses of such sights Have scared me, like the revels through a door
 Of some strange House of Idols at its rites ;
 This world seemed not the world it was before :
 Mixed with my loving trusting ones there trooped
 . . . Who summoned those cold faces that begun
 To press on me and judge me ? Though I stooped Shrinking, as from the soldiery a nun, They drew me forth, and spite of me . . .
 enough !
 These buy and sell our pictures, take and give,
 Count them for garniture and household-stuff,
 And where they live our pictures needs must live

And see their faces, listen to their prate, Partakers of their daily pettiness, Discussed of,—‘ This I love, or this I
 hate,
 This likes me more, and this affects me less ! ’
 Wherefore I chose my portion. If at whiles
 My heart sinks, as monotonous I paint
 These endless cloisters and eternal aisles With the same series, Virgin, Babe and Saint,
 With the same cold, calm, beautiful regard,
 At least no merchant traffics in my
 heart ;
 The sanctuary's gloom at least shall ward Vain tongues from where my pictures stand apart :
 Only prayer breaks the silence of the shrine
 While, blackening in the daily candle-
 smoke,
 They moulder on the damp wall's travertine,
 'Mid echoes the light footstep never woke.
 So die, my pictures ; surely, gently die !
 Oh, youth, men praise so,—holds their praise its worth ?
 Blown harshly, keeps the trump its golden cry ?
 Tastes sweet the water with such specks of earth ?

FRA LIPPO LIPPI

I AM poor brother Lippo, by your leave !
 You need not clap your torches to my
 face.
 Zooks, what's to blame ? you think you see a monk !
 What, it's past midnight, and you go the rounds,
 And here you catch me at an alley's end Where sportive ladies leave their doors ajar ?
 The Carmine's my cloister : hunt it up, Do,—hurry out, if you must show your zeal, Whatever rat, there, haps on his wrong
 hole,

And nip each softling of a wee white mouse, Weke, weke, that's crept to keep him company!
 Aha, you know your betters? Then, you'll take Your hand away that's fiddling on my throat, And please to know me likewise. Who am I?
 Why, one, sir, who is lodging with a friend
 Three streets off—he's a certain . . . how d'ye call?
 Master—a . . . Cosimo of the Medici,
 In the house that caps the corner. Boh! you were best!
 Remember and tell me, the day you're hanged,
 How you affected such a gullet's-gripe!
 But you, sir, it concerns you that your knaves Pick up a manner nor discredit you. Zooks, are we pilchards, that they sweep the streets And count fair prize what comes into their net?
 He's Judas to a tittle, that man is! Just such a face! why, sir, you make amends.
 Lord, I'm not angry! Bid your hang-dogs go Drink out this quarter-florin to the health Of the munificent House that harbours me (And many more beside, lads! more beside!) And all's come square again. I'd like his face—His, elbowing on his comrade in the door
 With the pike and lantern,—for the slave that holds John Baptist's head a-dangle by the hair With one hand ('look you, now,' as who should say)
 And his weapon in the other, yet unwiped!
 It's not your chance to have a bit of chalk,

A wood-coal or the like? or you should see!
 Yes, I'm the painter, since you style me so.
 What, brother Lippo's doings, up and down,
 You know them and they take you? like enough!
 I saw the proper twinkle in your eye—
 'Tell you, I liked your looks at very first.
 Let's sit and set things straight now, hip to haunch.
 Here's spring come, and the nights one makes up bands
 To roam the town and sing out carnival,
 And I've been three weeks shut within my mew,
 A-painting for the great man, saints and saints And saints again. I could not paint all night—Ouf! I leaned out of window for fresh air.
 There came a hurry of feet and little feet,
 A sweep of lute-strings, laughs, and whiffs of song,— Flower o' the broom,
Take away love, and our earth is a tomb!
Flower o' the quince,
I let Lisa go, and what good's in life since?
Flower o' the thyme—and so on. Round they went.
 Scarce had they turned the corner when a titter Like the skipping of rabbits by moonlight,—three slim shapes—
 And a face that looked up . . . zooks, sir, flesh and blood, That's all I'm made of! Into shreds it went, Curtain and counterpane and coverlet,
 All the bed-furniture—a dozen knots,
 There was a ladder! down I let myself,
 Hands and feet, scrambling somehow, and so dropped,
 And after them. I came up with the fun Hard by Saint Laurence, hail fellow, well met,— Flower o' the rose,

If I've been merry, what matter who knows?

And so as I was stealing back again
To get to bed and have a bit of sleep Ere I rise up to-morrow and go work On Jerome knocking at his poor old
breast

With his great round stone to subdue the flesh,

You snap me of the sudden. Ah, I see!
Though your eye twinkles still, you shake your head—

Mine's shaved,—a monk, you say—the sting's in that!

If Master Cosimo announced himself, Mum's the word naturally; but a monk!
Come, what am I a beast for? tell us,
now!

I was a baby when my mother died And father died and left me in the street.

I starved there, God knows how, a year or two

On fig skins, melon-parings, rinds and shucks,

Refuse and rubbish. One fine frosty
day

My stomach being empty as your hat, The wind doubled me up and down I
went.

Old Aunt Lapaccia trussed me with one
hand,

(Its fellow was a stinger as I knew)
And so along the wall, over the bridge, By the straight cut to the convent. Six words, there,

While I stood munching my first bread that month:

'So, boy, you're minded,' quoth the good fat father

Wiping his own mouth, 'twas refection-
time,—

'To quit this very miserable world?
Will you renounce'... The mouthful of bread? thought I;

By no means! Brief, they made a monk of me;

I did renounce the world, its pride and greed,

Palace, farm, villa, shop and banking-
house,

Trash, such as these poor devils of Medici

Have given their hearts to—all at eight years old.

Well, sir, I found in time, you may be
sure,

'Twas not for nothing—the good belly-ful,

The warm serge and the rope that goes all round,

And day-long blessed idleness beside!
'Let's see what the urchin's fit for'— that came next.

Not overmuch their way, I must confess.

Such a to-do! they tried me with their books.

Lord, they'd have taught me Latin in pure waste!

Flower o' the clove,

All the Latin I construe is, 'amo' I love!
But, mind you, when a boy starves in the streets

Eight years together, as my fortune was, Watching folk's faces to know who will fing

The bit of half-stripped grape-bunch he desires,

And who will curse or kick him for his pains—

Which gentleman processional and fine, Holding a candle to the Sacrament

Will wink and let him lift a plate and catch

The droppings of the wax to sell again, Or holla for the Eight and have him whipped,—

How say I?—nay, which dog bites, which lets drop

His bone from the heap of offal in the street,—

Why, soul and sense of him grow sharp alike,

He learns the look of things, and none the less

For admonitions from the hunger-pinch.

I had a store of such remarks, be sure, Which, after I found leisure, turned to use:

I drew men's faces on my copy-books, Scrawled them within the antiphonary's
marge,

Joined legs and arms to the long music-notes,

Found nose and eyes and chin for A.s and B.s, And made a string of pictures of the
 world Betwixt the ins and outs of verb and noun, On the wall, the bench, the door. The monks looked black.
 'Nay,' quoth the Prior, 'turn him out, d'ye say?
 In no wise. Lose a crow and catch a lark.
 What if at last we get our man of parts,
 We Carmelites, like those Camaldolese And Preaching Friars, to do our church up fine
 And put the front on it that ought to
 be!'
 And hereupon they bade me daub away.
 Thank you! my head being crammed, their walls a blank, Never was such prompt disemburden-
 ing.
 First, every sort of monk, the black and
 white,
 I drew them, fat and lean: then, folks at church,
 From good old gossips waiting to confess
 Their cribs of barrel-droppings, candle-ends,—
 To the breathless fellow at the altar-
 foot,
 Fresh from his murder, safe and sitting
 there
 With the little children round him in a row
 Of admiration, half for his beard and half
 For that white anger of his victim's son Shaking a fist at him with one fierce
 arm, Signing himself with the other because of Christ (Whose sad face on the cross sees only
 this
 After the passion of a thousand years) Till some poor girl, her apron o'er her
 head
 Which the intense eyes looked through, came at eve
 On tip-toe, said a word, dropped in a loaf,
 Her pair of earrings and a bunch of flowers
 The brute took growling, prayed, and then was gone.
 I painted all, then cried 'tis ask and have—Choose, for more's ready!—laid the ladder flat,
 And showed my covered bit of cloister-
 wall.
 The monks closed in a circle and praised loud Till checked,—taught what to see and not to see,
 Being simple bodies,—'that's the very
 man!
 Look at the boy who stoops to pat the dog!
 That woman's like the Prior's niece who comes To care about his asthma: it's the
 life!
 But there my triumph's straw-fire flared and fumed—
 Their betters took their turn to see and
 say:
 The Prior and the learned pulled a face
 And stopped all that in no time.
 'How? what's here?
 Quite from the mark of painting, bless us all!
 Faces, arms, legs and bodies like the
 true
 As much as pea and pea! it's devil'sgame!
 Your business is not to catch men with show,
 With homage to the perishable clay,
 But lift them over it, ignore it all, Make them forget there's such a thing as flesh.
 Your business is to paint the souls of
 men—
 Man's soul, and it's a fire, smoke . . .
 no it's not . . .
 It's vapour done 'up like a new-born babe—(In that shape when you die it leaves your mouth)
 It's . . . well, what matters talking, it's the soul!
 Give us no more of body than shows
 soul!

Here's Giotto, with his Saint a-praising
 God,
 That sets you praising,—why not stop with him?
 Why put all thoughts of praise out of our heads
 With wonder at lines, colours, and what not?
 Paint the soul, never mind the legs and arms!
 Rub all out, try at it a second time.
 Oh, that white smallish female with the breasts, She's just my niece . . . Herodias, I would say,— Who went and danced and got men's heads cut off—
 Have it all out! Now, is this sense,
 I ask?
 A fine way to paint soul, by painting body
 So ill, the eye can't stop there, must go further
 And can't fare worse! Thus, yellow does for white When what you put for yellow's simply black,
 And any sort of meaning looks intense When all beside itself means and looks nought.
 Why can't a painter lift each foot in turn,
 Left foot and right foot, go a double
 step,
 Make his flesh liker and his soul more like,
 Both in their order? Take the prettiest face,
 The Prior's niece . . . patron-saint—is it so pretty
 You can't discover if it means hope, fear, Sorrow or joy? won't beauty go with these?
 Suppose I've made her eyes all right and blue,
 Can't I take breath and try to add life's flash,
 And then add soul and heighten them threefold?
 Or say there's beauty with no soul at
 all—
 (I never saw it—put the case the same—)

If you get simple beauty and nought
 else,
 You get about the best thing God invents,— That's somewhat. And you'll find the soul you have missed, Within yourself when you return Him
 thanks,
 'Rub all out!' Well, well, there's my life, in short.
 And so the thing has gone on ever since.
 I'm grown a man no doubt, I've broken bounds—
 You should not take a fellow eight years
 old
 And make him swear to never kiss the girls.
 I'm my own master, paint now as I
 please—
 Having a friend, you see, in the Corner-
 house!
 Lord, it's fast holding by the rings in front—
 Those great rings serve more purposes than just
 To plant a flag in, or tie up a horse!
 And yet the old schooling sticks, the old grave eyes
 Are peeping o'er my shoulder as I work, The heads shake still—'It's Art's decline, my son!
 You're not of the true painters, great and old; Brother Angelico's the man, you'll find;
 Brother Lorenzo stands his single peer: Fag on at flesh, you'll never make the third!
Flower o' the pinc, You keep your mistr . . . manners, and I'll stick to mine!
 I'm not the third, then: bless us, they must know!
 Don't you think they're the likeliest
 to know, They with their Latin? so, I swallow my rage, Clench my teeth, suck my lips in tight, and paint
 To please them—sometimes do, and sometimes don't,
 For, doing most, there's pretty sure to
 come

A turn, some warm eve finds me at my saints—

A laugh, a cry, the business of the world—

(Flower o' the peach, Death for us all, and his own life for each !)

And my whole soul revolves, the cup runs over,

The world and life 's too big to pass for
a dream,

And I do these wild things in sheer despite,

And play the fooleries you catch me at,
In pure rage ! the old mill-horse, out at grass

After hard years, throws up his stiff heels so,

Although the miller does not preach to
him

The only good of grass is to make chaff.
What would men have ? Do they like grass or no—

May they or mayn't they ? all I want 's the thing

Settled for ever one way : as it is,
You tell too many lies and hurt yourself.
You don't like what you only like too
much,

You do like what, if given you at your
word,

You find abundantly detestable.
For me, I think I speak as I was taught—I always see the Garden and God there A-making man's wife—and, my lesson learned,

The value and significance of flesh,
I can't unlearn ten minutes afterwards.

You understand me : I'm a beast, I
know.

But see, now—why, I see as certainly As that the morning-star 's about to shine,

What will hap some day. We've a youngster here

Comes to our convent, studies what I do, Slouches and stares and lets no atom drop—

His name is Guidi—he'll not mind the monks—

They call him Hulking Tom, he lets them talk—

He picks my practice up—he'll paint apace,

I hope so—though I never live so long,
I know what 's sure to follow. You be judge !

You speak no Latin more than I, belike—

However, you're my man, you've seen
the world

—The beauty and the wonder and the power,

The shapes of things, their colours, lights and shades,

Changes, surprises,—and God made it
all !

—For what ? do you feel thankful, ay
or no,

For this fair town's face, yonder river's line,

The mountain round it and the sky
above,

Much more the figures of man, woman,
child,

These are the frame to ? What 's it all about ? *

To be passed over, despised ? or dwelt upon,

Wondered at ? oh, this last of course !— you say.

But why not do as well as say,—paint
these

Just as they are, careless what comes of
it ?

God's works—paint anyone, and count it crime

To let a truth slip. Don't object, 'His works

Are here already—nature is complete : Suppose you reproduce her—(which you can't)

There 's no advantage ! you must beat her, then.

For, don't you mark, we're made so that we love

First when we see them painted, things we have passed

Perhaps a hundred times nor cared to
see ;

And so they are better, painted—better
to us,

Which is the same thing. Art was given for that—

God uses us to help each other so,

Lending our minds out. Have you noticed, now, Your cullion's hanging face? A bit of chalk,
And trust me but you should, though!
How much more,
If I drew higher things with the same truth!
That were to take the Prior's pulpit-place, Interpret God to all of you! oh, oh,
It makes me mad to see what men shall do
And we in our graves! This world's no blot for us, Nor blank—it means intensely, and means good:
To find its meaning is my meat and drink.
'Ay, but you don't so instigate to prayer!'
Strikes in the Prior: 'when your meaning's plain
It does not say to folks—remember matins, Or, mind you fast next Friday.' Why, for this What need of art at all? A skull and bones, Two bits of stick nailed cross-wise, or, what's best,
A bell to chime the hour with, does as well.
I painted a Saint Laurence six months since At Prato, splashed the fresco in fine style:
'How looks my painting, now the scaffold's down?'
I ask a brother: 'Hugely,' he returns—
'Already not one phiz of your three slaves That turn the Deacon off his toasted side, But's scratched and prodded to our heart's content,
The pious people have so eased their own When coming to say prayers there in a rage:
We get on fast to see the bricks beneath.
Expect another job this time next year,

For pity and religion grow i' the crowd—
Your painting serves its purpose!' Hang the fools!

—That is—you'll not mistake an idle word Spoke in a huff by a poor monk, God wot, Tasting the air this spicy night which turns
The unaccustomed head like Chianti wine!
Oh, the church knows! don't misreport me, now!
It's natural a poor monk out of bounds Should have his apt word to excuse himself:
And hearken how I plot to make amends.
I have bethought me: I shall paint a piece
. . . There's for you! Give me six months, then go, see Something in Sant' Ambrogio's! Bless the nuns!
They want a cast of my office. I shall paint God in the midst, Madonna and her babe, Ringed by a bowery, flowery angel-brood, Lilies and vestments and white faces, sweet As puff on puff of grated orris-root When ladies crowd to church at mid-summer.
And then in the front, of course a saint or two—Saint John, because he saves the Florentines, Saint Ambrose, who puts down in black and white
The convent's friends and gives them a long day,
And Job, I must have him there past mistake,
The man of Uz, (and Us without the z, Painters who need his patience.) Well, all these Secured at their devotions, up shall come Out of a corner when you least expect,
As one by a dark stair into a great light,

Music and talking, who but Lippo ! I !— Mazed, motionless and moon-struck—I'm the man !
 Back I shrink—what is this I see and
 hear ?
 I, caught up with my monk's things by mistake,
 My old serge gown and rope that goes
 all round,
 I, in this presence, this pure company !
 Where 's a hole, where 's a corner for escape ?
 Then steps a sweet angelic slip of a thing Forward, puts out a soft palm—' Not so fast !'
 —Addresses the celestial presence,
 ' nay—
 He made you and devised you, after all, Though he 's none of you ! Could Saint John there, draw—His camel-hair make up a painting-brush ?
 We come to brother Lippo for all that, Iste perfecit opus ! So, all smile—I shuffle sideways with my blushing
 face
 Under the cover of a hundred wings Thrown like a spread of kirtles when you're gay
 And play hot cockles, all the doors being shut, Till, wholly unexpected, in there pops
 The hothead husband ! Thus I scuttle off
 To some safe bench behind, not letting go
 The palm of her, the little lily thing That spoke the good word for me in the nick,
 Like the Prior's niece . . . Saint Lucy,
 I would say.
 And so all 's saved for me, and for the church
 A pretty picture gained. Go, six months hence !
 Your hand, sir, and good-bye : no lights, no lights !
 The street 's hushed, and I know my own way back, Don't fear me ! There 's the grey beginning. Zooks !

ANDREA DEL SARTO

(CALLED 'THE FAULTLESS PAINTER')
 But do not let us quarrel any more, No, my Lucrezia ; bear with me for
 once :
 Sit down and all shall happen as you wish.
 You turn your face, but does it bring your heart ?
 I'll work then for your friend's friend, never fear,
 Treat his own subject after his own
 way,
 Fix his own time, accept too his own price,
 And shut the money into this small
 hand When next it takes mine. Will it ?
 tenderly ?
 Oh, I'll content him,—but to-morrow,
 Love !
 I often am much wearier than you think,
 This evening more than usual, and it seems As if—forgive now—should you let me sit Here by the window with your hand in
 mine
 And look a half hour forth on Fiesole, Both of one mind, as married people
 use,
 Quietly, quietly, the evening through,
 I might get up to-morrow to my work Cheerful and fresh as ever. Let us try.
 To-morrow how you shall be glad for
 this !
 Your soft hand is a woman of itself,
 And mine the man's bared breast she curls inside.
 Don't count the time lost, either ; you must serve For each of the five pictures we require—
 It saves a model. So ! keep looking
 so—
 My serpentine beauty, rounds on rounds !
 —How could you ever prick those perfect ears,
 Even to put the pearl there ! oh, so
 sweet—

My face, my moon, my everybody's moon, Which everybody looks on and calls his,
And, I suppose, is looked on by in turn, While she looks—no one's: very dear, no less!
You smile? why, there's my picture ready made.
There's what we painters call our harmony!
A common greyness silvers everything,—
All in a twilight, you and I alike —You, at the point of your first pride in me (That's gone you know),—but I, at every point;
My youth, my hope, my art, being all toned down
To yonder sober pleasant Fiesole.
There's the bell clinking from the chapel-top;
That length of convent-wall across the
way
Holds the trees safer, huddled more inside;
The last monk leaves the garden; days decrease
And autumn grows, autumn in everything.
Eh? the whole seems to fall into a shape
As if I saw alike my work and self
And all that I was born to be and do, A twilight-piece. Love, we are in God's hand.
How strange now, looks the life He makes us lead!
So free we seem, so fettered fast we are!
I feel He laid the fetter: let it lie!
This chamber for example—turn your
head—
All that's behind us! you don't understand
Nor care to understand about my art, But you can hear at least when people
speak;
And that cartoon, the second from the door
—It is the thing, Love! so such things should be—
Behold Madonna, I am bold to say.
I can do with my pencil what I know,

What I see, what at bottom of my heart
I wish for, if I ever wish so deep—Do easily, too—when I say perfectly I do not boast, perhaps: yourself are judge
Who listened to the Legate's talk last
week,
And just as much they used to say in France.
At any rate 'tis easy, all of it, No sketches first, no studies, that's long past—
I do what many dream of all their lives —Dream? strive to do, and agonise
to do,
And fail in doing. I could count twenty such On twice your fingers, and not leave this town,
Who strive—you don't know how the others strive To paint a little thing like that you smeared Carelessly passing with your robes afloat,— Yet do much less, so much less, Someone says, (I know his name, no matter) so much less!
Well, less is more, Lucrezia! I am judged.
There burns a truer light of God in
them,
In their vexed, beating, stuffed and stopped-up brain, Heart, or whatever else, than goes on to prompt
This low-pulsed forthright craftsman's hand of mine.
Their works drop groundward, but themselves, I know, Reach many a time a heaven that's shut to me, Enter and take their place there sure
enough,
Though they come back and cannot tell
the world.
My works are nearer heaven, but I sit
here.
The sudden blood of these men! at a
word—
Praise them, it boils, or blame them, it boils too.

I, painting from myself and to myself, Know what I do, am unmoved by men's blame

Or their praise either. Somebody remarks

Morello's outline there is wrongly traced,

His hue mistaken—what of that? or else,

Rightly traced and well ordered—what of that?

Speak as they please, what does the mountain care?

Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,

Or what's a Heaven for? all is silver-grey

Placid and perfect with my art—the worse!

I know both what I want and what might gain—

And yet how profitless to know, to sigh
'Had I been two, another and myself,

Our head would have overlooked the world!' No doubt.

Yonder's a work, now, of that famous youth

The Urbinate who died five years ago.
(Tis copied, George Vasari sent it me.)

Well, I can fancy how he did it all, Pouring his soul, with kings and popes

to see,
Reaching, that Heaven might so replenish him,

Above and through his art—for it gives
way;

That arm is wrongly put—and there
again—

A fault to pardon in the drawing's lines,
Its body, so to speak: its soul is right,

He means right—that, a child may understand.

Still, what an arm! and I could alter it.
But all the play, the insight and the stretch—

Out of me! out of me! And wherefore
out?

Had you enjoined them on me, given me soul,

We might have risen to Rafael, I and
you.

Nay, Love, you did give all I asked, I
think—

More than I merit, yes, by many times.
But had you—oh, with the same perfect
brow,

And perfect eyes, and more than perfect
mouth,

And the low voice my soul hears, as a bird

The fowler's pipe, and follows to the snare—

Had you, with these the same, but brought a mind!

Some women do so. Had the mouth there urged

'God and the glory! never care for gain.
The Present by the Future, what is

that?
Live for fame, side by side with Angelo—Rafael is waiting. Up to God all three!'

I might have done it for you. So it seems—

Perhaps not. All is as God over-rules.
Beside, incentives come from the soul's

self;
The rest avail not. Why do I need
you?

What wife had Rafael, or has Angelo?
In this world, who can do a thing, will

not—
And who would do it, cannot, I perceive:

Yet the will's somewhat—somewhat, too, the power—

And thus we half-men struggle. At the
end,

God, I conclude, compensates, punishes.
'Tis safer for me, if the award be strict.

That I am something underrated here, Poor this long while, despised, to speak the truth.

I dared not, do you know, leave home
all day,

For fear of chancing on the Paris lords
The best is when they pass and lool

aside;
But they speak sometimes; I must bea-
it all.

Well may they speak! That Francis that first time,

And that long festal year at Fontaine bleau!

I surely then could sometimes leave the
ground,

Put on the glory, Rafael's daily wear, In that humane great monarch's golden look,—

One finger in his beard or twisted curl Over his mouth's good mark that made the smile,

One arm about my shoulder, round my neck,

The jingle of his gold chain in my ear, I painting proudly with his breath on
me,

All his court round him, seeing with his
eyes,

Such frank French eyes, and such a fire of souls

Profuse, my hand kept plying by those hearts,—

And, best of all, this, this, this face
beyond,

This in the background, waiting on my work,

To crown the issue with a last reward !
A good time, was it not, my kingly
days ?

And had you not grown restless—but I know—

'Tis done and past ; 'twas right, my instinct said ;

Too live the life grew, golden and not grey,

And I'm the weak-eyed bat no sun should tempt

Out of the grange whose four walls make his world.

How could it end in any other way ?
You called me, and I came home to your heart.

The triumph was, to have ended there ;
then if

I reached it ere the triumph, what is lost ?

Let my hands frame your face in your hair's gold,

You beautiful Lucrezia that are mine !
'Rafael did this, Andrea painted that—

The Roman's is the better when you
pray,

But still the other's Virgin was his wife—

Men will excuse me. I am glad to judge

Both pictures in your presence ; clearer grows

My better fortune, I resolve to think.
For, do you know, Lucrezia, as God lives,

Said one day Angelo, his very self,
To Rafael . . . I have known it all these years . . .

(When the young man was flaming out his thoughts

Upon a palace-wall for Rome to see, Too lifted up in heart because of it)

'Friend, there's a certain sorry little scrub

Goes up and down our Florence, none cares how,

Who, were he set to plan and execute As you are, pricked on by your popes and kings,

Would bring the sweat into that brow of yours !'

To Rafael's !—And indeed the arm is wrong.

I hardly dare—yet, only you to see, Give the chalk here—quick, thus the line should go !

Ay, but the soul ! he's Rafael ! rub it
out !

Still, all I care for, if he spoke the truth, (What he ? why, who but Michael Angelo ?

Do you forget already words 'like those ?)

If really there was such a chance, so
lost,—

Is, whether you're—not grateful—but more pleased.

Well, let me think so. And you smile
indeed !

This hour has been an hour ! Another
smile ?

If you would sit thus by me every night I should work better, do you comprehend ?

I mean that I should earn more, give you more.

See, it is settled dusk now ; there's a star ;

Morello's gone, the watch-lights show
the wall,

The cue-owls speak the name we call them by.

Come from the window, Love,—come in, at last,

Inside the melancholy little house

We built to be so gay with. God is just.
 King Francis may forgive me. Oft at nights
 When I look up from painting, eyes tired out,
 The walls become illumined, brick from brick Distinct, instead of mortar, fierce bright
 gold,
 That gold of his I did cement them
 with !
 Let us but love each other. Must you
 go ?
 That Cousin here again ? he wants outside ?
 Must see you—you, and not with me ?
 Those loans ?
 More gaming debts to pay ? you smiled for that ?
 Well, let smiles buy me ! have you more to spend ?
 While hand and eye and something of a heart Are left me, work's my ware, and what's it worth ?
 I'll pay my fancy. Only let me sit
 The grey remainder of the evening out, Idle, you call it, and muse perfectly How I could paint, were I but back in France,
 One picture, just one more—the Virgin's
 face,
 Not your's this time ! I want you at my side
 To hear them—that is, Michael Angelo—Judge all I do and tell you of its worth.
 Will you ? To-morrow, satisfy your
 friend.
 I take the subjects for his corridor, Finish the portrait out of hand—there,
 there,
 And throw him in another thing or two If he demurs ; the whole should prove
 enough
 To pay for this same Cousin's freak.
 Beside,
 What's better and what's all I care
 about,
 Get you the thirteen scudi for the ruff.
 Love, does that please you ? Ah, but what does he,
 The Cousin ! what does he to please you
 more ?

I am grown peaceful as old age to-
 night.
 I regret little, I would change still less.
 Since there my past life lies, why alter
 it ?
 The very wrong to Francis !—it is true
 I took his coin, was tempted and complied,
 And built this house and sinned, and all is said.
 My father and my mother died of want.
 Well, had I riches of my own ? you see How one gets rich ! Let each one bear his lot.
 They were born poor, lived poor, and poor they died :
 And I have laboured somewhat in my
 time
 And not been paid profusely. Some good son Paint my two hundred pictures—let him try !
 No doubt, there's something strikes a balance. Yes, You loved me quite enough, it seems to-night.
 This must suffice me here. What would one have ?
 In Heaven, perhaps, new chances, one more chance—Four great walls in the New Jerusalem Meted on each side by the angel's reed, For Leonard, Rafael, Angelo and me
 To cover—the three first without a wife, While I have mine ! So—still they overcome Because there's still Lucrezia,—as I choose.
 Again the Cousin's whistle ! Go, my
 Love.

THE BISHOP ORDERS HIS TOMB AT SAINT PRAXED'S CHURCH

[ROME, 15—.]

VANITY, saith the preacher, vanity !
 Draw round my bed : is Anselm keeping
 back ?
 Nephews—sons mine . . . ah God, I know not ! Well—She, men would have to be your mother
 once,

Old Gandolf envied me, so fair she was !
 What's done is done, and she is dead
 beside,
 Dead long ago, and I am Bishop since,
 And as she died so must we die ourselves,
 And thence ye may perceive the world 's a dream.
 Life, how and what is it ? As here I lie
 In this state-chamber, dying by degrees, Hours and long hours in the dead night,
 I ask
 ' Do I live, am I dead ? ' Peace, peace seems all.
 Saint Praxed's ever was the church for peace ;
 And so, about this tomb of mine. I fought
 With tooth and nail to save my niche, ye know :
 —Old Gandolf cozened me, despite my
 care ;
 Shrewd was that snatch from out the corner South
 He graced his carrion with, God curse
 the same !
 Yet still my niche is not so cramped but thence
 One sees the pulpit o' the epistle-side,
 And somewhat of the choir, those silent seats,
 And up into the aery dome where live Theangels, and a sunbeam's sure to lurk :
 And I shall fill my slab of basalt there,
 And 'neath my tabernacle take my rest,
 With those nine columns round me, two and two,
 The odd one at my feet where Anselm
 stands :
 Peach-blossom marble all, the rare, the ripe
 As fresh-poured red wine of a mighty pulse —Old Gandolf with his paltry onion-
 stone,
 Put me where I may look at him !
 True peach, Rosy and flawless : how I earned the prize !
 Draw close : that conflagration of my church
 —What then ? So much was saved if aught were missed !

My sons, ye would not be my death ?
 Go dig
 The white-grape vineyard where the oil-press stood,
 Drop water gently till the surface sinks,
 And if ye find . . . Ah, God I know not,
 I ! . . .
 Bedded in store of rotten figleaves soft,
 And corded up in a tight olive-frail,
 Some lump, ah God, of lapis lazuli, Big as a Jew's head cut off at the nape, Blue as a vein o'er the Madonna's
 breast . . .
 Sons, all have I bequeathed you, villas,
 all,
 That brave Frascati villa with its bath, So, let the blue lump poise between my knees,
 Like God the Father's globe on both His hands
 Ye worship in the Jesu Church so gay, For Gandolf shall not choose but see and burst !
 Swift as a weaver's shuttle fleet our
 years :
 Man goeth to the grave, and where is he ?
 Did I say basalt for my slab, sons ?
 Black—
 'Twas ever antique-black I meant !
 How else Shall ye contrast my frieze to come beneath ?
 The bas-relief in bronze ye promised me, Those Pans and Nymphs ye wot of, and perchance
 Some tripod, thyrsus, with a vase or so,
 The Saviour at his sermon on the mount, Saint Praxed in a glory, and one Pan Ready to twitch the Nymph's last garment off,
 And Moses with the tables . . . but I
 know Ye mark me not ! What do they whisper thee, Child of my bowels, Anselm ? Ah, ye
 hope
 To revel down my villas while I gasp Bricked o'er with beggar's mouldy
 travertine
 Which Gandolf from his tomb-top chuckles at !
 Nay, boys, ye love me—all of jasper,
 then !

'Tis jasper ye stand pledged to, lest I grieve
 My bath must needs be left behind, alas!
 One block, pure green as a pistachio-nut,
 There 's plenty jasper somewhere in the
 world—
 And have I not Saint Praxed's ear to pray
 Horses for ye, and brown Greek manuscripts,
 And mistresses with great smooth marbly limbs?
 —That 's if ye carve my epitaph aright, Choice Latin, picked phrase, Tully's every word,
 No gaudy ware like Gandolf's second line—Tully, my masters? Ulpian serves his
 need!
 And then how I shall lie through centuries,
 And hear the blessed mutter of the mass,
 And see God made and eaten all day
 long,
 And feel the steady candle-flame, and taste
 Good strong thick stupefying incense-
 smoke!
 For as I lie here, hours of the dead
 night,
 Dying in state and by such slow degrees, I fold my arms as if they clasped a crook,
 And stretch my feet forth straight as stone can point,
 And let the bedclothes for a mortcloth
 drop Into great laps and folds of sculptor's-
 work:
 And as yon tapers dwindle, and strange thoughts
 Grow, with a certain humming in my ears,
 About the life before I lived this life,
 And this life too, Popes, Cardinals and Priests, Saint Praxed at his sermon on the mount,
 Your tall pale mother with her talking
 eyes,

And new-found agate urns as fresh as
 day,
 And marble's language, Latin pure, discreet,
 —Aha, ELUCESCEBAT quoth our friend?
 No Tully, said I, Ulpian at the best!
 Evil and brief hath been my pilgrimage.
 All lapis, all, sons! Else I give the Pope
 My villas: will ye ever eat my heart?
 Ever your eyes were as a lizard's quick, They glitter like your mother's for my
 soul,
 Or ye would heighten my impoverished frieze, Piece out its starved design, and fill my vase
 With grapes, and add a vizor and a Term,
 And to the tripod ye would tie a lynx That in his struggle throws the thyrsus
 down,
 To comfort me on my entablature Whereon I am to lie till I must ask 'Do I live, am I dead?' There, leave me, there!
 For ye have stabbed me with ingratitude
 To death—ye wish it—God, ye wish it!
 Stone—
 Gritstone, a-crumble! Clammy squares which sweat
 As if the corpse they keep were oozing
 through—
 And no more lapis to delight the world!
 Well, go! I blessye. Fewertapersthere, But in a row: and, going, turn your backs
 —Ay, like departing altar-ministrants, And leave me in my church, the church for peace,
 That I may watch at leisure if he leers—Old Gandolf, at me, from his onion-
 stone,
 As still he-envied me, so fair she was!

BISHOP BLOUGRAM'S APOLOGY

No more wine? then we'll push back chairs and talk.
 A final glass for me, though: cool, i'
 faith!
 We ought to have our Abbey baek, you
 see.

It's different, preaching in basilicas,
And doing duty in some masterpiece Like this of brother Pugin's, bless his heart!

I doubt if they're half baked, those chalk rosettes, Ciphers and stucco-twiddlings everywhere;

It's just like breathing in a lime-kiln:
eh?

These hot long ceremonies of our church
Cost us a little—oh, they pay the price, You take me—amply pay it! Now, we'll talk.

So, you despise me, Mr. Gigadibs.

No deprecation,—nay, I beg you, sir!

Beside 'tis our engagement: don't you
know,

I promised, if you'd watch a dinner out, We'd see truth dawn together?—truth that peeps

Over the glass's edge when dinner's done,
And body gets its sop and hold its noise And leaves soul free a little. Now's the time—

'Tis break of day! You do despise me
then.

And if I say, 'despise me,'—never
fear—

I know you do not in a certain sense—
Not in my arm-chair for example:
here,

I well imagine you respect my place (Status, entourage, worldly circumstance)

Quite to its value—very much indeed —Are up to the protesting eyes of you In pride at being seated here for once—You'll turn it to such capital account!
When somebody, through years and years to come,

Hints of the bishop,—names me—that's enough—

'Blougram? I knew him'—(into it you slide)

'Dined with him once, a Corpus Christi
Day,

All alone, we two—he's a clever man—
And after dinner,—why, the wine you
know,—

Oh, there was wine, and good!—what with the wine...

'Faith, we began upon all sorts of talk!
He's no bad fellow, Blougram—he had seen

Something of mine he relished—some review—

He's quite above their humbug in his
heart,

Half-said as much, indeed—the thing's his trade—

I warrant, Blougram's sceptical at times—

How otherwise? I liked him, I confess!

Che che, my dear sir, as we say at Rome,

Don't you protest now! It's fair give and take;

You have had your turn and spoken your home-truths:

The hand's mine now, and here you follow suit.

Thus much conceded, still the first fact stays—

You do despise me; your ideal of life Is not the bishop's—you would not be I—

You would like better to be Goethe, now, Or Buonaparte—or, bless me, lower
still,

Count D'Orsay,—so you did what you preferred,

Spoke as you thought, and, as you cannot help,

Believed or disbelieved, no matter what,
So long as on that point, whate'er it
was,

You loosed your mind, were whole and sole yourself.

—That, my ideal never can include, Upon that element of truth and worth Never be based! for say they make me
Pope

(They can't—suppose it for our argument)

Why, there I'm at my tether's end—I've reached

My height, and not a height which pleases you.

An unbelieving Pope won't do, you say.
It's like those eerie stories nurses tell,
Of how some actor played Death on a stage

With pasteboard crown, sham orb and tinselled dart,
And called himself the monarch of the
world,
Then, going in the tire-room afterward Because the play was done, to shift
himself,

Got touched upon the sleeve familiarly
The moment he had shut the closet door By Death himself. Thus God might touch a Pope

At unawares, ask what his baubles mean,

And whose part he presumed to play
just now ?

Best be yourself, imperial, plain and
true !

So, drawing comfortable breath again, You weigh and find whatever more or less

I boast of my ideal realized
Is nothing in the balance when opposed To your ideal, your grand simple life,
Of which you will not realize one jot.

I am much, you are nothing ; you would be all,

I would be merely much—you beat me
there.

No, friend, you do not beat me,—hearken
why.

The common problem, yours, mine, every one's,

Is not to fancy what were fair in life Provided it could be,—but, finding first What may be, then find how to make it fair

Up to our means—a very different
thing !

No abstract intellectual plan of life
Quite irrespective of life's plainest laws, But one, a man, who is man and nothing
more,

May lead within a world which (by your leave)

Is Rome or London—not Fool's-paradise.

Embellish Rome, idealize away, Make Paradise of London if you can,
You're welcome, nay, you're wise.

A simile !

We mortals cross the ocean of this world
Each in his average cabin of a life—

The best's not big, the worst yields elbow-room.

Now for our six months' voyage—how prepare ?

You come on shipboard with a lands-man's list

Of things he calls convenient—so they are !

An India screen is pretty furniture,
A piano-forte is a fine resource,
All Balzac's novels occupy one shelf,
The new edition fifty volumes long ;
And little Greek books, with the funny type

They get up well at Leipsic, fill the next—

Go on ! slabbed marble, what a bath it makes !

And Parma's pride, the Jerome, let us add !

'Twere pleasant could Correggio's fleeting glow

Hang full in face of one where'er one roams,

Since he more than the others brings with him

Italy's self,—the marvellous Modenese !
Yet 'twas not on your list before,

perhaps.

—Alas ! friend, here's the agent . . .
is't the name ?

The captain, or whoever's master
here—

You see him screw his face up ; what's his cry

Ere you set foot on shipboard ? 'Six feet square !'

If you won't understand what six feet
mean,

Compute and purchase stores accordingly—

And if in pique because he overhauls Your Jerome, piano and bath, you come on board

Bare—why, you cut a figure at the first While sympathetic landmen see you
off ;

Not afterwards, when, long ere half seas
over,

You peep up from your utterly naked boards

Into some snug and well-appointed berth,

Like mine, for instance (try the cooler jug—

Put back the other, but don't jog the ice)

And mortified you mutter 'Well and good—

He sits enjoying his sea-furniture—

'Tis stout and proper, and there's store of it,

Though I've the better notion, all agree,

Of fitting rooms up! hang the carpenter, Neat ship-shape fixings and contrivances—

I would have brought my Jerome, frame and all!

And meantime you bring nothing: never mind—

You've proved your artist-nature: what you don't,

You might bring, so despise me, as I say.

Now come, let's backward to the starting-place.

See my way: we're two college friends, suppose—

Prepare together for our voyage, then, Each note and check the other in his work,— Here's mine, a bishop's outfit; criticize!

What's wrong? why won't you be a bishop too?

Why, first, you don't believe, you don't and can't,

(Not stately, that is, and fixedly

And absolutely and exclusively)

In any revelation called divine.

No dogmas nail your faith—and what remains

But say so, like the honest man you are?

First, therefore, overhaul theology!

Nay, I too, not a fool, you please to think,

Must find believing every whit as hard,

And if I do not frankly say as much,

The ugly consequence is clear enough.

Now, wait, my friend: well, I do not believe—

If you'll accept no faith that is not fixed,

Absolute and exclusive, as you say.

(You're wrong—I mean to prove it in due time.)

Meanwhile, I know where difficulties lie

I could not, cannot solve, nor ever shall,

So give up hope accordingly to solve—

(To you, and over the wine). Our dogmas then

With both of us, though in unlike degree,

Missing full credence—overboard with them!

I mean to meet you on your own premise—

Good, there go mine in company with yours!

And now what are we? unbelievers both,

Calm and complete, determinately fixed

To-day, to-morrow, and for ever, pray?

You'll guarantee me that? Not so, I think!

In no-wise! all we've gained is, that belief,

As unbelief before, shakes us by fits, Confounds us like its predecessor.

Where's

The gain? how can we guard our unbelief,

Make it bear fruit to us?—the problem here.

Just when we are safest, there's a sunset-touch,

A fancy from a flower-bell, some one's death,

A chorus-ending from Euripides,—

And that's enough for fifty hopes and fears

As old and new at once as Nature's self,

To rap and knock and enter in our soul, Take hands and dance there, a fantastic ring,

Round the ancient idol, on his base again,—

The grand Perhaps! we look on helplessly,—

There the old misgivings, crooked questions are—

This good God,—what He could do, if He would,

Would, if He could—then must have done long since:

If so, when, where, and how? some way must be,—

Once feel about, and soon or late you hit Some sense, in which it might be, after all.

Why not, 'The Way, the Truth, the Life?'

—That way

Over the mountain, which who stands upon

Is apt to doubt if it be indeed a road;
While if he views it from the waste itself,

Up goes the line there, plain from base to brow,

Not vague, mistakeable! what's a break or two

Seen from the unbroken desert either side?

And then (to bring in fresh philosophy)
What if the breaks themselves should prove at last

The most consummate of contrivances
To train a man's eye, teach him what is faith?

And so we stumble at truth's very test!
All we have gained then by our unbelief
Is a life of doubt diversified by faith,
For one of faith diversified by doubt:
We called the chess-board white,—we call it black.

'Well,' you rejoin, 'the end's no worse, at least We've reason for both colours on the board:

Why not confess, then, where I drop the faith

And you the doubt, that I'm 'as right as you?'

Because, friend, in the next place, this being so,

And both things even,—faith and unbelief

Left to a man's choice,—we'll proceed a step,

Returning to our image, which I like.

A man's choice, yes—but a cabin-passenger's—

The man made for the special life of the world—

Do you forget him? I remember though!

Consult our ship's conditions and you find

One and but one choice suitable to all,
The choice, that you unluckily prefer, Turning things topsy-turvy—they or it Going to the ground. Belief or unbelief

Bears upon life, determines its whole course,

Begins at its beginning. See the world Such as it is,—you made it not, nor I; I mean to take it as it is,—and you Not so you'll take it,—though you get nought else.

I know the special kind of life I like,
What suits the most my idiosyncrasy, Brings out the best of me and bears me fruit

In power, peace, pleasantness and length of days.

I find that positive belief does this For me, and unbelief, no whit of this.

—For you, it does, however?—that we'll try!

'Tis clear, I cannot lead my life, at least,

Induce the world to let me peaceably, Without declaring at the outset,

'Friends,
I absolutely and peremptorily

Believe!'—I say, faith is my waking life.

One sleeps, indeed, and dreams at intervals,

We know, but waking's the main point with us,

And my provision's for life's waking part.

Accordingly, I use heart, head and hands

All day, I build, scheme, study and make friends;

And when night overtakes me, down I lie,

Sleep, dream a little, and get done with it,

The sooner the better, to begin afresh.
What's midnight's doubt before the dayspring's faith?

You, the philosopher, that disbelieve,
That recognize the night, give dreams their weight—

To be consistent you should keep your bed,

Abstain from healthy acts that prove you a man,
 For fear you drowse perhaps at unawares !
 And certainly at night you'll sleep and dream,
 Live through the day and bustle as you
 please.
 And so you live to sleep as I to wake,
 To unbelieve as I to still believe ?
 Well, and the common sense of the world calls you Bed-ridden,—and its good things come
 to me.
 Its estimation, which is half the fight,
 That 's the first cabin-comfort I secure—The next . . . but you perceive with half an eye !
 Come, come, it's best believing, if we may—
 You can't but own that !

Next, concede again—
 If once we choose belief, on all accounts
 We can't be too decisive in our faith, Conclusive and exclusive in its terms, To suit the world which gives us the good things.
 In every man's career are certain points Whereon he dares not be indifferent ;
 The world detects him clearly, if he dares,
 As baffled at the game, and losing life.
 He may care little or he may care much For riches, honour, pleasure, work, repose,
 Since various theories of life and life's Success are extant which might easily Comport with either estimate of these ;
 And whoso chooses wealth or poverty, Labour or quiet, is not judged a fool Because his fellows would choose otherwise :
 We let him choose upon his own account
 So long as he's consistent with his choice.
 But certain points, left wholly to himself,
 When once a man has arbitrated on,
 We say he must succeed there or go hang.
 Thus, he should wed the woman he loves
 most

Or needs most, whatsoe'er the love or need—
 For he can't wed twice. Then, he must avouch
 Or follow, at the least, sufficiently,
 The form of faith his conscience holds the best,
 Whate'er the process of conviction
 was :
 For nothing can compensate his mistake On such a point, the man himself being
 judge—
 He cannot wed twice, nor twice lose his
 soul.

Well now, there 's one great form of Christian faith
 I happened to be born in—which to teach
 Was given me as I grew up, on all
 hands,
 As best and readiest means of living by ;
 The same on examination being proved
 The most pronounced moreover, fixed, precise
 And absolute form of faith in the whole world—
 Accordingly, most potent of all forms For working on the world. Observe,
 my friend,
 Such as you know me, I am free to say,
 In these hard latter days which hamper
 one,
 Myself, by no immoderate exercise Of intellect and learning, and the tact To let external forces work for me, —Bid the street's stones be bread and they are bread, Bid Peter's creed, or, rather, Hilde-brand's,
 Exalt me o'er my fellows in the world And make my life an ease and joy and
 pride,
 It does so,—which for me 's a great point gained,
 Who have a soul and body that exact
 A comfortable care in many ways.
 There 's power in me and will to dominate Which I must exercise, they hurt me
 else :
 In many ways I need mankind's respect,

Obedience, and the love that's born of
fear :

While at the same time, there's a taste
I have,

A toy of soul, a titillating thing, Refuses to digest these dainties crude.

The naked life is gross till clothed upon :
I must take what men offer, with a

grace
As though I would not, could I help it,
take !

An uniform I wear though over-rich—Something imposed on me, no choice of
mine ;

No fancy-dress worn for pure fancy's
sake

And despicable therefore ! now men kneel

And kiss my hand—of course the Church's hand.

Thus I am made, thus life is best for me,
And thus that it should be I have procured ;

And thus it could not be another way,
I venture to imagine.

You'll reply—

So far my choice, no doubt, is a success ;
But were I made of better elements,

With nobler instincts, purer tastes, like
you,

I hardly would account the thing
success

Though it did all for me I say.

But, friend,

We speak of what is—not of what might
be,

And how 'twere better if 'twere otherwise.

I am the man you see here plain
enough—

Grant I'm a beast, why, beasts must lead beasts' lives !

Suppose I own at once to tail and claws—

The tailless man exceeds me ; but being tailed

I'll lash out lion-fashion, and leave apes To dock their stump and dress their haunches up.

My business is not to remake myself, But make the absolute best of what God made.

Or—our first simile—though you proved me doomed

To a viler berth still, to the steerage-
hole,

The sheep-pen or the pig-stye, I should strive

To make what use of each were possible ;
And as this cabin gets upholstery,

That hutch should rustle with sufficient straw.

But, friend, I don't acknowledge quite so fast

I fail of all your manhood's lofty tastes Enumerated so complacently,

On the mere ground that you forsooth can find

In this particular life I choose to lead No fit provision for them. Can you not ?

Say you, my fault is I address myself To grosser estimators than I need ?

And that's no way of holding up the
soul—

Which, nobler, needs men's praise perhaps, yet knows

One wise man's verdict outweighs all the fools',—

Wouldlikethetwo, but, forced to choose, takes that ?

I pine among my million imbeciles (You think) aware some dozen men of sense

Eye me and know me, whether I believe

In the last winking Virgin, as I vow,
And am a fool, or disbelieve in her

And am a knave,—approve in neither
case,

Withhold their voices though I look their way :

Like Verdi when, at his worst opera's
end

(The thing they gave at Florence,— what's its name ?)

While the mad houseful's plaudits near out-bang

His orchestra of salt-box, tongs and bones,

He looks through all the roaring and the wreaths

Where sits Rossini patient in his stall.

Nay, friend, I meet you with an answer here—

That even your prime men who appraise their kind Are men still, catch a wheel within a wheel,
 See more in a truth than the truth's simple self,
 Confuse themselves. You see lads walk the street
 Sixty the minute; what 'sto note in that?
 You see one lad o'erstride a chimney-stack;
 Him you must watch—he's sure to fall, yet stands!
 Our interest's on the dangerous edge of things.
 The honest thief, the tender murderer,
 The superstitious atheist, demireps That love and save their souls in new French books—
 We watch while these in equilibrium keep
 The giddy line midway: one step
 aside,
 They're classed and done with. I, then, keep the line Before your sages,—just the men to shrink
 From the gross weights, coarse scales, and labels broad You offer their refinement. Fool or knave?
 Why needs a bishop be a fool or knave When there's a thousand diamond weights between?
 So I enlist them. Your picked Twelve, you'll find,
 Profess themselves indignant, scandalized
 At thus being held unable to explain How a superior man who disbelieves May not believe as well: that's Schelling's way!
 It's through my coming in the tail of
 time,
 Nicking the minute with a happy tact.
 Had I been born three hundred years ago
 They'd say, 'What's strange? Blou-gram of course believes;'
 And, seventy years since, 'disbelieves of course.'
 But now, 'He may believe; and yet,
 and yet

How can he?'—All eyes turn with interest.
 Whereas, step off the line on either
 side—
 You, for example, clever to a fault, The rough and ready man that write apace,
 Read somewhat seldomer, think perhaps even less—You disbelieve! Who wonders and
 who cares?
 Lord So-and-so—his coat bedropt with wax,
 All Peter's chains about his waist, his
 back Brave with the needlework of Noodledom, Believes! Again, who wonders and
 who cares?
 But I, the man of sense and learning
 too,
 The able to think yet act, the this, the
 that,
 I, to believe at this late time of day!
 Enough; you see, I need not fear contempt.
 —Except it's yours! admire me as these may,
 You don't. But whom at least do you admire?
 Present your own perfections, your ideal,
 Your pattern man for a minute—oh,
 make haste?
 Is it Napoleon you would have us grow?
 Concede the means; allow his head and
 hand, (A large concession, clever as you are) Good!—In our common primal element
 Of unbelief (we can't believe, you
 know—
 We're still at that admission, recollect) Where do you find—apart from, towering o'er
 The secondary temporary aims Which satisfy the gross tastes you despise—
 Where do you find his star?—his crazy trust God knows through what or in what?
 it's alive

And shines and leads him and that's all we want.
Have we aught in our sober night shall point Such ends as his were, and direct the means Of working out our purpose straight as his,
Nor bring a moment's trouble on success
With after-care to justify the same ?
—Be a Napoleon and yet disbelieve !
Why, the man's mad, friend, take his light away.
What's the vague good of the world for which you'd dare
With comfort to yourself blow millions
up ?
We neither of us see it ! we do see The blown-up millions—spatter of their brains
And writhing of their bowels and so
forth,
In that bewildering entanglement Of horrible eventualities Past calculation to the end of time !
Can I mistake for some clear word of
God
(Which were my ample warrant for it
all)
His puff of hazy instincts, idle talk,
'The State, that's I,' quack-nonsense about crowns,
And (when one beats the man to his last hold)
A vague idea of setting things to rights, Policing people efficaciously, More to their profit, most of all to his
own ;
The whole to end that dismallest of ends By an Austrian marriage, cant to us the Church,
And resurrection of the old régime.
Would I, who hope to live a dozen
years,
Fight Austerlitz for reasons such and
such ?
No : for, concede me but the merest
chance Doubt may be wrong—there's judgment, life to come !
With just that chance, I dare not.
Doubt proves right ?

This present life is all ?—you offer me
Its dozen noisy years without a chance That wedding an Arch-Duchess, wearing lace,
And getting called by divers new-coined names,
Will drive off ugly thoughts and let me dine,
Sleep, read and chat in quiet as I like !
Therefore, I will not.

Take another case ;
Fit up the cabin yet another way.
What say you to the poet's ? shall we write Hamlets, Othellos—make the world our
own,
Without a risk to run of either sort ?
I can't !—to put the strongest reason
first.
'But try,' you urge, 'the trying shall suffice ;
The aim, if reached or not, makes great the life :
Try to be Shakespeare, leave the rest to
fate !'
Spare my self-knowledge—there's no fooling me !
If I prefer remaining my poor self,
I say so not in self-dispraise but praise.
If I'm a Shakespeare, let the well
alone—
Why should I try to be what now I am ?
If I'm no Shakespeare, as too probable,—
His power and consciousness and self-delight
And all we want in common, shall I find—Trying for ever ? while on points of taste Wherewith, to speak it humbly, he
and I
Are dowered alike—I'll ask you, I or he,
Which in our two lives realizes most ?
Much, he imagined—somewhat, I possess.
He had the imagination ; stick to that Let him say 'In the face of my soul's works
Your world is worthless and I touch it
not

Lest I should wrong them'—I'll withdraw my plea.

But does he say so ? look upon his life !
Himself, who only can, gives judgment there.

He leaves his towers and gorgeous palaces

To build the trimmest house in Stratford town ;

Saves money, spends it, owns the worth of things,

Giulio Romano's pictures, Dowland's lute ;

Enjoys a show, respects the puppets, too,

And none more, had he seen its entry once,

Than 'Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal.'

Why then should I who play that personage,

The very Pandulph Shakespeare's fancy made,

Be told that had the poet chanced to start

From where I stand now (some degree like mine

Being just the goal he ran his race to reach)

He would have run the whole race back, forsooth,

And left being Pandulph, to begin write plays ?

Ah, the earth's best can be but the earth's best !

Did Shakespeare live, he could but sit at home

And get himself in dreams the Vatican, Greek busts, Venetian paintings, Roman walls,

And English books, none equal to his own,

Which I read, bound in gold, (he never did).

—Terni and Naples' bay and Gothard's top—

Eh, friend ? I could not fancy one of these—

But, as I pour this claret, there they are—

I've gained them—crossed St. Gothard last July

With ten mules to the carriage and a bed

Slung inside ; is my hap the worse for that ?

We want the same things, Shakespeare and myself,

And what I want, I have : he, gifted more,

Could fancy he too had it when he liked,

But not so thoroughly that if fate allowed

He would not have it also in my sense. We play one game. I send the ball aloft

No less adroitly that of fifty strokes

Scarce five go o'er the wall so wide and high

Which sends them back to me : I wish and get.

He struck balls higher and with better skill,

But at a poor fence level with his head, And hit—his Stratford house, a coat of arms,

Successful dealings in his grain and wool,—

While I receive Heaven's incense in my nose

And style myself the cousin of Queen Bess.

Ask him, if this life's all, who wins the game ?

Believe—and our whole argument breaks up.

Enthusiasm's the best thing, I repeat ;

Only, we can't command it ; fire and life

Are all, dead matter's nothing, we agree :

And be it a mad dream or God's very breath,

The fact's the same,—belief's fire once in us,

Makes of all else mere stuff to show itself :

We penetrate our life with such a glow

As fire lends wood and iron—this turns steel,

That burns to ash—all's one, fire proves its power

For good or ill, since men call flare success.

But paint a fire, it will not therefore burn.

Light one in me, I'll find it food
enough!

Why, to be Luther—that's a life to lead,

Incomparably better than my own.

He comes, reclaims God's earth for God, he says,

Sets up God's rule again by simple
means,

Re-opens a shut book, and all is done.

He flared out in the flaring of mankind;

Such Luther's luck was—how shall such be mine?

If he succeeded, nothing's left to do:

And if he did not altogether—well, Strauss is the next advance. All

Strauss should be

I might be also. But to what result?
He looks upon no future: Luther did.

What can I gain on the denying side?
Ice makes no conflagration. State the facts,

Read the text right, emancipate the

world—
The emancipated world enjoys itself

With scarce a thank-you—Blougram told it first

It could not owe a farthing,—not to him More than Saint Paul! 'twould press its pay, you think?

Then add there's still that plaguy hundredth chance Strauss may be wrong. And so a risk is run—For what gain? not for Luther's, who secured A real Heaven in his heart throughout

his life,
Supposing death a little altered things.

'Ay, but since really you lack faith,' you cry,

'You run the same risk really on all sides,'

In cool indifference as bold unbelief.
As well be Strauss as swing 'twixt Paul and him.

It's not worth having, such imperfect

faith,
Nor more available to do faith's work

Than unbelief like mine. Whole faith, or none!

Softly, my friend! I must dispute that point.

Once own the use of faith, I'll find you
faith.

We're back on Christian ground. You call for faith:

I show you doubt, to prove that faith exists.

The more of doubt, the stronger faith,
I say,

If faith overcomes doubt. How I know it does?

By life and man's free will, God gave
for that!

To mould life as we choose it, shows our
choice:

That's our one act, the previous work's
His own.

You criticize the soil? it reared this tree—

This broad life and whatever fruit it bears!

What matter though I doubt at every pore,

Head-doubts, heart-doubts, doubts at my fingers' ends,

Doubts in the trivial work of every day, Doubts at the very bases of my soul

In the grand moments when she probes herself—

If finally I have a life to show,
The thing I did, brought out in evidence Against the thing done to me underground

By Hell and all its brood, for aught I
know?

I say, whence sprang this? shows it faith or doubt?

All's doubt in me; where's break of faith in this?

It is the idea, the feeling and the love God means mankind should strive for and show forth, Whatever be the process to that end,—

And not historic knowledge, logic sound,
And metaphysical acumen, sure!

'What think ye of Christ,' friend?
when all's done and said,

Like you this Christianity or not?
It may be false, but will you wish it

true?
Has it your vote to be so if it can?

Trust you an instinct silenced long ago

That will break silence and enjoin you love	Feels God a moment, ichors o'er the place,
What mortified philosophy is hoarse, And all in vain, with bidding you despise ?	Plays on and grows to be a man like us. With me, faith means perpetual un- belief
If you desire faith—then you've faith enough :	Kept quiet like the snake 'neath Michael's foot
What else seeks God—nay, what else seek ourselves ?	Who stands calm just because he feels it writhe.
You form a notion of me, we'll suppose, On hearsay ; it's a favourable one :	Or, if that's too ambitious,—here's my box—
'But still,' (you add) 'there was no such good man,	I need the excitation of a pinch Threatening the torpor of the inside- nose
Because of contradictions in the facts. One proves, for instance, he was born in Rome,	Nigh on the imminent sneeze that never comes.
This Blougram—yet throughout the tales of him	'Leave it in peace' advise the simple folk—
I see he figures as an Englishman.'	Make it aware of peace by itching-fits, Say I—let doubt occasion still more faith !
Well, the two things are reconcileable. But would I rather you discovered that, Subjoining—' Still, what matter though they be ?	You'll say, once all believed, man, woman, child,
Blougram concerns me nought, born here or there.'	In that dear middle-age these noodles praise.
Pure faith indeed—you know not what you ask !	How you'd exult if I could put you back
Naked belief in God the Omnipotent, Omniscient, Omnipresent, sears too much	Six hundred years, blot out cosmogony, Geology, ethnology, what not, (Greek endings with the little passing- bell
The sense of conscious creatures to be borne.	That signifies some faith's about to die)
It were the seeing Him, no flesh shall dare.	And set you square with Genesis again,—
Some think, Creation's meant to show Him forth :	When such a traveller told you his last news,
I say, it's meant to hide Him all it can, And that's what all the blessed Evil's for.	He saw the ark a-top of Ararat But did not climb there since 'twas getting dusk
Its use in Time is to environ us, Our breath, our drop of dew, with shield enough	And robber-bands infest the mountain's foot !
Against that sight till we can bear its stress.	How should you feel, I ask, in such an age,
Under a vertical sun, the exposed brain And lidless eye and disemprisoned heart Less certainly would wither up at once Than mind, confronted with the truth of Him.	How act ? As other people felt and did ;
But time and earth case-harden us to live ; The feeblest sense is trusted most ; the child	With soul more blank than this decan- ter's knob, Believe—and yet lie, kill, rob, fornicate Full in belief's face, like the beast you'd be !
	No, when the fight begins within himself,

A man's worth something. God stoops o'er his head, Satan looks up between his feet—both tug—He's left, himself, in the middle: the soul wakes And grows. Prolong that battle through his life!
Never leave growing till the life to
come!
Here, we've got callous to the Virgin's winks
That used to puzzle people whole-somely—
Men have outgrown the shame of being fools.
What are the laws of Nature, not to bend
If the Church bid them?—brother Newman asks.
Up with the Immaculate Conception,
then—
On to the rack with faith!—is my advice.
Will not that hurry us upon our knees, Knocking our breasts, "It can't be—yet it shall!
Who am I, the worm, to argue with my Pope?
Low things confound the high things!
and so forth.
That's better than acquitting God with
grace
As some folks do. He's tried—no case is proved,
Philosophy is lenient—He may go!

You'll say—the old system's not so obsolete

But men believe still: ay, but who and
where?

King Bomba's lazzaroni foster yet
The sacred flame, so Antonelli writes;
But even of these, what ragamuffin-saint Believes God watches him continually, As he believes in fire that it will burn, Or rain that it will drench him? Break fire's law,

Sin against rain, although the penalty Be just a singe or soaking? No, he smiles;

Those laws are laws that can enforce themselves.

The sum of all is—yes, my doubt is great,
My faith's still greater—then my faith's enough,
I have read much, thought much, experienced much,
Yet would die rather than avow my
fear

The Naples' liquefaction may be false, When set to happen by the palace-clock

According to the clouds or dinner-time.
I hear you recommend, I might at least Eliminate, declassify my faith Since I adopt it; keeping what I must And leaving what I can—such points as this!

I won't—that is, I can't throw one
away.

Supposing there's no truth in what I said

About the need of trials to man's faith, Still, when you bid me purify the same,
To such a process I discern no end, Clearing off one excrescence to see two;
There's ever a next in size, now grown as big,

That meets the knife—I cut and cut
again!

First cut the Liquefaction, what comes
last

But Fichte's clever cut at God Himself?

Experimentalize on sacred things!

I trust nor hand nor eye nor heart nor brain

To stop betimes: they all get drunk alike.

The first step, I am master not to take.

You'd find the cutting-process to your taste

As much as leaving growths of lies unpruned,

Nor see more danger in it, you retort.

Your taste's worth mine; but my taste proves more wise

When we consider that the steadfast
hold

On the extreme end of the chain of faith

Gives all the advantage, makes the difference,

With the rough purblind mass we seek to rule.

We are their lords, or they are free of us
Just as we tighten or relax that hold.
So, other matters equal, we'll revert To the first problem—which, if solved my way

And thrown into the balance, turns the scale—

How we may lead a comfortable life, How suit our luggage to the cabin's size.

Of course you are remarking all this
time

How narrowly and grossly I view life, Respect the creature-comforts, care to rule

The masses, and regard complacently
'The cabin,' in our old phrase! Well, I do.

I act for, talk for, live for this world
now,

As this world calls for action, life and talk—

No prejudice to what next world may prove,

Whose new laws and requirements, my best pledge

To observe then, is that I observe these
now,

Shall do hereafter what I do meanwhile.

Let us concede (gratuitously though) Next life relieves the soul of body, yields Pure spiritual enjoyments: well, my
friend,

Why lose this life in the meantime, since its use

May be to make the next life more intense?

Do you know, I have often had a dream

(Work it up in your next month's article) Of man's poor spirit in its progress still Losing true life for ever and a day Through ever trying to be and ever being

In the evolution of successive spheres, Before its actual sphere and place of life, Halfway into the next, which having reached,

It shoots with corresponding foolery

Halfway into the next still, on and off!
As when a traveller, bound from North to South,

Scouts fur in Russia—what's its use in France?

In France spurns flannel—where's its need in Spain?

In Spain drops cloth—too cumbrous for Algiers!

Linen goes next, and last the skin itself,
A superfluity at Timbuctoo.

When, through his journey, was the fool at ease?

I'm at ease now, friend—worldly in this world

I take and like its way of life; I think My brothers who administer the means Live better for my comfort—that's good too;

And God, if He pronounce upon it all, Approves my service, which is better still.
If He keep silence,—why, for you or me Or that brute-beast pulled-up in today's 'Times,'

What odds is 't, save to ourselves, what life we lead?

You meet me at this issue—you declare,

All special-pleading done with, truth is
truth,

And justifies itself by undreamed ways.
You don't fear but it's better, if we
doubt,

To say so, acting up to our truth perceived

However feebly. Do then,—act away!
'Tis there I'm on the watch for you!

How one acts
Is, both of us agree, our chief concern:
And how you'll act is what I fain would see

If, like the candid person you appear, You dare to make the most of your life's scheme

As I of mine, live up to its full law Since there's no higher law that counterchecks.

Put natural religion to the test You've just demolished the revealed with—quick,

Down to the root of all that checks your will,

All prohibition to lie, kill and thief
 Or even to be an atheistic priest !
 Suppose a pricking to incontinence—Philosophers deduce you chastity Or shame, from just the fact that at the first Whoso embraced a woman in the plain, Threw club down, and forewent his brains beside,
 So stood a ready victim in the reach Of any brother-savage club in hand—Hence saw the use of going out of sight In wood or cave to prosecute his loves—I read this in a French book t' other
 day.
 Does law so analysed coerce you much ?
 Oh, men spin clouds of fuzz where matters end,
 But you who reach where the first thread begins, You'll soon cut that!—which means you can, but won't Through certain instincts, blind, unreasoned-out, You dare not set aside, you can't tell
 why,
 But there they are, and so you let them
 rule.
 Then, friend, you seem as much a slave
 as I,
 A liar, conscious coward and hypocrite, Without the good the slave expects to get,
 Suppose he has a master after all !
 You own your instincts—why, what else do I,
 Who want, am made for, and must have a God
 Ere I can be aught, do aught ?—no mere name Want, but the true thing with what proves its truth,
 To wit, a relation from that thing to me, Touching from head to foot—which touch I feel,
 And with it take the rest, this life of ours !
 I live my life here ; yours you dare not
 live.

—Not as I state it, who (you please subjoin)
 Disfigure such a life and call it names,

While, in your mind, remains another
 way
 For simple men : knowledge and power have rights, But ignorance and weakness have rights
 too.
 There needs no crucial effort to find
 truth
 If here or there or anywhere about—We ought to turn each side, try hard and see,
 And if we can't, be glad we've earned at least
 The right, by one laborious proof the
 more,
 To graze in peace earth's pleasant pasturage.
 Men are not angels, neither are they brutes.
 Something we may see, all we cannot
 see—
 What need of lying ? I say, I see all,
 And swear to each detail the most minute
 In what I think a Pan's face—you, mere cloud :
 I swear I hear him speak and see him
 wink,
 For fear, if once I drop the emphasis, Mankind may doubt there's any cloud at all.
 You take the simpler life—ready to see,
 Willing to see—for no cloud's worth a
 face—
 And leaving quiet what no strength can move,
 And which, who bids you move ? who has the right ?
 I bid you ; but you are God's sheep, not mine—
 'Pastor est tui Dominus.' You find In these the pleasant pastures of this life Much you may eat without the least offence, Much you don't eat because your maw objects, Much you would eat but that your fellow-flock
 Open great eyes at you and even butt,
 And thereupon you like your mates so
 well
 You cannot please yourself, offending
 them—

Though when they seem exorbitantly
 sheep,
 You weigh your pleasure with their butts and bleats And strike the balance. Sometimes certain fears Restrain you—real checks since you find them so—Sometimes you please yourself and nothing checks;
 And thus you graze through life with not one lie,
 And like it best.

But do you, in truth's name?
 If so, you beat—which means, you are not I—Who needs must make earth mine and • feed my fill Not simply unbutted at, unbickered
 with,
 But motioned to the velvet of the sward By those obsequious wethers' very selves.
 Look at me, sir; my age is double
 yours:
 At yours, I knew beforehand, so enjoyed,
 What now I should be—as, permit the
 word,
 I pretty well imagine your whole range And stretch of tether twenty years to
 come.
 We both have minds and bodies much alike.
 In truth's name, don't you want my bishopric,
 My daily bread, my influence and my state?
 You're young, I'm old, you must be old one day;
 Will you find then, as I do hour by hour,
 Women their lovers kneel to, that cut curls
 From your fat lap-dog's ears to grace a brooch—Dukes, that petition just to kiss your ring—
 With much beside you know or may conceive?
 Suppose we die to-night: well, here
 am I,

Such were my gains, life bore this fruit
 to me,
 While writing all the same my articles On music, poetry, the fictile vase Found at Albano, chess, or Anacreon's Greek.
 But you—the highest honour in your
 life,
 The thing you'll crown yourself with,
 all your days,
 Is—dining here and drinking this last glass
 I pour you out in sign of amity Before we part forever. Of your power And social influence, worldly worth in short,
 Judge what's my estimation by the
 fact,
 I do not condescend to enjoin, beseech, Hint secrecy on one of all these words!
 You're shrewd and know that should you publish one
 The world would brand the lie—my enemies first, Who'd sneer—'the bishop's an arch-hypocrite,
 And knave perhaps, but not so frank a fool.'
 Whereas I should not dare for both my ears Breathe one such syllable, smile one such smile, Before my chaplain who reflects myself—
 My shade's so much more potent than your flesh.
 What's your reward, self-abnegating
 friend?
 Stood you confessed of those exceptional And privileged great natures that dwarf
 mine—
 A zealot with a mad ideal in reach,
 A poet just about to print his ode,
 A statesman with a scheme to stop this war,
 An artist whose religion is his art, I should have nothing to object! such
 men
 Carry the fire, all things grow warm to
 them,
 Their druggot's worth my purple, they beat me.

But you,—you're just as little those
as I—

You, Gigadibs, who, thirty years of age, Write stately for Blackwood's Magazine,

Believe you see two points in Hamlet's
soul

Unseized by the Germans yet—which view you'll print—

Meantime the best you have to show being still

That lively lightsome article we took Almost for the true Dickens,—what's its name?

'The Slum and Cellar—or Whitechapel
life

Limned after dark!' it made me laugh,
I know,

And pleased a month and brought you in ten pounds.

—Success I recognize and compliment, And therefore give you, if you choose, three words

(The card and pencil-scratch is quite enough)

Which whether here, in Dublin or New York,

Will get you, prompt as at my eye-brow's wink,

Such terms as never you aspired to get In all our own reviews and some not ours.

Go write your lively sketches—be the first 'Blougram, or The Eccentric Confidence'—

Or better simply say, 'The Outward-
bound.'

Why, men as soon would throw it in my teeth

As copy and quote the infamy chalked broad

About me on the church-door opposite.
You will not wait for that experience
though,

I fancy, howsoever you decide,
To discontinue—not detesting, not Defaming, but at least—despising me!

Over his wine so smiled and talked his hour

Sylvester Blougram, styled in partibus Episcopus, nec non—(the deuce knows what

It's changed to by our novel hierarchy)

With Gigadibs the literary man, Who played with spoons, explored his plate's design,

And ranged the olive-stones about its edge,

While the great bishop rolled him out his mind.

For Blougram, he believed, say, half he spoke.

The other portion, as he shaped it thus For argumentatory purposes,

He felt his foe was foolish to dispute.
Some arbitrary accidental thoughts

That crossed his mind, amusing because new,

He chose to represent as fixtures there, Invariable convictions (such they seemed

Beside his interlocutor's loose cards Flung daily down, and not the same way twice)

While certain Hell-deep instincts, man's weak tongue

Is never bold to utter in their truth Because styled Hell-deep ('tis an old mistake

To place Hell at the bottom of the earth) He ignored these,—not having in readiness

Their nomenclature and philosophy:
He said true things, but called them by wrong names.

'On the whole,' he thought, 'I justify
myself

On every point where cavillers like this Oppugn my life: he tries one kind of fence—

I close—he's worsted, that's enough for him;

He's on the ground! if the ground should break away

I take my stand on, there's a firmer yet Beneath it, both of us may sink and
reach.

His ground was over mine and broke
the first:

So let him sit with me this many a year!"

He did not sit five minutes. Just a week

Sufficed his sudden healthy vehemence.
(Something had struck him in the 'Outward-bound')

Another way than Blougram's purpose
was)

And having bought, not cabin-furniture But settler's-implements (enough for three)

And started for Australia—there, I
hope,

By this time he has tested his first plough,

And studied his last chapter of St.
John.

CLEON

'As certain also of your own poets have
said'

CLEON the poet, (from the sprinkled isles,

Lily on lily, that o'erlace the sea,
And laugh their pride when the light wave lisps 'Greece')—

To Protos in his Tyranny: much health!

They give thy letter to me, even
now:

I read and seem as if I heard thee speak.
The master of thy galley still unlades Gift after gift; they block my court at
last

And pile themselves along its portico Royal with sunset, like a thought of
thee:

And one white she-slave from the group dispersed

Of black and white slaves, (like the chequer-work

Pavement, at once my nation's work and gift,

Now covered with this settle-down of doves)

One lyric woman, in her crocus vest Woven of sea-wools, with her two white
hands

Commends to me the strainer and the cup

Thy lip hath bettered ere it blesses
mine.

Well-counselled, king, in thy munificence!

For so shall men remark, in such an act Of love for him whose song gives life its joy,

Thy recognition of the use of life;

Nor call thy spirit barely adequate

To help on life in straight ways, broad
enough

For vulgar souls, by ruling and the rest.
Thou, in the daily building of thy tower,

Whether in fierce and sudden spasms of toil,

Or through dim lulls of unapparent growth,

Or when the general work 'mid good acclaim

Climbed with the eye to cheer the architect,

Didst ne'er engage in work for mere work's sake—

Hadst ever in thy heart the luring hope
Of some eventual rest a-top of it,

Whence, all the tumult of the building hushed,

Thou first of men mightst look out to the East:

The vulgar saw thy tower, thou sawest
the sun.

For this, I promise on thy festival
To pour libation, looking o'er the sea,

Making this slave narrate thy fortunes,
speak

Thy great words, and describe thy royal
face—

Wishing thee wholly where Zeus lives the most

Within the eventual element of calm.

Thy letter's first requirement meets me here.

It is as thou hast heard: in one short
life

I, Cleon, have effected all those things Thou wonderingly dost enumerate.

That epos on thy hundred plates of gold Is mine,—and also mine the little chant,

So sure to rise from every fishing-bark When, lights at prow, the seamen haul their nets.

The image of the sun-god on the phare Men turn from the sun's self to see, is
mine;

The Poecile, o'er-storied its whole
length,

As thou didst hear, with painting, is mine too.
 I know the true proportions of a man And woman also, not observed before;
 And I have written three books on the soul, Proving absurd all written hitherto,
 And putting us to ignorance again.
 For music,—why, I have combined the moods, Inventing one. In brief, all arts are mine;
 Thus much the people know and recognize, Throughout our seventeen islands. Marvel not.
 We of these latter days, with greater mind Than our forerunners, since more composite, Look not so great, beside their simple way,
 To a judge who only sees one way at once,
 One mind-point, and no other at a time,— Compares the small part of a man of us With some whole man of the heroic age, Great in his way—not ours, nor meant for ours;
 And ours is greater, had we skill to know.
 For, what we call this life of men on earth,
 This sequence of the soul's achievements here,
 Being, as I find much reason to conceive, Intended to be viewed eventually As a great whole, not analysed to parts, But each part having reference to all,—
 How shall a certain part, pronounced complete, Endure effacement by another part?
 Was the thing done?—Then, what's to do again?
 See, in the chequered pavement opposite, Suppose the artist made a perfect rhomb,
 And next a lozenge, then a trapezoid—
 He did not overlay them, superimpose
 The new upon the old and blot it out,

But laid them on a level in his work,
 Making at last a picture; there it lies.
 So, first the perfect separate forms were made,
 The portions of mankind—and after, so,
 Occurred the combination of the same.
 Or where had been a progress, otherwise?
 Mankind, made up of all the single men,—
 In such a synthesis the labour ends.
 Now, mark me—those divine men of old time Have reached, thou sayest well, each at one point
 The outside verge that rounds our faculty;
 And where they reached, who can do more than reach?
 It takes but little water just to touch
 At some one point the inside of a sphere,
 And, as we turn the sphere, touch all the rest In due succession: but the finer air Which not so palpably nor obviously, Though no less universally, can touch
 The whole circumference of that emptied sphere, Fills it more fully than the water did;
 Holds thrice the weight of water in itself Resolved into a subtler element.
 And yet the vulgar call the sphere first full Up to the visible height—and after, void;
 Not knowing air's more hidden properties.
 And thus our soul, misknown, cries out to Zeus To vindicate his purpose in our life—Whystay we on the earth unless to grow?
 Long since, I imaged, wrote the fiction out,
 That he or other God, descended here And, once for all, showed simultaneously What, in its nature, never can be shown Piecemeal or in succession;—showed, I say,
 The worth both absolute and relative

Of all his children from the birth of time,
 His instruments for all appointed work.
 I now go on to image,—might we hear
 The judgment which should give the due to each, Show where the labour lay and where the ease,
 And prove Zeus' self, the latent, everywhere!
 This is a dream. But no dream, let us hope,
 That years and days, the summers and the springs Follow each other with unwaning powers;
 The grapes which dye thy wine, are richer far Through culture, than the wild wealth of the rock;
 The suave plum than the savage-tasted drupe;
 The pastured honey-bee drops choicer sweet;
 The flowers turn double, and the leaves turn flowers;
 That young and tender crescent-moon, thy slave, Sleeping upon her robe as if on clouds, Refines upon the women of my youth.
 What, and the soul alone deteriorates?
 I have not chanted verse like Homer's, no—Nor swept string like Terpander, no—nor carved And painted men like Phidias and his friend:
 I am not great as they are, point by point:
 But I have entered into sympathy With these four, running these into one soul,
 Who, separate, ignored each others' arts.
 Say, is it nothing that I know them all?
 The wild flower was the larger—I have dashed Rose-blood upon its petals, pricked its cup's Honey with wine, and driven its seed to fruit,
 And show a better flower if not so large.

I stand, myself. Refer this to the gods Whose gift alone it is! which, shall I dare (All pride apart) upon the absurd pretext That such a gift by chance lay in my hand, Discourse of lightly or depreciate?
 It might have fallen to another's hand—what then?
 I pass too surely: let at least truth stay!

And next, of what thou followest on to ask.
 This being with me as I declare, O king,
 My works, in all these varicoloured kinds,
 So done by me, accepted so by men—Thou askest if (my soul thus in men's hearts)
 I must not be accounted to attain
 The very crown and proper end of life.
 Inquiring thence how, now life closeth up,
 I face death with success in my right hand:
 Whether I fear death less than dost thyself
 The fortunate of men. 'For' (writest thou)
 'Thou leavest much behind, while I leave nought:
 Thy life stays in the poems men shall sing,
 The pictures men shall study; while my life,
 Complete and whole now in its power and joy, Dies altogether with my brain and arm,
 Is lost indeed; since, what survives myself?
 The brazen statue that o'erlooks my grave, Set on the promontory which I named.
 And that—some supple courtier of my heir Shall use its robed and sceptred arm, perhaps,
 To fix the rope to, which best drags it down.
 I go, then: triumph thou, who dost not go!'

Nay, thou art worthy of hearing my whole mind.
 Is this apparent, when thou turn'st to muse Upon the scheme of earth and man in chief,
 That admiration grows as knowledge grows?
 That imperfection means perfection hid,
 Reserved in part, to grace the after-time?
 If, in the morning of philosophy, Ere aught had been recorded, aught perceived, Thou, with the light now in thee, couldst have looked On all earth's tenantry, from worm to bird, Ere man had yet appeared upon the stage—
 Thou wouldst have seen them perfect, and deduced
 The perfectness of others yet unseen.
 Conceding which,—had Zeus them questioned thee
 'Shall I go on a step, improve on this.
 Do more for visible creatures than is done?'
 Thou wouldst have answered, 'Ay, by making each Grow conscious in himself—by that alone.
 All's perfect else: the shell sucks fast the rock,
 The fish strikes through the sea, the snake both swims
 And slides, the birds take flight, forth range the beasts, Till life's mechanics can no further go—And all this joy in natural life, is put,
 Like fire from off Thy finger into each,
 So exquisitely perfect is the same.
 But 'tis pure fire—and they mere matter are;
 It has them, not they it: and so I choose For man, Thy last premeditated work (If I might add a glory to the scheme)
 That a third thing should stand apart from both,
 A quality arise within the soul,
 Which, intro-active, made to supervise
 And feel the force it has may view itself,

And so be happy.' Man might live at first The animal life: but is there nothing more?
 In due time, let him critically learn How he lives; and, the more he gets to know
 Of his own life's adaptabilities, The more joy-giving will his life become.
 The man who hath this quality, is best.
 But thou, king, hadst more reasonably said:
 'Let progress end at once,—man make no step Beyond the natural man, the better beast, Using his senses, not the sense of sense.'
 In man there's failure, only since he left The lower and unconscious forms of life.
 We called it an advance, the rendering plain A spirit might grow conscious of that life,
 And, by new lore so added to the old,
 Take each step higher over the brute's head.
 This grew the only life, the pleasure-house, Watch-tower and treasure-fortress of the soul,
 Which whole surrounding flats of natural life Seemed only fit to yield subsistence to;
 A tower that crowns a country. But alas!
 The soul now climbs it just to perish there,
 For thence we have discovered ('tis no dream—We know this, which we had not else perceived) That there's a world of capability For joy, spread round about us, meant for us, Inviting us; and still the soul craves all,
 And still the flesh replies, 'Take no jot
 - more
 Than ere thou climbedst the tower to look abroad!
 Nay, so much less, as that fatigue has brought Deduction to it.' We struggle—fain to enlarge

Our bounded physical reciprocity, Increase our power, supply fresh oil to
life,

Repair the waste of age and sickness.
No,

It skills not: life's inadequate to joy, As the soul sees joy, tempting life to
take.

They praise a fountain in my garden
here

Wherein a Naiad sends the water-bow Thin from her tube; she smiles to see it rise.

What if I told her, it is just a thread From that great river which the hills shut up,

And mock her with my leave to take the same?

The artificer has given her one small tube

Past power to widen or exchange—what boots

To know she might spout oceans if she could?

She cannot lift beyond her first thin thread,

And so a man can use but a man's joy While he sees God's. Is it, for Zeus to boast

'See, man, how happy I live, and
despair—

That I may be still happier—for thy use!

If this were so, we could not thank our Lord,

As hearts beat on to doing: 'tis not
so—

Malice it is not. Is it carelessness?

Still, no. If care—where is the sign, I ask—

And get no answer: and agree in sum,
O king, with thy profound discouragement,

Who seest the wider but to sigh the
more.

Most progress is most failure! thou sayest well.

The last point now:—thou dost except a case—

Holding joy not impossible to one

With artist-gifts—to such a man as I—Who leave behind me living works
indeed;

For, such a poem, such a painting lives.
What? dost thou verily trip upon a
word,

Confound the accurate view of what joy is (Caught somewhat clearer by my eyes than thine)

With feeling joy? confound the knowing how

And showing how to live (my faculty)
With actually living?—Otherwise

Where is the artist's vantage o'er the
king?

Because in my great epos I display How divers men young, strong, fair, wise, can act—

Is this as though I acted? if I paint, Carve the young Phoebus, am I therefore young?

Methinks I'm older that I bowed myself

The many years of pain that taught me art!

Indeed, to know is something, and to prove

How all this beauty might be enjoyed, is more:

But, knowing nought, to enjoy is something too.

Yon rower with the moulded muscles
there

Lowering the sail, is nearer it than I.
I can write love-odes—thy fair slave's an ode.

I get to sing of love, when grown too grey For being beloved: she turns to that young man,

The muscles all a-ripple on his back.
I know the joy of kingship: well—thou art king!

'But,' sayest thou—(and I marvel, I
repeat,

To find thee tripping on a mere word)
'what

Thou writest, paintest, stays: that does not die:

Sappho survives, because we sing her songs,

And Aeschylus, because we read his plays!

Why, if they live still, let them come and take Thy slave in my despite, drink from thy cup, Speak in my place. Thou diest while I survive?
Say rather that my fate is deadlier still,
In this, that every day my sense of joy Grows more acute, my soul (intensified By power and insight) more enlarged, more keen;
While every day my hairs fall more and
more,
My hand shakes, and the heavy years increase—
The horror quickening still from year to year,
The consummation coming past escape,
When I shall know most, and yet least enjoy—
When all my works wherein I prove my
worth,
Being present still to mock me in men's mouths,
Alive still, in the phrase of such as thou,
I, I, the feeling, thinking, acting man,
The man who loved his life so over-
much,
Shall sleep in my urn. It is so horrible,
I dare at times imagine to my need Some future state revealed to us by Zeus, Unlimited in capability
For joy, as this is in desire for joy, —To seek which, the joy-hunger forces
us:
That, stung by straitness of our life, made strait On purpose to make sweet the life at large—Freed by the throbbing impulse we call
death
We burst there as the worm into the fly,
Who, while a worm still, wants his wings. But, no!
Zeus has not yet revealed it; and, alas,
He must have done so, were it possible!

Live long and happy, and in that thought die, Glad for what was. Farewell. And for the rest,

I cannot tell thy messenger aright
Where to deliver what he bears of thine To one called Paulus—we have heard his fame Indeed, if Christus be not one with
him—
I know not, nor am troubled much to
know.
Thou canst not think a mere barbarian
Jew,
As Paulus proves to be, one circumcised,
Hath access to a secret shut from us?
Thou wrongest our philosophy, O king,
In stooping to inquire of such an one,
As if his answer could impose at all.
He writeth, doth he? well, and he may write.
Oh, the Jew findeth scholars! certain slaves
Who touched on this same isle, preached him and Christ;
And (as I gathered from a bystander) Their doctrines could be held by no sane man

RUDEL TO THE LADY OF TRIPOLI

I
I KNOW a Mount, the gracious Sun perceives
First when he visits, last, too, when he leaves
The world; and, vainly favoured, it repays
The day-long glory of his steadfast gaze By no change of its large calm front of snow.
And underneath the Mount, a Flower I
know,
He cannot have perceived, that changes
ever
At his approach; and, in the lost endeavour
To live his life, has parted, one by one,
With all a flower's true graces, for the grace
Of being but a foolish mimic sun, With ray-like florets round a disk-like
face.
Men nobly call by many a name the Mount
As over many a land of theirs its large

Calm front of snow like a triumphal target Is reared, and still with old names, fresh ones vie,
 Each to its proper praise and own
 account:
 Men call the Flower, the Sunflower, sportively.

II

Oh, Angel of the East, one, one gold
 look Across the waters to this twilight nook, —The far sad waters, Angel, to this nook!

III

Dear Pilgrim, art thou for the East
 indeed?
 Go! Saying ever as thou dost proceed,
 That I, French Rudel, choose for my device
 A sunflower outspread like a sacrifice Before its idol. See! These inexpert And hurried fingers could not fail to hurt
 The woven picture; 'tis a woman's skill
 Indeed; but nothing baffled me, so, ill Or well, the work is finished. Say, men feed
 On songs I sing, and therefore bask the bees
 On my flower's breast as on a platform
 broad:
 But, as the flower's concern is not for
 these
 But solely for the sun, so men applaud In vain this Rudel, he not looking here But to the East—the East! Go, say this, Pilgrim dear!

 ONE WORD MORE¹

TO E. B. B.

London, September, 1855

I

THERE they are, my fifty men and women
 Naming me the fifty poems finished!

Take them, Love, the book and me
 together:
 Where the heart lies, let the brain lie also.

II

Rafael made a century of sonnets, Made and wrote them in a certain volume Dinted with the silver-pointed pencil Else he only used to draw Madonnas:
 These, the world might view—but One,
 the volume.
 Who that one, you ask? Your heart instructs you.
 Did she live and love it all her life-
 time?
 Did she drop, his lady of the sonnets, Die, and let it drop beside her pillow Where it lay in place of Rafael's glory,
 Rafael's cheek so duteous and so loving—Cheek, the world was wont to hail a painter's, Rafael's cheek, her love had turned a poet's?

III

You and I would rather read that volume,
 (Taken to his beating bosom by it) Leân and list the bosom-beats of Rafael, Would we not? than wonder at Madonnas—
 Her, San Sisto names, and Her, Foligno, Her, that visits Florence in a vision, Her, that's left with lilies in the Louvre—Seen by us and all the world in circle.

IV

You and I will never read that volume.
 Guido Reni, like his own eye's apple Guarded long the treasure-book and loved it.
 Guido Reni dying, all Bologna Cried, and the world cried too, 'Ours—the treasure!'
 Suddenly, as rare things will, it vanished.

¹ Originally appended to the collection of Poems called 'Men and Women,' the greater portion of which has now been, more correctly, distributed under the other titles of this volume.

v

Dante once prepared to paint an angel:
Whom to please? You whisper
'Beatrice.' While he mused and traced it and retraced it, (Peradventure with a pen corroded Still by drops of that hot ink he dipped
for,
When, his left-hand i' the hair o' the wicked, Back he held the brow and pricked its stigma, Bit into the live man's flesh for parchment,
Loosed him, laughed to see the writing rattle, Let the wretch go festering through Florence)—
Dante, who loved well because he hated, Hated wickedness that hinders loving,
Dante standing, studying his angel,— In there broke the folk of his Inferno.
Says he—'Certain people of importance'
(Such he gave his daily, dreadful line to) 'Entered and would seize, forsooth, the poet.'
Says the poet—'Then I stopped my painting.'

vi

You and I would rather see that angel,
Painted by the tenderness of Dante, Would we not?—than read a fresh Inferno.

vii

You and I will never see that picture.
While he mused on love and Beatrice, While he softened o'er his outlined
angel,
In they broke, those 'people of importance':
We and Bice bear the loss for ever.

viii

What of Rafael's sonnets, Dante's picture?

This: no artist lives and loves, that longs not Once, and only once, and for One only, (Ah, the prize!) to find his love a language
Fit and fair and simple and sufficient—Using nature that's an art to others, Not, this one time, art that's turned his nature.
Ay, of all the artists living, loving, None but would forego his proper dowry,— Does he paint? he fain would write a poem,— Does he write? he fain would paint a picture,
Put to proof art alien to the artist's,
Once, and 'only once, and for One only,
So to be the man and leave the artist, Gain the man's joy, miss the artist's sorrow.

ix

Wherefore? Heaven's gift takes earth's abatement!
He who smites the rock and spreads the water, Bidding drink and live a crowd beneath
him,
Even he, the minute makes immortal Proves, perchance, his mortal in the minute,
Desecrates, belike, the deed in doing.
While he smites, how can he but remember,
So he smote before, in such a peril, When they stood and mocked—'Shall smiting help us?'
When they drank and sneered—'A stroke is easy!'
When they wiped their mouths and went their journey, Throwing him forth—'But drought was pleasant.'
Thus old memories mar the actua triumph;
Thus the doing savours of disrelish;
Thus achievement lacks a graciou somewhat;
O'er-importuned brows becloud th mandate, Carelessness or consciousness, the ges ture.

For he bears an ancient wrong about
him,
Sees and knows again those phalanxed
faces,
Hears, yet one time more, the 'customed prelude—
'How shouldst thou, of all men, smite, and save us?'
Guesses what is like to prove the sequel—
'Egypt's flesh-pots—nay, the drought was better.'

X

Oh, the crowd must have emphatic warrant!
Theirs, the Sinai-forehead's cloven brilliance, Right-arm's rod-sweep, tongue's imperial fiat.
Never dares the man put off the prophet.

XI

Did he love one face from out the thousands, (Were she Jethro's daughter, white and wifely,
Were she but the Aethiopian bond-slave,)
He would envy yon dumb patient camel, Keeping a reserve of scanty water Meant to save his own life in the desert; Ready in the desert to deliver (Kneeling down to let his breast be opened)
Hoard and life together for his mistress.

XII

I shall never, in the years remaining, Paint your pictures, no, nor carve you statues,
Make you music that should all-express
me;
So it seems: I stand on my attainment.
This of verse alone, one life allows me; Verse and nothing else have I to give
you.
Other heights in other lives, God willing—
All the gifts from all the heights, your own, Love!

XIII

Yet a semblance of resource avails us—Shade so finely touched, love's sense must seize it.
Take these lines, look lovingly and nearly,
Lines I write the first time and the last
time.
He who works in fresco, steals a hair-
brush,
Curbs the liberal hand, subservient proudly, Cramps his spint, crowds its all in little,
Makes a strange art of an art familiar, Fills his lady's missal-marge with flowerets.
He who blows thro' bronze, may breathe thro' silver, Fittly serenade a slumbrous princess.
He who writes, may write for once, as I do.

XIV

Love, you saw me gather men and women,
Live or dead or fashioned by my fancy, Enter each and all, and use their
service,
Speak from every mouth,—the speech, a poem.
Hardly shall I tell my joys and sorrows, Hopes and fears, belief and disbeliev-
ing:
I am mine and yours—the rest be all men's,
Karshook, Cleon, Norbert and the fifty.
Let me speak this once in my true person,
Not as Lippo, Roland or Andrea, Though the fruit of speech be just this sentence—
Pray you, look on these my men and women,
Take and keep my fifty poems finished; Where my heart lies, let my brain lie
also!
Poor the speech; be how I speak, for all things.

XV

Not but that you know me! Ló, the moon's self!
Here in London, yonder late in Florence,

Still we find her face, the thrice-transfigured.
Curving on a sky imbrued with colour, Drifted over Fiesole by twilight, Came she, our new crescent of a hair'sbreadth.
Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato, Rounder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder,
Perfect till the nightingales applauded.
Now, a piece of her old self, impoverished,
Hard to greet, she traverses the house-roofs, Hurries with unhandsome thrift of silver,
Goes dispiritedly, glad to finish.

XVI

What, there's nothing in the moon note-worthy?
Nay—for if that moon could love a mortal,
Use, to charm him (so to fit a fancy) All her magic ('tis the old sweet my-thos)
She would turn a new side to her
mortal,
Side unseen of herdsman, huntsman, steersman—
Blank to Zoroaster on his terrace, Blind to Galileo on his turret, Dumb to Homer, dumb to Keats—him, even!
Think, the wonder of the moonstruck
mortal—
When she turns round, comes again in heaven,
Opens out anew for worse or better?
Proves she like some portent of an iceberg
Swimming full upon the ship it founders, Hungry with huge teeth of splintered crystals?
Proves she as the paved-work of a sapphire Seen by Moses when he climbed the mountain?
Moses, Aaron, Nadab and Abihu Climbed and saw the very God; the Highest,

Stand upon the paved-work of a sapphire.
Like the bodied heaven in his clear-
ness Shone the stone, the sapphire of that paved-work, When they ate and drank and saw God also!

XVII

What were seen? None knows, none ever shall know.
Only this is sure—the sight were other,
Not the moon's same side, born late in Florence,
Dying now impoverished here in London.
God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures
Boasts two soul-sides, one to face the world with,
One to show a woman when he loves her.

XVIII

This I say of me, but think of you,
Love!
This to you—yourself my moon of poets!
Ah, but that's the world's side, there's the wonder,
Thus they see you, praise you, think they know you.
There, in turn I stand with them and praise you,
Out of my own self, I dare to phrase it.
But the best is when I glide from out
them,
Cross a step or two of dubious twilight,
Come out on the other side, the novel Silent silver lights and darks undreamed
of,
Where I hush and bless myself with silence.

XIX

Oh, their Rafael of the dear Madonnas, Oh, their Dante of the dread Inferno, Wrote one song—and in my brain I sing
it,
Drew one angel—borne, see, on my bosom!

[The two following poems were not reprinted by Browning in any collected edition of his works. The Sonnet was written on August 17, 1834, and published in The Monthly Repository, 1834. Ben Karshook's Wisdom was written in April, 1854, and published in The Keepsake, 1856.]

SONNET

Eyes, calm beside thee, (Lady, could'st thou know !)
 May turn away thick with fast-gathering tears :
 I glance not where all gaze : thrilling and low Their passionate praises reach thee—my cheek wears Alone no wonder when thou passest by ;
 Thy tremulous lids bent and suffused reply To the irrepressible homage which doth glow On every lip but mine : if in thine ears Their accents linger—and thou dost recall Me as I stood, still, guarded, very pale, Beside each votarist whose lighted brow Wore worship like an aureole, 'O'er them all My beauty,' thou wilt murmur, 'did prevail Save that one only : '—Lady, could'st thou know !

BEN KARSHOOK'S WISDOM

I

'Would a man 'scape the rod ?' Rabbi Ben Karshook saith,
 'See that he turn to God
 The day before his death.'

'Ay, could a man inquire When it shall come !' I say.
 The Rabbi's eye shoots fire—
 'Then let him turn to-day !'

II

Quoth a young Sadducee :
 'Reader of many rolls,
 Is it so certain we Have, as they tell us, souls ?'

'Son, there is no reply !'
 The Rabbi bit his beard :
 'Certain, a soul have I—
 We may have none,' he sneered.

Thus Karshook, the Hiram's-Hammer,
 The Right-hand Temple-column, Taught babes in grace their grammar,
 And struck the simple, solemn.

[The following poem first appeared in the Royal Academy Catalogue for 1864 and was reprinted in the 1865 Selections, and in later editions of Dramatis Personae.]

ORPHEUS AND EURYDICE

BUT give them me, the mouth, the eyes, the brow !
 Let them once more absorb me ! One look now Will lap me round for ever, not to pass Out of its light, though darkness he beyond :
 Hold me but safe again within the bond Of one immortal look ! All woe that was, Forgotten, and all terror that may be Defied,—no past is mine, no future :
 look at me !

PIPPA PASSES

A DRAMA

I DEDICATE MY BEST INTENTIONS, IN THIS POEM, ADMIRINGLY TO THE AUTHOR OF 'ION,'— AFFECTIONATELY TO MR. SERJEANT TALFOURD.

London, 1841.

R.B.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT ASOLO IN THE TREVISAN. A large, mean, airy chamber. A girl, PIPPA, from the silk-mills, springing out of bed.

DAY !

Faster and more fast,
O'er night's brim, day boils at last ;
Boils, pure gold, o'er the cloud-cup's brim Where spurting and suppress it lay—For not a froth-flake touched the rim
Of yonder gap in the solid gray
Of the eastern cloud, an hour away ;
But forth one wavelet, then another,
curled,

Till the whole sunrise, not to be suppress,
Rose, reddened, and its seething breast Flickered in bounds, grew gold, then overflowed the world.

Oh, Day, if I squander a wavelet of thee,
A mite of my twelve-hours' treasure,
The least of thy gazes or glances, (Be they grants thou art bound to, or gifts above measure)

One of thy choices, or one of thy chances, (Be they tasks God imposed thee, or freaks at thy pleasure)

—My Day, if I squander such labour or leisure,

Then shame fall on Asolo, mischief on me !

Thy long blue solemn hours serenely flowing,

Whence earth, we feel, gets steady help and good—

Thy fitful sunshine-minutes, coming, going,

As if earth turned from work in game-some mood—

All shall be mine ! But thou must treat me not

As the prosperous are treated, those who live

At hand here, and enjoy the higher lot,

In readiness to take what thou wilt give,
And free to let alone what thou refusest ;
For, Day, my holiday, if thou ill-usest Me, who am only Pippa,—old-year's sorrow,

Cast off last night, will come again tomorrow—

Whereas, if thou prove gentle, I shall borrow

Sufficient strength of thee for new-year's sorrow.

All other men and women that this earth Belongs to, who all days alike possess, Make general plenty cure particular
dearth,

Get more joy, one way, if another, less ; Thou art my single day, God lends to
heaven

What were all earth else, with a feel of
heaven,—

Sole light that helps me through the year, thy sun's !

Try, now ! Take Asolo's Four Happiest Ones—

And let thy morning rain on that superb Great haughty Ottima ; can rain disturb Her Sebald's homage ? All the while thy rain

Beats fiercest on her shrub-house window-pane,

He will but press the closer, breathe more warm

Against her cheek; how should she mind the storm?
And, morning past, if mid-day shed a gloom
O'er Jules and Phene,—what care bride and groom
Save for their dear selves? 'Tis their marriage-day;
And while they leave church, and go home their way, Hand clasping hand,—within each breast would be Sunbeams and pleasant weather spite
of thee!
Then, for another trial, obscure thy eve With mist,—will Luigi and his mother
grieve—
The Lady and her child, unmatched,
forsooth,
She in her age, as Luigi in his youth,
For true content? The cheerful town, warm, close,
And safe, the sooner that thou art morose, Receives them! And yet once again, outbreak
In storm at night on Monsignor, they make Such stir about,—whom they expect from Rome
To visit Asolo, his brothers' home,
And say here masses proper to release A soul from pain,—what storm dares hurt his peace?
Calm would he pray, with his own thoughts to ward Thy thunder off, nor want the angels'
guard!
But Pippa—just one such mischance would spoil
Her day that lightens the next twelve-month's toil
At wearisome silk-winding, coil on coil!
And here I let time slip for nought!
Aha, you foolhardy sunbeam—caught With a single splash from my ewer!
You that would mock the best pursuer,
Was my basin over-deep?
One splash of water ruins you asleep,
And up, up, fleet your brilliant bits Wheeling and counterwheeling, Reeling, broken beyond healing—
Now grow together on the ceiling!

That will task your wits!
Whoever quenched fire first, hoped to see Morsel after morsel flee
As merrily, as giddily . . .
Meantime, what lights my sunbeam on, Where settles by degrees the radiant cripple?
Oh, is it surely blown, my martagon?
New-blown and ruddy as St. Agnes' nipple, Plump as the flesh-bunch on some Turk bird's poll!
Be sure if corals, branching 'neath the ripple
Of ocean, bud there,—fairies watch unroll Such turban-flowers; I say, such lamps disperse Thick red flame through that dusk green universe!
I am queen of thee, floweret;
And each fleshy blossom Preserve I not—(safer Than leaves that embower it, Or shells that embosom)
—From weevil and chafer?
Laugh through my pane, then;
solicit the bee;
Gibe him, be sure; and, in midst of thy glee,
Love thy queen, worship me!
—Worship whom else? For am I not,
this day, Whate'er I please? What shall I please
to-day?
My morning, noon, eve, night—how spend my day?
To-morrow I must be Pippa who winds silk,
The whole year round, to earn just bread and milk:
But, this one day, I have leave to
go,
And play out my fancy's fullest games;
I may fancy all day—and it shall be so—
That I taste of the pleasures, am called by the names Of the Happiest Four in our Asolo!
See! Up the Hill-side yonder, through the morning,

Some one shall love me, as the world calls love :
I am no less than Ottima, take warning !
The gardens, and the great stone house
above,
And other house for shrubs, all glass in front,
Are mine ; where Sebald steals, as he is wont,
To court me, while old Luca yet reposes ; And therefore, till the shrub-house door uncloses, I . . . what, now ?—give abundant cause for prate
About me—Ottima, I mean—of late, Too bold, too confident she'll still face
down
The spitefullest of talkers in our town—
How we talk in the little town below !
But love, love, love—there's better love, I know !
This foolish love was only day's first offer ;
I choose my next love to defy the scoffer :
For do not our Bride and Bridegroom sally
Out of Possagno church at noon ?
Their house looks over Orcana valley—Why should not I be the bride as soon As Ottima ? For I saw, beside, Arrive last night that little bride—Saw, if you call it seeing her, one flash Of the pale, snow-pure cheek and black bright tresses, Blacker than all except the black eyelash ;
I wonder she contrives those lids no dresses !
—So strict was she, the veil Should cover close her pale Pure cheeks—a bride to look at and scarce touch, Scarce touch, remember, Jules !—for are not such Used to be tended, flower-like, every feature,
As if one's breath would fray the lily of a creature ?
A soft and easy life these ladies lead !
Whiteness in us were wonderful indeed.
Oh, save that brow its virgin dim-
ness,
Keep that foot its lady primness,

Let those ankles never swerve From their exquisite reserve, Yet have to trip along the streets like me,
All but naked to the knee !
How will she ever grant her Jules a bliss
So startling as her real first infant
kiss ?
Oh, no—not envy, this !
—Not envy, sure !—for if you gave me Leave to take or to refuse,
In earnest, do you think I'd choose That sort of new love to enslave me ?
Mine should have lapped me round from the beginning ;
As little fear of losing it as winning !
Lovers grow cold, men learn to hate their wives,
And only parents' love can last our lives.
At eve the son and mother, gentle pair, Commune inside our Turret ; what prevents My being Luigi ? while that mossy lair Of lizards through the winter-time, is stirred Witheach to each imparting sweet intents For this new-year, as brooding bird to bird—
(For I observe of late, the evening walk Of Luigi and his mother, always ends Inside our ruined turret, where they talk, Calmer than lovers, yet more kind than
friends)
—Let me be cared about, kept out of harm,
And schemed for, safe in love as with a charm ;
Let me be Luigi ! If I only knew What was my mother's face—my father,
too !
Nay, if you come to that, best love of all Is God's ; then why not have God's love befall Myself as, in the Palace by the Dome, Monsignor ?—who to-night will bless the home
Of his dead brother ; and God will bless in turn
That heart which beats, those eyes which mildly burn .

With love for all men : I, to-night at least,
Would be that holy and beloved priest !
Now wait !—even I already seem to share
In God's love : what does New-year's hymn declare ?
What other meaning 'do these verses
bear ?

*All service ranks the same with God :
If now, as formerly He trod Paradise, His presence fills Our earth, each only as God wills Can work—God's puppets, best and
worst,*

Are we ; there is no last nor first.

*Say not 'a small event !' Why
'small ?'*

Costs it more pain than this, ye call A 'great event,' should come to pass, Than that ? Untwine me from the mass

Of deeds which make up life, one deed Power shall fall short in, or exceed !

And more of it, and more of it !—oh,
yes—

I will pass by, and see their happiness,
And envy none—being just as great, no
doubt,

Useful to men, and dear to God, as they !
A pretty thing to care about So mightily, this single holiday !

But let the sun shine ! Wherefore repine ?

—With thee to lead me, O Day of
mine,

Down the grass-path grey with dew, Under the pine-wood, blind with boughs,

Where the swallow never flew

As yet, nor cicada dared carouse—Dared carouse !

[She enters the street.]

I.—MORNING. Up the Hill-side, inside the Shrub-house. LUCA's Wife, OTTIMA, and her Paramour the German SEBALD.

Seb. [sings.]

Let the watching lids wink !

Day's a-blaze with eyes, think—Deep into the night, drink !

Otti. Night ? Such may be your Rhine-land nights, perhaps ;
But this blood-red beam through the shutter's chink,

—We call such light, the morning's : let us see !

Mind how you grope your way, though !
How these tall

Naked geraniums straggle ! Push the lattice

Behind that frame !—Nay, do I bid you ?—Sebald,

It shakes the dust down on me ! Why,
of course

The slide-bolt catches.—Well, are you
content,

Or must I find you something else to spoil ?

Kiss and be friends, my Sebald ! Is it full morning ?

Oh, don't speak then !

Seb.

Ay, thus it used to be !

Ever your house was, I remember, shut Till mid-day—I observed that, as I strolled

On mornings through the vale here :
country girls

Were noisy, washing garments in the brook,

Hinds drove the slow white oxen up the kills,

But no, your house was mute, would ope no eye !

And wisely—you were plotting one thing there,

Nature, another outside : I looked up—Rough white wood shutters, rusty iron bars,

Silent as death, blind in a flood of light.

Oh, I remember !—and the peasants laughed

And said, 'The old man sleeps with the young wife.'

This house was his, this chair, this window—his !

Otti. Ah, the clear morning ! I can see St. Mark's :

That black streak is the belfry. Stop :
Vicenza

Should lie . . . There's Padua, plain enough, that blue !

Look o'er my shoulder, follow my finger.
Seb. Morning ?

It seems to me a night with a sun added.
Where's dew? where's freshness? That bruised plant, I bruised

In getting through the lattice yestereve, Droops as it did. See, here's my elbow's mark

In the dust on the sill.

Otti. Oh shut the lattice, pray!

Seb. Let me lean out. I cannot scent blood here,

Foul as the morn may be.

There, shut the world out!

How do you feel now, Ottima? There,
curse

The world and all outside! Let us throw off

This mask: how do you bear yourself?

Let's out

With all of it!

Otti. Best never speak of it.

Seb. Best speak again and yet again
of it,

Till words cease to be more than words.

'His blood,'

For instance—let those two words mean

'His blood'

And nothing more. Notice, I'll say them now,

'His blood.'

Otti. Assuredly if I repented

The deed—

Seb. Repent? who should repent, or why?

What puts that in your head? Did I once say

That I repented?

Otti. No, I said the deed—

Seb. 'The deed,' and 'the event'— just now it was

'Our passion's fruit'—the devil take such cant!

Say, once and always, Luca was a wittol, I am his cut-throat, you are—

Otti. Here is the wine;

I brought it when we left the house
above,

And glasses too—wine of both sorts.
Black? white, then?

Seb. But am not I his cut-throat?
What are you?

Otti. There, trudges on his business from the Duomo

Benet the Capuchin, with his brown hood

And bare feet—always in one place at church,

Close under the stone wall by the south
entry.

I used to take him for a brown cold piece Of the wall's self, as out of it he rose

To let me pass—at first, I say, I used—Now, so has that dumb figure fastened

on me,

I rather should account the plastered
wall

A piece of him, so chilly does it strike.

This, Sebald?

Seb. No—the white wine—the white wine!

Well, Ottima, I promised no new year Should rise on us the ancient shameful

way,

Nor does it rise: pour on! To your black eyes!

Do you remember last damned New Year's day?

Otti. You brought those foreign prints. We looked at them Over the wine and fruit. I had to scheme

To get him from the fire. Nothing but saying

His own set wants the proof-mark, roused him up

To hunt them out.

Seb. 'Faith, he is not alive
To fondle you before my face!

Otti. Do you Fondle me, then! who means to take your life

For that, my Sebald?

Seb. Hark you, Ottima, One thing's to guard against. We'll not make much

One of the other—that is, not make more Parade of warmth, childish officious coil,

Than yesterday—as if, Sweet, I supposed

Proof upon proof was needed now, now
first,

To show I love you—yes, still love you—love you

In spite of Luca and what's come to him —Sure sign we had him ever in our

thoughts,

White sneering old reproachful face and
all!

We'll even quarrel, Love, at times, as if We still could lose each other, were not tied

By this—conceive you ?

Otti. Love !

Seb. Not tied so sure !

Because though I was wrought upon, have struck

His insolence back into him—am I

So surely yours ?—therefore, forever
yours ?

Otti. Love, to be wise, (one counsel pays another)

Should we have—months ago—when first we loved,

For instance that May morning we two stole

Under the green ascent of sycamores—If we had come upon a thing like that Suddenly . . .

Seb. 'A thing'—there again—'a
thing !'

Otti. Then, Venus' body, had we come upon

My husband Luca Gaddi's murdered corpse

Within there, at his couch-foot, covered close—

Would you have pored upon it ? Why persist

In poring now upon it ? For 'tis here
As much as there in the deserted house :

You cannot rid your eyes of it. For me, Now he is dead I hate him worse—I hate . . .

Dare you stay here ? I would go back and hold

His two dead hands, and say, I hate you worse

Luca, than . . .

Seb. Off, off ; take your hands off
mine !

'Tis the hot evening—off ! oh, morning, is it ?

Otti. There's one thing must be done ;
you know what thing.

Come in and help to carry. We may sleep

Anywhere in the whole wide house to-
night,

Seb. What would come, think you, if we let him lie

Just as he is ? Let him lie there until The angels take him : he is turned by

this

Off from his face, beside, as you will see.
Otti. This dusty pane might serve for looking-glass.

Three, four—four grey hairs ! Is it so you said

A plait of hair should wave across my neck ?

No—this way !

Seb. Ottima, I would give your neck, Each splendid shoulder, both those breasts of yours,

That this were undone ! Killing ?—Kill

the world

So Luca lives again !—ay, lives to sputter

His fulsome dotage on you—yes, and feign

Surprise that I returned at eve to sup, When all the morning I was loitering

here—

Bid me dispatch my business and begone.
I would . . .

Otti. See !

Seb. No, I'll finish ! Do you think I fear to speak the bare truth once for

all ?

All we have talked of is, at bottom, fine
To suffer—there's a recompense in guilt ;

One must be venturous and fortunate :
What is one young for, else ? In age we'll sigh

O'er the wild, reckless, wicked days flown over ;

Still, we have lived ! The vice was in its place.

But to have eaten Luca's bread, have worn

His clothes, have felt his money swell my purse—

Do lovers in romances sin that way ?

Why, I was starving when I used to call And teach you music, starving while you plucked me

These flowers to smell !

Otti. My poor lost friend !
Seb. He gave me

Life, nothing less : what if he did reproach

My perfidy, and threaten, and do more—Had he no right ? What was to wonder at ?

He sat by us at table quietly—Why must you lean across till our cheeks touched ?

Could he do less than make pretence to strike me ?

'Tis not for the crime's sake—I'd commit ten crimes

Greater, to have this crime wiped out,
undone !

And you—O, how feel you ? feel you
for me ?

Otti. Well, then, I love you better now than ever,

And best (look at me while I speak to
you)—

Best for the crime ; nor do I grieve, in
truth,

This mask, this simulated ignorance,
This affectation of simplicity,

Falls off our crime ; this naked crime of ours

May not, now, be looked over : look it down, then !

Great ? let it be great ; but the joys it brought,

Pay they or no its price ? Come : they or it !

Speak not ! The Past, would you give up the Past

Such as it is, pleasure and crime together ?

Give up that noon I owned my love for
you ?

The garden's silence ! even the single bee

Persisting in his toil, suddenly stopt ;
And where he hid you only could surmise

By some campanula's chalice set a-swinging :

Who stammered—' Yes, I love you ? '

Seb. And I drew Back ; put far back your face with both my hands

Lest you should grow too full of me—your face

So seemed athirst for my whole soul and body !

Otti. And when I ventured to receive
you here,

Made you steal hither in the mornings—Seb. When

I used to look up 'neath the shrub-house
here,

Till the red fire on its glazed windows spread

To a yellow haze ?

Otti. Ah—my sign was, the sun Inflamed the sere side of yon chestnut-
tree

Nipt by the first frost.

Seb. You would always laugh At my wet boots : I had to stride thro' grass

Over my ankles.

Otti. Then our crowning night!
Seb. The July night ?

Otti. The day of it too, Sebald !
When the heaven's pillars seemed o'er-bowed with heat,

Its black-blue canopy seemed let descend

Close on us both, to weigh down each to
each,

And smother up all life except our life.
So lay we till the storm came.

Seb. How it came !

Otti. Buried in woods we lay, you recollect ;

Swift ran the searching tempest over-
head ;

And ever and anon some bright white shaft

Burnt thro' the pine-tree roof, here burnt and there,

As if God's messenger thro' the close wood screen

Plunged and replunged his weapon at a venture,

Feeling for guilty thee and me : then broke

The thunder like a whole sea overhead—
Seb. Yes !

Otti.—While I stretched myself upon you, hands

To hands, my mouth to your hot mouth, and shook

All my locks loose, and covered you with
them—

You, Sebald, the same you !

Seb. Slower, Ottima—Otti. And as we lay—

Seb. Less vehemently ! Love me !
Forgive me ! take not words, mere words, to heart !

Your breath is worse than wine. Breathe slow, speak slow !

Do not lean on me !

Otti. Sebald, as we lay,
Rising and falling only with our pants, Who said, 'Let death come now ! 'tis right to die !

Right to be punished ! nought completes such bliss

But woe ! ' Who said that ?

Seb. How did we ever rise ?
Was 't that we slept ? Why did it end ?

Otti. I felt you, Tapering into a point the ruffled ends Of my loose locks 'twixt both your humid lips—

(My hair is fallen now : knot it again !)

Seb. I kiss you now, dear Ottima, now, and now !

This way ? Will you forgive me—be once more

My great queen ?

Otti. Bind it thrice about my brow ; Crown me your queen, your spirit's arbitress,

Magnificent in sin. Say that !

Seb. I crown you My great white queen, my spirit's arbitress,

Magnificent . . .

[From without is heard the voice of PIPPA, singing—

*The year's at the spring,
And day's at the morn ;
Morning's at seven ;
The hill-side's dew-pearled ;
The lark's on the wing ;
The snail's on the thorn ;
God's in His heaven—All's right with the world !*

Seb. God's in His heaven ! Do you hear that ? Who spoke ?

You, you spoke !

Otti. Oh—that little ragged girl !
She must have rested on the step : we give them

But this one holiday the whole year
round.

Did you ever see our silk-mills—their inside ?

There are ten silk-mills now belong to
you.

She stoops to pick my double hearts-ease . . . Sh !

She does not hear : call you out louder !

Seb. Leave me !
Go, get your clothes on—dress those shoulders !

Otti. Sebald ?

Seb. Wipe off that paint. I hate
you !

Otti. Miserable !

Seb. My God ! and she is emptied of it now !

Outright now !—how miraculously gone
All of the grace—had she not strange grace once ?

Why, the blank cheek hangs listless as it likes,

No purpose holds the features up together,

Only the cloven brow and puckered
chin

Stay in their places—and the very hair,
That seemed to have a sort of life in it, Drops, a dead web !

Otti. Speak to me—speak not of me !

Seb.—That round great full-orbed face, where not an angle

Broke the delicious indolence—all broken !

Otti. To me—not of me !—ungrateful, perjured cheat !

A coward, too : but ingrate's worse than all !

Beggar—my slave—a fawning, cringing lie !

Leave me ! Betray me ! I can see your drift !

A lie that walks, and eats, and drinks !
Seb. My God !

Those morbid, olive, faultless shoulder-blades—

I should have known there was no blood beneath !

Otti. You hate me, then ? You hate me, then ?

Seb. To think
She would succeed in her absurd attempt,
And fascinate by sinning ; and show herself

Superior—Guilt from its excess, superior To Innocence ! That little peasant's voice

Has righted all again. Though I be lost,

I know which is the better, never fear,

Of vice or virtue, purity or lust, Nature, or trick ! I see what I have done, Entirely now ! Oh, I am proud to feel Such torments—let the world take credit thence—

I, having done my deed, pay too its price !

I hate, hate—curse you ! God's in His
heaven !

Otti. —Me !

Me ! no, no, Sebald, not yourself—kill
me !

Mine is the whole crime—do but kill me—then

Yourself—then—presently—first hear me speak—

I always meant to kill myself—wait,
you !

Lean on my breast—not as a breast ;
don't love me

The more because you lean on me, my own Heart's Sebald ! There—there—both deaths presently !

Seb. My brain is drowned now—quite drowned : all I feel

Is . . . is, at swift-recurring intervals, A hurrying-down within me, as of waters

Loosened to smother up some ghastly pit :
There they go—whirls from a black, fiery
sea !

Otti. Not to me, God—to him be merciful !

Talk by the way, while PIPPA is passing from the Hull-side to Orcana. Foreign Students of Painting and Sculpture, from Venice, assembled opposite the house of JULES, a young French Statuary.

First Student. Attention ! my own post is beneath this window, but the pomegranate clump yonder will hide three or four of you with a little squeezing, and Schramm and his pipe must lie flat in the balcony. Four, five—who's a defaulter ? We want everybody, for Jules must not be suffered to hurt his bride when the jest's found out.

Second Stud. All here ! Only our poet's away—never having much meant to be present, moonstrike him ! The airs of that fellow, that Giovacchino ! He was in violent love with himself, and had a fair prospect of thriving in his suit, so unmolested was it,—when suddenly a woman falls in love with him, too ; and out of pure jealousy he takes himself off to Trieste, immortal poem and all —whereto is this prophetic epitaph appended already, as Bluphocks assures me—' Here a mammoth-poem lies, Fowled to death by butterflies.' His own fault, the simpleton ! Instead of cramp couplets, each like a knife in your entrails, he should write, says Bluphocks, both classically and intelligibly.—*Aesculapius an Epic. Catalogue of the drugs : Hebe's plaster—One strip Cools your lip.

Phoebus' emulsion—One bottle Clears your throat. Mercury's bolus—One box Cures . . .*

Third Stud. Subside, my fine fellow !
If the marriage was over by ten o'clock, Jules will certainly be here in a minute with his bride.

Second Stud. Good !—Only, so should the poet's muse have been universally acceptable, says Bluphocks, et canibus nostris . . . and Delia not better known to our literary dogs than the boy—Giovacchino !

First Stud. To the point, now.
Where's Gottlieb, the new-comer ? Oh, —listen, Gottlieb, to what has called down this piece of friendly vengeance on Jules, of which we now assemble to witness the winding-up. We are all agreed, all in a tale, observe, when Jules shall burst out on us in a fury by-and-by : I am spokesman—the verses that are to undeceive Jules bear my name of Lutwyche—but each professes himself alike insulted by this strutting stone-squarer, who came singly from Paris to Munich, and thence with a crowd of us, to Venice and Possagno here, but proceeds in a day or two alone again—oh, alone, indubitably !—to Rome and Florence. He, forsooth, take up his portion with these dissolute, brutalized, heartless bunglers !—So he was heard to call us all : now, is Schramm brutalized, I should like to know ? Am I heartless ?

Gott. Why, somewhat heartless ; for.

suppose Jules a coxcomb as much as you choose, still, for this mere coxcombry, you will have brushed off—what do folks style it?—the bloom of his life. Is it too late to alter? These love-letters, now, you call his—I can't laugh at them.

Fourth Stud. Because you never read the sham letters of our inditing which drew forth these.

Gott. His discovery of the truth will be frightful.

Fourth Stud. That's the joke. But you should have joined us at the beginning: there's no doubt he loves the girl—loves a model he might hire by the hour!

Gott. See here! 'He has been accustomed,' he writes, 'to have Canova's women about him, in stone, and the world's women beside him, in flesh; these being as much below, as those, above—his soul's aspiration: but now he is to have the real.' There you laugh again! I say, you wipe off the very dew of his youth.

First Stud. Schramm! (Take the pipe out of his mouth, somebody). Will Jules lose the bloom of his youth?

Schramm. Nothing worth keeping is ever lost in this world: look at a blossom—it drops presently, having done its service and lasted its time; but fruits succeed, and where would be the blossom's place could it continue? As well affirm that your eye is no longer in your body, because its earliest favourite, whatever it may have first loved to look on, is dead and done with—as that any affection is lost to the soul when its first object, whatever happened first to satisfy it, is superseded in due course. Keep but ever looking, whether with the body's eye or the mind's, and you will soon find something to look on! Has a man done wondering at women?—There follow men, dead and alive, to wonder at. Has he done wondering at men?—There's God to wonder at: and the faculty of wonder may be, at the same time, old and tired enough with respect to its first object, and yet young and fresh sufficiently, so far as concerns its novel one. Thus...

First Stud. Put Schramm's pipe into his mouth again! There, you see! Well, this Jules... a wretched fribble—oh, I watched his disportings at Possagno, the other day! Canova's gallery—you know: there he marches first resolutely past great works by the dozen without vouchsafing an eye: all at once he stops full at the Psyche-fanciulla—cannot pass that old acquaintance without a nod of encouragement—'In your new place, beauty? Then behave yourself as well here as at Munich—I see you!' Next he posts himself deliberately before the unfinished Pietà for half an hour without moving, till up he starts of a sudden, and thrusts his very nose into—I say, into—the group; by which gesture you are informed that precisely the sole point he had not fully mastered in Canova's practice was a certain method of using the drill in the articulation of the knee-joint—and that, likewise, has he mastered at length! Good bye, therefore, to poor Canova—whose gallery no longer needs detain his successor Jules, the predestinated novel thinker in marble!

Fifth Stud. Tell him about the women: go on to the women!

First Stud. Why, on that matter he could never be supercilious enough. How should we be other (he said) than the poor devils you see, with those debasing habits we cherish? He was not to wallow in that mire, at least: he would wait, and love only at the proper time, and meanwhile put up with the Psyche-fanciulla. Now I happened to hear of a young Greek—real Greek girl at Malamocco; a true Islander, do you see, with Alciphron's 'hair like sea-moss'—Schramm knows!—white and quiet as an apparition, and fourteen years old at farthest,—a daughter of Natalia, so she swears—that hag Natalia, who helps us to models at three lire an hour. We selected this girl for the heroine of our jest. So, first, Jules received a scented letter—somebody had seen his Tydeus at the academy, and my picture was nothing to it—a profound admirer bade him persevere—would make herself known to him ere long—(Paolina, my little friend of the Fenice, transcribes divinely). And in due time, the mysterious correspondent gave certain hints of her peculiar charms—the pale cheeks, the black hair—whatever, in short, had struck us in our Malamocco model: we retained her name, too—Phene, which is by interpretation, sea-eagle. Now, think of Jules finding himself distinguished from the herd of us by such a creature! In his very first answer he proposed marrying his monitress: and fancy us over these letters, two, threetimes a day, to receive and dispatch! I concocted the main of it: relations were in the way—secrecy must be observed—in fine, would he wed her on trust, and only speak to her when they were indissolubly united? St—st—Here they come!

Sixth Stud. Both of them! Heaven's love, speak softly! speak within yourselves!

Fifth Stud. Look at the bridegroom! Half his hair in storm, and half in calm,—patted down over the left temple,—like a frothy cup one blows on to cool it! and the same old blouse that he murders the marble in!

Second Stud. Not a rich vest like yours, Hannibal Scratchy!—rich, that your face may the better set it off.

Sixth Stud. And the bride! Yes, sure enough, our Phene! Should you have known her in her clothes? How magnificently pale!

Gott. She does not also take it for earnest, I hope?

First Stud. Oh, Natalia's concern, that is! We settle with Natalia.

Sixth Stud. She does not speak—has evidently let out no word. The only thing is, will she equally remember the rest of her lesson, and repeat correctly all those verses which are to break the secret to Jules?

Gott. How he gazes on her! Pity—pity!

First Stud. They go in—now, silence! You three,—not nearer the window, mind, than that pomegranate—just where the little girl, who a few minutes ago passed us singing, is seated!

II.—Noon. Over Orcana. The House of JULES, who crosses its threshold with PHENE: she is silent, on which JULES begins—

Do not die, Phene! I am yours now, you Are mine now; let fate reach me how she likes,

If you'll not die—so, never die! Sit here—

My work-room's single seat. I over-lean

This length of hair and lustrous front; they turn

Like an entire flower upward: eyes—lips—last

Your chin—no, last your throat turns—'tis their scent

Pulls down my face upon you! Nay, look ever

This one way till I change, grow you—I could Change into you, Beloved!

You by me, And I by you; this is your hand in mine, And side by side we sit: all's true.

Thank God!

I have spoken: speak, you!

O, my life to come! My Tydeus must be carved, that's there in clay;

Yet how be carved, with you about the chamber?

Where must I place you? When I think that once

This room—full of rough block-work seemed my heaven

Without you! Shall I ever work again, Get fairly into my old ways again,

Bid each conception stand while, trait by trait,

My hand transfers its lineaments to stone?

Will my mere fancies live near you, my truth—

The live truth, passing and repassing me, Sitting beside me?

Now speak!

Only, first, See, all your letters! Was't not well contrived?

Their hiding-place is Psyche's robe; she keeps

Your letters next her skin : which drops out foremost ?

Ah,—this that swam down like a first moonbeam

Into my world !

Again those eyes complete Theirmelancholysurvey, sweetand slow, Of all my room holds ; to return and
rest

On me, with pity, yet some wonder too—As if God bade some spirit plague a
world,

And this were the one moment of surprise

And sorrow while she took her station, pausing

O'er what she sees, finds good, and must destroy !

What gaze you at ? Those ? Books, I told you of ;

Let your first word to me rejoice them,
too :

This minion, a Coluthus, writ in red Bistre and azure by Bessarion's scribe—Read this line . . . no, shame—Homer's be the Greek

First breathed me from the lips of my Greek girl !

My Odyssey in coarse black vivid type With faded yellow blossoms 'twixt page and page,

To mark great places with due gratitude ;
'He said, and on Antinous directed A bitter shaft' . . . a flower blots out the
rest !

Again upon your search ? My statues,
then !

—Ah, do not mind that—better that will
look

When cast in bronze—an Almaign Kaiser, that,

Swart-green and gold, with truncheon based on hip.

This, rather, turn to ! What, unrecognized ?

I thought you would have seen that here you sit

As I imagined you,—Hippolyta, Naked upon her bright Numidian horse !
Recall you this, then ? 'Carve in bold relief'—

So you commanded—'carve, against I come,

A Greek, in Athens, as our fashion was,
Feasting, bay-filleted and thunder-free, Who rises 'neath the lifted myrtle-branch :

"Praise those who slew Hipparchus," cry the guests,

"While o'er thy head the singer's myrtle waves

As erst above our champions' : stand up,
all !"

See, I have laboured to express your thought !

Quite round, a cluster of mere hands and arms,

(Thrust in all senses, all ways, from all sides,

Only consenting at the branch's end They strain toward) serves for frame to a sole face,

The Praiser's, in the centre—who with
eyes

Sightless, so bend they back to light inside

His brain where visionary forms throng
up,

Sings, minding not that palpitating arch Of hands and arms, nor the quick drip of wine

From the drenched leaves o'erhead, nor crowns cast off,

Violetand parsleycrowns to trample on—Sings, pausing as the patron-ghosts approve,

Devoutly their unconquerable hymn !

But you must say a 'well' to that—say,
'well !'

Because you gaze—am I fantastic,
sweet ?

Gaze like my very life's-stuff, marble—marbly

Even to the silence ! why, before I
found

The real flesh Phene, I inured myself To see, throughout all nature, varied stuff

For better nature's birth by means of art.

With me, each substance tended to one
form

Of beauty—to the human archetype.
On every side occurred suggestive germs

Of that—the tree, the flower—or take the fruit,—

Some rosy shape, continuing the peach, Curved beewise o'er its bough; as rosy limbs,

Depending, nestled in the leaves; and just

From a cleft rose-peach the whole Dryad sprang.

But of the stuffs one can be master of,
How I divined their capabilities!

From the soft-rinded smoothening facile chalk

That yields your outline to the air's
embrace,

Half-softened by a halo's pearly gloom;
Down to the crisp imperious steel, so
sure

To cut its one confided thought clean out Of all the world. But marble!—'neath my tools

More pliable than jelly—as it were Some clear primordial creature dug from depths

In the earth's heart, where itself breeds
itself,

And whence all baser substance may be worked;

Refine it off to air, you may,—condense it Down to the diamond;—is not metal
there,

When o'er the sudden specks my chisel trips?

—Not flesh, as flake off flake I scale, approach,

Lay bare those bluish veins of blood Lurks flame in no strange windings where, surprised

By the swift implement sent home at
once,

Flushes and glowings radiate and hover About its track?

Phene? what—why is this?
That whitening cheek, those stilldilating eyes!

Ah, you will die—I knew that you would
die!

PHENE begins, on his having long remained silent.

Now the end's coming; to be sure, it must

Have ended sometime! Tush, why need
I speak

Their foolish speech? I cannot bring to mind

One half of it, besides; and do not care
For old Natalia now, nor any of them.

Oh, you—what are you?—if I do not try

To say the words Natalia made me learn, To please your friends,—it is to keep
myself

Where your voice lifted me, by letting it Proceed: but can it? Even you, perhaps,

Cannot take up, now you have once let
fall,

The music's life, and me along with that—No, or you would! We'll stay, then, as we are:

Above the world.

You creature with the eyes!
If I could look for ever up to them,
As now you let me,—I believe, all sin, All memory of wrong done or suffering borne,

Would drop down, low and lower, to the
earth

Whence all that's low comes, and there touch and stay

Never to overtake the rest of me,
All that, unspotted, reaches up to you, Drawn by those eyes! What rises is
myself,

Not so the shame and suffering; but they sink,

Are left, I rise above them. Keep me so,
Above the world!

But you sink, for your eyes Are altering—altered! Stay—I love you, love you' . . .

I could prevent it if I understood:
More of your words to me: was't in the tone

Or the words, your power?

Or stay—I will repeat Their speech, if that contents you! Only,

No more, and I shall find it presently —Far back here, in the brain yourself filled up.

Natalia threatened me that harm would follow

Unless I spoke their lesson to the end, But harm to me, I thought she meant,
not you.

Your friends,—Natalia said they were your friends And meant you well,—because, I doubted it, Observing (what was very strange to see)
 On every face, so different in all else, The same smile girls like us are used to
 bear,
 But never men, men cannot stoop so low;
 Yet your friends, speaking of you, used that smile,
 That hateful smirk of boundless selfconceit
 Which seems to take possession of this world
 And make of God their tame confederate, Purveyor to their appetites . . . you
 know!
 But no—Natalia said they were your
 friends,
 And they assented while they smiled the
 more,
 And all came round me,—that thin Englishman With light, lank hair seemed leader of
 the rest;
 He held a paper—‘What we want,’ said he,
 Ending some explanation to his friends—‘Is something slow, involved and mystical,
 To hold Jules long in doubt, yet take his taste
 And lure him on, so that, at innermost Where he seeks sweetness’ soul, he may find—this!
 —As in the apple’s core, the noisome fly:
 For insects on the rind are seen at once, And brushed aside as soon, but this is
 found Only when on the lips or loathing tongue.’
 And so he read what I have got by heart—I’ll speak it,—‘Do not die, love! I am
 yours’ . . .
 Stop—is not that, or like that, part of words Yourself began by speaking? Strange to lose What cost such pains to learn! Is this more right?

*I am a painter who cannot paint;
 In my life, a devil rather than saint,*

*In my brain, as poor a creature too:
 No end to all I cannot do!
 Yet do one thing at least I can—Love a man, or hate a man Supremely: thus my lore began.
 Through the Valley of Love I went,
 In its loveliest spot to abide,
 And just on the verge where I pitched my tent,
 I found Hate dwelling beside.
 (Let the Bridegroom ask what the painter meant,
 Of his Bride, of the peerless Bride!)
 And further, I traversed Hate’s grove,
 In its hatefullest nook to dwell;
 But lo, where I flung myself prone, couched Love
 Where the deepest shadow fell.
 (The meaning—those black bride’seyes above,
 Not the painter’s lip should tell!)*

‘And here,’ said he, ‘Jules probably will ask,
 You have black eyes, love,—you are, sure
 enough,
 My peerless bride,—so, do you tell,
 indeed,
 What needs some explanation—what means this?’
 —And I am to go on, without a word—

*So, I grew wiser in Love and Hate, From simple, that I was of late.
 For once, when I loved, I would enlase Breast, eyelids, hands, feet, form and
 face
 Of her I loved, in one embrace—As if by mere love I could love immensely!
 And when I hated, I would plunge
 My sword, and wipe with the first lunge
 My foe’s whole life out, like a sponge—As if by mere hate I could hate in-But now I am wiser, know better the fashion How passion seeks aid from its opposite passion,
 And if I see cause to love more, or hate more Than ever man loved, ever hated,
 before—*

*And seek in the Valley of Love,
The spot, or the spot in Hate's Grove, Where my soul may the surest
reach*

*The essence, nought less, of each,
The Hate of all Hates, or the Love Of all Loves, in its Valley or Grove,— I find them the very warders Each of the other's borders.*

I love most, when Love is disguised In Hate; and when Hate is surprised

In Love, then I hate most: ask How Love smiles through Hate's iron casque,

Hate grins through Love's rosebraided mask,—

*And how, having hated thee, I sought long and painfully To wound thee, and not prick
The skin, but pierce to the quick—Ask this, my Jules, and be answered straight*

By thy bride—how the painter Lutwyche can hate!

JULES interposes.

Lutwyche! who else? But all of them,
no doubt,

Hated me: they at Venice—presently Their turn, however! You I shall not meet:

If I dreamed, saying this would wake me! Keep

What's here, this gold—we cannot meet
again,

Consider—and the money was but meant For two years' travel, which is over now.
All chance, or hope, or care, or need of
it!

This—and what comes from selling these, my casts

And books, and medals, except . . . let them go

Together, so the produce keeps you safe,
Out of Natalia's clutches!—If by chance (For all's chance here) I should survive the gang

At Venice, root out all fifteen of them, We might meet somewhere, since the world is wide.

[From without is heard the voice of PIPPA, singing—

*Give her but a least excuse to love me!
When—where—How—can this arm establish her above
me,*

*If fortune fixed her as my lady there,
There already, to eternally reprove me?
(‘Hist’—said Kate the queen; But ‘Oh’—cried the maiden, binding her tresses,*

‘Tis only a page that carols unseen Crumbling your hounds their messes!’)

Is she wronged?—To the rescue of her honour,

*My heart!
Is she poor?—What costs it to be styled a donor?*

Merely an earth's to cleave, a sea's to part!

But that fortune should have thrust all this upon her!

*(‘Nay, list,’—bade Kate the queen;
And still cried the maiden, binding her tresses,*

‘Tis only a page that carols unseen Fitting your hawks their jesses!’)

[PIPPA passes.

JULES resumes.

What name was that the little girl sang
forth?

Kate? The Cornaro, doubtless, who renounced

The crown of Cyprus to be lady here At Asolo, where still the peasants keep Her memory; and songs tell how many a page

Pined for the grace of one so far above His power of doing good to, as a queen—‘She never could be wronged, be poor,’ he sighed,

‘For him to help her!’

Yes, a bitter thing

To see our lady above all need of us;
Yet so we look ere we will love; not I, But the world looks so. If whoever loves

Must be, in some sort, god or worshipper, The blessing or the blest one, queen or page,

Why should we always choose the page's
part?

Here is a woman with utter need of
me,—

I find myself queen here, it seems !
How strange !
Look at the woman here with the new
soul,
Like my own Psyche's,—fresh upon her lips
Alit, the visionary butterfly, Waiting my word to enter and make bright,
Or flutter off and leave all blank as first.
This body had no soul before, but slept Or stirred, was beauteous or ungainly,
free
From taint or foul with stain, as outward things
Fastened their image on its passiveness :
Now, it will wake, feel, live—or die
again !
Shall to produce form out of unshaped stuff
Be Art—and, further, to evoke a soul From form, be nothing ? This new soul is mine !

Now, to kill Lutwyche, what would that do ?—save A wretched dauber, men will hoot to
death Without me, from their laughter ! Oh, to hear
God's voice plain as I heard it first,
before They broke in with that laughter ! I heard them Henceforth, not God.

To Ancona—Greece—some isle!
I wanted silence only: there is clay Everywhere. One may do whate'er one likes

In Art: the only thing is, to make sure That one does like it—which takes pains
to know.

Scatter all this, my Phene—this mad dream !

Who, what is Lutwyche, what Natalia's friends.

What the whole world except our love—my own.

Own Phone? But I told you, did I not, Ere night we travel for your land—some isle

With the sea's silence on it? Stand
aside—

I do but break these paltry models up To begin Art afresh. Shall I meet

Lutwyche,
And save him from my statue's meeting
him?

Some unsuspected isle in the far seas !
Like a god going through his world there stands

One mountain for a moment in the dusk, Whole brotherhoods of cedars on its
brow :

And you are ever by me while I gaze —Are in my arms as now—as now—as
now!

Some unsuspected isle in the far seas !
Some unsuspected isle in far-off seas !

Talk by the way, while PIPPA is passing from Orcana to the Turret. Two or three of the Austrian Police loitering with BLUPHOCKS, an English vagabond, just in view of the Turret.

Bluphocks ¹. So, that is your Pippa, the little girl who passed us singing? Well, your Bishop's Intendant's money shall be honestly earned:—now, don't make me that sour face because I bring the Bishop's name into the business—we know he can have nothing to do with such horrors—we know that he is a saint and all that a Bishop should be, who is a great man besides. Oh! were but every worm a maggot, Every fly a grig, Every bough a Christmas faggot, Every tune a jig! In fact, I have abjured all religions; but the last I inclined to, was the Armenian—for I have travelled, do you see, and at Koenigsberg, Prussia Improper (so styled because there's a sort of bleak hungry sun there,) you might remark over a venerable house-porch, a certain Chaldee inscription; and brief as it is, a mere glance at it used absolutely to change the mood of every bearded passenger. In they turned, one and all; the young and lightsome, with no irreverent pause, the aged and decrepit, with a sensible alacrity,—'twas the Grand Rabbi's abode, in short. Struck with curiosity, I lost no time in learning Syriac—(these are vowels, you dogs,—follow my stick's end in the mud—Celarent, Darii, Ferio!) and one morning presented myself spelling-book in hand, a, b, c,—I picked it out letter by letter, and what was the purport of this miraculous posy? Some cherished legend of the Past, you'll say—'How Moses hocus-pocust Egypt's land with fly and locust,'—or, 'How to Jonah sounded harshish, Get thee up and go to Tarshish,'—or, 'How the angel meeting Balaam, Straight his ass returned a salaam.' In no wise! 'Shackabrach—Boach—somebody or other—Isaach, Re-vei-ver, Pur-cha-ser and Ex-chan-ger of—Stolen Goods!' So, talk to me of the religion of a bishop! I have renounced all bishops save Bishop Beveridge—mean to live so—and die—As some Greek dog-sage, dead and merry, Hellward bound in Charon's wherry—With food for both worlds, under and upper, Lupine-seed and Hecate's supper, And never an obolus . . . (Though thanks to you, or this Intendant through you, or this Bishop through his Intendant—I possess a burning pocket-full of zwanzigers) . . . To pay the Stygian ferry!

First Pol. There is the girl, then; go and deserve them the moment you have pointed out to us Signor Luigi and his mother. (To the rest) I have been noticing a house yonder, this long while: not a shutter unclosed since morning!

Second Pol. Old Luca Gaddi's, that owns the silk-mills here: he dozes by the hour, wakes up, sighs deeply, says he should like to be Prince Metternich, and then dozes again, after having bidden young Sebald, the foreigner, set his wife to playing draughts: never molest such a household, they mean well.

Blup. Only, cannot you tell me something of this little Pippa, I must have to do with? One could make something of that name. Pippa—that is, short for Felippa—rhyming to Panurge consults Hetrrippa—Believ et thou, King Agrippa? Something might be done with that name.

Second Pol. Put into rhyme that your head and a ripe musk-melon would not be dear at half a zwanziger! Leave this fooling, and look out: the afternoon 's over or nearly so.

Third Pol. Where in this passport of Signor Luigi does our Principal instruct you to watch him so narrowly? There? what 's there beside a simple signature? (That English fool 's busy watching.)

Second Pol. Flourish all round—'Put all possible obstacles in his way; ' oblong dot at the end—'Detain him till further advices reach you; ' scratch at bottom—'Send him back on pretence of some informality in the above; ' ink-spirit on right-hand side, (which is the case here)—'Arrest him at once.' Why and wherefore, I don't concern myself, but my instructions amount to this: if Signor Luigi leaves home to-night for Vienna, well and good—the passport deposed with us for our visa is really for his own use, they have misinformed the Office, and he means well; but let him stay over to-night—there has been the pretence we suspect, the accounts of his corresponding and holding intelligence with the Carbonari are correct, we arrest him at once, to-morrow comes Venice, and presently, Spielberg. Bluphocks makes the signal, sure enough! That is he, entering the turret with his mother; no doubt.

III.—Evening. Inside the Turret. LUIGI and his Mother entering.

Mother. If there blew wind, you'd hear a long sigh, easing The utmost heaviness of music's heart.

Luigi. Here in the archway?

Mother. Oh no, no—in farther, Where the echo is made, on the ridge.

Luigi. Here surely, then. How plain the tap of my heel as I leaped up!

Hark—'Lucius Junius!' The very ghost of a voice, Whose body is caught and kept by . . . what are those?

Mere withered wallflowers, waving overhead?

They seem an elvish group with thin bleached hair
Who lean out of their topmost fortress—looking And listening, mountain men, to what we say, Hands under chin of each grave earthy
face :
Up and show faces all of you !—‘ *All of
you !* ’

That’s the king’s dwarf with the scarlet comb ; now hark—Come down and meet your fate ! Hark —‘ Meet your fate ! ’

Mother. Let him not meet it, my Luigi—do not Go to his City ! putting crime aside, Half of these ills of Italy are feigned :
Your Pellicos and writers for effect, Write for effect.

Luigi. Hush ! say A. writes, and B.

Mother. These A.’s and B.’s write for effect, I say.

Then, evil is in its nature loud, while
good

Is silent ; you hear each petty injury, None of his daily virtues ; he is old,
Quiet, and kind, and densely stupid.

Why

Do A. and B. not kill him themselves ?

Luigi. They teach Others to kill him—me—and, if I fail, Others to succeed ; now, if A. tried and failed,

I could not teach that : mine’s the lesser task.

Mother. They visit night by night . . .

Mother. —You, Luigi ?
Ah, will you let me tell you what you
are ?

Luigi. Why not ? Oh, the one thing you fear to hint,

You may assure yourself I say and say Ever to myself ; at times—nay, even as now

We sit, I think my mind is touched—suspect

All is not sound : but is not knowing that,
What constitutes one sane or otherwise ?
I know I am thus—so all is right again !
I laugh at myself as through the town
I walk,

And see men merry as if no Italy

Were suffering ; then I ponder—‘ I am rich,

Young, healthy ; why should this fact trouble me,
More than it troubles these ? ’ But it does trouble !

No—trouble’s a bad word—for as I walk There’s springing and melody and giddiness,

And old quaint turns and passages of my youth—

Dreams long forgotten, little in themselves—

Return to me—whatever may amuse me, And earth seems in a truce with me, and
heaven

Accords with me, all things suspend their strife,

The very cicale laugh ‘ There goes he,
and there ’

Feast him, the time is short ; he is on his way

For the world’s sake : feast him this once, our friend !

And in return for all this, I can trip Cheerfully up the scaffold-steps. I go This evening, mother !

Mother. But mistrust yourself—Mistrust the judgment you pronounce on him.

Luigi. Oh, there I feel—am sure that I am right !

Mother. Mistrust your judgment, then, of the mere means

Of this wild enterprise : say, you are right,—

How should one in your state e’er bring to pass

What would require a cool head, a cold
heart,

And a calm hand ? You never will escape.

Luigi. Escape—to even wish that, would spoil all !

The dying is best part of it. Too much Have I enjoyed these fifteen years of
mine,

To leave myself excuse for longer life—
Was not life pressed down, running o’er with joy,

That I might finish with it ere my fellows

Who, sparerlier feasted, make a longer stay ?

I was put at the board-head, helped to all
 At first; I rise up happy and content.
 God must be glad one loves His world so much!
 I can give news of earth to all the dead
 Who ask me:—last year's sunsets, and great stars That had a right to come first and see ebb
 The crimson wave that drifts the sun away—Those crescent moons with notched and burning rims That strengthened into sharp fire, and there stood, Impatient of the azure—and that day In March, a double rainbow stopped the storm—May's warm, slow, yellow moonlit summer nights—Gone are they, but I have them in my soul!

Mother. (He will not go!)

Luigi. You smile at me! 'Tis true,— Voluptuousness, grotesqueness, ghastliness, Environ my devotedness as quaintly
 As round about some antique altar wreath
 The rose festoons, goats' horns, and oxen's skulls.

Mother. See now: you reach the city, you must cross His threshold—how?

Luigi. Oh, that's if we conspired!
 Then would come pains in plenty, as you guess—
 But guess not how the qualities most fit For such an office, qualities I have,
 Would little stead me otherwise employed, Yet prove of rarest merit here, here only.
 Every one knows for what his excellence Will serve, but no one ever will consider For what his worst defect might serve;
 and yet
 Have you not seen me range our coppice yonder
 In search of a distorted ash?—it happens
 The wry spoilt branch's a natural perfect bow!

Fancy the thrice-sage, thrice-precautioned man Arriving at the palace on my errand!
 No, no! I have a handsome dress packed up—White satin here, to set off my black hair.
 In I shall march—for you may watch your life out Behind thick walls, make friends there to betray you;
 More than one man spoils everything.
 March straight—Only, no clumsy knife to fumble for.
 Take the great gate, and walk (not saunter) on Thro' guards and guards—I have rehearsed it all Inside the Turret here a hundred times!
 Don't ask the way of whom you meet, observe!
 But where they cluster thickest is the door Of doors; they'll let you pass—they'll never blab Each to the other, he knows not the favourite, Whence he is bound and what's his business now.
 Walk in—straight up to him; you have no knife:
 Be prompt, how should he scream?
 Then, out with you!
 Italy, Italy, my Italy!
 You're free, you're free! Oh mother, I could dream
 They got about me—Andrea from his exile, Pier from his dungeon, Gualtier from his grave!
Mother. Well, you shall go. Yet seems this patriotism
 The easiest virtue for a selfish man To acquire! He loves himself—and next, the world—
 If he must love beyond,—but nought between:
 As a short-sighted man sees nought midway His body and the sun above. But you Are my adored Luigi—ever obedient To my least wish, and running o'er with love—

I could not call you cruel or unkind.
Once more, your ground for killing him ?
—then go !

Luigi. Now do you ask me, or make sport of me ?

How first the Austrians got these provinces . . .

(If that is all, I'll satisfy you soon) —Never by conquest but by cunning,
for

That treaty whereby . . .
Mother. Well ?

Luigi. (Sure he's arrived,
The tell-tale cuckoo : spring's his confident,

And he lets out her April purposes !)
Or . . . better go at once to modern times.

He has . . . they have . . . in fact, I understand

But can't restate the matter ; that's my boast :

Others could reason it out to you, and prove

Things they have made me feel.

Mother. Why go to-night ?
Morn' for adventure. Jupiter is now A morning-star. I cannot hear you, Luigi !

Luigi. 'I am the bright and morning-star,' God saith—

And, 'to such an one I give the morning-star !'

The gift of the morning-star—have I God's gift

Of the morning-star ?

Mother. Chiara will love to see That Jupiter an evening-star next June.

Luigi. True, mother. Well for those who live through June !

Great noontides, thunder-storms, all glaring pomps

Which triumph at the heels of the god June

Leading his revel through our leafy world.

Yes, Chiara will be here.

Mother. In June : remember, Yourself appointed that month for her coming.

Luigi. Was that low noise the echo ?

Mother. The night-wind.

She must be grown—with her blue eyes upturned

As if life were one long and sweet surprise :

In June she comes.

Luigi. We were to see together
The Titian at Treviso—there, again !

[From without is heard the voice of PIPPA, singing—

*A king lived long ago,
In the morning of the world,
When earth was nigher heaven than now :*

And the king's locks curled Disparting o'er a forehead full As the milk-white space 'twixt horn and horn

*Of some sacrificial bull—Only calm as a babe new-born :
For he was got to a sleepy mood,
So safe from all decrepitude, Age with its bane, so sure gone by,
(The Gods so loved him while he dreamed,)*

That, having lived thus long, there seemed

No need the king should ever die.

Luigi. No need that sort of king should ever die !

Among the rocks his city was :

Before his palace, in the sun,

He sat to see his people pass,

And judge them every one

From its threshold of smooth stone.

They haled him many a valley-thief

Caught in the sheep-pens—robber-chief,

Swarthy and shameless—beggar-cheat—

Spy-prowler—or rough pirate found On the sea-sand left aground ;

And sometimes clung about his feet,

With bleeding lip and burning cheek,

A woman, bitterest wrong to speak

Of one with sullen, thickset brows :

And sometimes from the prison-house

The angry priests a pale wretch brought,

Who through some chink had pushed and pressed,

On knees and elbows, belly and breast,

Worm-like into the temple,—caught

At last there by the very God, Who ever in the darkness strode Backward and forward, keeping watch O'er his brazen bowls, such rogues to catch !

*And these, all and every one,
The king judged, sitting in the sun.*

Luigi. That king should still judge sitting in the sun !

His councillors, on left and right, Looked anxious up,—but no surprise Disturbed the king's old smiling eyes, Where the very blue had turned to white.

*'Tis said, a Python scared one day
The breathless city, till he came,
With forked tongue and eyes on flame,
Where the old king sat to judge away;
But when he saw the sweepy hair, Girt with a crown of berries rare Which the God will hardly give to wear*

To the maiden who singeth, dancing bare

In the altar-smoke by the pine-torch lights,

At his wondrous forest rites,— Beholding this, he did not dare Approach that threshold in the sun, Assault the old king smiling there.

Such grace had kings when the world begun ! [PIPPA passes.

Luigi. And such grace have they, now that the world ends !

The Python in the city, on the throne, And brave men, God would crown for slaying him,

*Lurkin by-corners lest they fall his prey.
Are crowns yet to be won, in this late
time,*

Which weakness makes me hesitate to reach ?

*'Tis God's voice calls, how could I stay ?
Farewell !*

Talk by the way, while PIPPA is passing from the Turret to the Bishop's brother's House, close to the Duomo S. Maria. Poor Girls sitting on the steps.

First Girl. There goes a swallow to Venice—the stout seafarer !

Seeing those birds fly, makes one wish for wings.

Let us all wish ; you, wish first !

Second Girl. I ? This sunset To finish.

*Third Girl. That old—somebody I
know,*

*Greyer and older than my grandfather,
To give me the same treat he gave last week—*

Feeding me on his knee with fig-peckers, Lampreys, and red Breganze-wine, and mumbling

The whole some folly about how well I fare,

To be let eat my supper quietly :

Since had he not himself been late this morning

Detained at—never mind where,—had he not . . .

' Eh, baggage, had I not ! '— Second Girl. How she can lie !

Third Girl. Look there — by the nails !

Second Girl. What makes your fingers red ?

Third Girl. Dipping them into wine to write bad words with,

*On the bright table : how he laughed !
First Girl. My turn.*

Spring's come and summer's coming : I would wear

*A long loose gown, down to the feet and
hands,*

*With plaits here, close about the throat,
all day :*

And all night lie, the cool long nights, in bed—

And have new milk to drink—apples to eat,

*Deuzans and junetings, leather-coats . . .
ah, I should say,*

*This is away in the fields—miles !
Third Girl. Say at once*

You'd be at home : she'd always be at home !

Now comes the story of the farm among The cherry orchards, and how April snowed

*White blossoms on her as she ran : why,
fool,*

They've rubbed out the chalk-mark of how tall you were,

Twisted your starling's neck, broken his cage,
Made a dunghill of your garden !

First Girl. They, destroy My garden since I left them ? well—
perhaps !

I would have done so : so I hope they have !

A fig-tree curled out of our cottage wall ;
They called it mine, I have forgotten
why,

It must have been there long ere I was born :

Cric—cric—I think I hear the wasps o'erhead

Pricking the papers strung to flutter
there

And keep off birds in fruit-time—coarse long papers,

And the wasps eat them, prick them through and through.

Third Girl. How her mouth twitches !
Where was I ?—before

She broke in with her wishes and long gowns

And wasps—would I be such a fool !—
Oh, here !

This is my way—I answer every one Who asks me why I make so much of
him—

(If you say, you love him—straight 'he'll not be gulled !')

'He that seduced me when I was a girl Thus high—had eyes like yours, or hair like yours,

Brown, red, white,'—as the case may be—that pleases !

See how that beetle burnishes in the path—

There sparkles he along the dust ! and,
there—

Your journey to that maize-tuft's spoil at least !

First Girl. When I was young, they said if you killed one

Of those sunshiny beetles, that his
friend

Up there, would shine no more that day nor next.

Second Girl. When you were young ?
Nor are you young, that's true !

How your plump arms, that were, have dropped away !

Why, I can span them ! Cecco beats you stall ?

No matter, so you keep your curious
hair.

I wish they'd find a way to dye our hair

Your colour—any lighter tint, indeed, Than black : the men say they are sick of black,

Black eyes, black hair !

Fourth Girl. Sick of yours, like
enough !

Do you pretend you ever tasted lam-preys

And ortolans ? Giovita, of the palace, Engaged (but there's no trusting him) to shce me

Polenta with a knife that had cut up An ortolan.

Second Girl. Why, there ! is not that Pippa

We are to talk to, under the window,— quick,—

Where the lights are ?

First Girl. No—or she would sing ;
For the Intendant said . . .

Third Girl. Oh, you sing first—Then, if she listens and comes close . . .

I'll tell you,
Sing that song the young English noble
made,

Who took you for the purest of the pure,

And meant to leave the world for you—what fun !

Second Girl. [Sings.]

You'll love me yet !—and I can tarry Your love's protracted growing :

June reared that bunch of flowers you carry,
From seeds of April's sowing.

I plant a heartfull now : some seed
At least is sure to strike,
And yield—what you'll not pluck indeed,
Not love, but, may be, like !

You'll look at least on love's remains,
A grave's one violet :

Your look ?—that pays a thousand pains.
What's death !—You'll love me yet !

Third Girl. [To PIPPA who approaches.]

Oh, you may come closer—we shall not eat you ! Why, you seem the very person that the great rich handsome Englishman has fallen so violently in love with ! I'll tell you all about it.

IV.—Night. The Palace by the Duomo.
MONSIGNOR, dismissing his Attendants:

Mon. Thanks, friends, many thanks. I chiefly desire life now, that I may recompense every one of you. Most I know something of already. What, a repast prepared? Benedicto benedicatur... ugh... ugh! Where was I? Oh, as you were remarking, Ugo, the weather is mild, very unlike winter-weather,—but I am a Sicilian, you know, and shiver in your Julys here. To be sure, when 'twas full summer at Messina, as we priests used to cross in procession the great square on Assumption Day, you might see our thickest yellow tapers twist suddenly in two, each like a falling star, or sink down on themselves in a gore of wax. But go, my friends, but go! [To the Intendant] Not you, Ugo! [The others leave the apartment] I have long wanted to converse with you, Ugo!

Inten. Uguccio—

Mon. . . . 'guccio Stefani, man! of Ascoli. Fermo, and Fossombruno;—what I do need instructing about, are these accounts of your administration of my poor brother's affairs. Ugh! I shall never get through a third part of your accounts: take some of these dainties before we attempt it, however. Are you bashful to that degree? For me, a crust and water suffice.

Inten. Do you choose this especial night to question me?

Mon. This night, Ugo. You have managed my late brother's affairs since the death of our elder brother: fourteen years and a month, all but three days. On the 3rd of December, I find him . . .

Inten. If you have so intimate an acquaintance with your brother's affairs, you will be tender of turning so far back: they will hardly bear looking into, so far back.

Mon. Ay, ay, ugh, ugh,—nothing but disappointments here below! I remark a considerable payment made to yourself on this 3rd of December. Talk of disappointments! There was a young fellow here, Jules, a foreign sculptor, I did my utmost to advance, that the Church might be a gainer by us both: he was going on hopefully enough, and of a sudden he notifies to me some marvellous change that has happened in his notions of Art; here's his letter,—

'He never had a clearly conceived Ideal within his brain till to-day. Yet since his hand could manage a chisel, he has practised expressing other men's Ideals; and, in the very perfection he has attained to, he foresees an ultimate failure: his unconscious hand will pursue its prescribed course of old years, and will reproduce with a fatal expertness the ancient types, let the novel one appear never so palpably to his spirit. There is but one method of escape—confiding the virgin type to as chaste a hand, he will turn painter instead of sculptor, and paint, not carve, its characteristics.'—strike out, I dare say, a school like Correggio: how thank you, Ugo?

Mon. Foolish Jules! and yet, after all, why foolish? He may—probably will, fail egregiously; but if there should arise a new painter, will it not be in some such way by a poet, now, or a musician, (spirits who have conceived and perfected an Ideal through some other channel) transferring it to this, and escaping our conventional roads by pure ignorance of them; eh, Ugo? If you have no appetite, talk at least, Ugo!

Inten. Sir, I can submit no longer to this course of yours: first, you select the group of which I formed one,—next you thin it gradually,—always retaining me with your smile,—and so do you proceed till you have fairly got me alone with you between four stone walls. And now then? Let this farce, this chatter end now: what is it you want with me?

Mon. Ugo!

Inten. From the instant you arrived, I felt your smile on me as you questioned me about this and the other article in those papers—why your brother should have given me this villa, that podere,—and your nod at the end meant,—what?

Mon. Possibly that I wished for no loud talk here: if once you set me coughing, Ugo!—

Inten. I have your brother's hand and seal to all I possess: now ask me what for! what service I did him—ask me!

Mon. I would better not—I should rip up old disgraces, let out my poor brother's weaknesses. By the way, Maffeo of Forlì, (which, I forgot to observe, is your true name,) was the interdict ever taken off you, for robbing that church at Cesena?

Inten. No, nor needs be: for when I murdered your brother's friend, Pasquale, for him...

Mon. Ah, he employed you in that business, did he? Well, I must let you keep, as you say, this villa and that podere, for fear the world should find out my relations were of so indifferent a stamp? Maffeo, my family is the oldest in Messina, and century after century have my progenitors gone on polluting themselves with every wickedness under Heaven: my own father... rest his soul!—I have, I know, a chapel to support that it may rest: my dear two dead brothers were,—what you know tolerably well; I, the youngest, might have rivalled them in vice, if not in wealth, but from my boyhood I came out from among them, and so am not partaker of their plagues. My glory springs from another source; or if from this, by contrast only,—for I, the bishop, am the brother of your employers, Ugo. I hope to repair some of their wrong, however; so far as my brother's ill-gotten treasure reverts to me, I can stop the consequences of his crime; and not one soldo shall escape me. Maffeo, the sword we quiet men spurn away, you shrewd knaves pick up and commit murders with; what opportunities the virtuous forego, the villanous seize. Because, to pleasure myself, apart from other considerations, my food would be millet-cake, my dress sackcloth, and my couch straw,—am I therefore to let you, the off-scouring of the earth, seduce the poor and ignorant, by appropriating a pomp these will be sure to think lessens the abominations so unaccountably and exclusively associated with it? Must I let villas and poderi go to you, a murderer and thief, that you may beget by means of them other murderers and thieves? No—if my cough would but allow me to speak!

Inten. What am I to expect? you are going to punish me?

Mon.—Must punish you, Maffeo. I cannot afford to cast away a chance. I have whole centuries of sin to redeem, and only a month or two of life to do it in! How should I dare to say...

Inten. 'Forgive us our trespasses'?

Mon. My friend, it is because I avow myself a very worm, sinful beyond measure, that I reject a line of conduct you would applaud, perhaps. Shall I proceed, as it were, a-pardoning?—I?—who have no symptom of reason to assume that aught less than my strenuous efforts will keep myself out of mortal sin, much less, keep others out. No: I do trespass, but will not double that by allowing you to trespass.

Inten. And suppose the villas are not your brother's to give, nor yours to take? Oh, you are hasty enough just now!

Mon. 1, 2—No. 3!—ay, can you read the substance of a letter, No. 3, I have received from Rome? It is precisely on the ground there mentioned, of the suspicion I have that a certain child of my late elder brother, who would have succeeded to his estates, was murdered in infancy by you, Maffeo, at the instigation of my late brother—that the Pontiff enjoins on me not merely the bringing that Maffeo to condign punishment, but the taking all pains, as guardian of that infant's heritage for the Church, to recover it parcel by parcel, howsoever, whensoever, and wheresoever. While you are now gnawing those fingers, the police are engaged in sealing up your papers, Maffeo, and the mere raising my voice brings my people from the next room to dispose of yourself. But I want you to confess quietly, and save me raising my voice. Why, man, do I not know the old story?

The heir between the succeeding heir, and that heir's ruffianly instrument, and their complot's effect, and the life of fear and bribes, and ominous smiling silence? Did you throttle or stab my brother's infant? Come, now!

Inten. So old a story, and tell it no better? When did such an instrument ever produce such an effect? Either the child smiles in his face, or, most likely, he is not fool enough to put himself in the employer's power so thoroughly: the child is always ready to produce—as you say—howsoever, wheresoever, and whensoever.

Mon. Laar!

Inten. Strike me? Ah, so might a father chastise! I shall sleep soundly to-night at least, though the gallows await me to-morrow; for what a life did I lead! Carlo of Cesena reminds me of his connivance, every time I pay his annuity; which happens commonly thrice a year. If I remonstrate, he will confess all to the good bishop—you!

Mon. I see through the trick, caltiff! I would you spoke truth for once. All shall be sifted, however—seven times sifted.

Inten. And how my absurd riches encumbered me! I dared not lay claim to above half my possessions. Let me but once unbosom myself, glorify Heaven, and die!

Sir, you are no brutal, dastardly idiot like your brother I frightened to death: let us understand one another. Sir, I will make away with her for you—the girl—here close at hand; not the stupid obvious kind of killing; do not speak—know nothing of her or me! I see her every day—saw her this morning: of course there is to be no killing; but at Rome the courtesans perish off every three years, and I can entice her thither—have, indeed, begun operations already. There's a certain lusty, blue-eyed, florid-complexioned English knave, I and the Police employ occasionally. You assent, I perceive—no, that's not it—assent I do not say—but you will let me convert my present havings and holdings into cash, and give me time to cross the Alps? 'Tis but a little black-eyed, pretty singing Felippa, gay silk-winding girl. I have kept her out of harm's way up to this present; for I always intended to make your life a plague to you with her! 'Tis as well settled once and for ever: some women I have procured will pass Bluphocks, my handsome scoundrel, off for somebody; and once Pippa entangled!—you conceive? Through her singing? Is it a bargain?

[From without is heard the voice of PIPPA, singing—

*Overhead the tree-tops meet, Flowers and grass spring 'neath one's
feet;*

*There was nought above me, and nought
below,*

*My childhood had not learned to know:
For, what are the voices of birds*

*—Ay, and of beasts,—but words—our
words,*

Only so much more sweet?

The knowledge of that with my life begun!

But I had so near made out the sun,

*And counted your stars, the Seven and
One,*

Like the fingers of my hand:

Nay, I could all but understand

Wherefore through heaven the white moon ranges;

And just when out of her soft fiftly changes No unfamiliar face might overlook me—

Suddenly God took me!

[PIPPA passes.

Mon. [Springing up.] My people—one and all—all—within there! Gag this villain—tie him hand and foot! He dares... I know not half he dares—but remove him—quick! Miserere mei, Domine! quick, I say!

PIPPA'S Chamber again. She enters it.

*The bee with his comb,
The mouse at her dray,
The grub in its tomb,
Wile winter away;
But the fire-fly and hedge-shrew and lob-worm, I pray,
How fare they?*

Ha, ha, best thanks for your counsel, my Zanze—

'Feast upon lampreys, quaff the Breganze'—

The summer of life's so easy to spend,
And care for to-morrow so soon put away!
But winter hastens at summer's end,
And fire-fly, hedge-shrew, lob-worm,
pray,

How fare they?

No bidding me then to . . . what did she say?

'Pare your nails pearlwise, get your small feet shoes

More like . . . (what said she?)—and less like canoes'—

How pert that girl was!—would I be those pert

Impudent staring women! it had done me,

However, surely no such mighty hurt To learn his name who passed that jest upon me:

No foreigner, that I can recollect, Came, as she says, a month since, to inspect

Our silk-mills—none with blue eyes and thick rings

Of English-coloured hair, at all events.
Well, if old Luca keeps his good intents, We shall do better: see what next year

brings!

I may buy shoes, my Zanze, not appear More destitute than you, perhaps, next year!

Bluph. . . something! I had caught the uncouth name

But for Monsignor's people's sudden clatter

Above us—bound to spoil such idle chatter

As ours; it were, indeed, a serious matter
If silly talk like ours should put to shame

The pious man, the man devoid of blame,
The . . . ah, but—ah, but, all the same,
No mere mortal has a right

To carry that exalted air; Best people are not angels quite:

While—not the worst of people's doings scare

The devil; so there's that proud look to spare!

Which is mere counsel to myself, mind! for

I have just been the holy Monsignor!
And I was you too, Luigi's gentle mother,
And you too, Luigi!—how that Luigi started

Out of the Turret—doubtlessly departed On some good errand or another,
For he pass'd just now in a traveller's trim,
And the sullen company that prowled About his path, I noticed, scowled
As if they had lost a prey in him.

And I was Jules the sculptor's bride,
And I was Ottima beside,

And now what am I?—tired of fooling!
Day for folly, night for schooling!

New year's day is over and spent,
Ill or well, I must be content!

Even my lily's asleep, I vow:
Wake up—here's a friend I've plucked

you!

See—call this flower a heart's-ease now!
And something rare, let me instruct you,
Is this—with petals triply swollen,

Three times spotted, thrice the pollen,
While the leaves and parts that witness,
The old proportions and their fitness,

Here remain, unchanged, unmoved now—

So, call this pampered thing improved now!

Suppose there's a king of the flowers And a girl-show held in his bowers—

'Look ye, buds, this growth of ours,' Says he, 'Zanze from the Brenta,

I have made her gorge polenta Till both cheeks are near as bouncing

As her . . . name there's no pronouncing!
See this heightened colour too—

For she swilled Breganze wine Till her nose turned deep carmine—

'Twas but white when wild she grew!
And only by this Zanze's eyes

Of which we could not change the size,
The magnitude of what's achieved

Otherwise, may be perceived!

Oh what a drear, dark close to my poor day!

How could that red sun drop in that black cloud!

Ah, Pippa, morning's rule is moved away,

Dispensed with, never more to be allowed ! Day's turn is over : now arrives the night's. Oh, Lark, be day's apostle To mavis, merle and throistle, Bid them their betters jostle From day and its delights ! But at night, brother Howlet, far over the woods, Toll the world to thy chantry ; Sing to the bats' sleek sisterhoods Full complines with gallantry : Then, owls and bats, crows and twats, Monks and nuns, in a cloister's moods, Adjourn to the oak-stump pantry ! [After she has begun to undress herself.] Now, one thing I should like to really know : How near I ever might approach all these I only fancied being, this long day ! —Approach, I mean, so as to touch them, so	As to . . . in some way . . . move them— if you please, Do good or evil to them some slight way. For instance, if I wind Silk to-morrow, my silk may bind [Sitting on the bedside.] And broider Ottima's cloak's hem. Ah, me and my important part with them, This morning's hymn half promised when I rose ! True in some sense or other, I suppose, Though I passed by them all, and felt no sign. [As she lies down.] God bless me ! I can pray no more to- night. No doubt, some way or other, hymns say right. All service is the same with God— With God, whose puppets, best and worst, Are we : there is no last nor first. [She sleeps.]

KING VICTOR AND KING CHARLES

A TRAGEDY

So far as I know, this Tragedy is the first artistical consequence of what Voltaire termed 'a terrible event without consequences ;' and although it professes to be historical, I have taken more pains to arrive at the history than most readers would thank me for particularizing : since acquainted, as I will hope them to be, with the chief circumstances of Victor's remarkable European career—nor quite ignorant of the sad and surprising facts I am about to reproduce (tolerable accounts of which are to be found, for instance, in Abbé Roman's Récit, or even the fifth of Lord Orrery's Letters from Italy)—I cannot expect them to be versed, nor desirous of becoming so, in all the details of the memoirs, correspondence, and relations of the time. From these only may be obtained a knowledge of the fiery and audacious temper, unscrupulous selfishness, profound dissimulation, and singular fertility in resources, of Victor—the extreme and painful sensibility, prolonged immaturity of powers, earnest good purpose and vacillating will, of Charles—the noble and right woman's-manliness of his wife—and the ill-considered rascality and subsequent better-advised rectitude of D'Ormea. When I say, therefore, that I cannot but believe my statement (combining as it does what appears correct in Voltaire and plausible in Condorcet) more true to person and thing than any it has hitherto been my fortune to meet with, no doubt my word will be taken, and my evidence spared as readily.—R. B.

LONDON, 1842.

KING VICTOR AND KING CHARLES

PERSONS.

VICTOR AMADEUS, First King of Sardinia.
 CHARLES EMMANUEL, his Son, Prince of Piedmont.
 POLYXENA, Wife of Charles.
 D'ORMEA, Minister.

SCENE.—The Council Chamber of Rivoli Palace, near Turin, communicating with a Hall at the back, an Apartment to the left and another to the right of the stage.

TIME, 1730-1.

FIRST YEAR 1730.—KING VICTOR

CHARLES, POLYXENA.

Cha. You think so? Well, I do not.

Pol. My Beloved,
 All must clear up; we shall be happy yet:

This cannot last for ever—oh, may change

To-day, or any day!

Cha. —May change? Ah yes—
 May change!

Pol. Endure it, then.

Cha. No doubt, a life Like this drags on, now better and now worse.

My father may . . . may take to loving me;

And he may take D'Ormea closer yet To counsel him;—may even cast off her —That bad Sebastian; but he also may . . . Or, no, Polyxena, my only friend, He may not force you from me?

Pol. Now, force me
 From you!—me, close by you as if there gloomed

No D'Ormeas, no Sebastians on our path—

At Rivoli or Turin, still at hand, Arch-counsellor, prime confidant . . .
 force me!

Cha. Because I felt as sure, as I feel sure

We clasp hands now, of being happy once.

Young was I, quite neglected, nor concerned

By the world's business that engrossed so much

My father and my brother: if I peered From out my privacy,—amid the crash And blaze of nations, domineered those two.

'Twas war, peace—France our foe, now —England, friend—

In love with Spain—at feud with . Austria! Well—

I wondered, laughed a moment's laugh for pride

In the chivalrous couple, then let drop My curtain—'I am out of it,' I said—
 When . . .

Pol. You have told me, Charles.

Cha. Polyxena—
 When suddenly,—a warm March day, just that!

Just so much sunshine as the cottager's child

Basks in delighted, while the cottager Takes off his bonnet, as he ceases work,

To catch the more of it—and it must fall Heavily on my brother . . . had you seen Philip—the lion-featured! not like me!

Pol. I know—

Cha. And Philip's mouth yet fast to mine,

His dead cheek on my cheek, his arm still round

My neck,—they bade me rise, 'for I was heir

To the Duke,' they said, 'the right hand of the Duke;'

Till then he was my father, not the Duke!
 So... let me finish... the whole intricate World's-business their dead boy was born to, I Must conquer,—ay, the brilliant thing
 he was,
 I, of a sudden, must be: my faults, my follies,
 —All bitter truths were told me, all at
 once,
 To end the sooner. What I simply styled Their overlooking me, had been contempt:
 How should the Duke employ himself,
 forsooth,
 With such an one, while lordly Philip rode By him their Turin through? But he was punished,
 And must put up with—me! 'Twas sad
 enough
 To learn my future portion and submit.
 And then the wear and worry, blame on
 blame!
 —For, spring-sounds in my ears, spring-smells about,
 How could I but grow dizzy in their pent Dim palace-rooms at first? My mother's look
 As they discussed my insignificance—She and my father, and I sitting by,— I bore; I knew how brave a son they missed:
 Philip had gaily passed state-papers o'er, While Charles was spelling at them painfully!
 But Victor was my father spite of that.
 'Duke Victor's entire life has been,' I
 said,
 'Innumerable efforts to one end;
 And, on the point now of that end's
 success,
 Our Ducal turning to a Kingly crown, Where's time to be reminded 'tis his
 child
 He spurns?' And so I suffered—yet scarce suffered,
 Since I had you at length!
Pol. —To serve in place Of monarch, minister and mistress, Charles!

Cha. But, once that crown obtained, then was't not like Our lot would alter? 'When he rests, takes breath,
 Glances around, and sees who's left to
 love—
 Now that my mother's dead, sees I am
 left—
 Is it not like he'll love me at the last?'
 Well, Savoy turns Sardinia; the Duke's
 King: Could I—precisely then—could you expect His harshness to redouble? These few months
 Have been... have been... Polyxena, do you
 And God conduct me, or I lose myself!
 What would he have? What is't they want with me?
 Him with this mistress and this minister, —You see me and you hear him; judge us both!
 Pronounce what I should do, Polyxena!
Pol. Endure, endure, Beloved! Say you not
 That he's your Father? All's so indent To novel sway! Beside, our life must
 change:
 Or you'll acquire his kingercraft, or he'll find Harshness a sorry way of teaching it.
 I bear this—not that there's so much to bear.
Cha. You bear it? don't I know that you, tho' bound To silence for my sake, are perishing Piecemeal beside me? and how otherwise?
 —When every creeps-hole from the hideous Court
 Is stopt; the Minister to dog me, here—
 The Mistress posted to entrap you,
 there!
 And thus shall we grow old in such a
 life—
 Not careless,—never estranged,—but old: to alter
 Our life, there is so much to alter!
Pol. Come—
 Is it agreed that we forego complaints Even at Turin, yet complain we here

At Rivoli ? 'Twere wiser you announced Our presence to the King. What's now afoot,
I wonder ?—Not that any more's to dread
Than every day's embarrassment—but guess,
For me, why train so fast succeeded train
On the high-road, each gayer still than
each ;
I noticed your Archbishop's pursuivant, The sable cloak and silver cross ; such pomp Bodes . . . what now, Charles ? Can you conceive ?

Cha. Not I.

Pol. A matter of some moment—

Cha. There's our life !
Which of the group of loiterers that stared

From the lime-avenue, divines that I—About to figure presently, he thinks,
In face of all assembled—am the one Who knows precisely least about it ?

Pol. Tush !

D'Ormea's contrivance !

Cha. Ay—how otherwise Should the young Prince serve for the old King's foil ?

—So that the simplest courtier may remark,

'Twere idle raising parties for a Prince Content to linger D'Ormea's laughingstock !

Something, 'tis like, about that weary business :

[Pointing to papers he has laid down, and which POLYXENA examines.]

—Not that I comprehend three words,
of course,

After all last night's study.

Pol. The faint heart !

Why, as we rode and you rehearsed just
now

Its substance . . . (that's the folded speech I mean,

Concerning the Reduction of the Fiefs) —What would you have ?—I fancied

while you spoke,

Some tones were just your father's.

Cha.

Flattery !

Pol. I fancied so :—and here lurks, sure enough,

My note upon the Spanish Claims !

You've mastered

The fief-speech thoroughly : 'this other,
mind,

Is an opinion you deliver,—stay,
Best read it slowly over once to me ;

Read—there's bare time ; you read it firmly—loud

—Rather loud—looking in his face,— don't sink

Your eye once—ay, thus ! 'If Spain claims . . . ' begin

—Just as you look at me !

Cha. At you ! Oh, truly,

You have I seen, say, marshalling your troops—

Dismissing councils—or, through doors
ajar,

Head sunk on hand, devoured by slow chagrins

—Then radiant, for a crown had all at
once

Seemed possible again ! I can behold Him, whose least whisper ties my spirit

fast,

In this sweet brow, nought could divert me from,

Save objects like Sebastian's shameless
lip,

Or, worse, the clipt grey hair and dead white face,

And dwindling eye as if it ached with guile,

D'Ormea wears . . .

[As he kisses her, enter from the KING's apartment D'ORMEA.]

I said he would divert

My kisses from your brow !

D'O. [Aside.] Here ! So, King Victor Spoke truth for once ; and who's ordained, but I,

To make that memorable ? Both in

call,

As he declared ! Were't better gnash the teeth,

Or laugh outright now ?

Cha. [to POL.] What's his visit for ?

D'O. [Aside.] I question if they even speak to me.

Pol. [to CHA.] Face the man ! he'll suppose you fear him, else.

[Aloud.] The Marquis bears the King's command, no doubt.

D'O. [Aside.] Precisely!—If I threatened him, perhaps?

Well, this at least is punishment enough! Men used to promise punishment would come.

Cha. Deliver the King's message, Marquis!

D'O. [Aside.] Ah—
So anxious for his fate? [Aloud.] A word, my Prince, Before you see your father—just one word Of counsel!

Cha. Oh, your counsel certainly—Polyxena, the Marquis counsels us!

Well, sir? Be brief, however!

D'O. What? you know
As much as I?—preceded me, most like,
In knowledge! So! ('Tis in his eye,
beside—

His voice: he knows it, and his heart's on flame

Already! You surmise why you, myself,

Del Borgo, Spava, fifty nobles more,
Are summoned thus?

Cha. Is the Prince used to know,
At any time, the pleasure of the King,
Before his minister?—Polyxena, Stay here till I conclude my task: I feel Your presence—(smile not)—through the walls, and take

Fresh heart. The King's within that chamber?

D'O. [Passing the table whereon a paper lies, exclaims, as he glances at it,
'Spain!']

Pol. [Aside to CHA.] Tarry awhile:
what ails the minister?

D'O. Madam, I do not often trouble
you.

The Prince loathes, and you loathe me—let that pass!

But since it touches him and you, not
me,

Bid the Prince listen!

Pol. [to CHA.] Surely you will listen!
—Deceit?—Those fingers crumpling up his vest?

Cha. Deceitful to the very fingers'
ends!

D'O. [who has approached them, overlooks the other paper CHARLES continues to hold.]

My project for the Fiefs! As I supposed!

Sir, I must give you light upon those measures

—For this is mine, and that I spied of Spain,

Mine too!

Cha. Release me! Do you gloze
on me

Who bear in the world's face (that is, the world

You've made for me at Turin) your contempt?

—Your measures?—When was any hateful task

Not D'Ormea's imposition? Leave my robe!

What post can I bestow, what grant concede?

Or do you take me for the King?

D'O. Not I! Not yet for King,—not for, as yet,
thank God,

One, who in . . . shall I say a year—a month?

Ay!—shall be wretcheder than e'er was slave

In his Sardinia,—Europe's spectacle, And the world's bye-word! What?

The Prince aggrieved
That I excluded him our counsels?

Here

[Touching the paper in CHARLES's hand.]

Accept a method of extorting gold From Savoy's nobles, who must wring its worth

In silver first from tillers of the soil, Whose hinds again have to contribute brass

To make up the amount—there's counsel, sir!

My counsel, one year old; and the fruit,
this—

Savoy's become a mass of misery
And wrath, which one man has to meet

—the King:

You're not the King! Another counsel,
sir!

Spain entertains a project (here it lies)

Which, guessed, makes Austria offer that same King

Thus much to baffle Spain; he promises; Then comes Spain, breathless lest she be forestalled,

Her offer follows; and he promises . . .

Cha.—Promises, sir, when he before agreed

To Austria's offer?

D'O. That's a counsel, Prince!

But past our foresight, Spain and Austria (choosing

To make their quarrel up between themselves

Without the intervention of a friend) Produce both treaties, and both promises . . .

Cha. How?

D'O. Prince, a counsel!—And the fruit of that?

Both parties covenant afresh, to fall Together on their friend, blot out his
name,

Abolish him from Europe. So, take
note,

Here's Austria, and here's Spain to fight against,

And what sustains the King but Savoy
here,

A miserable people mad with wrongs?
You're not the King!

Cha. Polyxena, you said All would clear up: all does clear up to
me!

D'O. Clears up? 'Tis no such thing to envy, then?

You see the King's state in its length and breadth?

You blame me, now, for keeping you aloof

From counsels and the fruit of counsels?
—Wait

Till I explain this morning's business!

Cha. [Aside.] No—

Stoop to my father, yes,—D'Ormea, no;
—The King's son, not to the King's counsellor!

I will do something,—but at least retain The credit of my deed! [Aloud.] Then, it is this

You now expressly come to tell me?

D'O. This

To tell! You apprehend me?

Cha. Perfectly.

Further, D'Ormea, you have shown
yourself,

For the first time these many weeks and months,

Disposed to do my bidding?

D'O. From the heart!

Cha. Acquaint my father, first, I wait his pleasure:

Next . . . or, I'll tell you at a fitter time.

Acquaint the King!

D'O. [Aside.] If I 'scape Victor yet!
First, to prevent this stroke at me—if
not,—

Then, to avenge it! [To CHA.] Gracious sir, I go. [Goes.]

Cha. God, I forebore! Which more offends—that man

Or that man's master? Is it come to this?

Have they supposed (the sharpest insult yet)

I needed e'en his intervention? No!
No—dull am I, conceded,—but so dull, Scarcely! Their step decides me.

Pol. How decides?

Cha. You would be free from D'Ormea's eye and hers?

—Could fly the court with me and live
content?

So—this it is for which the knights assemble!

The whispers and the closeting of late,
The savageness and insolence of old,

—For this!

Pol. What mean you?

Cha. How? you fail to catch Their clever plot? I missed it—but could you?

These last two months of care to inculcate

How dull I am,—D'Ormea's present visit To prove that, being dull, I might be worse

Were I a king—as wretched as now dull—

You recognize in it no winding up

Of a long plot?

Pol. Why should there be a plot?

Cha. The crown's secure now; I should shame the crown—

An old complaint; the point is, how to gain

My place for one more fit in Victor's eyes, His mistress', the Sebastian's child.

Pol. In truth ?

Cha. They dare not quite dethrone Sardinia's Prince :

But they may descant on my dulness till They sting me into even praying them For leave to hide my head, resign my state,

And end the coil. Not see now ? In a word,

They'd have me tender them myself my rights

As one incapable :—some cause for that, Since I delayed thus long to see their drift !

I shall apprise the King he may resume My rights this moment.

Pol. Pause ! I dare not think So ill of Victor.

Cha. Think no ill of him !

Pol.—Nor think him, then, so shallow as to suffer

His purpose be divined thus easily.
And yet—you are the last of a great
line ;

There 's a great heritage at stake ; new days

Seemed to await this newest of the realms

Of Europe :—Charles, you must withstand this !

Cha. Ah—
You dare not then renounce the splendid court

For one whom all the world despises ?
Speak !

Pol. My gentle husband, speak I will,
and truth.

Were this as you believe, and I once sure Your duty lay in so renouncing rule, I could . . . could ? Oh, what happiness it were—

To live, my Charles, and die, alone with
you !

Cha. I grieve I asked you. To the presence, then !

By this, D'Ormea acquaints the King,
no doubt,

He fears I am too simple for mere hints,
And that no less will serve than Victor's
mouth

Teaching me in full council what I am.

—I have not breathed, I think, these many years !

Pol. Why—it may be !—if he desire to wed

That woman and legitimate her child—

Cha. You see as much ? Oh, let his will have way !

You'll not repent confiding in me, Love ?
There 's many a brighter spot in Piedmont, far,

Than Rivoli. I'll seek him—or, suppose

You hear first how I mean to speak my
mind ?

—Loudly and firmly both, this time
be sure !

I yet may see your Rhine-land—who can tell ?

Once away, ever then away ! I breathe.
Pol. And I too breathe !

Cha. Come, my Polyxena !

KING VICTOR : PART II

*Enter KING VICTOR, bearing the regalia on a cushion, from his apartment.
He calls loudly.*

D'Ormea !—for patience fails me, treading thus

Among the trains that I have laid,—my knights,

Safe in the hall here—in that anteroom, My son,—D'Ormea, where ? Of this, one touch—

[Laying down the crown.
This fireball to these mute, black, cold trains—then !

Outbreak enough !
[Contemplating it.] To lose all, after all !

This—glancing o'er my house for ages—shaped,

Brave meteor, like the crown of Cyprus
now—

Jerusalem, Spain, England—every
change

The braver,—and when I have clutched a prize

My ancestry died wan with watching
for,

To lose it !—by a slip—a fault—a trick Learnt to advantage once, and not un-learnt

When past the use,—‘just this once more’ (I thought)

‘Use it with Spain and Austria happily, And then away with trick!’ An oversight

I’d have repaired thrice over, any time These fifty years, must happen now!

There’s peace

At length; and I, to make the most of peace,

Ventured my project on our people here, As needing not their help—which Europe knows,

And means, cold-blooded, to dispose herself

(Apart from plausibilities of war)

To crush the new-made King—who ne’er till now

Feared her. As Duke, I lost each foot of earth

And laughed at her: my name was left, my sword

Left, all was left! But she can take, she knows,

This crown, herself conceded . . .

That’s to try,

Kind Europe! My career’s not closed as yet!

This boy was ever subject to my will—Timid and tame—the fitter! D’Ormea, too—

What if the sovereign’s also rid of thee His prime of parasites?—Yet I delay!

D’Ormea! [As D’ORMEA enters, the King seats himself.]

My son, the Prince—attends he?

D’O.

He does attend. The crown prepared!—it seems

That you persist in your resolve.

Vic.

Who’s come?

The chancellor and the chamberlain? My knights?

D’O. The whole Annunziata.—If, my liege,

Your fortunes had not tottered worse than now . . .

Vic. Del Borgo has drawn up the schedules? mine—

My son’s, too? Excellent! Only, beware

Of the least blunder, or we look but fools.

First, you read the Annulment of the Oaths;

Del Borgo follows . . . no, the Prince shall sign;

Then let Del Borgo read the Instrument;

On which, I enter.

D’O.

Sire, this may be truth;

You, sire, may do as you affect—may break

Your engine, me, to pieces: try at least If not a spring remains worth saving!

Take

My counsel as I’ve counselled many times!

What if the Spaniard and the Austrian threat?

There’s England, Holland, Venice—which ally Select you?

Vic. Aha! Come, D’Ormea,—‘truth’

Was on your lip a minute since. Allies? I’ve broken faith with Venice, Holland, England.

—As who knows if not you?

D’O.

But why with me

Break faith—with one ally, your best, break faith?

Vic. When first I stumbled on you, Marquis—‘twas

At Mondovi—a little lawyer’s-clerk . . .

D’O. Therefore your soul’s ally!—

who brought you through

Your quarrel with the Pope, at pains enough—

Who simply echoed you in these affairs—On whom you cannot, therefore, visit

these

Affairs’ ill fortune—whom you’ll trust to guide

You safe (yes, on my soul) in these affairs!

Vic. I was about to notice, had you not Prevented me, that since that great town kept

With its chicane D’Ormea’s satchel stuffed,

And D’Ormea’s self sufficiently recluse, He missed a sight,—my naval armament

When I burnt Toulon. How the skiff exults

Upon the galliot's wave!—rises its height, O'ertops it even; but the great wave bursts—And hell-deep in the horrible profound Buries itself the galliot:—shall the skiff Think to escape the sea's black trough in turn?
 Apply this: you have been my minister —Next me—above me, possibly;—sad post, Huge care, abundant lack of peace of mind;
 Who would desiderate the eminence?
 You gave your soul to get it—you'd yet give Your soul to keep it, as I mean you shall, D'Ormea! What if the wave ebbed with me?
 Whereas it cants you to another crest—
 I toss you to my son; ride out your ride!
D'O. Ah, you so much despise me then?
Vic. You, D'Ormea?
 Nowise: and I'll inform you why.
 A king
 Must in his time have many ministers,
 And I've been rash enough to part with mine When I thought proper. Of the tribe, not one (... Or wait, did Pianezze?... ah, just the same!) Not one of them, ere his remonstrance reached The length of yours, but has assured me (commonly, Standing much as you stand,—or nearer, say,
 The door to make his exit on his speech)
 —I should repent of what I did:
D'Ormea,
 Be candid—you approached it when I bade you Prepare the schedules! But you stopped in time —You have not so assured me: how should I Despise you, then?

Enter CHARLES.

Vic. [changing his tone.] Are you instructed? Do

My order, point by point! About it, sir!
D'O. You so despise me! [Aside.] One last stay remains—
 The boy's discretion there.
 [To CHARLES.] For your sake, Prince, I pleaded—wholly in your interest—
 To save you from this fate!
Cha. [Aside.] Must I be told
 The Prince was supplicated for—by him?
Vic. [to D'O.] Apprise Del Borgo, Spava, and the rest,
 Our son attends them; then return.
D'O. One word!
Cha. [Aside.] A moment's pause and they would drive me hence,
 I do believe!
D'O. [Aside.] Let but the boy be firm!
Vic. You disobey?
Cha. [to D'O.] You do not disobey Me, at least? Did you promise that or no?
D'O. Sir, I am yours—what would you? Yours am I!
Cha. When I have said what I shall say, 'tis like Your face will ne'er again disgust me.
 Go!
 Through you, as through a breast of glass, I see.
 And for your conduct, from my youth till now, Take my contempt! You might have spared me much, Secured me somewhat, nor so harmed yourself—That's over now. Go—ne'er to come again!
D'O. As son, the father—father as, the son!
 My wits! My wits! [Goes.]
Vic. [Seated.] And you, what meant you, pray, By speaking thus to D'Ormea?
Cha. Let us not weary ourselves with D'Ormea! Those few words Have half unsettled what I came to say.
 His presence vexes to my very soul.
Vic. One called to manage kingdoms, Charles, needs heart
 To bear up under worse annoyances Than D'Ormea seems—to me, at least.

Cha. [Aside.] Ah, good !
He keeps me to the point ! Then be it so.
[Aloud.] Last night, sire, brought me certain papers—these—
To be reported on,—your way of late.
Is it last night's result that you demand ?
Vic. For God's sake, what has night brought forth ? Pronounce The . . . what's your word ?—result !
Cha. Sire, that had proved Quite worthy of your sneer, no doubt :—
a few Lame thoughts, regard for you alone could wring, Lame as they are, from brains, like mine, believe !
As 'tis, sire, I am spared both toil and sneer.
These are the papers.
Vic. Well, sir ? I suppose You hardly burned them. Now for your result !
Cha. I never should have done great things of course, But . . . oh, my father, had you loved me more !
Vic. Loved you ? [Aside.] Has D'Ormea played me false, I wonder ?
[Aloud.] Why, Charles, a king's love is diffused—yourself May overlook, perchance, your part in
it.
Our monarchy is absolutest now
In Europe, or my trouble's thrown away.
I love, my mode, that subjects each and
all
May have the power of loving, all and
each,
Their mode : I doubt not, many have their sons .
To trifle with, talk soft to, all day long :
I have that crown, this chair, and D'Ormea, Charles !
Cha. 'Tis well I am a subject then,
not you.
Vic. [Aside.] D'Ormea has told him everything.
[Aloud.] Aha !
I apprehend you : when all's said, you
take
Your private station to be prized beyond My own, for instance ?

Cha. —Do and ever did So take it : 'tis the method you pursue That grieves . . .
Vic. These words ! Let me express,
my friend,
Your thought. You penetrate what I supposed A secret. D'Ormea plies his trade be-
times !
I purpose to resign my crown to you.
Cha. To me ?
Vic. Now—in that chamber.
Cha. You resign
The crown to me ?
Vic. And time enough, Charles, sure ?
Confess with me, at four-and-sixty years A crown's a load. I covet quiet once Before I die, and summoned you for
that.
Cha. 'Tis I will speak : you ever hated me,
I bore it,—have insulted me, borne too—
Now you insult yourself, and I remember What I believed you, what you really
are,
And cannot bear it. What ! My life has passed Under your eye, tormented as you
know,—
Your whole sagacities, one after one, At leisure brought to play on me—to prove me A fool, I thought, and I submitted ;
now You'd prove . . . what would you prove
me ?
Vic. This to me ?
I hardly know you !
Cha. Know me ? Oh, indeed You do not ! Wait till I complain next
time
Of my simplicity !—for here's a sage—Knows the world well—is not to be deceived—
And his experience, and his Macchiavels, D'Ormeas, teach him—what ?—that I,
this while,
Have envied him his crown ! He has not smiled,
I warrant,—has not eaten, drunk, nor slept,
For I was plotting with my Princess yonder !

Who knows what we might do, or might not do ?

Go, now—be politic—astound the
world !

That sentry in the antechamber—nay,
The varlet who disposed this precious trap

[Pointing to the crown.]

That was to take me—ask them if they think

Their own sons envy them their posts !
—Know me !

Vic. But you know me, it seems ; so, learn in brief

My pleasure. This assembly is convened . . .

Cha. Tell me, that woman put it in your head—

You were not sole contriver of the scheme,

My father !

Vic. Now observe me, sir ! I jest Seldom—on these points, never. Here,

I say,

The knights assemble to see me concede,
And you accept, Sardinia's crown.

Cha. Farewell !

'Twere vain to hope to change this—I can end it.

Not that I cease from being yours, when sunk

Into obscurity. I'll die for you,
But not annoy you with my presence.

Sire,

Farewell ! Farewell !

Enter D'ORMEA.

D'O. [Aside.] Ha, sure he's changed
again—

Means not to fall into the cunning trap !
Then, Victor, I shall yet escape you, Victor !

Vic. [suddenly placing the crown upon the head of CHARLES.]

D'Ormea, your King !

[To CHARLES.] My son, obey me !
Charles,

Your father, clearer-sighted than your-
self,

Decides it must be so. 'Faith, this looks real !

My reasons after—reason upon reason After—but now, obey me ! Trust in me !

By this, you save Sardinia, you save me !
Why, the boy swoons ! [To D'O.] Come this side !

D'O. [as CHARLES turns from him to VICTOR.] You persist ?

Vic. Yes—I conceive the gesture's meaning. 'Faith,

He almost seems to hate you—how is
that ?

Be re-assured, my Charles ! Is't over
now ?

Then, Marquis, tell the new King what remains

To do ! A moment's work. Del Borgo reads

The Act of Abdication out, you sign it, Then I sign ; after that, come back to
me.

D'O. Sire, for the last time, pause !

Vic. Five minutes longer

I am your sovereign, Marquis. Hestate—

And I'll so turn those minutes to account

That . . . Ay, you recollect me ! [Aside.] Could I bring

My foolish mind to undergo the reading That Act of Abdication !

[As CHARLES motions D'ORMEA to precede him.]

Thanks, dear Charles !

[CHARLES and D'ORMEA retire.]

Vic. A novel feature in the boy,—
indeed

Just what I feared he wanted most.
Quite right,

This earnest tone—your truth, now, for effect !

It answers every purpose : with that
look,

That voice,—I hear him : ' I began no treaty,'

(He speaks to Spain,) ' nor ever dreamed of this

You show me ; this I from my soul regret ;

But if my father signed it, bid not me Dishonour him—who gave me all,
beside : '

And, ' truth,' says Spain, ' 'twere harsh to visit that

Upon the Prince.' Then come the nobles trooping :

'I grieve at these exactions—I had cut This hand off ere impose them; but shall I

Undo my father's deed?'—And they
confer:

'Doubtless he was no party, after all;
Give the Prince time!'

Ay, give us time—but time!
Only, he must not, when the dark day
comes,

Refer our friends to me and frustrate all.
We'll have no child's play, no desponding-fits,

No Charles at each cross turn entreating
Victor

To take his crown again. Guard against
that!

Enter D'ORMEA.

Long live King Charles!

No—Charles's counsellor!
Well, is it over, Marquis? Did I jest?

D'O. 'King Charles!' What then may you be?

Vic. Anything!
A country gentleman that's cured of bustle,

And beats a quick retreat toward Chambery

To hunt and hawk, and leave you noisy folk

To drive your trade without him. I'm Count Remont—

Count Tende—any little place's Count!

D'O. Then, Victor, Captain against Catinat,

At Staffarde, wherethe French beat you;
and Duke

At Turin, where you beat the French; King, late,

Of Savoy, Piedmont, Montferrat, Sardinia,

—Now, 'any little place's Count'—

Vic. Proceed!

D'O. Breaker of vows to God, who crowned you first;

Breaker of vows to Man, who kept you
since;

Most profligate to me, who outraged
God

And Man to serve you, and am made pay crimes

I was but privy to, by passing thus

To your imbecile son—who, well you
know,

Must—(when the people here, and nations there,

Clamour for you, the main delinquent, slipt

From King to—Count of any little place) —Surrender me, all left within his

reach,—
I, sir, forgive you: for I see the end—

See you on your return—(you will return)—

To him you trust in for the moment...

Vic. How?

Trust in him? merely a prime-minister This D'Ormea! How trust in him?

D'O. In his fear—

His love,—but pray discover for yourself What you are weakest, trusting in!

Vic. Aha, D'Ormea, not a shrewder scheme than

this
In your repertory? You know old

Victor—Vain, choleric, inconstant, rash—(I've

heard Talkers who little thought the King so

close) Felicitous, now, were't not, to provoke

him
To clean forget, one minute afterward,

His solemn act, and call the nobles back And pray them give again the very

power
He has abjured!—for the dear sake of—

what?
Vengeance on you! No, D'Ormea: such

am I, Count Tende or Count anything you

please,
—Only, the same that did the things you

say,
And, among other things you say not,

used
Your finest fibre, meanest muscle,—you

I used, and now, since you will have it so, Leave to your fate—mere lumber in the midst,

You and your works. Why, what on earth beside

Are you made for, you sort of ministers?

D'O.—Not left, though, to my fate!
Your witless son

Has more wit than to load himself with lumber :

He foils you that way, and I follow you.
Vic. Stay with my son—protect the weaker side !

D'O. Ay, be tossed to the people like a rag,
And flung by them to Spain and Austria
—so

Abolishing the record of your part In all this perfidy !

Vic. Prevent, beside,
My own return !

D'O. That 's half prevented now !
'Twill go hard but you find a wondrous charm

In exile, to discredit me. The Alps—Silk-mills to watch—vines asking vigilance—

Hounds open for the stag—your hawk's a-wing—

Brave days that wait the Louis of the South,
Italy's Janus !

Vic. So, the lawyer's clerk Won't tell me that I shall repent !

D'O. You give me
Full leave to ask if you repent ?

Vic. Whene'er, Sufficient time 's elapsed for that, you
judge !

[Shouts inside, 'KING CHARLES.'
D'O. Do you repent ?

Vic. [after a slight pause.] . . . I've kept them waiting ? Yes !

Come in—complete the Abdication, sir !
[They go out.]

Enter POLYXENA.

Pol. A shout ? The sycophants are free of Charles !

Oh, is not this like Italy ? No fruit Of his or my distempered fancy, this—But just an ordinary fact ! Beside, Here they've set forms for such proceedings—Victor

Imprisoned his own mother—he should
know,

If any, how a son 's to be deprived Of a son's right. Our duty 's palpable.
Ne'er was my husband for the wily
king

And the unworthy subjects—be it so !

Come you safe out of them, my Charles !
Our life

Grows not the broad and dazzling life, I dreamed

Might prove your lot—for strength was shut in you

None guessed but I—strength which, untrammelled once,

Had little shamed your vaunted ancestry—

Patience and self-devotion, fortitude, Simplicity and utter truthfulness

—All which, they shout to lose !
So, now my work

Begins—to save him from regret. Save
Charles

Regret ?—the noble nature ! He 's not made

Like the Italians : 'tis a German soul.

CHARLES enters crowned.

Oh, where 's the King's heir ? Gone :— the Crown-prince ? Gone—

Where 's Savoy ? Gone :—Sardinia ?
Gone ! But Charles

Is left ! And when my Rhine-land bowers arrive,

If he looked almost handsome yestertwilight

As his grey eyes seemed widening into black

Because I praised him, then how will he
look ?

Farewell, you stripped and whited mulberry trees

Bound each to each by lazy ropes of vine !
Now I'll teach you my language—I'm not forced To speak Italian now, Charles ?

[She sees the crown.] What is this ?
Answer me—who has done this ?

Answer !
Cha. He !

I am King now.
Pol. Oh worst, worst, worst of all !

Tell me—what, Victor ? He has made you King ?

What 's he then ? What 's to follow this ? You, King ?

Cha. Have I done wrong ? Yes—for you were not by !

Pol. Tell me from first to last.
Cha. Hush—a new world

Brightens before me ; he is moved away —The dark form that eclipsed it, he subsides

Into a shape supporting me like you, And I, alone, tend upward, more and
more

Tend upward : I am grown Sardinia's
King.

Pol. Now stop : was not this Victor, Duke of Savoy

At ten years old ?

Cha. He was.

Pol. And the Duke spent Since then, just four-and-fifty years in toil

To be—what ?

Cha. King.

Pol. Then why unking himself ?

Cha. Those years are cause enough.

Pol. The only cause ?

Cha. Some new perplexities.

Pol. Which you can solve, Although he cannot ?

Cha. He assures me so.

Pol. And this he means shall last—how long ?

Cha. How long ?

Think you I fear the perils I confront ?
He's praising me before the people's
face—

My people !

Pol. Then he's changed—grown kind,
the King ?

Where can the trap be ?

Cha. Heart and soul I pledge !

My father, could I guard the crown you gained,

Transmit as I received it,—all good else Would I surrender !

Pol. Ah, it opens then

Before you—all you dreaded formerly ?
You are rejoiced to be a king, my Charles ?

Cha. So much to dare ? The better ;
—much to dread ?

The better. I'll adventure though
alone.

Triumph or die, there's Victor still to witness

Who dies or triumphs—either way,
alone !

Pol. Once I had found my share in triumph, Charles,

Or death.

Cha. But you are I ! But you I call To take, Heaven's proxy, vows I tendered Heaven
A moment since. I will deserve the crown !

Pol. You will. [Aside.] No doubt it were a glorious thing

For any people, if a heart like his Ruled over it. I would I saw the trap !

Enter VICTOR.

'Tis he must show me.

Vic. So, the mask falls off An old man's foolish love at last ! Spare
thanks :

I know you, and Polyxena I know.

Here's Charles—I am his guest now—does he bid me

Be seated ? And my light-haired, blue eyed child

Must not forget the old man far away At Chambery, who dozes while she reigns.

Pol. Most grateful shall we now be, talking least
Of gratitude—indeed of anything

That hinders what yourself must have to say

To Charles.

Cha. Pray speak, sire !

Vic. 'Faith, not much to say—Only what shows itself, once in the point

Of sight. You are now the King :
you'll comprehend

Much you may oft have wondered at—the shifts,

Dissimulation, witness I showed.

For what's our post ? Here's Savoy and here's Piedmont,

Here's Montferrat—a breadth here, a space there—

To o'er-sweep all these, what's one weapon worth ?

I often think of how they fought in Greece

(Or Rome, which was it ? You're the scholar, Charles !)

You made a front-thrust ? But if your shield, too,

Were not adroitly planted—someshrewd
knave

Reached you behind ; and, hum foiled, straight if thong
And handle of that shield were not cast loose,
And you enabled to outstrip the wind, Fresh foes assailed you, either side ;
'scape these,
And reach your place of refuge—e'en then, odds
If the gate opened unless breath enough
Was left in you to make its lord a speech.
Oh, you will see !

Cha. No : straight on shall I go, Truth helping ; win with it or die with
it.

Vic. 'Faith, Charles, you're not made Europe's fighting-man !
Its barrier-guarder, if you please. You
hold,
Not take—consolidate, with 'envious French
This side, with Austrians that, these territories
I held—ay, and will hold . . . which you shall hold Despite the couple ! But I've surely earned

Exemption from these weary politics, —The privilege to prattle with my son And daughter here, tho' Europe wait the while

Pol. Nay, sire,—at Chambery, away for ever,
As soon you'll be, 'tis a farewell we bid
you !

Turn these few fleeting moments to account !

'Tis just as though it were a death.

Vic. Indeed !

Pol. [Aside.] Is the trap there ?

Cha. Ay, call this parting—death !
The sadder your memory becomes.

If I misrule Sardinia, how bring back My father ? No—that thought shall ever urge me.

Vic. I do not mean . . .

Pol. [*who watches VICTOR narrowly
this while.*]

Your father does not mean That you are ruling for your father's
sake :

It is your people must concern you wholly

Instead of him. You meant this, sire ?
(He drops
My hand !)

Cha. That people is now part of me.
Vic. About the people ! I took certain measures

Some short time since . . . Oh, I'm aware you know

But little of my measures—these affect Thenobles—we've resumed some grants, imposed

A tax or two ; prepare yourself, in
short,

For clamour on that score : mark me ;
you yield

No jot of what's entrusted you !

Pol. No jot

You yield !

Cha. My father, when I took the oath, Although my eye might stray in search
of yours,

I heard it, understood it, promised God What you require. Till from this eminence

He moves me, here I keep, nor shall concede

The meanest of my rights.

Vic. [Aside.] The boy's a fool !
—Or rather, I'm a fool : for, what's wrong here ?

To-day the sweets of reigning—let tomorrow

Be ready with its bitters.

Enter D'ORMEA.

There's beside Somewhat to press upon your notice
first.

Cha. Then why delay it for an instant, sire ?

That Spanish claim, perchance ? And, now you speak,

—This morning, my opinion was mature,
Which, boy-like, I was bashful in producing

To one, I ne'er am like to fear, in future !
My thought is formed upon that Spanish
claim.

Vic. Betimes, indeed ! Not now, Charles. You require

A host of papers on it.

D'O. [coming forward.] Here they are.

[To CHA.] I was the minister and much beside—

Of the late monarch; to say little, him I served: on you I have, to say e'en less,

No claim. This case contains those papers: with them

I tender you my office.

Vic. [hastily.] Keep him, Charles! There's reason for it—many reasons: you Distrust him, nor are so far wrong there, —but

He's mixed up in this matter—he'll desire

To quit you, for occasions known to me: Do not accept those reasons—have him stay!

Pol. [Aside.] His minister thrust on us!

Cha. [to D'ORMEA.] Sir, believe, In justice to myself, you do not need E'en this commending: whatso'er might seem

My feelings toward you as a private man, They quit me in the vast and untried field Of action. Though I shall, myself, (as late

In your own hearing I engaged to do) Preside o'er my Sardinia, yet your help Is necessary. Think the Past forgotten, And serve me now!

D'O. I did not offer you My services—would I could serve you, sire!

As for the Spanish matter...

Vic. But dispatch At least the dead, in my good daughter's phrase,

Before the living! Help to house me safe

Ere you and D'Ormea set the world a-gape!

Here is a paper—will you overlook What I propose reserving for my needs? I get as far from you as possible.

Here's what I reckon my expenditure.

Cha. [reading.] A miserable fifty thousand crowns!

Vic. Oh, quite enough for country gentlemen!

Beside the exchequer happens... but find out

All that, yourself!

Cha. [still reading.] 'Count Tende'—what means this?

Vic. Me: you were but an infant when I burst

Through the defile of Tende upon France. Had only my allies kept true to me!

No matter. Tende's, then, a name I take

Just as...

D'O. —The Marchioness Sebastian takes

The name of Spigno.

Cha. How, sir?

Vic. [to D'ORMEA.] Fool! All that Was for my own detailing. [To CHARLES.] That anon!

Cha. [to D'ORMEA.] Explain what you have said, sir!

D'O. I supposed The marriage of the King to her I named, Profoundly kept a secret these few weeks, Was not to be one, now he's Count.

Pol. [Aside.] With us The minister—with him the mistress!

Cha. [to VICTOR.] No— Tell me you have not taken her—that woman

To live with, past recall!

Vic. And where's the crime...

Pol. [to CHARLES.] True, sir, this is a matter past recall,

And past your cognizance. A day before, And you had been compelled to note this—now

Why note it? The King saved his House from shame:

What the Count does, is no concern of yours.

Cha. [after a pause.] The Spanish business, D'Ormea!

Vic. Why, my son, I took some ill-advised... one's age, in fact,

Spoils everything: though I was overreached,

A younger brain, we'll trust, may extricate

Sardinia readily. To-morrow, D'Ormea, Inform the King!

D'O. [without regarding VICTOR, and leisurely.]

Thus stands the case with Spair:

When first the Infant Carlos claimed his proper Succession to the throne of Tuscany . . .

Vic. I tell you that stands over ! Let that rest !

There is the policy !

Cha. [to D'ORMEA.] Thus much I know,

And more—too much : the remedy ?
D'O. Of course !

No glimpse of one.

Vic. No remedy at all !
It makes the remedy itself—time makes it.

D'O. [to CHARLES.] But if . . .

Vic. [still more hastily.] In fine, I shall take care of that—

And, with another project that I have . . .

D'O. [turning on him.] Oh, since Count Tende means to take again King Victor's crown !—

Pol. [throwing herself at VICTOR's feet.] E'en now retake it, sire !

Oh, speak ! We are your subjects both, once more !

Say it—a word effects it ! You meant not, Nor do mean now, to take it—but you must !

'Tis in you—in your nature—and the shame's

Not half the shame 'twould grow to afterward !

Cha. Polyxena !

Pol. A word recalls the knights— Say it !—What's promising and what's the Past ?

Say you are still King Victor !

D'O. Better say
The Count repents, in brief !

[VICTOR rises.

Cha. With such a crime I have not charged you, sire !

Pol. Charles turns from me !

SECOND YEAR 1731.—

KING CHARLES

PART I

Enter QUEEN POLYXENA and D'ORMEA.

—A pause.

Pol. And now, sir, what have you to say ?

D'O. Count Tende . . .

Pol. Affirm not I betrayed you ; you resolve

On uttering this strange intelligence —Nay, post yourself to find me ere I reach

The capital, because you know King Charles

Tarries a day or two at Evian baths Behind me :—but take warning,—here and thus [Seating herself in the royal seat.

I listen, if I listen—not your friend.
Explicitly the statement, if you still Persist to urge it on me, must proceed ;
I am not made for aught else.

D'O. Good ! Count Tende . . .

Pol. I, who mistrust you, shall acquaint King Charles,
Who even more mistrusts you.

D'O. Does he so ?

Pol. Why should he not ?

D'O. Ay, why not ? Motives, seek You virtuous people, motives ! Say, I serve

God at the devil's bidding—will that do ?

I'm proud : our people have been pacified,

Really I know not how—

Pol. By truthfulness.

D'O. Exactly ; that shows I had nought to do

With pacifying them. Our foreign perils Also exceed my means to stay : but here
'Tis otherwise, and my pride's piqued.

Count Tende

Completes a full year's absence : would you, madam,

Have the old monarch back, his mistress back,

His measures back ? I pray you, act upon

My counsel, or they will be.

Pol. When ?

D'O. Let's think.

Home-matters settled—Victor's coming now ;

Let foreign matters settle—Victor's here :

Unless I stop him ; as I will, this way.

Pol. [reading the papers he presents.]
If this should prove a plot 'twixt you and Victor ?

You seek annoyances to give pretext For what you say you fear !

D'O. Oh, possibly !
I go for nothing. Only show King
Charles

That thus Count Tende purposes return,
And style me his inviter, if you please.

Pol. Half of your tale is true ; most like, the Count

Seeks to return : but why stay you with
us ?

To aid in such emergencies ?

D'O. Keep safe Those papers : or, to serve me, leave no proof

I thus have counselled : when the Count returns,

And the King abdicates, 'twill stead me little

To have thus counselled.

Pol. The King abdicate !

D'O. He 's good, we knew long since—wise, we discover—

Firm, let us hope :—but I'd have gone to work

With him away. Well !

[CHARLES without.] In the Council Chamber ?

D'O. All 's lost !

Pol. Oh, surely not King Charles ! He 's changed—

That 's not this year's care-burthened voice and step :

'Tis last year's step—the Prince's voice !

D'O. I know !

Enter CHARLES—D'ORMEA retiring a little.

Cha. Now wish me joy, Polyxena !
Wish it me

The old way ! [She embraces him.]

There was too much cause for that !

But I have found myself again ! What news

At Turin ? Oh, if you but felt the load I'm free of—free ! I said this year would end

Or it, or me—but I am free, thank God !

Pol. How, Charles ?

Cha. You do not guess ? The day I
found

Sardinia's hideous coil, at home, abroad,
And how my father was involved in it,—

Of course, I vowed to rest or smile no
more

Until I freed his name from obloquy.
We did the people right—'twas much to gain

That point, redress our nobles' grievance,
too—

But that took place here, was no crying
shame :

All must be done abroad,—if I abroad Appeased the justly-angered Powers, destroyed

The scandal, took down Victor's name
at last

From a bad eminence, I then might breathe

And rest ! No moment was to lose.
Behold

The proud result—a Treaty, Austria, Spain

Agree to—

D'O. [Aside.] I shall merely stipulate For an experienced headsmen.

Cha. Not a soul Is compromised : the blotted Past 's a blank :

Even D'Ormea escapes unquestioned.
See !

It reached me from Vienna ; I remained At Evian to dispatch the Count his news ;

'Tis gone to Chambery a week ago—
And here am I : do I deserve to feel

Your warm white arms around me ?

D'O. [Coming forward.] He knows that ?

Cha. What, in heaven's name, means
this ?

D'O. He knows that matters Are settled at Vienna ? Not too late !

Plainly, unless you post this very hour Some man you trust (say, me) to

Chambery
And take precautions I acquaint you
with,

Your father will return here.

Cha. Are you crazed, D'Ormea ? Here ? For what ? As well

return
To take his crown !

D'O. He will return for that.

Cha. [to POLYXENA.] You have not listened to this man ?

Pol. He spoke

About your safety—and I listened.

[He disengages himself from her arms.]

Cha. [to D'ORMEA.] What Apprised you of the Count's intentions ?

D'O. Me ?

His heart, sire ; you may not be used to read

Such evidence, however ; therefore read [Pointing to POLYXENA's papers.] My evidence.

Cha. [to POLYXENA.] Oh, worthy this of you !

And of your speech I never have forgotten,

Though I professed forgetfulness ; which haunts me

As if I did not know how false it was ; Which made me toil unconsciously thus long

That there might be no least occasion left

For aught of its prediction coming true ! And now, when there is left no least occasion

To instigate my father to such crime—When I might venture to forget (I hoped)

That speech and recognize Polyxena—Oh, worthy, to revive, and tenfold worse,

That plague now ! D'Ormea at your ear, his slanders

Still in your hand ! Silent ?

Pol. As the wronged are.

Cha. And pray, D'Ormea, since when have you presumed

To spy upon my father ? I conceive What that wise paper shows, and easily.

Since when ?

D'O. The when, and where, and how, belong

To me. 'Tis sad work, but I deal in such.

You oftentimes serve yourself—I'd serve you here :

Use makes me not so squeamish. In a word,

Since the first hour he went to Chambery,

Of his seven servants, five have I suborned.

Cha. You hate my father ?

D'O. Oh, just as you will !

[Looking at POLYXENA.]

A minute since, I loved him—hate him, now !

What matters ?—If you ponder just one thing :

Has he that Treaty ?—He is setting forward

Already. Are your guards here ?

Cha. Well for you They are not ! [To POL.] Him I knew of old, but you—

To hear that pickthank, further his designs ! [To D'O.]

Guards ?—were they here, I'd bid them, for your trouble, Arrest you.

D'O. Guards you shall not want. I lived

The servant of your choice, not of your need.

You never greatly needed me till now That you discard me. This is my arrest.

Again I tender you my charge—it's duty Would bid me press you read those documents.

Here, sire ! [Offering his badge of office.]

Cha. [taking it.] The papers also ! Do you think

I dare not read them ?

Pol. Read them, sir !

Cha. They prove, My father, still a month within the year

Since he so solemnly consigned it me, Means to resume his crown ? They shall prove that,

Or my best dungeon . . .

D'O. Even say, Chambery ! 'Tis vacant, I surmise, by this.

Cha. You prove Your words or pay their forfeit, sir. Go there !

Polyxena, one chance to rend the veil Thickening and blackening 'twixt us two ! Do say, You'll see the falsehood of the charges proved !

Do say, at least, you wish to see them proved

False charges—my heart's love of other times !

Pol. Ah, Charles !

Cha. [to D'ORMEA.] Precede me, sir !

D'O. And I'm at length A martyr for the truth ! No end, they say,

Of miracles. My conscious innocence !

[*As they go out, enter—by the middle door, at which he pauses—*VICTOR.

Vic. Sure I heard voices ? No !

Well, I do best

To make at once for this, the heart o' the place.

The old room ! Nothing changed !—So near my seat,

D'Ormea ? [Pushing away the stool which is by the KING's chair.

I want that meeting over first, I know not why. Tush, D'Ormea won't be slow

To hearten me, the supple knave ! That burst

Of spite so eased him ! He'll inform me . . .

What ?

Why come I hither ? All's in rough—let all

Remain rough ; there's full time to draw back—nay,

There's nought to draw back from, as yet ; whereas,

If reason should be, to arrest a course Of error—reason good, to interpose

And save, as I have saved so manytimes. Our House, admonish my son's giddy youth, Relieve him of a weight that proves too much—

Now is the time,—or now, or never. 'Faith,

This kind of step is pitiful—not due To Charles, this stealing back—hither, because He's from his capital ! Oh, Victor !

Victor ! But thus it is. The age of crafty men

Is loathsome ; youth contrives to carry off

Dissimulation ; we may intersperse Extenuating passages of strength,

Ardour, vivacity, and wit—may turn E'en guile into a voluntary grace :—

But one's old age, when graces drop away

And leave guile the pure staple of our lives—

Ah, loathsome ! Not so—or why pause I ? Turin

Is mine to have, were I so minded, for

The asking ; all the army's mine—I've witnessed

Each private fight beneath me ; all the court's Mine too ; and, best of all, my D'Ormea's still

His D'Ormea ; no ! There's some grace clinging yet.

Had I decided on this step, ere midnight I'd take the crown.

No ! Just this step to rise Exhausts me ! Here am I arrived : the rest

Must be done for me. Would I could sit here

And let things right themselves, the masque unmasque

Of the old King, crownless, grey hairs and hot blood,—

The young King, crown'd, but calm before his time,

They say,—the eager mistress with her taunts,—

And the sad earnest wife who motions me

Away—ay, there she knelt to me ! E'en yet

I can return and sleep at Chambery A dream out. Rather shake it off at Turin, King Victor ! Is't to Turin—yes, or no ?

'Tis this relentless noonday-lighted chamber,

Lighted like life, but silent as the grave, That disconcerts me ! There the change must strike ! No silence last year ! some one flung doors wide (Those two great doors which scrutinize me now) And out I went 'mid crowds of men—men talking, Men watching if my lip fell or brow knit ;

Men saw me safe forth—put me on my road :

That makes the misery of this return ! Oh, had a battle done it ! Had I dropped,

Haling some battle, three entire days old,

Hither and thither by the forehead—dropped

In Spain, in Austria, best of all, in France—

Spurned on its horns or underneath its hooves,
When the spent monster went upon its knees
To pad and pash the prostrate wretch—
I, Victor,
Sole to have stood up against France, beat down
By inches, brayed to pieces finally In some vast unimaginable charge, A flying hell of horse and foot and guns
Over me, and all 's lost, for ever lost, There 's no more Victor when the world wakes up !
Then silence, as of a raw battle-field, Throughout the world. Then after (as whole days After, you catch at intervals faint noise Through the stiff crust of frozen blood)— there creeps
A rumour forth, so faint, no noise at all,
That a strange old man, with face outworn for wounds, Is stumbling on from frontier town to town,
Begging a pittance that may help him
find His Turin out ; what scorn and laughter
follow
The coin you fling into his cap ! and
last,
Some bright morn, how men crowd about the midst Of the market-place, where takes the old king breath
Ere with his crutch he strike the palace-gate Wide ope !

To Turin, yes or no—or no ?

Re-enter CHARLES with papers.

Cha. Just as I thought ! A miserable falsehood
Of hirelings discontented with their pay And longing for enfranchisement ! A few Testy expressions of old age that thinks
To keep alive its dignity o'er slaves
By means that suit their natures !
[Tearing them.] Thus they shake My faith in Victor !

[Turning, he discovers VICTOR.

Vic. [after a pause.] Not at Evian,
Charles ?

What 's this ? Why do you run to close the doors ?

No welcome for your father ?

Cha. [Aside.] Not his voice !
What would I give for one imperious
tone

Of the old sort ! That 's gone for ever.
Vic. Must

I ask once more . . .

Cha. No—I concede it, sir !
You are returned for . . . true, your health declines—

True, Chambery 's a bleak unkindly spot ; You'd choose one fitter for your final lodge—

Veneria—or Moncagliar—ay, that 's close,

And I concede it.

Vic. I received advices
Of the conclusion of the Spanish matter Dated from Evian baths . . .

Cha. And you forbore
To visit me at Evian, satisfied

The work I had to do would fully task The little wit I have, and that your presence

Would only disconcert me—

Vic. Charles ?
Cha. —Me—set

For ever in a foreign course to yours,
And . . .

Sir, this way of wile were good to catch,
But I have not the sleight of it. The
truth !

Though I sink under it ! What brings
you here ?

Vic. Not hope of this reception certainly,

From one who'd scarce assume a stranger mode

Of speech, did I return to bring about Some awfulest calamity !

Cha. —You mean
Did you require your crown again ! Oh

yes,
I should speak otherwise ! But turn no
that

To jesting ! Sir, the truth ! Your health declines ?

Is aught deficient in your equipage ?

Wisely you seek myself to make complaint,
And foil the malice of the world which laughs
At petty discontents; but I shall care That not a soul knows of this visit.
Speak!

Vic. [Aside.] Here is the grateful, much-professing son Prepared to worship me, for whose sole sake

I think to waive my plans of publicgood!
[Aloud.] Nay, Charles, if I did seek to take once more

My crown, were so disposed to plague
myself—

What would be warrant for this bitterness?

I gave it—grant, I would resume it—
well?

Cha. I should say simply—leaving out the why
And how—you made me swear to keep that crown:

And as you then intended...

Vic. Fool! What way Could I intend or not intend? As man, With a man's will, when I say 'I intend,'

I can intend up to a certain point,
No further. I intended to preserve The crown of Savoy and Sardinia whole:
And if events arise demonstrating The way, I hoped should guard it, rather like

To lose it...

Cha. Keep within your sphere and mine!

It is God's province we usurp on, else.
Here, blindfold through the maze of things we walk

By a slight clue of false, true, right and
wrong;

All else is rambling and presumption. I Have sworn to keep this kingdom:
there's my truth.

Vic. Truth, boy, is here—within my breast; and in

Your recognition of it, truth is, too;
And in the effect of all this tortuous dealing

With falsehood, used to carry out the
truth,

—In its success, this falsehood turns,
again,
Truth for the world! But you are right:
these themes

Are over-subtle. I should rather say In such a case, frankly,—it fails, my
scheme:

I hoped to see you bring about, your-
self,

What I must bring about: I interpose On your behalf—with my son's good in sight—

To hold what he is nearly letting go—Confirm his title—add a grace, perhaps.
There's Sicily, for instance,—granted me And taken back, some years since—till

I give That island with the rest, my work's half done.

For his sake, therefore, as of those he rules...

Cha. Our sakes are one—and that, you could not say,

Because my answer would present itself Forthwith;—a year has wrought an age's change:

This people's not the people now, you
once

Could benefit; nor is my policy
Your policy.

Vic. [with an outburst.] I know it!
You undo

All I have done—my life of toil and
care!

I left you this the absolutest rule In Europe—do you think I will sit still And see you throw all power off to the people—

See my Sardinia, that has stood apart, Join in the mad and democratic whirl Whereto I see all Europe haste full-tide?
England casts off her kings; France mimics England:

This realm I hoped was safe! Yet here
I talk,

When I can save it, not by force alone, But bidding plagues, which follow sons like you,

Fasten upon my disobedient...

[Recollecting himself.] Surely I could say this—if minded so—my son?

Cha. You could not! Bitterer curses than your curse

Have I long since denounced upon
myself

If I misused my power. In fear of these I entered on those measures—will abide By them: so, I should say, Count Tende . . .

Vic.

No!

But no! But if, my Charles, your—more than old—

Half-foolish father urged these arguments,

And then confessed them futile, but said plainly

That he forgot his promise, found his
strength

Fail him, had thought at savage Cham-bery

Too much of brilliant Turin, Rivoli here,
And Susa, and Veneria, and Superga—

Pined for the pleasant places he had built

When he was fortunate and young—Cha. My father!

Vic. Stay yet—and if he said he could not die

Deprived of baubles he had put aside, He deemed, for ever—of the Crown that binds

Your brain up, whole, sound, and impregnable,

Creating kingliness—the Sceptre, too, Whose mere wind, should you wave it, back would beat

Invaders—and the golden Ball which throbs

As if you grasped the palpitating heart Indeed o' the realm, to mould as you may choose!

—If I must totter up and down the streets

My sires built, where myself have introduced

And fostered laws and letters, sciences,
The civil and the military arts!

Stay, Charles—I see you letting me pretend

To live 'my former self once more—King Victor,

The venturesome yet politic—they style
me

Again, the Father of the Prince—friends
wink

Good-humouredly at the delusion you

So sedulously guard from all rough truths

That else would break upon the dotage!
—You—

Whom now I see preventing my old
shame—

I tell not, point by cruel point, my tale—For is't not in your breast my brow is hid?

Is not your hand extended? Say you
not . . .

Enter D'ORMEA, leading in POLYXENA.

Pol. [advancing and withdrawing CHARLES—to VICTOR.]

In this conjuncture, even, he would
say—

(Though with a moistened eye and quivering lip)

The suppliant is my father—I must save A great man from himself, nor see him fling

His well-earned fame away: there must not follow

Ruin so utter, a break-down of worth So absolute: no enemy shall learn,

He thrust his child 'twixt danger and
himself,

And, when that child somehow stood danger out,

Stole back with serpent wiles to ruin
Charles

—Body, that's much,—and soul, that's more—and realm,

That's most of all! No enemy shall
say . . .

D'O. Do you repent, sir?

Vic. [resuming himself.] D'Ormea?
This is well!

Worthily done, King Charles, craftily
done!

Judiciously you post these, to o'er-hear The little your importunate father thrusts

Himself on you to say! Ay, they'll correct

The amiable blind facility You showed in answering his peevish suit.

What can he need to sue for? Bravely, D'Ormea,

Have you fulfilled your office: but for
you,

The old Count might have drawn some few more lives

To swell his income! Had you, Lady, missed

The moment, a permission would be granted

To build afresh my ruinous old pile!

But you remembered properly the list Of wise precautions I took when I gave

Nearly as much away—to reap the fruits

I might have looked for!

Cha. Thanks, sir: degrade me, So you remain yourself. Adieu!

Vic. I'll not Forget it for the future, nor presume

Next time to slight such mediators!
Nay—

Had I first moved them both to intercede,

I might secure a chamber in Moncagli-er—Who knows?

Cha. Adieu!

Vic. You bid me this adieu With the old spirit?

Cha. Adieu!

Vic. Charles—Charles!

Cha. Adieu!

[VICTOR goes.]

Cha. You were mistaken, Marquis, as you hear!

'Twas for another purpose the Count
came.

The Count desires Moncagli-er. Give the order!

D'O. [leisurely.] Your minister has lost your confidence,

Asserting late, for his own purposes, Count Tende would...

Cha. [flinging his badge back.] Be still the minister!

And give a loose to your insulting joy—

It irks me more thus stifled than expressed.

Loose it!

D'O. There's none to loose, alas!—
I see

I never am to die a martyr.

Pol. Charles!

Cha. No praise, at least, Polyxena—no praise!

KING CHARLES: PART II.

D'ORMEA seated, folding papers he has been examining.

This at the last effects it: now, King
Charles

Or else King Victor—that's a balance:
but now

For D'Ormea the arch-culprit, either
turn

O' the scale,—that's sure enough. A point to solve,

My masters—moralists—whate'er your style!

When you discover why I push myself Into a pitfall you'd pass safely by,

Impart to me among the rest! No matter.

Prompt are the righteous ever with their rede

To us the wicked—lesson them this once!
For safe among the wicked are you set,

D'Ormea. We lament life's brevity, Yet quarter e'en the threescore years and ten,

Nor stick to call the quarter roundly
'life.'

D'Ormea was wicked, say, some twenty
years;

A tree so long was stunted; afterward,
What if it grew, continued growing, till

No fellow of the forest equalled it?
'Twas a shrub then—a shrub it still

must be:

While forward saplings, at the outset checked,

In virtue of that first sprout keep their style

Amid the forest's green fraternity.

Thus I shoot up—to surely get lopped
down,

And bound up for the burning. Now for it!

Enter CHARLES and POLYXENA with Attendants.

D'O. [rises.] Sir, in the due discharge of this my office—

This enforced summons of yourself from Turin,

And the disclosure I am bound to make To-night,—there must already be, I feel,

So much that wounds...
Cha. Well, sir?

D'O. —That I, perchance, May utter, also, what, another time, Would irk much,—it may prove less irksome now.

Cha. What would you utter ?

D'O. That I from my soul Grieve at to-night's event: for you I grieve—

E'en grieve for . . .

Cha. Tush, another time for talk !
My kingdom is in imminent danger ?

D'O. Let
The Count communicate with France its King, His grandson, will have Fleury's aid for
this,

Though for no other war.

Cha. First for the levies :
What forces can I muster presently ?

[D'ORMEA delivers papers which CHARLES inspects.]

Cha. Good—very good. Montorio . . .
how is this ?

—Equips me double the old complement Of soldiers ?

D'O. Since his land has been relieved From double impost, this he manages :
But under the late monarch . . .

Cha. Peace. I know.
Count Spava has omitted mentioning What proxy is to head these troops of his.

D'O. Count Spava means to head his troops himself.
Something to fight for now ; ' whereas,' says he,

' Under the Sovereign's father ' . . .

Cha. It would seem That all my people love me.

D'O. Yes.
[To POLYXENA while CHARLES continues to inspect the papers.]

A temper
Like Victor's may avail to keep a state ;
He terrifies men and they fall not off ; Good to restrain ; best, if restraint were
all :

But, with the silent circle round him, ends Such sway. Our King's begins precisely there.

For to suggest, impel, and set at work, Is quite another function. Men may slight,

In time of peace, the King who brought them peace :

In war,—his voice, his eyes, help more than fear.

They love you, sire !

Cha. [To Attendants.] Bring the regalia
forth.

Quit the room. And now, Marquis, answer me—

Why should the King of France invade my realm ?

D'O. Why ? Did I not acquaint your Majesty

An hour ago ?

Cha. I choose to hear again What then I heard.

D'O. Because, sire, as I said, Your father is resolved to have his crown

At any risk ; and, as I judge, calls in The foreigner to aid him.

Cha. And your reason For saying this ?

D'O. [Aside.] Ay, just his father's
way !

[To CH.] The Count wrote yesterday to your forces' Chief,

Rhebinder—made demand of help—

Cha. To try Rhebinder—he 's of alien blood : aught
else ?

D'O. Receiving a refusal,—some hours after,

The Count called on Del Borgo to deliver The Act of Abdication : he refusing, Or hesitating, rather—

Cha. What ensued ?

D'O. At midnight, only two hours since, at Turin,

He rode in person to the citadel With one attendant, to the Soccorso gate, And bade the governor, San Remi, open—

Admit him.

Cha. For a purpose I divine.

These three were faithful, then ?

D'O. They told it me :

And I—

Cha. Most faithful—

D'O. Tell it you—with this Moreover, of my own : if, an hour hence You have not interposed, the Count will
be

Upon his road to France for succour.

Cha. Good !
You do your duty, now, to me your monarch

Fully, I warrant ?—have, that is, your project For saving both of us disgrace, past doubt ?

D'O. I give my counsel,—and the only one.
A month since, I besought you to employ Restraints which had prevented many a pang :

But now the harsher course must be pursued.

These papers, made for the emergency,
Will pain you to subscribe : this is a list Of those suspected merely—men to watch ;

This—of the few of the Count's very household.

You must, however reluctantly, arrest ;
While here 's a method of remonstrance—sure

Not stronger than the case demands—to take

With the Count's self.

Cha. Deliver those three papers.

Pol. [while CHARLES inspects them—to D'ORMEA.]

Your measures are not over-harsh, sir :
France

Will hardly be deterred from coming hither

By these.

D'O. What good of my proposing measures

Without a chance of their success ? E'en
these,

Hear what he'll say at my presenting.

Cha. [who has signed them.] There !
About the warrants ! You've my signature.

What turns you pale ? I do my duty by
you

In acting boldly thus on your advice.

D'O. [reading them separately.] Arrest the people I suspected merely ?

Cha. Did you suspect them ?

D'O. Doubtless : but—but—sire, This Forquieri's governor of Turin ;
And Rivarol and he have influence over Half of the capital.—Rabella, too ?

Why, sire—

Cha. Oh, leave the fear to me !

D'O. [still reading]. You bid me Incarcerate the people on this list ?

Sire—

Cha. Why, you never bade arrest those men,

So close related to my father too,
On trifling grounds ?

D'O. Oh, as for that, St. George,
President of Chambery's senators, Is hatching treason ! but—

[Still more troubled.] Sire, Count Cumiane Is brother to your father's wife ! What's here ?

Arrest the wife herself ?

Cha. You seem to think it A venial crime to plot against me. Well ?

D'O. [who has read the last paper.] Wherefore am I thus ruined ?

Why not take

My life at once ? This poor formality

Is, let me say, unworthy you ! Prevent
it,

You, madam ! I have served you, am prepared

For all disgraces—only, let disgrace

Be plain, be proper—proper for the
world

To pass its judgment on 'twixt you and
me !

Take back your warrant—I will none of
it.

Cha. Here is a man to talk of fickleness !

He stakes his life upon my father's falsehood ;

I bid him . . .

D'O. Not you ! Were he trebly false,
You do not bid me . . .

Cha. Is't not written there ?
I thought so : give—I'll set it right.

D'O. Is it there ?
Oh, yes—and plain—arrest him—now—drag here

Your father ! And were all six times as plain,

Do you suppose I trust it ?

Cha. Just one word !
You bring him, taken in the act of flight,

Or else your life is forfeit.

D'O. Ay, to Turin
I bring him ? And to-morrow ?

Cha. Here and now !
The whole thing is a lie—a hateful lie—
As I believed and as my father said.
I knew it from the first, but was compelled To circumvent you ; and the crafty
D'Ormea,
That baffled Alberoni and tricked Coscia,
The miserable sower of such discord
'Twixt sire and son, is in the toils at last !
Oh, I see ! you arrive—this plan of
yours,
Weak as it is, torments sufficiently A sick, old, peevish man—wings hasty
speech
And ill-considered threats from him ;
that 's noted ;
Then out you ferret papers, his amusement In lonely hours of lassitude—examine The day-by-day report of your paid creatures—
And back you come—all was not ripe, you find,
And, as you hope, may keep from ripening yet—
But you were in bare time ! Only,
'twere best
I never saw my father—these old men Are potent in excuses—and, meanwhile, D'Ormea 's the man I cannot do without !
Pol. Charles—
Cha. Ah, no question !
You're for D'Ormea too !
You'd have me eat and drink, and sleep, live, die
With this lie coiled about me, choking
me !
No, no—he 's caught ! [to D'ORMEA.]
You venture life, you say, Upon my father's perfidy ; and I Have, on the whole, no right to disregard The chains of testimony you thus wind About me ; though I do—do from my
soul
Discredit them : still I must authorize These measures—and I will. Perugia !
[Many Officers enter.] Count—You and Solar, with all the force you
have,
Are at the Marquis' orders : what he bids,

Implicitly perform ! You are to bring A traitor here—the man that 's likeliest
one
At present, fronts me ; you are at his beck
For a full hour ; he undertakes to show
you
A fouler than himself,—but, failing that,
Return with him, and, as my father lives, He dies this night ! The clemency you
blame
So oft, shall be revoked—rights exercised That I've abjured.
[To D'ORMEA.] Now, sir, about the work !
To save your king and country ! Take the warrant !
D'O. You hear the Sovereign's mandate, Count Perugia ?
Obey me ! As your diligence, expect Reward ! All follow to Montecagliere !
Cha. [in great anguish.] D'Ormea !
[D'ORMEA goes.]
He goes, lit up with that appalling
smile !
[To POLYXENA after a pause.
At least you understand all this ?
Pol. These means
Of our defence—these measures of precaution ?
Cha. It must be the best way. I should have else Withered beneath his scorn.
Pol. What would you say ?
Cha. Why, you don't think I mean to keep the crown, Polyxena ?
Pol. You then believe the story In spite of all—that Victor 's coming ?
Cha. Believe it !
I know that he is coming—feel the
strength
That has upheld me leave me at his coming !
'Twas mine, and now he takes his own
again.
Some kinds of strength are well enough to have ;
But who 's to have that strength ? Let my crown go !
I meant to keep it—but I cannot—cannot !
Only, he shall not taunt me—he, the
first . . .

See if he would not be the first to taunt
me

With having left his kingdom at a
word—

With letting it be conquered without stroke—

With . . . no—no—'tis no worse than when he left it,

I've just to bid him take it, and, that over,

We'll fly away—fly—for I loathe this Turin,

This Rivoli, all titles loathe, and state.
We'd best go to your country—unless
God

Send I die now !

Pol. Charles, hear me !

Cha. —And again

Shall you be my Polyxena—you'll take
me

Out of this woe ! Yes, do speak—and keep speaking !

I would not let you speak just now, for
fear

You'd counsel me against him : but talk, now,

As we two used to talk in blessed times :
Bid me endure all his caprices ; take me
From this mad post above him !

Pol. I believe

We are undone, but from a different cause.

All your resources, down to the least
guard,

Are now at D'Ormea's beck. What if,
the while,

He act in concert with your father ? We Indeed were lost. This lonely Rivoli—

Where find a better place for them ?

Cha. [pacing the room.] And why Does Victor come ? To undo all that's done !

Restore the Past—prevent the Future !
Seat

His mistress in your seat, and place in mine

. . . Oh, my own people, whom will you find there,

To ask of, to consult with, to care for,
To hold up with your hands ? Whom ?

One that's false—

False—from the head's crown to the foot's sole, false !

The best is, that I knew it in my heart
From the beginning, and expected this,

And hated you, Polyxena, because You saw thro' him, though I too saw thro' him,

Saw that he meant this while he crowned me, while

He prayed for me,—nay, while he kissed my brow,

I saw—

Pol. But if your measures take effect, And D'Ormea's true to you ?

Cha. Then worst of all !
I shall have loosed that callous wretch on
him !

Well may the woman taunt him with his child—

I, eating here his bread, clothed in his clothes,

Seated upon his seat, give D'Ormea leave To outrage him ! We talk—perchance they tear

My father from his bed—the old hands
feel

For one who is not, but who should be
there—

And he finds D'Ormea ! D'Ormea, too, finds him !

The crowded chamber when the lights go out—

Closed doors—the horrid scuffle in the dark—

The accursed promptings of the minute !
My guards !

To horse—and after, with me—and prevent !

Pol. [seizing his hand.] King Charles !
Pause here upon this strip of time

Allotted you out of eternity !
Crowns are from God—in His name you hold yours.

Your life's no least thing, were it fit
your life

Should be abjured along with rule ; but
now,

Keep both ! Your duty is to live and
rule—

You, who would vulgarly look fine
enough

In the world's eye, deserting your soul's
charge,—

Ay, you would have men's praise—this Rivoli

Would be illumined ! while, as 'tis, no
doubt,
Something of stain will ever rest on
you ;
No one will rightly know why you refused To abdicate ; they'll talk of deeds you could Have done, no doubt,—nor do I much expect Future achievements will blot out the
Past,
Envelope it in haze—nor shall we two Be happy any more. 'Twill be, I feel,
Only in moments that the duty's seen As palpably as now—the months, the
years
Of painful indistinctness are to come, While daily must we tread these palace-rooms Pregnant with memories of the Past :
your eye
May turn to mine and find no comfort
there,
Through fancies that beset me, as your-
self,
Of other courses, with far other issues,
We might have taken this great night—such bear,
As I will bear ! What matters happiness ?
Duty ! There's man's one moment—this is yours !
[Putting the crown on his head, and the sceptre in his hand, she places him on his seat : a long pause and silence.]

Enter D'ORMEA and VICTOR.

Vic. At last I speak ; but once—that once, to you !
'Tis you I ask, not these your varletry, Who's King of us ?

Cha. [from his seat.] Count Tende . . .

Vic. What your spies Assert I ponder in my soul, I say—Here to your face, amid your guards !
I choose

To take again the crown whose shadow I gave—

For still its potency surrounds the weak White locks their felon hands have discomposed.

Or, I'll not ask who's King, but simply,
who Withholds the crown I claim ? Deliver
it !
I have no friend in the wide world : nor France
Nor England cares for me : you see the sum

Of what I can avail. Deliver it !

Cha. Take it, my father !

And now say in turn,
Was it done well, my father—sure not
well,

To try me thus ! I might have seen much cause

For keeping it—too easily seen cause !

But, from that moment, e'en more weafully

My life had pined away, than pine it will.

Already you have much to answer for.

My life to pine is nothing,—her sunk
eyes

Were happy once ! No doubt, my people
think

That I'm their King still . . . but I cannot strive !

Take it !

Vic. [one hand on the crown CHARLES offers, the other on his neck.] So few years give it quietly,

My son ! It will drop from me. See you
not ?

A crown's unlike a sword to give away—That, let a strong hand to a weak hand
give !

But crowns should slip from palsied brows to heads

Young as this head : yet mine is weak
enough,

E'en weaker than I knew. I seek for phrases

To vindicate my right. 'Tis of a piece !
All is alike gone by with me—who beat

Once D'Orleans in his lines—his very lines !

To have been Eugene's comrade, Louis' rival,

And now . . .

Cha. [putting the crown on him, to the rest.] The King speaks, yet none kneels, I think !

Vic. I am then King ! ~~As~~ I became a King

Despise the nations—kept myself a
King—

So I die King, with Kingship dying too Around me ! I have lasted Europe's
time !

What wants my story of completion ?
Where

Must needs the damning break show !
Who mistrusts

My children here—tell they of any break
'Twixt my day's sunrise and its fiery
fall ?

And who were by me when I died but they ?

Who ? —D'Ormea there !

Cha. What means he ?

Vic. Ever there !

Charles—how to save your story ?
Mine must go !

Say—say that you refused the crown to
me—

Charles, yours shall be my story ! You immured

Me, say, at Rivoli. A single year I spend without a sight of you, then
die—

That will serve every purpose—tell that tale

The world !

Cha. Mistrust me ? Help !

Vic. Past help, past reach !

'Tis in the heart—you cannot reach the
heart :

This broke mine, that I did believe, you,
Charles,

Would have denied and so disgraced me.
Pol. Charles

Has never ceased to be your subject, sire !
He reigned at first through setting up
yourself

As pattern : if he e'er seemed harsh to
you,

'Twas from a too intense appreciation Of your own character : he acted you—Ne'er for an instant did I think it real,

Nor look for any other than this end.
I hold him worlds the worse on that account ;

But so it was.

Cha. [to POLYX.] I love you, now,
indeed !

[To VICTOR.] You never knew me !

Vic. Hardly till this moment, When I seem learning many other
things,

Because the time for using them is past.
If 'twere to do again ! That's idly wished.

Truthfulness might prove policy as
good

As guile. Is this my daughter's forehead ? Yes—

I've made it fitter now to be a queen's Than formerly—I've ploughed the deep lines there

Which keep too well a crown from slipping off !

No matter. Guile has made me King
again.

Louis—*'twas in King Victor's time—long
since,*

When Louis reigned—and, also, Victor reigned—

How the world talks already of us two !
God of eclipse and each discoloured star, Why do I linger then ?

Ha ! Where lurks he ?
D'Ormea ! Come nearer to your King !

Now stand !

[Collecting his strength as D'ORMEA approaches.

But you lied, D'Ormea ! I do not repent.
[Dies.

THE RETURN OF THE DRUSES

1843

PERSONS

The Grand-Master's Prefect.
 The Patriarch's Nuncio
 The Republic's Admiral.
 LOYS DE DREUX, Knight-Novice.
 Initiated Druses—DJABAL.
 " " KHALIL.
 " " ANAEL.

Initiated Druses—MAANI.
 " " KARSHOOK.
 RAGHIB, AYOOB, and others.
 Uninitiated Druses.
 Prefect's Guard, Nuncio's Attendants, Admiral's Force.

TIME, 14—.

PLACE, An Islet of the Southern Sporades, colonised by Druses of Lebanon, and garrisoned by the Knights-Hospitallers of Rhodes.

SCENE, A Hall in the Prefect's Palace.

ACT I

Enter stealthily KARSHOOK, RAGHIB, AYOOB, and other initiated Druses, each as he enters casting off a robe that conceals his distinctive black vest and white turban; then, as giving a loose to exultation,— Kar. The moon is carried off in purple fire:

Day breaks at last! Break glory, with the day,

On Djabal's dread incarnate mystery Now ready to resume its pristine shape Of Hakeem, as the Khalif vanished erst
 In what seemed death to uninstructed eyes,

Onred Mokattam's verge—our Founder's flesh,

As he resumes our Founder's function!
Ragh. —Death

Sweep to the Christian Prefect that enslaved

So long us sad Druse exiles o'er the sea!
Ay.—Most joy be thine, O Mother-mountain! Thy brood

Returns to thee, no outcasts as we left, But thus—but thus! Behind, our Prefect's corse;

Before, a presence like the morning—
 thine,

Absolute Djabal late,—God Hakeem
 now

That day breaks!

Kar. Off then, with disguise at last!
 As from our forms this hateful garb we strip,

Lose every tongue its glozing accent too, Discard each limb the ignoble gesture!

Cry,
 'Tis the Druse Nation, warders on our mount

Of the world's secret, since the birth of
 time,

—No kindred slips, no offsets from thy stock,

No spawn of Christians are we, Prefect,
 we

Who rise . . .

Ay. Who shout . . .

Ragh. Who seize, a first-fruits, ha—Spoil of the spoiler! Brave!

[They begin to tear down, and to dispute for, the decorations of the hall.]

Kar. Hold!

Ay. —Mine, I say;
 And mine shall it continue!

Kar. Just thus fringe !
Take anything beside ! Lo, spire on spire,
Curl serpentwise wreathed columns to the top Of the roof, and hide themselves mysteriously
Among the twinkling lights and darks that haunt

Yon cornice ! Where the huge veil, they suspend
Before the Prefect's chamber of delight, Floats wide, then falls again as if its slave,

Thescented air, took heart now, and anon Lost heart, to buoy its breadths of gorgeousness

Above the gloom they droop in—all the porch

Is jewelled o'er with frostwork charac-tery ;

And see yon eight-point cross of white flame, winking

Hoar-silvery like some fresh-broke marble-stone :

Raze out the Rhodian cross there, so thou leav'st me

This single fringe !

Ay. Ha, wouldst thou, dog-fox ?
Help !

—Three handbreadths of gold fringe, my son was set To twist, the night he died !

Kar. Nay, hear the knave !
And I could witness my one daughter
borne,

A week since, to the Prefect's couch, yet fold

These arms, be mute, lest word of mine should mar

Our Master's work, delay the Prefect
here

A day, prevent his sailing hence for Rhodes—

How know I else ?—Hear me denied my right

By such a knave !

Ragh. [interposing.] Each ravage for himself !

Booty enough ! On, Druses ! Be there
found

Blood and a heap behind us ; with us,
Djabal

Turned Hakeem ; and before us, Lebanon !

Yields the porch ? Spare not ! There his minions dragged

Thy daughter, Karshook, to the Prefect's couch !

Ayoob ! Thy son, to soothe the Prefect's
pride,

Bent o'er that task, the death-sweat on his brow,

Carving the spice-tree's heart in scrollwork there !

Onward in Djabal's name !

*As the tumult is at height, enter KHALIL.
A pause and silence.*

Kha. Was it for this, Djabal hath summoned you ? Deserve you thus A portion in to-day's event ? What,

here—

When most behoves your feet fall soft,
your eyes

Sink low, your tongues lie still,—at Djabal's side,

Close in his very hearing, who, per-
chance,

Assumes e'en now God Hakeem's dreaded shape,—

Dispute you for these gauds ?
Ay. How say'st thou, Khalil ?

Doubtless our Master prompts thee !
Take the fringe,

Old Karshook ! I supposed it was a
day . . .

Kha. For pillage ?
Kar. Hearken, Khalil ! Never spoke

A boy so like a song-bird ; we avouch
thee

Prettiest of all our Master's instruments Except thy bright twin-sister—thou and Anael Challenge his prime regard : but we may crave

(Such nothings as we be) a portion too
Of Djabal's favour ; in him we believed,

His bound ourselves, him moon by moon obeyed,

Kept silence till this daybreak—so, may claim

Reward : who grudges me my claim ?
Ay. To-day

Is not as yesterday !

Ragh. Stand off !
Kha. Rebel you ?
 Must I, the delegate of Djabal, draw His wrath on you, the day of our Return ?
Other Druses. Wrench from their grasp the fringe ! Hound ! must the earth
 Vomit her plagues on us thro' thee ?— and thee ?
 Plague me not, Khalil, for their fault !
Kha. Oh, shame !
 Thus breaks to-day on you, the mystic
 tribe
 Who, flying the approach of Osman, bore
 Our faith, a merest spark, from Syria's ridge
 Its birthplace, hither ! Let the sea divide These hunters from their prey, you said, and safe
 In this dim islet's virgin solitude Tend we our faith, the spark, till happier time
 Fan it to fire ; till Hakeem rise again, According to his word that, in the flesh Which faded on Mokattam ages since, He, at our extreme need, would inter-
 pose,
 And, reinstating all in power and bliss, Lead us himself to Lebanon once more.
 Was't not thus you departed years ago,
 Ere I was born ?
Druses. 'Twas even thus, years ago.
Kha. And did you call—(according to old laws Which bid us, lest the sacred grow profane, Assimilate ourselves in outward rites With strangers fortune makes our lords, and live
 As Christian with the Christian, Jew with Jew, Druse only with the Druses)—did you
 call Or no, to stand 'twixt you and Osman's rage, (Mad to pursue e'en hither thro' the sea The remnant of your tribe) a race selfvowed To endless warfare with his hordes and
 him,

The White-cross Knights of the adjacent
 Isle ?
Kar. And why else rend we down, wrench up, raze out ?
 These Knights of Rhodes we thus solicited
 For help, bestowed on us a fiercer pest Than aught we fled—their Prefect ; who began
 His promised mere paternal governance,
 By a prompt massacre of all our Sheikhs Able to thwart the Order in its scheme Of crushing, with our nationalities, Each chance of our return, and taming
 us Bondslaves to Rhodes for ever—all, he thinks
 To end by this day's treason.
Kha. Say I not ?
 You, fitted to the Order's purposes, Your Sheikhs cut off, your very garb proscribed,— Must yet receive one degradation more ;
 The Knights at last throw off the mask —transfer,
 As tributary now, and appanage, This islet they are but protectors of,
 To their own ever-craving lord, the Church,
 Which licenses all crimes that pay it
 thus.
 You, from their Prefect, were to be consigned (Pursuant to I know not what vile pact) To the Knights' Patriarch, ardent to outvie
 His predecessor in all wickedness.
 When suddenly rose Djabal in the midst, Djabal, the man, in semblance, but our
 God Confessed by signs and portents. Ye saw fire Bicker round Djabal, heard strange music flit Bird-like about his brow ?
Druses. We saw—we heard !
 Djabal is Hakeem, the incarnate Dread, The phantasm Khalif, King of Prodigies !
Kha. And as he said hath not our Khalif done, And so disposed events (from land to
 land

Passing invisibly) that when, this morn, The pact of villany complete, there comes

This Patriarch's Nuncio with this Master's Prefect

Their treason to consummate,—each will face

For a crouching handful, an uplifted nation;

For simulated Christians, confessed Druses;

And, for slaves past hope of the Mother-mount,

Freedmen returning there 'neath Venice's flag;

That Venice which, the Hospitallers' foe, Grants us from Candia escort home at price

Of our relinquished isle, Rhodes counts her own—

Venice, whose promised argosies should
stand

Toward the harbour: is it now that you,
and you,

And you, selected from the rest to bear
The burthen of the Khalif's secret, further

To-day's event, entitled by your wrongs, And witness in the Prefect's hall his
fate—

That you dare clutch these gauds? Ay, drop them!

Kar. True,
Most true, all this; and yet, may one dare hint,

Thou art the youngest of us?—though employed

Abundantly as Djabal's confidant, Transmitter of his mandates, even now.

Much less, when'er beside him Anael graces

The cedar throne, his Queen-bride, art thou like

To occupy its lowest step that day!
Now, Khalil, wert thou checked as thou aspirest,

Forbidden such or such an honour,—
say,

Would silence serve so amply?

Kha. Karshook thinks
I covet honours? Well, nor idly thinks!
Honours? I have demanded of them all The greatest!

Kar. I supposed so.

Kha. Judge yourselves!
Turn—thus: 'tis in the alcove at the
back

Of yonder columned porch, whose entrance now

The veil hides, that our Prefect holds his state;

Receives the Nuncio, when the one,
from Rhodes,

The other lands from Syria; there they meet.

Now, I have sued with earnest prayers...

Kar. For what Shall the Bride's brother vainly sue?

Kha. That mine—Avenging in one blow a myriad wrongs —Might be the hand to slay the Prefect

there!

Djabal reserves that office for himself.
[A silence.]

Thus far, as youngest of you all, I speak —Scarce more enlightened than yourselves: since, near

As I approach him, nearer as I trust Soon to approach our Master, he reveals

Only the God's power, not the glory yet.
Therefore I reasoned with you: now,

as servant
To Djabal, bearing his authority,

Hear me appoint your several posts!
Till noon

None see him save myself and Anael—
once

The deed achieved, our Khalif, casting
off

The embodied Awe's tremendous mystery,

The weakness of the flesh disguise, resumes

His proper glory, ne'er to fade again.

Enter a Druse.

The Druse. Our Prefect lands from Rhodes!—Without a sign

That he suspects aught since he left our Isle;

Nor in his train a single guard beyond The few he sailed with hence: so have we learned

From Loys.

Kar. Loys? Is not Loys gone
For ever?

Ayoob. Loys, the Frank Knight, Summon our people, Raghib ! Bid all returned ? forth !

Saidst thou a Crossed-keys' flag would flap the mast ?

It nears apace ! One galley and no more—

If Djabal chance to ask who spied the flag,

The Druse. I shall see home, see home !

But, mar not those imperial lineaments, No majesty of all that rapt regard Vex by the least omission ! Let him rise Without a check from you !

Druses. Let Djabal rise !

Enter Loys.—The Druses are silent.

Loys. Who speaks of Djabal ?—for I seek him, friends !

[Aside.] Tu Dieu ! 'Tis as our Isle broke out in song

For joy, its Prefect-incubus drops off To-day, and I succeed him in his rule !

But no—they cannot dream of their good fortune !

[Aloud.] Peace to you, Druses ! I have tidings for you,

But first for Djabal : where 's your tall bewitcher,

With that small Arab thin-lipped silver-mouth ?

Kha. [Aside to KAR.] Loys, in truth ! Yet Djabal cannot err !

Kar. [to KHA.] And who takes charge of Loys ? That 's forgotten,

Despite thy wariness ! Will Loys stand

And see his comrade slaughtered ?

Loys. [Aside.] How they shrink And whisper, with those rapid faces ! What ?

The sight of me in their oppressors' garb Strikes terror to the simple tribe? God's shame

On those that bring our Order ill repute!
But all's at end now; better days begin
For these mild mountaineers from over-sea:

The timidest shall have in me no Prefect To cower at thus! [Aloud.] I asked for Djabal—

Kar. [Aside.] Better
One lured him, ere he can suspect, inside

The corridor; 'twere easy to dispatch A youngster. [To Loys.] Djabal passed some minutes since

Thro' yonder porch, and . . .

Kha. [Aside.] Hold! What, him dispatch?

The only Christian of them all we charge
No tyranny upon? Who,—noblest Knight

Of all that learned from time to time their trade

Of lust and cruelty among us,—heir To Europe's pomps, a truest child of
pride,—

Yet stood between the Prefect and ourselves

From the beginning? Loys, Djabal makes

Account of, and precisely sent to Rhodes

For safety?—I take charge of him!
[To Loys.] Sir Loys,— Loys. There, cousins! Does Sir Loys strike you dead?

Kha. [advancing.] Djabal has intercourse with few or none

Till noontide: but, your pleasure?
Loys. Intercourse

With few or none?'—(Ah, Khalil, when you spoke

I saw not your smooth face! All health!
—and health

To Anael! How fares Anael?)—' Inter-
course

With few or none?' Forget you, I've been friendly

With Djabal long ere you or any Druse?
—Enough of him at Rennes, I think,
beneath

The Duke my father's roof! He'd tell by the hour,
With fixed white eyes beneath his swarthy brow,

Plausibler stories . . .
Kha. Stories, say you?—Ah,
The quaint attire!

Loys. My dress for the last time!
How sad I cannot make you understand,
This ermine, o'er a shield, betokens me
Of Bretagne, ancientest of provinces And noblest; and, what's best and oldest there, See, Dreux', our house's blazon, which the Nuncio

Tacks to an Hospitaller's vest to-day!

Kha. The Nuncio we await? What brings you back

From Rhodes, Sir Loys?

Loys. How you island-tribe Forget, the world's awake while here you drowse!

What brings me back? What should not bring me, rather?

Our Patriarch's Nuncio visits you today—

Is not my year's probation out? I come To take the knightly vows.

Kha. What's that you wear?
Loys. This Rhodian cross? The cross your Prefect wore.

You should have seen, as I saw, the full Chapter

Rise, to a man, while they transferred this cross

From that unworthy Prefect's neck to
. . . (fool—

My secret will escape me!) In a word, My year's probation passed, a Knight ere eve

Am I; bound, like the rest, to yield my wealth

To the common stock, to live in chastity, (We Knights espouse alone our Order's fame)

—Change this gay weed for the black white-crossed gown,

And fight to death against the Infidel —Not, therefore, against you, you Christians with

Such partial difference only as befits The peaceablest of tribes! But Khalil, prithce,

Is not the Isle brighter than wont to-day ?

Kha. Ah, the new sword !

Loys. See now ! You handle sword As 'twere a camel-staff ! Pull ! That's my motto, Annealed, 'Pro fide,' on the blade in blue.

Kha. No curve in it ? Surely a blade should curve !

Loys. Straight from the wrist !
Loose—it should poise itself !

Kha. [waving with irrepresible exultation the sword.] We are a nation, Loys, of old fame

Among the mountains ! Rights have we to keep

With the sword too !

[Remembering himself.] But I forget—you bid me

Seek Djabal ?

Loys. What ! A sword's sight scares you not ?

(The People I will make of him and
them !

Oh, let my Prefect-sway begin at once !
Bring Djabal—say, indeed, that come he must !

Kha. At noon seek Djabal in the Prefect's Chamber,
And find . . . [Aside.] Nay, 'tis thy cursed race's token, Frank pride, no special insolence of thine !

[Aloud.] Tarry, and I will do your bidding, Loys.

[To the rest aside.] Now, forth you ! I proceed to Djabal straight.

Leave this poor boy, who knows not what he says.

Oh, will it not add joy to even thy joy, Djabal, that I report all friends were
true ?

[KHALIL goes, followed by the Druses.

Loys. Tu Dieu ! How happy I shall make these Druses !

Was't not surpassingly contrived of me To get the long list of their wrongs by
heart,

Then take the first pretence for stealing
off

From these poor islanders, present my-

Sudden at Rhodes before the noble
Chapter,

And (as best proof of ardour in its cause Which ere to-night will have become, too, mine)

Acquaint it with this plague-sore in its body,

This Prefect and his villanous career ?
The princely Synod ! All I dared request

Was his dismissal ; and they graciously Consigned his very office to myself—

Myself may heal whate'er's diseased !
And good

For them, they did so ! Since I never felt

How lone a lot, tho' brilliant, I embrace, Till now that, past retrieval, it is mine—To live thus, and thus die ! Yet, as I leapt

On shore, so home a feeling greeted me That I could half believe in Djabal's
story,

He used to tempt my father with, at Rennes—

And me, too, since the story brought me here—

Of some Count Dreux and ancestor of ours Who, sick of wandering from Bouillon's
war,

Left his old name in Lebanon.

Long days
At least to spend in the Isle ! and, my news known

An hour hence, what if Anael turns on
me

The great black eyes I must forget ?

Why, fool, Recall them, then ? My business is with Djabal,

Not Anael ! Djabal tarries : if I seek
him ?—

The Isle is brighter than its wont to-day !

ACT II

Enter DJABAL.

Dja. That a strong man should think himself a God !

I—Hakeem ? To have wandered through
the world,

Sown falsehood, and thence reaped now scorn, now faith,

For my one chant with many a change, my tale
 Of outrage, and my prayer for vengeance
 —this Required, forsooth, no mere man's faculty, Nor less than Hakeem's? The persuading Loys
 To pass probation here; the getting access
 By Loys to the Prefect; worst of all, The gaining my tribe's confidence by fraud
 That would disgrace the very Franks,—
 a few
 Of Europe's secrets that subdue the
 flame,
 The wave,—to ply a simple tribe with
 these,
 Took Hakeem?

And I feel this first to-day!
 Does the day break, is the hour imminent
 When one deed, when my whole life's deed, my deed
 Must be accomplished? Hakeem?
 Why the God?
 Shout, rather, 'Djabal, Youssof's child, thought slain
 With his whole race, the Druses' Sheikhs, this Prefect Endeavoured to extirpate—saved, a
 child,
 Returns from traversing the world, a man, Able to take revenge, lead back the march To Lebanon'—so shout, and who gain-says?

But now, because delusion mixed itself Insensibly with this career, all's changed!
 Have I brought Venice to afford us convoy?
 'True—but my jugglings wrought that!'
 Put I heart
 Into our people where no heart lurked?
 —Ah,
 What cannot an impostor do!'
 Not this!

Not do this which I do! Not bid, avault Falsehood! Thou shalt not keep thy hold on me!

—Nor even get a hold on me! 'Tis
 now—
 This day—hour—minute—'tis as here
 I stand
 On the accursed threshold of the Prefect, That I am found deceiving and deceived!
 And now what do I?—Hasten to the few Deceived, ere they deceive the many—shout,
 As I professed, I did believe myself!
 Say, Druses, had you seen a butchery—
 If Ayooob, Karshook saw—Maani there Must tell you how I saw my father
 sink;
 My mother's arms twine still about my
 neck;
 I hear my brother's shriek, here's yet the scar
 Of what was meant for my own death-blow—say,
 If you had woke like me, grown year by year
 Out of the tumult in a far-off clime, Would it be wondrous such delusion
 grew?
 I walked the world, asked help at every
 hand;
 Came help or no? Not this and this?
 Which helps When I returned with, found the Prefect here,
 The Druses here, all here but Hakeem's
 self,
 The Khalif of the thousand prophecies, Reserved for such a juncture,—could I call
 My mission aught but Hakeem's?
 Promised Hakeem
 More than performs the Djabal—you absolve?
 —Me, you will never shame before the crowd
 Yet happily ignorant?—Me, both throngs surround
 The few deceived, the many unabused, —Who, thus surrounded, slay for you and them
 The Prefect, lead to Lebanon! No
 Khalif,
 But Sheikhs once more! Mere Djabal—
 not...

Enter KHALIL hastily.

Kha. —God Hakeem !
'Tis told ! The whole Druse nation knows thee, Hakeem, As we ! and mothers lift on high their babes Who seem aware, so glisten their great
eyes, Thou hast not failed us ; ancient brows are proud !
Our elders could not earlier die, it seems,
Than at thy coming ! The Druse heart is thine !
Take it ! my Lord and theirs, be thou adored !

Dja. [Aside.] Adored !—but I renounce it utterly !

Kha. Already are they instituting choirs

And dances to the Khalif, as of old
'Tis chronicled thou bad'st them.

Dja. [Aside.] I abjure it !
'Tis not mine—not for me !

Kha. Why pour they wine Flavoured like honey and bruised mountain herbs ?

Or wear those strings of sun-dried cedar-fruit ?

Oh—let me tell thee—Esaad, we supposed

Doting, is carried forth, eager to see The last sun rise on the Isle—he can see
now !

The shamed Druse women never wept
before :

They can look up when we reach home,
they say.

Smell !—Sweet cane, saved in Lilith's breast thus long—

Sweet !—it grows wild in Lebanon.
And I

Alone do nothing for thee ! 'Tis my office

Just to announce what well thou know'st—but thus

Thou bidst me. At this selfsame moment tend

The Prefect, Nuncio, and the Admiral Hither, by their three sea-paths : nor forget

Who were the trusty watchers !—thou forget ?

Like me, who do forget that Anael
bade . . .

Dja. [Aside.] Ay, Anael, Anael—is that said at last ?

Louder than all, that would be said, I
knew !

What does abjuring mean, confessing
mean,

To the people ? Till that woman crossed my path,

On went I, solely for my people's sake :
I saw her, and I first saw too myself,

And slackened pace : ' if I should prove indeed

Hakeem—with Anael by ! '

Kha. [Aside.] Ah, he is rapt !
Dare I at such a moment break on him

Even to do my sister's bidding ? Yes !
The eyes are Djabal's, and not Hakeem's

yet !
Though but till I have spoken this,
perchance. !

Dja. [Aside.] To yearn to tell her, and yet have no one

Great heart's word that will tell her !
I could gasp

Doubtless one such word out, and die !
[Aloud.] You said

That Anael . . .

Kha. . . . Fain would see thee, speak with thee,

Before thou change, discard this Djabal's shape

She knows, for Hakeem's shape she is to know.

Something's to say that will not from her mind :

I know not what—' Let him but come ! '
she said.

Dja. [Half-apart.] My nation—all my Druses—how fare they ?

Those I must save, and suffer thus to save,

Hold they their posts ? Wait they their Khalif too ?

Kha. All at the signal pant to flock around

That banner of a brow !

Dja. [Aside.] And when they flock, Confess them this—and after, for reward,

Be chased with howlings to her feet

perchance ?

Would I confess ! On the gulf's verge I pause.

How could I slay the Prefect, thus and
thus ?

Anael, be mine to guard me, not destroy !
[Goes.

Enter ANAEL, and MAANI, who is assisting to array her in the ancient dress of the Druses.

An. Those saffron vestures of the tabret-girls !

Comes Djabal, think you ?

Maa. Doubtless Djabal comes.

An. Dost thou snow-swathe thee kinglier, Lebanon,

Than in my dreams ?—Nay, all the

My forehead ! look I lovely so ? He says

That I am lovely.

Maa. Lovely : nay, that hangs Awry.

An. You tell me how a khandjar hangs ?

The sharp side, thus, along the heart, see, marks

The maiden of our class. Are you content

For Djabal as for me ?

Maa. Content, my child.

An. Oh, mother, tell me more of him !
He comes

Even now—tell more, fill up my soul
with him !

Maa. And did I not . . . yes, surely . . .
tell you all ?

An. What will be changed in Djabal when the Change

Arrives ? Which feature ? Not his eyes !

Maa. 'Tis writ,

Our Hakeem's eyes rolled fire and clove
the dark

Superbly.

An. Not his eyes ! His voice perhaps ?

Yet that's no change ; for a grave current lived

—Grandly beneath the surface ever lived,

That, scattering, broke as in live silver spray

While . . . ah, the bliss . . . he would discourse to me

In that enforced, still fashion, word on
word !

'Tis the old current which must swell thro' that,

For what least tone, Maani, could I lose ?
'Tis surely not his voice will change !

—If Hakeem
Only stood by ! If Djabal, somehow,

Out of the radiance as from out a robe ;
Possessed, but was not it !

He lived with you ?
Well—and that morning Djabal saw me
first

And heard my vow never to wed but one Who saved my People—on that day . . .

proceed !

Maa. Once more, then : from the time of his return

In secret, changed so since he left the
Isle

That I, who screened our Emir's last of sons,

This Djabal, from the Prefect's massacre —Who bade him ne'er forget the child

he was,
—Who dreamed so long the youth he might become—

I knew not in the man that child ; the

man Who spoke alone of hopes to save our
tribe,

How he had gone from land to land to save

Our tribe—allies were sure, nor foes to dread ;

And much he mused, days, nights, alone he mused :

But never till that day when, pale and
worn

As by a persevering woe, he cried
'Is there not one Druse left me ?'—and

I showed

The way to Khalil's and your hiding-
place

From the abhorred eye of the Prefect
here,

So that he saw you, heard you speak—till then,

Never did he announce—(how the moon
seemed

To ope and shut, the while, above us
both !)

—His mission was the mission promised
us—

The cycle had revolved—all things renewing,

He was lost Hakeem clothed in flesh to lead

His children home anon, now veiled to work

Great purposes—the Druses now would
change !

An. And they have changed ! And obstacles did sink,

And furtherances rose ! And round his form

Played fire, and music beat her angel wings !

My people, let me more rejoice, oh,
more

For you than for myself ! Did I but watch

Afar the pageant, feel our Khalif pass, One of the throng, how proud were I—tho' ne'er

Singled by Djabal's glance ! But to be chosen

His own from all, the most his own of
all,

To be exalted with him, side by side.

Lead the exulting Druses, meet . . . ah,
how

Worthily meet the maidens who await Ever beneath the cedars—how deserve

This honour, in their eyes ? So bright are they

That saffron-vestured sound the tabrets
there—

The girls who throng there in my dreams ! One hour

And all is over : how shall I do aught

That may deserve next hour's exalting ?

—How ?—

[Suddenly to MAANI.

Mother, I am not worthy of him ! I read it

Still in his eyes ! He stands as if to tell
me

I am not, yet forbears ! Why else revert To one theme ever ?—how mere human gifts Suffice him in myself—whose worship fades,

Whose awe goes ever off at his approach,
As now, that when he comes . . .

[DJABAL enters.] Oh, why is it I cannot kneel to you ?

Dja. Rather, 'tis I Should kneel to you, my Anael !

An. Even so !
For never seem you—shall I speak the

truth ?—
Never a God to me ! 'Tis the Man's

hand, Eye, voice ! Oh, do you veil these to our people,

Or but to me ? To them, I think, to

them !
And brightness is their veil, shadow—my truth !

You mean that I should never kneel to

you
—So I will kneel !

Dja. [preventing her.] No—no !
[Feeling the khandjar as he raises her.

Ha, have you chosen . . .
An. The khandjar with our ancient garb. But, Djabal, Change not, be not exalted yet ! give

time

That I may plan more, perfect more.
My blood

Beats—beats !
[Aside.] Oh must I then—since

Loys leaves us Never to come again, renew in me

These doubts so near effaced already—must

I needs confess them now to Djabal ?
Own

That when I saw that stranger—heard his voice,

My faith fell, and the woeful thought flashed first

That each effect of Djabal's presence, taken

For proof of more than human attributes In him, by me whose heart at his approach

Beat fast, whose brain while he was by swam round,

Whose soul at his departure died away, —That every such effect might have been wrought

In others' frames, tho' not in mine, by

Loys
Or any merely mortal presence ? Doubt

Is fading fast ; shall I reveal it now ?

How can I be rewarded presently,
With doubt unexpiated, undisclosed ?

Dja. [Aside.] Avow the truth ? I cannot ! In what words

Avow that all she loves in me is false ?
—Which yet has served that flower-like love of hers

To climb by, like the clinging gourd, and clasp

With its divinest wealth of leaf and bloom.

Could I take down the prop-work, in itself

So vile, yet interlaced and overlaid With painted cups and fruitage—might these still

Bask in the sun, unconscious their own
strength

Of matted stalk and tendril had replaced
The old support thus silently withdrawn !

But no ; the beauteous fabric crushes too.
'Tis not for my sake but for Anael's sake I leave her soul this Hakeem where it leans !

Oh, could I vanish from them—quit the Isle !

And yet—a thought comes : here my work is done

At every point ; the Druses must
return—

Have convoy to their birth-place back, whose er

The leader be, myself or any Druse—Venice is pledged to that : 'tis for myself,

For my own vengeance in the Prefect's
death,

I stay now, not for them—to slay or spare

The Prefect, whom imports it save myself ?

He cannot bar their passage from the Isle ;

What would his death be but my own
reward ?

Then, mine I will forego. It is foregone !
Let him escape with all my House's blood !

Ere he can reach land, Djabal disappears,

And Hakeem, Anael loved, shall, fresh as first,

Live in her memory, keeping her sublime

Above the world. She cannot touch that world

By ever knowing what I truly am, Since Loys,—of mankind the only one Able to link my Present with my Past, My life in Europe with my Island life, Thence, able to unmask me,—I've dis-

Safely at last at Rhodes, and . . .

Enter KHALIL.

Kha. Loys greets thee !

Dja. Loys ? To drag me back ? It cannot be !

An. [Aside.] Loys ! Ah, doubt may not be stifled so !

Kha. Can I have erred that thou so gazest ? Yes,

I told thee not, in the glad press of tidings

Of higher import, Loys is returned Before the Prefect, with, if possible, Twice the light-heartedness of old. As though

On some inauguration he expects,

To-day, the world's fate hung !
Dja. —And asks for me ?

Kha. Thou knowest all things ! Thee in chief he greets,

But every Druse of us is to be happy
At his arrival, he declares : were Loys Thou, Master, he could have no wider
soul

To take us in with. How I love that Loys !

Dja. [Aside.] Shame winds me with her tether round and round !

An. [Aside.] Loys ? I take the trial !
it is meet,

The little I can do, be done ; that
faith,

All I can offer, want no perfecting Which my own act may compass. Ay, this way

All may go well, nor that ignoble doubt Be chased by other aid than mine.

Advance

Close to my fear, weigh Loys with my Lord,

The mortal's with the more than mortal's gifts !

Dja. [Aside.] Before, there were so few deceived! and now There's doubtless not one least Druse in the Isle
But, having learned my superhuman claims,
And calling me his Khalif-God, will clash
The whole truth out from Loys at first word!
While Loys, for his part, will hold me up,
With a Frank's unimaginable scorn
Of such imposture, to my people's eyes!
Could I but keep him longer yet awhile From them, amuse him here until I plan How he and I at once may leave the Isle?
Khalil I cannot part with from mysides—My only help in this emergency:
There's Anael!

An. Please you?

Dja. Anael—none but she!
[To ANAEL.] I pass some minutes in the chamber there, Ere I see Loys: you shall speak with him

Until I join you. Khalil follows me.

An. [Aside.] As I divined: he bids me save myself, Offers me a probation—I accept!
Let me see Loys!

Loys. [Without.] Djabal!

An. [Aside.] 'Tis his voice.
The smooth Frank trifler with our people's wrongs,
The self-complacent boy-inquirer, loud
On this and that inflicted tyranny, —Aught serving to parade an ignorance

Of how wrong feels, inflicted! Let me close With what I viewed at distance! let myself Probe this delusion to the core!

Dja. He comes!
Khalil, along with me; while Anael waits Till I return once more—and but once more!

ACT III

ANAEL and LOYS.

An. Here leave me! Here I wait another. 'Twas For no mad protestation of a love Like this you say possesses you, I came.

Loys. Love—how protest a love I dare not feel?

Mad words may doubtless have escaped me—you

Are here—I only feel you here!

An. No more!

Loys. But once again, whom could you love? I dare,

Alas, say nothing of myself, who am A Knight now, for when Knighthood we embrace, Love we abjure: so, speak on safely—

—speak,
Lest I speak, and betray my faith.

And yet
To say your breathing passes through me, changes

My blood to spirit, and my spirit to you,

As Heaven the sacrificer's wine to it—This is not to protest my love! You said

You could love one...

An. One only! We are bent
To earth—who raises up my tribe, I love;
The Prefect bows us—who removes him; we Have ancient rights—who gives them back to us,

I love. Forbear me! Let my hand go!

Loys. Him? You could love only? Where is Djabal?

Stay!
[Aside.] Yet wherefore stay? Who does this but myself?

Had I apprised her that I come to do Just this, what more could she acknowledge? No,

She sees into my heart's core! What is it Feeds either cheek with red, as June some rose?

Why turns she from me? Ah fool, overfond

To dream I could call up...

... What never dream

Yet feigned! 'Tis love! Oh Anael, Against them! Let me not see Djabal speak to me! now!

Djabal! An. The Prefect also comes!

An. Seek Djabal by the Prefect's chamber Loys. [Aside.] Him let me see,
At noon! [She paces the room.

Loys. [Aside.] And am I not the Prefect now? Not Djabal! Him, degraded at a word, To soothe me,—to attest belief in me—
And, after, Djabal! Yes, ere I return To her, the Nuncio's vow shall have destroyed

Is it my fate to be the only one Able to win her love, the only one Unable to accept her love? The Past Breaks up beneath my footing: came I here This heart's rebellion, and coerced this will

This morn as to a slave, to set her free And take her thanks, and then spend day by day For ever.

Content beside her in the Isle? What works Anael, not before the vows Irrevocably fix me . . .

This knowledge in me now! Her eye has broken Let me fly!
The faint disguise away: for Anael's sake The Prefect, or I lose myself for ever!

I left the Isle, for her espoused the cause [Goes.]
Of the Druses, all for her I thought, till now, An. Yes, I am calm now; just one To live without! way remains—

—As I must live! To-day Ordains me Knight, forbids me . . .
never shall

Forbid me to profess myself, heart, arm, Thy soldier! *One, to attest my faith in him: for, see,
I were quite lost else: Loys, Djabal,
stand*

An. Djabal you demanded, comes!
Loys. [Aside.] What wouldst thou, Loys? See him? Nought beside

Is wanting: I have felt his voice a spell From first to last. He brought me here, made known

The Druses to me, drove me hence to seek On either side—two men! I balance looks

Redress for them; and shall I meet him now, And words, give Djabal a man's preference,

When nought is wanting but a word of his, No more. In Djabal, Hakeem is absorbed!

To—what?—induce me to spurn hope, faith, pride, And for a love like this, the God who saves

Honour away,—to cast my lot among His tribe, become a proverb in men's mouths, *My race, selects me for his bride! One
way!—*

Breaking my high pact of companionship Enter DJABAL.

With those who graciously bestowed on me Dja. [to himself.] No moment is to waste, then; 'tis resolved!

The very opportunities I turn *If Khalil may be trusted to lead back
The Druses, and if Loys can be lured Out of the Isle—if I procure his silence, Or promise never to return at least,— All's over! Even now my bark awaits—I reach the next wild islet and the next,
And lose myself beneath the sun forever!
And now, to Anael!*

An. Djabal, I am thine!
Dja. Mine? Djabal's?—As if Hakeem had not been?

An. Not Djabal's? Say first, do you read my thoughts?

Why need I speak, if you can read my thoughts?

Dja. I do not, I have said a thousand times.

An. (My secret's safe, I shall surprise him yet !) Djabal, I knew your secret from the first—Djabal, when first I saw you . . . (by our porch
 You leant, and pressed the tinkling veil away, And one fringe fell behind your neck—I see !)
 . . . I knew you were not human, for I said
 ' This dim secluded house where the sea beats Is Heaven to me—my people's huts are Hell To them ; this august form will follow me, Mix with the waves his voice will,—I have him ;
 And they, the Prefect ; Oh, my happiness Rounds to the full whether I choose or no !
 His eyes met mine, he was about to speak,
 His hand grew damp—surely he meant to say He let me love him : in that moment's bliss
 I shall forget my people pine for home—
 They pass and they repass with pallid eyes !'
 I vowed at once a certain vow ; this vow—
 Not to embrace you till my tribe was saved.
 Embrace me !
Dja. [Apart.] And she loved me !
 Nought remained
 But that ! Nay, Anael, is the Prefect dead ?
An. Ah, you reproach me ! True, his death crowns all,
 I know—or should know : and I would do much,
 Believe ! but, death—Oh, you, who have known death,
 Would never doom the Prefect, were death fearful As we report !
 Death !—a fire curls within us
 From the foot's palm, and fills up to the brain,

Up, out, then shatters the whole bubble-shell Of flesh, perchance !
 Death !—witness, I would die,
 Whate'er death be, would venture now to die For Khalil—for Maani—what for thee ?
 Nay but embrace me, Djabal, in assurance My vow will not be broken, for I must Do something to attest my faith in you,
 Be worthy of you !
Dja. [avoiding her.] I come for that—to say Such an occasion is at hand : 'tis like I leave you—that we part, my Anael,—part For ever !
An. We part ? Just so ! I have succumbed,— I am, he thinks, unworthy—and nought less Will serve than such approval of my faith !
 Then, we part not ! Remains there no way short Of that ? Oh, not that !
 Death !—Yet a hurt bird Died in my hands—its eyes filmed—'Nay, it sleeps,'
 I said, 'will wake to-morrow well'—
 'twas dead !
Dja. I stand here and time fleets.
 Anael—I come To bid a last farewell to you : perhaps We never meet again. But, ere the Prefect Arrive . . .

Enter KHALIL, breathlessly.
Kha. He's here ! The Prefect !
 Twenty guards,
 No more—no sign he dreams of danger.
 All
 Awaits thee only—Ayoob, Karshook, keep Their posts—wait but the deed's accomplishment
 To join us with thy Druses to a man !
 Still holds his course the Nuncio—near and near The fleet from Candia steering !
Dja. [Aside.] All is lost !

—Or won ?

Kha. And I have laid the sacred robes, The sword, the head-tiar, at the porch—
the place

Commanded. Thou wilt hear the Prefect's trumpet.

Dja. Then I keep Anael,—him then, past recall,

I slay—'tis forced on me ! As I began I must conclude—so be it !

Kha. For the rest,
Save Loys, our foe's solitary sword,
All is so safe that . . . I will ne'er entreat Thy post again of thee : tho' danger
none,

There must be glory only meet for thee
In slaying the Prefect !

An. [Aside.] And 'tis now that Djabal

Would leave me !—in the glory meet for
him !

Dja. As glory, I would yield the deed
to you,

Or any Druse ; what peril there may be,
I keep. [Aside.] All things conspire to hound me on !

Not now, my soul, draw back, at least !
Not now !

The course is plain, howe'er obscure all else—

Once offer this tremendous sacrifice, Prevent what else will be irreparable, Secure these transcendental helps, regain

The Cedars—then let all dark clear itself !

I slay him !

Kha. Anael, and no part for us !
[To Dja.] Hast thou possessed her
with . . .

Dja. [to An.] Whom speak you to ?
What is it you behold there ? Nay, this
smile

Turns stranger. Shudder you ? The man must die,

As thousands of our race have died thro'
him.

One blow, and I discharge his weary soul From the flesh that pollutes it ; let him fill

Straight some new expiatory form, of
earth

Or sea, the reptile, or some æry thing :

What is there in his death ?

An. My brother said,
Is there no part in it for us ?

Dja. For Khalil,— The trumpet will announce the Nuncio's
entry ;

Here, I shall find the Prefect hastening In the Pavilion to receive him—here, I slay the Prefect ; meanwhile Ayooob leads

The Nuncio with his guards within : once
these

Secured in the outer hall, bid Ayooob bar Entry or egress till I give the sign

Which waits the landing of the argosies You will announce to me : this double sign

That justice is performed and help arrived,

When Ayooob shall receive, but not
before,

Let him throw ope the palace doors, admit

The Druses to behold their tyrant, ere We leave for ever this detested spot.

Go, Khalil, hurry all ! no pause, no
pause !

Whirl on the dream, secure to wake anon !

Kha. What sign ? and who the bearer ?

Dja. Who shall show

My ring, admit to Ayooob. How she stands !

Have I not . . . I must have some task
for her.

Anael ! not that way ! 'Tis the Prefect's chamber

Anael, keep you the ring—give you the sign !

(It holds her safe amid the stir.) You will

Be faithful ?

An. [taking the ring.] I would fain be worthy of you !

[Trumpet without.]

Kha. He comes !

Dja. And I too come !

An. One word, but one !

Say, shall you be exalted at the deed ?

Then ? On the instant ?

Dja. I exalted ? What ?

He, there—we, thus—our wrongs revenged—our tribe

Set free? Oh, then shall I, assure
yourself,
Shall you, shall each of us, be in his death

Exalted!

Kha. He is here!

Dja. Away—away!

[They go.]

Enter the PREFECT with Guards, and LOYS.

The Prefect. [to Guards.] Back, I say, to the galley every guard!

That's my sole care now; see each bench retains

Its complement of rowers; I embark O' the instant, since this Knight will have it so.

Alas me! Could you have the heart, my Loys?

[To a Guard who whispers.] Oh, bring the holy Nuncio here forthwith!

[The Guards go.]

Loys, a rueful sight, confess, to see The grey discarded Prefect leave his post,

With tears i' the eye! So, you are Prefect now?

You depose me—you succeed me? Ha, ha!

Loys. And dare you laugh, whom laughter less becomes

Than yesterday's forced meekness we beheld...

Pref.—When you so eloquently pleaded, Loys,

For my dismissal from the post?—Ah, meek

With cause enough, consult the Nuncio
else!

And wish him the like meekness—for so staunch

A servant of the church can scarce have bought

His share in the Isle, and paid for it, hard pieces!

You've my successor to condole with,
Nuncio!

I shall be safe by then i' the galley,
Loys!

Loys. You make as you would tell me you rejoice

To leave your scene of...

Pref. Trade in the dear Druses?
Blood and sweat traffic? Spare what yesterday

We had enough of! Drove I in the Isle
A profitable game? Learn wit, my son, Which you'll need shortly! Did it never breed

Suspicion in you, all was not pure profit, When I, the insatiate... and so forth—was bent

On having a partaker in my rule?
Why did I yield this Nuncio half the
gain,

If not that I might also shift—what on
him?

Half of the peril, Loys!

Loys. Peril?

Pref. Hark you!
I'd love you if you'd let me—this for reason,

You save my life at price of... well, say risk

At least, of yours. I came a long time since

To the Isle; our Hospitallers bade me tame

These savage wizards, and reward myself—

Loys. The Knights who so repudiate your crime?

Pref. Loys, the Knights! we doubtless understood

Each other; as for trusting to reward From any friend beside myself... no,

no!
I clutched mine on the spot, when it was sweet,

And I had taste for it. I felt these wizards

Alive—was sure they were not on me,
only

When I was on them: but with age comes caution:

And stinging pleasures please less and sting more.

Year by year, fear by fear! The girls were brighter

Than ever ('faith, there's yet one Anael
left,

I set my heart upon—Oh, prithee, let That brave new sword lie still!—These joys looked brighter,

But silenter the town, too, as I passed.

With this alcove's delicious memories Began to mingle visions of gaunt fathers, Quick-eyed sons, fugitives from the mine, the oar, Stealing to catch me: brief, when I began To quake with fear—(I think I hear the Chapter Solicited to let me leave, now all Worth staying for was gained and gone!)
 —I say,
 Just when for the remainder of my life
 All methods of escape seemed lost—that then Up should a young hot-headed Loys spring, Talk very long and loud,—in fine, compel
 The Knights to break their whole arrangement, have me Home for pure shame—from this safehold of mine Where but ten thousand Druses seek my life,
 To my wild place of banishment, San Gines.
 By Murcia, where my three fat manors lying, Purchased by gain here and the Nuncio's gold,
 Are all I have to guard me,—that such fortune Should fall to me, I hardly could expect!
 Therefore, I say, I'd love you!
Loys. Can it be?
 I play into your hands then? Oh, no, no!
 The Venerable Chapter, the Great Order Sunk o' the sudden into fiends of the pit?
 But I will back—will yet unveil you!
Pref. Me?
 To whom?—perhaps Sir Galeas, who in Chapter Shook his white head thrice—and some dozen times
 My hand next morning shook, for value paid!
 To that Italian Saint, Sir Cosimo?— Indignant at my wringing year by year
 A thousand bezants from the coral divers

As you recounted; felt he not aggrieved?
 Well might he—I allowed for his half-share Merely one hundred! To Sir...
Loys. See! you dare Inculcate the whole Order; yet should I,
 A youth, a sole voice, have the power to change Their evil way, had they been firm in it?
 Answer me!
Pref. Oh, the son of Bretagne's Duke,
 And that son's wealth, the father's influence, too,
 And the young arm, we'll even say, my Loys, The fear of losing or diverting these Into another channel, by gainsaying
 A novice too abruptly, could not influence The Order! You might join, for aught they cared, Their red-cross rivals of the Temple!
 Well,
 I thank you for my part, at all events!
 Stay here till they withdraw you! You'll inhabit My palace—sleep, perchance, in the alcove, Where now I go to meet our holy friend:
 Good! and now disbelieve me if you can:
 This is the first time for long years I enter Thus [lifts the arras] without feeling just as if I lifted The lid up of my tomb!
Loys. They share his crime.
 God's punishment will overtake you yet!
Pref. Thank you it does not! Pardon this last flash:
 I bear a sober visage presently With the disinterested Nuncio here—His purchase-money safe at Murcia, too!
 Let me repeat—for the first time, no draught Coming as from a sepulchre salutes me.
 When we next meet, this folly may have We'll hope—Ha, ha!
 [Goes through the arras.] Loys. Assure me but... he's gone!

He could not lie! Then what have I escaped!

I, who had so nigh given up happiness For ever, to be linked with him and
them!

Oh, opportunist of discoveries! I Their Knight? I utterly renounce them
all!

Hark! What, he meets by this the Nuncio? yes

The same hyaena-groan-like laughter!
Quick—

To Djabal! I am one of them at last, These simple-hearted Druses—Anael's
tribe!

Djabal! She's mine at last—Djabal,
I say! [Goes.]

ACT IV

Enter DJABAL.

Dja. Let me but slay the Prefect.
The end now!

To-morrow will be time enough to pry Into the means I took: suffice, they served,

Ignoble as they were, to hurl revenge True to its object.

[Seeing the robes, &c., disposed.

Mine should never so Have hurried to accomplishment! Thee,
Djabal,
Far other moods befitted! Calm the Robe

Should clothe this doom's awarder!

[Taking the robe.] Shall I dare Assume my nation's Robe? I am at least

A Druse again, chill Europe's policy Drops from me—I dare take the Robe.

Why not

The Tiar? I rule the Druses, and what
more

Betokens it than rule?—yet—yet—

[Lays down the tiar.
[Footsteps in the alcove.] He comes!

[Taking the sword.
If the Sword serves, let the Tiar lie!
So, feet

Clogged with the blood of twenty years can fall

Thus lightly! Round me, all ye ghosts!
He'll lift . . .

Which arm to push the arras wide?— or both?

Stab from the neck down to the heart—there stay!

Near he comes—nearer—the next footstep! Now!

[As he dashes aside the arras, ANAEL is discovered.

Ha! Anael! Nay, my Anael, can it be?
Heard you the trumpet? I must slay him here,

And here you ruin all. Why speak you
not?

Anael, the Prefect comes! [ANAEEL screams.] So late to feel

'Tis not a sight for you to look upon?
A moment's work—but such work!

Till you go,

I must be idle—idle, I risk all!

[Pointing to her hair.

Those locks are well, and you are beau-teous thus,

But with the dagger 'tis, I have to do!

An. With mine!

Dja. Blood—Anael?

An. Djabal—'tis thy deed!
It must be! I had hoped to claim it
mine—

Be worthy thee—but I must needs confess

'Twas not I, but thyself . . . not I have . .
Djabal!

Speak to me!

Dja. Oh my punishment!

An. Speak to me While I can speak! touch me, despite the blood!

When the command passed from thy soul to mine,

I went, fire leading me, muttering of thee,
And the approaching exaltation,—

make
One sacrifice! I said,—and he sat there,

Bade me approach; and, as I did approach,

Thy fire with music burst into my brain:
'Twas but a moment's work, thou saidst—perchance

It may have been so! well, it is thy
deed!

Dja. It is my deed!

An. His blood, all this!
—this! And . . .

And more—sustain me, Djabal! wait
not—now

Let flash thy glory! Change thyself and
me!

It must be! Ere the Druses flock to us!
At least confirm me! Djabal! blood gushed forth—

He was our tyrant—but I looked he'd fall

Prone as asleep—why else is death called sleep?

Sleep? He bent o'er his breast! 'Tis sin, I know,—

Punish me, Djabal, but wilt thou let him?
Be it thou that punishest, not he—who creeps

On his red breast—is here! 'tis the small groan

Of a child—no worse! Bestow the new life, then!

Too swift it cannot be, too strange, surpassing!

[Following him up and down.]

Now! Change us both! Change me and change thou!

Dja. [sinks on his knees.] Thus!
Behold my change! You have done nobly! I!—

An. Can Hakeem kneel?

Dja. No Hakeem, and scarce Djabal!

I have spoken falsely, and this woe is
come.

No—hear me ere scorn blasts me! Once and ever,

The deed is mine! Oh think upon the
Past!

An. [to herself.] Did I strike once, or twice, or many times?

Dja. I came to lead my tribe where, bathed in glooms,

Doth Bahumid the Renovator sleep: Anael, I saw my tribe: I said, 'Without

A miracle this cannot be'—I said
'Be there a miracle!'—for I saw you!

An. His head lies south the portal!

Dja. —Weighed with this

The general good, how could I choose my own?

What matter was my purity of soul?
Little by little I engaged myself—

Heaven would accept me for its instrument,

I hoped: I said, Heaven had accepted
me!

An. Is it this blood breeds dreams in me?—Who said

You were not Hakeem? and your miracles—

The fire that plays innocuous round your form?

[Again changing her whole manner.]

Ah, thou wouldst try me—thou art Hakeem still!

Dja. Woe—woe! As if the Druses of the Mount

—Scarce Arabs even there, but here, in the Isle,

Beneath their former selves—should comprehend

The subtle lore of Europe! A few secrets That would not easily affect the meanest

Of the crowd there, could wholly subjugate

The best of our poor tribe! Again that
eye?

An. [after a pause springs to his neck.]

Djabal, in this there can be no deceit!

Why, Djabal, were you human only,—
think,

Maani is but human, Khalil human,
Loys is human even—did their words

Haunt me, their looks pursue me?
Shame on you

So to have tried me! Rather, shame on
me

So to need trying! Could I, with the Prefect

And the blood, there—could I see only
you?

—Hang by your neck over this gulf of blood?

Speak, I am saved! Speak, Djabal!
Am I saved?

[*As DJABAL slowly unclasps her arms, and puts her silently from
him.*]

Hakeem would save me! Thou art Djabal! Crouch!

Bow to the dust, thou basest of our kind!
The pile of thee, I reared up to the cloud—

Full, midway, of our fathers' trophied
tombs,

Based on the living rock, devoured not
by

The unstable desert's jaws of sand,— falls prone!

Fire, music, quenched: and now thou liest there

A ruin, obscene creatures will moan
through!

—Let us come, Djabal!

Dja. Whither come?

An. At once—

Lest so it grow intolerable. Come!
Will I not share it with thee? Best at
once!

So, feel less pain! Let them deride—thy tribe

Now trusting in thee,—Loys shall deride!

Come to them, hand in hand, with me!

Dja. Where come?

An. Where?—to the Druses thou hast wronged! Confess,

Now that the end is gained—(I love thee
now—)

That thou hast so deceived them—(perchance love thee Better than ever!) Come, receive their doom

Of infamy! Oh, best of all I love thee!
Shame with the man, no triumph with the God,

Be mine! Come!

Dja. Never! More shame yet?

and why?

Why? You have called this deed mine—it is mine!

And with it I accept its circumstance.
How can I longer strive with fate? The
Past

Is past—my false life shall henceforth show true.

Hear me! the argosies touch land by
this;

They bear us to fresh scenes and happier
skies:

What if we reign together?—if we keep Our secret for the Druses' good?—by means

Of even their superstition, plant in them New life? I learn from Europe: all who seek

Man's good must awe man, by such means as these.

Man's good must awe man, by such means as these.

We two will be divine to them—we
are!

All great works in this world spring from the ruins

Of greater projects—ever, on our earth, Babels men block out, Babylons they build.

I wrest the weapon from your hand! I claim

The deed! Retire! You have my ring —you bar

All access to the Nuncio till the forces From Venice land!

An. Thou wilt feign Hakeem then?

Dja. [putting the Tiar of Hakeem on his head.] And from this moment that I dare ope wide

Eyes that till now refused to see, begins My true dominion! for I know myself, And what I am to personate. No
word?

[ANAEEL goes.]
'Tis come on me at last! His blood on
her—

What memories will follow that! Her
eye,

Her fierce distorted lip and ploughed black brow!

Ah, fool! Has Europe then so poorly tamed

The Syrian blood from out thee? Thou, presume

To work in this foul earth by means not foul?

Scheme, as for Heaven.—but, on the earth, be glad

If a least ray like Heaven's be left thee!

Thus
I shall be calm—in readiness—no way Surprised.

[A noise without.]
This should be Khalil and my Druses!

Venice is come then! Thus I grasp thee, sword!

Druses, 'tis Hakeem saves you! In!

Behold
Your Prefect!

Enter LOYS. DJABAL hides the khandjar in his robe.

Loys. Oh, well found, Djabal!—but no time for words.

You know who waits there?

[Pointing to the alcove.]
Well!—and that 'tis there

He meets the Nuncio? Well! Now, a surprise—

He there—

Dja. I know—

Loys. —is now no mortal's lord.

Is absolutely powerless—call him,
dead—

He is no longer Prefect—you are Prefect!

Oh, shrink not! I do nothing in the dark,

Nothing unworthy Breton blood, believe!
I understood at once your urgency

That I should leave this isle for Rhodes;
I felt

What you were loath to speak—your need of help.

I have fulfilled the task, that earnestness Imposed on me; have, face to face, confronted

The Prefect in full Chapter, charged on him

The enormities of his long rule: he stood

Mute, offered no defence, no crime denied.

On which, I spoke of you, and of your tribe,

Your faith so like our own, and all you urged

Of old to me—I spoke, too, of your goodness,

Your patience—brief, I hold henceforth the Isle

In charge, am nominally Prefect,—but you,

You are associated in my rule—Are the true Prefect! Ay, such faith had they

In my assurance of your loyalty

(For who insults an imbecile old man?)
That we assume the Prefecture this hour!

You gaze at me! Hear greater wonders yet—

I throw down all this fabric I have built!
These Knights, I was prepared to worship . . . but

Of that, another time; what's now to say,

Is—I shall never be a Knight! Oh, Djabal,

Here first I throw all prejudice aside,
And call you brother! I am Druse like you!

My wealth, my friends, my power, are wholly yours,

Your People's, which is now my People—for

There is a maiden of your tribe, I love—
She loves me—Khalil's sister—

Dja. Anael?
Loys. Start you?

Seems what I say, unknighly? Thus it chanced:

When first I came, a novice, to the Isle...

Enter one of the NUNCIO'S Guards from the alcove.

Guard. Oh, horrible! Sir Loys!
Here is Loys!

[Others enter from the alcove.

[Pointing to DJABAL.] Secure him, bind him—this is he!

[They surround DJABAL.
Loys. Madmen—what is 't you do?

Stand from my friend,
And tell me!

Guard. Thou canst have no part in this—

Surely no part—but slay him not! The Nuncio Commanded, Slay him not!

Loys. Speak, or . . .
Guard. The Prefect

Lies murdered there by him thou dost embrace.

Loys. By Djabal? miserable fools!
How Djabal?

[A Guard lifts DJABAL'S robe; DJABAL flings down the khandjar.

Loys. [after a pause.] Thou hast received some insult worse than all—

Some outrage not to be endured—[To the Guards.] Stand back!

He is my friend—more than my friend!
Thou hast

Slain him upon that provocation!
Guard. No!

No provocation! 'Tis a long devised Conspiracy: the whole tribe is involved.

He is their Khalif—'tis on that pretence—

Their mighty Khalif who died long ago,
And now is come to life and light again—

All is just now revealed, I know not how,
 By one of his confederates—who, struck With horror at this murder, first apprised The Nuncio. As 'twas said, we find this Djabal Here where we take him.
Dja. [Aside.] Who broke faith with me?
Loys. [to DJABAL.] Hear'st thou? Speak! Till thou speak, I keep off these,
 Or die with thee. Deny this story! Thou A Khalif, an impostor? Thou, my friend, Whose tale was of an inoffensive race,
 With . . . but thou know'st—on that tale's truth I pledged My faith before the Chapter: what art thou?
Dja. Loys, I am as thou hast heard. All's true!
 No more concealment! As these tell thee, all Was long since planned. Our Druses are enough To crush this handful: the Venetians land Even now in our behalf. Loys, we part here!
 Thou, serving much, wouldst fain have served me more;
 It might not be. I thank thee. As thou hearest, We are a separated tribe: farewell!
Loys. Oh, where will truth be found now? Canst thou so Belie the Druses? Do they share thy crime?
 Those thou professedst of our Breton stock, Are partners with thee? Why, I saw but now Khalil, my friend—he spoke with me—no word Of this! and Anael—whom I love, and who Loves me—she spoke no word of this!
Dja.

Anael, who loves thee? Khalil, fast thy friend?
 We, offsets from a wandering Count of Dreux?
 No—older than the oldest—princelier Than Europe's princeliest tribe are we. Enough For thee, that on our simple faith we found A monarchy to shame your monarchies
 At their own trick and secret of success.
 The child of this our tribe shall laugh upon The palace-step of him whose life ere night Is forfeit, as that child shall know, and yet Shall laugh there! What, we Druses wait forsooth The kind interposition of a boy —Can only save ourselves when thou condest?
 —Khalil admire thee? He is my right hand, My delegate!—Anael accept thy love? She is my Bride!
Loys. Thy Bride? She one of them?
Dja. My Bride!
Loys. And she retains her glorious eyes!
 She, with those eyes, has shared this miscreant's guilt!
 Ah—who but she directed me to find Djabal within the Prefect's chamber?
 Khalil
 Bade me seek Djabal there, too! All is true!
 What spoke the Prefect worse of them than this?
 Did the Church ill to institute long since Perpetual warfare with such serpentry?
 And I—have I desired to shift my part,
 Evade my share in her design? 'Tis well!
Dja. Loys, I have wronged thee—but unwittingly:
 I never thought there was in thee a virtue That could attach itself to what thou deemest A race below thine own. I wronged thee, Loys, Poor Boy! But that is over: all is over now,

Save the protection I ensure against My people's anger. By their Khalif's
side,

Thou art secure and may'st depart : so,
come !

Loys. Thy side ?—I take protection at thy hand ?

Enter other Guards.

Guards. Fly with him ! fly, Sir Loys !
'tis too true !

And only by his side thou may'st escape !
The whole tribe is in full revolt—they flock

About the palace—will be here—on
thee—

And there are twenty of us, we, the Guards

Of the Nuncio, to withstand them !
Even we

Had stayed to meet our death in ignorance,

But that one Druse, a single faithful Druse,

Made known the horror to the Nuncio.
Fly !

The Nuncio stands aghast. At least let us Escape their wrath, O Hakeem ! We are nought

In thy tribe's persecution ! [To Loys.] Keep by him !

They hail him Hakeem, their dead Prince, returned :

He is their God, they shout, and at his beck

Are life and death !

Loys. [springing at the khandjar DJABAL had thrown down, seizes him by the throat.]

Thus by his side am I !
Thus I resume my knighthood and its warfare !

Thus end thee, miscreant, in thy pride of place !

Thus art thou caught ! Without, thy dupes may cluster,

Friends aid thee, foes avoid thee,— thou art Hakeem,

How say they ?—God art thou ! but also here

Is the least, meanest, youngest the Church calls

Her servant, and his single arm avails

To aid her as she lists. I rise, and thou Art crushed ! Hordes of thy Druses flock without ;

Here thou hast me, who represent the Cross,

Honour and Faith, 'gainst Hell, Ma-houn, and thee !

Die ! [DJABAL remains calm.] Implore my mercy, Hakeem, that my
scorn

May help me ! Nay, I cannot ply thy trade ;

I am no Druse, no stabber : and thine
eye,

Thy form, are too much as they were—
my friend

Had such ! Speak ! Beg for mercy at my foot !

[DJABAL still silent.]

Heaven could not ask so much of me—not, sure,

So much ! I cannot kill him so !

Thou art
Strong in thy cause, then ! Dost out-brave us, then !

Heardst thou that one of thine accomplishes,

Thy very people, has accused thee ?
Meet

His charge ! Thou hast not even slain the Prefect

As thy own vile creed warrants. Meet that Druse—

Come with me and disprove him—be thou tried

By him, nor seek appeal—promise me
this—

Or I will do God's office ! What, shalt thou

Boast of assassins at thy beck, yet Truth Want even an executioner ? Consent,

Or I will strike—look in my face—I will !
Dja. Give me again my khandjar, if thou darest !

[Loys gives it.]

Let but one Druse accuse me, and I plunge

This home. A Druse betray me ? Let us go !

[Aside.] Who has betrayed me ?

[Shouts without.]

Hearst thou ? I hear
No plainer than long years ago I heard

That shout—but in no dream now !
 They Return !
 Wilt thou be leader with me, Loys ?
 Well !

ACT V

The Uninitiated Druses, covering the stage tumultuously, and speaking together.

Here flock we, obeying the summons.
 Lo, Hakeem hath appeared, and the Prefect is dead, and we return to Lebanon ! My manufacture of goats' fleece must, I doubt, soon fall away there. Come, old Nasif—link thine arm in mine—we fight, if needs be. Come, what is a great fight-word ?—'Lebanon' (My daughter—my daughter !)—But is Khalil to have the office of Hamza ?—Nay, rather, if he be wise, the monopoly of henna and cloves. Where is Hakeem ?—The only prophet I ever saw, prophesied at Cairo once, in my youth : a little black Copht, dressed all in black too, with a great stripe of yellow cloth flapping down behind him like the back-fin of a water-serpent. Is this he ? Biamrallah ! Biamreh ! HAKEEM !

Enter the NUNCIO with Guards.

Nuncio. [to his Attendants.] Hold both, the sorcerer and this accomplice Ye talk of, that accuseth him ! And tell Sir Loys he is mine, the Church's hope : Bid him approve himself our Knight indeed !
 Lo, this black disemboгуing of the Isle !
 [To the Druses.] Ah, children, what a sight for these old eyes That kept themselves alive this voyage through To smile their very last on you ! I came To gather one and all you wandering sheep Into my fold, as though a father came . . . As though, in coming, a father should . . .
 [To his Guards.] (Ten, twelve, —Twelve guards of you, and not an outlet ? None ?
 The wizards stop each avenue ? Keep close !)

[To the Druses.] As if one came to a son's house, I say, So did I come—no guard with me—to find . . .

Alas—Alas !

A Druse. Who is the old man ?
Another. Oh, ye are to shout ! Children, he styles you.

Druses. Ay, the Prefect's slain ! Glory to the Khalif, our Father !

Nuncio. Even so !
 I find, (ye prompt aright) your Father slain ;

While most he plotted for your good, that Father

(Alas, how kind, ye never knew)—lies slain !

[Aside.] (And hell's worm gnaw the glozing knave—with me,
 For Being duped by his cajoleries !
 Are these the Christians ? These the docile crew

My bezants went to make me Bishop o'er ?)

[To his Attendants, who whisper.] What say ye does this wizard style himself ?

Hakeem ? Biamrallah ? The third Fatemite ?

What is this jargon ? He—the insane Khalif,

Dead near three hundred years ago, come back

In flesh and blood again ?

Druses. He mutters ! Hear ye ? He is blaspheming Hakeem. The old man

Is our dead Prefect's friend ! Tear him !

Nuncio. Ye dare not !
 I stand here with my five-and-seventy years,

The Patriarch's power behind, and God's above me !

Those years have witnessed sin enough ; ere now

Misguided men arose against their lords,

And found excuse ; but ye, to be enslaved

By sorceries, cheats ;—alas ! the same tricks, tried

On my poor children in this nook of the earth,

Could triumph,—that have been successively

Exploded, laughed to scorn, all nations through—

'Romaioi, Ioudaioite kai prosehutoi, Cretes and Arabians"—you are duped the last!

Said I, refrain from tearing me? I pray ye

Tear me! Shall I return to tell the Patriarch

That so much love was wasted—every gift

Rejected, from his benison I brought, Down to the galley-full of bezants, sunk An hour since at the harbour's mouth, by that . . .

That . . . never will I speak his hated name!

[To his Servants.] What was the name his fellow slip-fetter

Called their arch-wizard by? [They whisper.] Oh, Djabal was 't?

Druses. But how a sorcerer? false wherein?

Nuncio. (Ay, Djabal!)

How false? Ye know not, Djabal has confessed . . .

Nay, that by tokens found on him we learn . . .

What I sailed hither solely to divulge—How by his spells the demons were allured

To seize you—not that these he aught save lies

And mere illusions. Is this clear? I say,

By measures such as these, he would have led you

Into a monstrous ruin: follow ye?

Say, shall ye perish for his sake, my sons?

Druses. Hark ye!

Nuncio. —Be of one privilege amerced?

No! Infinite the Patriarch's mercies be!

No! With the Patriarch's licence, still I bid ye Tear him to pieces who misled you! Haste!

Druses. The old man's beard shakes, and his eyes are white fire! After all, I know nothing of Djabal beyond what Karshook says; he knows but what Khalil says; who knows just what Djabal says himself. Now, the little Copht Prophet, I saw at Cairo in my youth, began by promising each bystander three full measures of wheat . . .

Enter KHALIL and the Initiated Druses.

Kha. Venice and her deliverance are at hand!

Their fleet stands through the harbour! Hath he slain

The Prefect yet? Is Djabal's change come yet?

Nuncio. [to Attendants.] What's this of Venice? Who's this boy?

[Attendants whisper.] One Khalil? Djabal's accomplice, Loys called, but now,

The only Druse, save Djabal's self, to fear?

[To the Druses.] I cannot hear ye with these aged ears:

Is it so? Ye would have my troops assist?

Doth he abet him in his sorceries? Down with the cheat, guards, as my children bid!

[They spring at KHALIL: as he beats them back,

Stay—no more bloodshed—spare deluded youth!

Whom seek'st thou? (I will teach him)—Whom, my child?

Thou knowest not what these know, what these declare.

I am an old man, as thou seest—have done

With earth; and what should move me but the truth?

Art thou the only fond one of thy tribe? 'Tis I interpret for thy tribe!

Kha. Oh, this Is the expected Nuncio! Druses, hear—

Endure ye this? Unworthy to partake The glory Hakeem gains you! While I speak,

The ships touch land: who makes for Lebanon?

They'll plant the winged lion in these halls!

Nuncio. [Aside.] If it be true! Venice? —Oh, never true!

Yet, Venice would so gladly thwart our Knights,

And fain get footing here, stand close by Rhodes!

Oh, to be duped this way!

Kha. Ere he appears To lead you gloriously, repent, I say!

Nuncio. [Aside.] Nor any way to stretch the arch-wizard stark

Ere the Venetians come? Be he cut
off,

The rest were easily tamed. [To the Druses.] He? Bring him forth!

Since so you needs will have it, I assent!

You'd judge him, say you, on the spot?
Confound

The sorcerer in his very circle? Where's Our short black-bearded fallow friend who said

He'd earn the Patriarch's guerdon by one stab?

Bring Djabal forth at once!

Druses. Ay, bring him forth!
The Patriarch drives a trade in oil and silk:

And we're the Patriarch's children—true men, we!

Where is the glory? Show us all the glory!

Kha. You dare not so insult him!
What, not see . . .

(I tell thee, Nuncio, these are uninstructed,

Untrusted—they know nothing of our Khalif!)

—Not see that if he lets a doubt arise
'Tis but to give yourselves the chance of seeming

To have some influence in your own
Return!

That all may say they would have trusted him

Without the all-convincing glory—ay,
And did! Embrace the occasion, friends!

For, think—
What merit when his change takes place?

But now
For your sakes, he should not reveal himself!

No—could I ask and have, I would not ask

The change yet!

Enter DJABAL and LOYS.

Spite of all, reveal thyself!
I had said, pardon them for me—for Anael—

For our sakes pardon these besotted
men—

Ay—for thine own—they hurt not thee!
Yet now

One thought swells in me and keeps down all else.

This Nuncio couples shame with thee, has called

Imposture thy whole course, all bitter
things

Has said—he is but an old fretful
man!

Hakeem—nay, I must call thee Hakeem
now—

Reveal thyself! See! Where is Anael?
—See!

Loys. [To Dja.] Here are thy People!
Keep thy word to me!

Dja. Who of my People hath accused
me?

Nuncio. So!
So, this is Djabal, Hakeem, and what
not?

A fit deed, Loys, for thy first Knight's
day!

May it be augury of thy after-life!
Ever prove truncheon of the Church as
now

That, Nuncio of the Patriarch, having charge

Of the Isle here, I claim thee [Turning to Dja.] as these bid me,

Forfeit for murder on thy lawful prince, Thou conjurer that peepst and mut-terest!

Why should I hold thee from their hands? (Spells, children?

But hear how I dispose of all his spells!)

Thou art a Prophet?—wouldst entice thy tribe

Away?—thou workest miracles? (Attend!

Let him but move me with his spells!)

I, Nuncio . . .

Dja. . . . Which how thou camest to be, I say not now,

Though I have also been at Stamboul, Luke!

—Ply thee with spells, forsooth ! What need of spells ?

If Venice, in her Admiral's person,
stoop

To ratify thy compact with her foes, The Hospitallers, for this Isle—withdraw

Her warrant of the deed which reinstates

My People in their freedom, tricked
away

By him I slew,—refuse to convoy us To Lebanon and keep the Isle we leave——Then will be time to try what spells can do !

Dost thou dispute the Republic's
power ?

Nuncio. Lo ye !

He tempts me, too, the wily exorcist !
No ! The renowned Republic was and is The Patriarch's friend : 'tis not for courting Venice

That I—that these implore thy blood of
me !

Lo ye, the subtle miscreant ! Ha, so subtle ?

Ye, Druses, hear him ! Will ye be deceived ?

How he evades me ! Where's the miracle

He works ? I bid him to the proof—fish
up

Your galley full of bezants that he sunk !
That were a miracle ! One miracle !

Enough of trifling, for it chafes my years.
I am the Nuncio, Druses ! I stand forth

To save you from the good Republic's rage

When she shall find her fleet was summoned here

To aid the mummeries of a knave like
this !

[As the Druses hesitate, his Attendants whisper.

Ah, well suggested ! Why, we hold the
while

One, who, his close confederate till now, Confesses Djabal at the last a cheat,

And every miracle a cheat ! Who throws
me

His head ? I make three offers, once I offer,—

And twice . . .

Dja. Let who moves perish at my foot !

Kha. Thanks, Hakeem, thanks ! Oh, Anael, Maani,

Why tarry they ?

Druses. [to each other.] He can ! He can ! Live fire—

[To the NUNCIO.] I say he can, old man !
Thou know'st him not—

Live fire like that thou seest now in his
eyes,

Plays fawning round him. See ! The change begins !

All the brow lightens as he lifts his arm !
Look not at me ! It was not I !

Dja. What Druse Accused me, as he saith ? I bid each

bone
Crumble within that Druse ! None,

Loys, none
Of my own People, as thou saidst, have raised

A voice against me.

Nuncio. [Aside.] Venice to come !
Death !

Dja. [continuing.] Confess and go unscathed, however false !

Seest thou my Druses, Luke ? I would submit

To thy pure malice did one Druse confess !

How said I, Loys ?

Nuncio. [to his Attendants, who whisper.] Ah, ye counsel so ?

[Aloud.] Bring in the witness, then, who, first of all,

Disclosed the treason ! Now I have thee, wizard !

Ye hear that ? If one speaks, he bids you tear him

Joint after joint—well then, one does speak ! One,

Befooled by Djabal, even as yourselves,
But who hath voluntarily proposed

To expiate, by confessing thus, the fault

Of having trusted him.

[They bring in a veiled Druse.
Loys. Now, Djabal, now !

Nuncio. Friend, Djabal fronts thee !
Make a ring, sons !—Speak !

Expose this Djabal ; what he was, and
how ;

The wiles he used, the aims he cherished;
all,

Explicitly as late 'twas spoken to these My servants: I absolve and pardon thee.

Loys. Thou hast the dagger ready,
Djabal?

Dja. Speak,
Recreant!

Druses. Stand back, fool! farther!
Suddenly

You shall see some huge serpent glide from under

The empty vest, or down will thunder crash!

Back, Khalil!

Kha. I go back? Thus go I back!
[To AN.] Unveil! Nay, thou shalt face the Khalif! Thus!

[He tears away ANAEL'S veil: DJABAL folds his arms and bows his head: the Druses fall back: LOYS springs from the side of DJABAL and the NUNCIO.]

Loys. Then she was true—she only of them all!

True to her eyes—may keep those glorious eyes,

And now be mine, once again mine!
Oh, Anael!

Dared I think thee a partner in his crime—
That blood could soil that hand? nay,
'tis mine—Anael,

—Not mine?—Who offer thee before all
these

My heart, my sword, my name—so thou wilt say

That Djabal, who affirms thou art his bride,

Lies! say but that he lies!

Dja. Thou, Anael?

Loys. Nay, Djabal, nay, one chance for me—the last!

Thou hast had every other; thou hast spoken

Days, nights, what falsehood listed thee —let me

Speak first, now; I will speak, now!

Nuncio. Loys, pause!

Thou art the Duke's son, Breton's choicest stock,

Loys of Dreux, God's sepulchre's first
sword:

This wilt thou spit on, this degrade, this trample

To earth?

Loys. [to AN.] Ah, who had foreseen,
'One day, Loys

Will stake these gifts against some other
good

In the whole world?'—I give them thee! I would

My strong will might bestow real shape on them,

That I might see, with my own eyes, thy
foot

Tread on their very neck! 'Tis not by gifts

I put aside this Djabal: we will stand—We do stand—see—two men! Djabal, stand forth!

Who's worth her, I or thou? I—who for Anael

Uprightly, purely, kept my way, the long

True way—left thee each by-path, boldly lived

Without the lies and blood,—or thou, or thou?

I! Love me, Anael! Leave the blood and him!

[To DJA.] Now speak—now, quick on this that I have said,—

Thou with the blood, speak if thou art
a man!

Dja. [to AN.] And was it thou be-trayedst me? 'Tis well!

I have deserved this of thee, and submit.
Nor 'tis much evil thou inflict: life

Ends here. The cedars shall not wave for us:

For there was crime, and must be punishment.

See fate! By thee I was seduced; by
thee

I perish: yet do I—can I repent?

I, with my Arab instinct, thwarted ever By my Frank policy,—and, with, in

turn,
My Frank brain, thwarted by my Arab

heart—
While these remained in equipoise, I

lived
—Nothing; had either been predominant,

As a Frank schemer or an Arab mystic,

I had been something ;—now, each has destroyed

The other—and behold, from out their crash,

A third and better nature rises up—

My mere Man's-nature ! And I yield to
it :

I love thee—I—who did not love before!

An. Djabal !

Dja. It seemed love, but true love it was not—

How could I love while thou adoredst
me ?

Now thou despisest, art above me so

Immeasurably—thou, no other, doomest

My death now ; this my steel shall execute

Thy judgment ; I shall feel thy hand in it !

Oh, luxury to worship, to submit,

Transcended, doomed to death by thee !

An. My Djabal !

Dja. Dost hesitate ? I force thee, then ! Approach,

Druses ! for I am out of reach of fate ;

No further evil waits me. Speak the
truth !

Hear, Druses, and hear, Nuncio, and hear, Loys !

An. HAKEEM ! [She falls dead.

*[The Druses scream, grovelling before
him.*

Ah, Hakeem !—not on me thy wrath !

Biamrallah, pardon ! never doubted I !

Ah, dog, how sayest thou ?

[They surround and seize the NUNCIO and his Guards. Loys flings himself upon the body of ANAEL, on which DJABAL continues to gaze

Nuncio. Caitives ! Have ye eyes ?

Whips, racks, should teach you ! What, his fools ? his dupes ?

Leave me ! unhand me !

Kha. [approaching DJABAL timidly.]

Save her for my sake !

She was already thine ; she would have shared

To-day thine exaltation : think ! this day

Her hair was plaited thus because of
thee.

Yes, feel the soft bright hair—feel !

Nuncio. [struggling with those who have seized him.]

What, because

His leman dies for him ? You think it hard

To die ? Oh, would you were at Rhodes, and choice

Of deaths should suit you !

Kha. [bending over ANAEL's body.]

Just restore her life !

So little does it ! there—the eyelids tremble !

'Twas not my breath that made them :
and the lips

Move of themselves. I could restore her life !

Hakeem, we have forgotten—have presumed

On our free converse : we are better taught.

See, I kiss—how I kiss thy garment's hem

For her ! She kisses it—Oh, take her deed

In mine ! Thou dost believe now,

Anael ?—See,

She smiles ! Were her lips open o'er the teeth

Thus, when I spoke first ? She believes in thee !

Go not without her to the Cedars, Lord !

Or leave us both—I cannot go alone !

I have obeyed thee, if I dare so speak :

Hath Hakeem thus forgot all Djabal
knew ?

Thou feelest then my tears fall hot and
fast

Upon thy hand, and yet thou speakest
not ?

Ere the Venetian trumpet sound—ere thou

Exalt thyself, O Hakeem ! save thou
her !

Nuncio. And the accursed Republic will arrive

And find me in their toils—dead, very
like,

Under their feet !

What way—not one way yet To foil them ? None ? [Observing

DJABAL's face.

What ails the Khalif ? Ah, That ghastly face—a way to foil them
yet !

[To the Druses.] Look to your Khalif, Druses ! Is that face

God Hakeem's ? Where is triumph—where is . . . what

Said he of exaltation—hath he promised So much to-day ? Why then, exalt thyself !

Cast off that husk, thy form, set free thy soul

In splendour ! Now, bear witness ! here I stand—

I challenge him exalt himself, and I Become, for that, a Druse like all of you !

The Druses. Exalt thyself ! Exalt thyself, O Hakeem !

Dja. [advances.] I can confess now all from first to last.

There is no longer shame for me. I am...

[Here the Venetian trumpet sounds—the Druses shout : his eye catches the expression of those about him, and, as the old dream comes back, he is again confident and inspired.

—Am I not Hakeem ? And ye would have crawled

But yesterday within these impure courts

Where now ye stand erect !—Not grand enough ?

—What more could be conceded to such beasts

As all of you, so sunk and base as you, Than a mere man ?—A man among such

Was miracle enough—yet him you doubt,

Him you forsake, him fain would you destroy—

With the Venetians at your gate, the Nuncio

Thus—(see the baffled hypocrite !) and, best,

The Prefect there !

Druses. No, Hakeem, ever thine !

Nuncio. He lies—and twice he lies—and thrice he lies !

Exalt thyself, Mahound ! Exalt thyself !

Dja. Druses ! we shall henceforth be far away !

Out of mere mortal ken—above the Cedars—

But we shall see ye go, hear ye return

Repeopling the old solitudes,—through thee,

My Khalil ! Thou art full of me—I fill Thee full—my hands thus fill thee !

Yestereve,

Nay, but this morn, I deemed thee ignorant

Of all to do, requiring words of mine To teach it : now, thou hast all gifts in one,

With truth and purity go other gifts ! All gifts come clustering to that ! Go, lead

My People home whate'er betide !

[Turning to the Druses.] Ye take This Khalil for my delegate ? To him

Bow as to me ? He leads to Lebanon—Ye follow ?

Druses. We follow ! Now exalt thyself !

Dja. [raises Loys.] Then to thee, Loys ! How I wronged thee, Loys !

—Yet, wronged, no less thou shalt have full revenge,

Fit for thy noble self, revenge—and thus.

Thou, loaded with these wrongs, the princely soul,

The first sword of Christ's sepulchre—thou shalt Guard Khalil and my Druses home again !

Justice, no less—God's justice and no more,

For those I leave !—to seeking this, devote

Some few days out of thy Knight's brilliant life :

And, this obtained them, leave their Lebanon,

My Druses' blessing in thine ears—(they shall Bless thee with blessing sure to have its way)

—One cedar-blossom in thy Ducal cap,

One thought of Anael in thy heart—perchance,

One thought of him who thus, to bid thee speed,

His last word to the living speaks ! This done,

Resume thy course, and, first amid the
first

In Europe, take my heart along with
thee!

Go boldly, go serenely, go augustly—
What shall withstand thee then?

[He bends over ANAËL.] And last to
thee!

Ah, did I dream I was to have, this day, Exalted thee? A vain dream—hast thou not

Won greater exaltation? What remains But press to thee, exalt myself to
thee?

Thus I exalt myself, set free my soul!

[He stabs himself—as he falls, supported by KHALIL and LOYS, the VENETIANS enter: the ADMIRAL advances.

Admiral. God and St. Mark for Venice! Plant the Lion!

[At the clash of the planted standard, the Druses shout, and move tumultuously forward, LOYS drawing his sword.

Dja. [Leading them a few steps between KHALIL and LOYS.]

On to the Mountain! At the Mountain, Druses! [Dies.

PERSONS.

MILDRED TRESHAM.
GUENDOLEN TRESHAM.
THOROLD, Earl Tresham.
AUSTIN TRESHAM.

HENRY, Earl Mertoun.
GERARD, and other Retainers of Lord Tresham.

TIME, 17—.

ACT I

SCENE I. The interior of a Lodge in LORD TRESHAM'S Park. Many Retainers crowded at the window, supposed to command a view of the entrance to his Mansion. GERARD, the Warrener, sitting alone, his back to a table on which are flagons, &c.

First Ret. Ay, do! push, friends, and then you'll push down me.

—What for? Does any hear a runner's
foot,
Or a steed's trample, or a coach-wheel's cry?

Is the Earl come or his least pursuivant?
But there's no breeding in a man of you Save Gerard yonder: here's a half-place yet,

Old Gerard!

Ger. Save your courtesies, my friend.
Here is my place.

Second Ret. Now, Gerard, out with it!

What makes you sullen, this of all the days

I the year? To-day that young, rich, bountiful,

Handsome Earl Mertoun, whom alone they match

With our Lord Tresham through the country-side,

Is coming here in utmost bravery
To ask our Master's Sister's hand?

Ger. What then? What then?

Second Ret. What then? Why, you, she speaks to, if she meets

Your worship, smiles on as you hold apart

The boughs to let her through her forest walks,

You, always favourite for your nodeserts,

You've heard, these three days, how Earl Mertoun sues

To lay his heart, and house, and broad lands too,

At Lady Mildred's feet: and while we squeeze Ourselves into a mousehole lest we miss One congee of the least page in his train, You sit o' your side—'there's the Earl,' say I—
 'What then?' say you!
Third Ret. I'll wager he has let Both swans he tamed for Lady Mildred, swim
 Over the falls and gain the river!
Ger. Ralph,
 Is not to-morrow my inspecting-day
 For you and for your hawks?
Fourth Ret. Let Gerard be!
 He's coarse-grained, like his carved black cross-bow stock.
 Ha, look now, while we squabble with him, look!
 Well done, now—is not this beginning,
 now,
 To purpose?
First Ret. Our retainers look as fine—That's comfort. Lord, how Richard holds himself
 With his white staff! Will not a knave behind
 Prick him upright?
Fourth Ret. He's only bowing, fool!
 The Earl's man bent us lower by this
 much.
First Ret. That's comfort. Here's a very cavalcade!
Third Ret. I don't see wherefore Richard, and his troop Of silk and silver varlets there, should find
 Their perfumed selves so indispensable On high days, holidays! Would it so disgrace
 Our Family, if I, for instance, stood—In my right hand a cast of Swedish hawks,
 A leash of greyhounds in my left?—
Ger. —With Hugh
 The logman for supporter—in his right
 The bill-hook—in his left the brushwood-shears!
Third Ret. Out on you, crab! What next, what next? The Earl!
First Ret. Oh, Walter, groom, our horses, do they match The Earl's? Alas, that first pair of the six—They paw the ground—Ah, Walter! and that brute
 Just on his haunches by the wheel!
Sixth Ret. Ay—Ay!
 You, Philip, are a special hand, I hear,
 At soups and sauces: what's a horse
 to you?
 D'ye mark that beast they've slid into the midst
 So cunningly?—then, Philip, mark this further;
 No leg has he to stand on!
First Ret. No? That's comfort.
Second Ret. Peace, Cook! The Earl descends.—Well, Gerard, see The Earl at least! Come, there's a proper man, I hope! Why, Ralph, no falcon, Pole or Swede,
 Has got a starrier eye.
Third Ret. His eyes are blue—But leave my hawks alone!
Fourth Ret. So young, and yet
 So tall and shapely!
Fifth Ret. Here's Lord Tresham's
 self!
 There now—there's what a nobleman
 should be!
 He's older, graver, loftier, he's more like
 A House's Head!
Second Ret. But you'd not have a boy —And what's the Earl beside?— possess too soon
 That stateliness?
First Ret. Our Master takes his
 hand—
 Richard and his white staff are on the move—Back fall our people—(tsh!—there's Timothy
 Sure to get tangled in his ribbon-ties—
 And Peter's cursed rosette's a-coming off!)
 —At last I see our Lord's back and his
 friend's—
 And the whole beautiful bright company Close round them—in they go! [Jumping down from the window-bench, and making for the table and its jugs, &c.] Good health, long life, Great joy to our Lord Tresham and his House!

Sixth Ret. My father drove his father first to Court,

After his marriage-day—ay, did he!

Second Ret. God bless Lord Tresham, Lady Mildred, and the Earl!

Here, Gerard, reach your beaker!

Ger. Drink, my boys: Don't mind me—all's not right about me—drink!

Second Ret. [Aside.] He's vexed, now, that he let the show escape!

[To GER.] Remember that the Earl returns this way—

Ger. That way?

Second Ret. Just so.

Ger. Then my way's here. [Goes.]

Second Ret. Old Gerard Will die soon—mind, I said it! He was used

To care about the pitifullest thing

That touched the House's honour, not an eye

But his could see wherein: and on a cause

Of scarce a quarter this importance, Gerard

Fairly had fretted flesh and bone away In cares that this was right, nor that was wrong,

Such a point decorous, and such square by rule—

He knew such niceties, no herald more: And now—you see his humour: die he will!

Second Ret. God help him! Who's for the great servants'-hall

To hear what's going on inside? They'd follow

Lord Tresham into the saloon.

Third Ret. I!—

Fourth Ret. I!—

Leave Frank alone for catching, at the door,

Some hint of how the parley goes inside! Prosperity to the great House once more—

Here's the last drop!

First Ret. Have at you! Boys, hurrah!

SCENE II.—A Saloon in the Mansion.

Enter Lord TRESHAM, Lord MERTOUN, AUSTIN, and GUENDOLEN.

Tresh. I welcome you, Lord Mertoun, yet once more,

To this ancestral roof of mine. Your name

—Noble among the noblest in itself, Yet taking in your person, fame avers, New price and lustre,—(as that gem you wear, Transmitted from a hundred knightly breasts,

Fresh chased and set and fixed by its last lord,

Seems to re-kindle at the core)—your name

Would win you welcome!—

Mer. Thanks!

Tresh. —But add to that,

The worthiness and grace and dignity Of your proposal for uniting both

Our Houses even closer than respect Unites them now—add these, and you must grant

One favour more, nor that the least,—to think

The welcome I should give;—'tis given: My lord,

My only brother, Austin—he's the King's.

Our cousin, Lady Guendolen—betrothed To Austin: all are yours.

Mer. I thank you—less For the expressed commendings which your seal,

And only that, authenticates—forbids My putting from me . . . to my heart I take

Your praise . . . but praise less claims my gratitude,

Than the indulgent insight it implies Of what must needs be uppermost with one

Who comes, like me, with the bare leave to ask,

In weighed and measured unimpassioned words,

A gift, which, if as calmly 'tis denied, He must withdraw, content upon his

cheek,

Despair within his soul. That I dare ask

Firmly, near boldly, near with confidence That gift, I have to thank you. Yes, Lord Tresham,

I love your sister—as you'd have one love

That lady . . . oh more, more I love her !
Wealth,

Rank, all the world thinks me, they're yours, you know,

To hold or part with, at your choice—but grant

My true self, me without a rood of land,
A piece of gold, a name of yesterday, Grant me that lady, and you . . . Death or life ?

Guen. [apart to Aus.] Why, this is loving, Austin !

Aus. He's so young !
Guen. Young ? Old enough, I think, to half surmise

He never had obtained an entrance here,
Were all this fear and trembling needed.

Aus. Hush !
He reddens.

Guen. Mark him, Austin ; that's true love !

Ours must begin again.

Tresh. We'll sit, my lord.
Ever with best desert goes diffidence.
I may speak plainly nor be misconceived.

That I am wholly satisfied with you On this occasion, when a falcon's eye Were dull compared with mine to search out faults,

Is somewhat. Mildred's hand is hers to give

Or to refuse.

Mer. But you, you grant my suit ?
I have your word if hers ?

Tresh. My best of words If hers encourage you. I trust it will.
Have you seen Lady Mildred, by the way ?

Mer. I . . . I . . . our two demesnes, remember, touch ;

I have been used to wander carelessly After my stricken game : the heron roused

Deep in my woods, has trailed its broken wing

Thro' thickets and glades a mile in yours,
—or else

Some eyass ill-reclaimed has taken flight
And lured me after her from tree to tree, I marked not whither. I have come upon

The lady's wondrous beauty unaware,
And—and then . . . I have seen her.

Guen. [aside to Aus.] Note that mode Of faltering out that, when a lady

He, having eyes, did see her ! You had said—

' On such a day I scanned her, head to
foot ;

Observed a red, where red should not have been,

Outside her elbow ; but was pleased
enough

Upon the whole.' Let such irreverent talk

Be lessoned for the future !

Tresh. What's to say May be said briefly. She has never known

A mother's care ; I stand for father too.
Her beauty is not strange to you, it seems—

You cannot know the good and tender
heart,

Its girl's trust, and its woman's constancy,

How pure yet passionate, how calm yet
kind,

How grave yet joyous, how reserved yet
free

As light where friends are—how imbued with lore

The world most prizes, yet the simplest,
yet

The . . . one might know I talked of Mildred—thus

We brothers talk !

Mer. I thank you.

Tresh. In a word, Control's not for this lady ; but her wish

To please me outstrips in its subtlety My power of being pleased : herself creates

The want she means to satisfy. My heart

Prefers your suit to her as 'twere its own.

Can I say more ?

Mer. No more—thanks, thanks
—no more !

Tresh. This matter then discussed . . .

Mer. —We'll waste no breath On aught less precious. I'm beneath the roof

That holds her : while I thought of that, my speech

To you would wander—as it must not
do,

Since as you favour me I stand or fall.
I pray you suffer that I take my leave !

Tresh. With less regret 'tis suffered, that again

We meet, I hope, so shortly.

Mer. We ? again ?—

Ah yes, forgive me—when shall . . . you will crown

Your goodness by forthwith apprising
me

When . . . if . . . the lady will appoint a day

For me to wait on you—and her.

Tresh. So soon

As I am made acquainted with her thoughts

On your proposal—howsoever they lean—

A messenger shall bring you the result.
Mer. You cannot bind me more to you, my lord.

Farewell till we renew . . . I trust, renew A converse ne'er to disunite again.

Tresh. So may it prove !

Mer. You, Lady, you, Sir, take My humble salutation !

Guen. & Aus. Thanks !

Tresh. Within there !

[Servants enter. TRESHAM conducts MEETOUN to the door. Meantime AUSTIN remarks,

Well,

Here I have an advantage of the Earl, Confess now ! I'd not think that all was safe

Because my lady's brother stood my
friend.

Why, he makes sure of her—'do you say, yes—

She'll not say, no'—what comes it to
beside ?

should have prayed the brother,
'speak this speech,

For Heaven's sake urge this on her—put in this—

Forget not, as you'd save me, t'other
thing,—

Then set down what she says, and how she looks,

And if she smiles,' and (in an under breath)

'Only let her accept me, and do you And all the world refuse me, if you dare !'

Guen. That way you'd take, friend

Austin ? What a shame

I was your cousin, tamely from the first Your bride, and all this fervour's run to waste !

Do you know you speak sensibly to-day ?
The Earl's a fool.

Aus. Here's Thorold. Tell him so !

Tresh. (returning.) Now, voices, voices !
'St ! the lady's first !

How seems he ?—seems he not . . .
come, faith give fraud

The mercy-stroke whenever they engage !
Down with fraud, up with faith ! How seems the Earl ?

A name ! a blazon ! if you knew their
worth,

As you will never ! come—the Earl ?

Guen. He's young.

Tresh. What's she ? an infant save in heart and brain.

Young ! Mildred is fourteen, remark !
And you . . .

Austin, how old is she ?

Guen. There's tact for you !

I meant that being young was good excuse

If one should tax him . . .

Tresh. Well ?

Guen. —With lacking wit.

Tresh. He lacked wit ? Where might he lack wit, so please you ?

Guen. In standing straighter than the steward's rod

And making you the tiresomest harrangues,

Instead of slipping over to my side And softly whispering in my ear, 'Sweet lady,

Your cousin there will do me detriment

He little dreams of: he's absorbed, I see,
 In my old name and fame—be sure he'll leave My Mildred, when his best account of me Is ended, in full confidence I wear My grandsire's periwig down either cheek.
 I'm lost unless your gentleness vouch-safes' . . .
Tresh. . . . 'To give a best of best accounts, yourself,
 Of me and my demerits.' You are right!
 He should have said what now I say for him.
 You golden creature, will you help us all?
 Here's Austin means to vouch for much, but you —You are . . . what Austin only knows!
 Come up,
 All three of us: she's in the Library
 No doubt, for the day's wearing fast.
Precede!
Guen. Austin, how we must—!
Tresh. Must what? Must speak truth, Malignant tongue! Detect one fault in him!
 I challenge you!
Guen. Witchcraft's a fault in him,
 For you're bewitched.
Tresh. What's urgent we obtain Is, that she soon receive him—say, to-morrow—Next day at furthest.
Guen. Ne'er instruct me!
Tresh. Come!
 —He's out of your good graces since,
 forsooth,
 He stood not as he'd carry us by storm
 With his perfections! You're for the composed, Manly, assured, becoming confidence!
 —Get her to say, 'to-morrow,' and I'll give you . . .
 I'll give you black Urganda, to be spoiled With petting and snail-paces. Will you? Come!

SCENE III. MILDRED'S Chamber. A painted window overlooks the park.
 MILDRED and GUENDOLEN.
Guen. Now, Mildred, spare those pains. I have not left Our talkers in the Library, and climbed The wearisome ascent to this your bower In company with you,—I have not dared . . .
 Nay, worked such prodigies as sparing you Lord Mertoun's pedigree before the flood, Which Thorold seemed in very act to tell——Or bringing Austin to pluck up that most Firm-rooted heresy—your suitor's eyes,
 He would maintain, were grey instead of blue—
 I think I brought him to contrition!—
 Well,
 I have not done such things, (all to deserve A minute's quiet cousin's talk with you,) To be dismissed so coolly!
Mil. Guendolen,
 What have I done . . . what could suggest . . .
Guen. There, there!
 Do I not comprehend you'd be alone
 To throw those testimonies in a heap, Thorold's enlargings, Austin's brevities,
 With that poor, silly, heartless Guendolen's Ill-timed, misplaced, attempted smartnesses—
 And sift their sense out? now, I come to spare you Nearly a whole night's labour. Ask and have!
 Demand, be answered! Lack I ears and eyes?
 Am I perplexed which side of the rock-table,
 The Conqueror dined on when he landed first, Lord Mertoun's ancestor was bidden take—
 The bow-hand or the arrow-hand's great meed?
 Mildred, the Earl has soft blue eyes!
Mil. My brother—

Did he . . . you said that he received him well ?

Guen. If I said only ' well ' I said not much—

Oh, stay—which brother ?

Mil. Thorold ! who—who else ?

Guen. Thorold (a secret) is too proud by half,—

Nay, hear me out—with us he's even gentler

Than we are with our birds. Of this great House

The least retainer that e'er caught his glance

Would die for him, real dying—no mere talk :

And in the world, the court, if men would cite

The perfect spirit of honour, Thorold's name

Rises of its clear nature to their lips.

But he should take men's homage, trust in it,

And care no more about what drew it down.

He has desert, and that, acknowledgment ;

Is he content ?

Mil. You wrong him, Guendolen.

Guen. He's proud, confess ; so proud with brooding o'er

The light of his interminable line,

An ancestry with men all paladins,

And women all . . .

Mil. Dear Guendolen, 'tis late !

When yonder purple pane the climbing moon

Pierces, I know 'tis midnight.

Guen. Well, that Thorold

Should rise up from such musings, and receive

One come audaciously to graft himself Into this peerless stock, yet find no flaw,

No slightest spot in such an one . . .

Mil. Who finds

A spot in Mertoun ?

Guen. Not your brother ; therefore, Not the whole world.

Mil. I'm weary, Guendolen.—

Bear with me !

Guen. I am foolish.

Mil. Oh, no, kind—

But I would rest.

Good night and rest to you !

I said how gracefully his mantle lay

Beneath the rings of his light hair ?

Mil. Brown hair !

Guen. Brown ? why, it is brown—how could you know that ?

Mil. How ? did not you—Oh Austin 'twas, declared

His hair was light, not brown—my head !—and, look,

The moon-beam purpling the dark chamber ! Sweet,

Good night !

Guen. Forgive me—sleep the sound-lie for me !

[Going, she turns suddenly.

Mildred !

Perdition ! all's discovered ! Thorold finds —That the Earl's greatest of all grand-mothers

Was grander daughter still—to that fair dame

Whose garter slipped down at the famous dance !

Mil. Is she—can she be really gone at last ?

My heart ! I shall not reach the window. Needs

Must I have sinned much, so to suffer !

[She lifts the small lamp which is suspended before the Virgin's image in the window, and places it by the purple pane. There !

[She returns to the seat in front.

Mildred and Mertoun ! Mildred, with consent

Of all the world and Thorold, Mertoun's bride !

Too late ! 'Tis sweet to think of, sweeter still

To hope for, that this blessed end soothes up

The curse of the beginning ; but I know

It comes too late—'twill sweetest be of all

To dream my soul away and die upon !

[A noise without.

The voice ! Oh, why, why glided sin the snake

Into the Paradise Heaven meant us both ?

[The window opens softly. A low voice sings.
 There 's a woman like a dew-drop, she 's so purer than the purest ;
 And her noble heart 's the noblest, yes, and her sure faith 's the surest :
 And her eyes are dark and humid, like the depth on depth of lustre Hid i' the harebell, while her tresses, sunnier than the wild-grape cluster, Gush in golden-tinted plenty down her neck 's rose-misted marble : Then her voice's music . . . call it the well's bubbling, the bird's warble !
[A figure wrapped in a mantle appears at the window.
 And this woman says, ' My days were sunless and my nights were moonless, Parched the pleasant April herbage, and the lark's heart's outbreak tune-
 less,
 If you loved me not ! ' And I who—(ah, for words of flame !) adore her !
 Who am mad to lay my spirit prostrate palpably before her—[He enters, approaches her seat, and bends over her.
 I may enter at her portal soon, as now her lattice takes me, And by noontide as by midnight make her mine, as hers she makes me !
[The Earl throws off his slouched hat and long cloak.
 My very heart sings, so I sing, Beloved !
Mil. Sit, Henry—do not take my
 hand.
Mer. 'Tis mine !
 The meeting that appalled us both so much
 Is ended.
Mil. What begins now ?
Mer. Happiness
 Such as the world contains not.
Mil. That is it.
 Our happiness would, as you say, exceed The whole world's best of blisses : we—do we Deserve that ? Utter to your soul, what
 mine Long since, Beloved, has grown used to
 hear,
 Like a death-knell, so much regarded
 once,
 And so familiar now ; this will not be !
Mer. Oh, Mildred, have I met your brother's face, Compelled myself—if not to speak un-
 truth,
 Yet to disguise, to shun, to put aside
 The truth, as what had e'er prevailed
 on me Save you, to venture ? Have I gained
 at last
 Your brother, the one scarer of your dreams,
 And waking thoughts' sole apprehension
 too ?
 Does a new life, like a young sunrise,
 break
 On the strange unrest of our night, confused With rain and stormy flaw—and will you see No dripping blossoms, no fire-tinted drops
 On each live spray, no vapour steaming
 up,
 And no expressless glory in the East ?
 When I am by you, to be ever by you,
 When I have won you and may worship
 you,
 Oh, Mildred, can you say ' this will not
 be ' ?
Mil. Sin has surprised us ; so will punishment.
Mer. No—me alone, who sinned
 alone !
Mil. The night
 You likened our past life to—was it storm Throughout to you then, Henry ?
Mer. Of your life I spoke—what am I, what my life, to waste
 A thought about when you are by me ?
 —you
 It was, I said my folly called the storm And pulled the night upon.—'Twas day
 with me—
 Perpetual dawn with me.
Mil. Come what, come will,
 You have been happy : take my hand !
Mer. [after a pause.] How good Your brother is ! I figured him a cold—

Shall I say, haughty man ?

Mil. They told me all I know all.

Mer. It will soon be over.

Mil. Over ?

Oh, what is over ? what must I live through

And say, 'tis over ? Is our meeting over ?

Have I received in presence of them all The partner of my guilty love,—with brow

Trying to seem a maiden's brow—with lips

Which make believe that when they strive to form

Replies to you and tremble as they strive,

It is the nearest ever they approached A stranger's . . . Henry, yours that stranger's . . . lip—

With cheek that looks a virgin's, and that is . . .

Ah, God ! some prodigy of Thine will stop This planned piece of deliberate wickedness

In its birth even—some fierce leprous spot Will mar the brow's dissimulating—I Shall murmur no smooth speeches got by heart,

But, frenzied, pour forth all our woeful story,

The love, the shame, and the despair—with them

Round me aghast as men round some cursed fount

That should spirt water, and spouts blood. I'll not

. . . Henry, you do not wish that I should draw

This vengeance down ? I'll not affect a grace

That's gone from me—gone once, and gone for ever !

Mer. Mildred, my honour is your own. I'll share

Disgrace I cannot suffer by myself.

A word informs your brother I retract This morning's offer ; time will yet bring forth

Some better way of saving both of us.

Mil. I'll meet their faces, Henry !

Mer. When ? to-morrow ?

Get done with it !

Mil. Oh, Henry, not to-morrow ! Next day ! I never shall prepare my words

And looks and gestures sooner.—How you must Despise me !

Mer. Mildred, break it if you choose, A heart the love of you uplifted—still Uplifts, thro' this protracted agony, To Heaven ! but, Mildred, answer me, —first pace

The chamber with me—once again—now, say

Calmly the part, the . . . what it is of me You see contempt (for you did say contempt)

—Contempt for you in ! I would pluck it off

And cast it from me !—but no—no, you'll not Repeat that ?—will you, Mildred, repeat that ?

Mil. Dear Henry !

Mer. I was scarce a boy—e'en now What am I more ? And you were infantine

When first I met you—why, your hair fell loose

On either side !—my fool's-cheek reddens now

Only in the recalling how it burned That morn to see the shape of many a dream

—You know we boys are prodigal of charms

To her we dream of—I had heard of one, Had dreamed of her, and I was close to her,

Might speak to her, might live and die her own,

Who knew ?—I spoke. Oh, Mildred, feel you not

That now, while I remember every glance

Of yours, each word of yours, with power to test

And weigh them in the diamond scales of pride,

Resolved the treasure of a first and last Heart's love shall have been bartered at its worth,

—That now I think upon your purity

And utter ignorance of guilt—your own Or other's guilt—the girlish undisguised Delight at a strange novel prize—(I talk A silly language, but interpret, you !)
If I, with fancy at its full, and reason Scarce in its germ, enjoined you secrecy, If you had pity on my passion, pity On my protested sickness of the soul To sit beside you, hear you breathe, and watch

Your eyelids and the eyes beneath—if
you Accorded gifts and knew not they were gifts—

If I grew mad at last with enterprise And must behold my beauty in her bower Or perish—(I was ignorant of even My own desires—what then were you ?) if sorrow—

Sin—if the end came—must I now renounce

My reason, blind myself to light, say
truth

Is false and lie to God and my own soul ?
Contempt were all of this !

Mil. Do you believe . . .
Or, Henry, I'll not wrong you—you believe

That I was ignorant. I scarce grieve
o'er

The Past ! We'll love on—you will love me still !

Mer. Oh, to love less what one has injured ! Dove, Whose pinion I have rashly hurt, my
breast—

Shall my heart's warmth not nurse thee into strength ?

Flower I have crushed, shall I not care
for thee ?

Bloom o'er my crest, my fight-mark and device !

Mildred, I love you and you love me !
Mil. Go !

Be that your last word. I shall sleep to-night.

Mer. This is not our last meeting ?
Mil. One night more.

Mer. And then—think, then !
Mil. Then, no sweet courtship-days

No dawning consciousness of love for us, No strange and palpitating births of
sense

From words and looks, no innocent fears and hopes,
Reserves and confidences : morning's
over !

Mer. How else should love's perfected noontide follow ?

All the dawn promised shall the day perform.

Mil. So may it be ! but—
You are cautious, love ?
Are sure that unobserved you scaled the walls ?

Mer. Oh, trust me ! Then our final meeting's fixed ?

To-morrow night ?

Mil. Farewell ! Stay, Henry
. . . wherefore ?

His foot is on the yew-tree bough ; the turf

Receives him : now the moonlight as he runs

Embraces him—but he must go—is gone.
Ah, once again he turns—thanks, thanks, my love !

He's gone. Oh I'll believe him every
word !

I was so young—I loved him so—I had No mother—God forgot me—and I fell.

There may be pardon yet : all's doubt
beyond.

Surely the bitterness of death is past !

ACT II

SCENE. The Library.

Enter LORD TRESHAM hastily.

This way ! In, Gerard, quick !

[As GERARD enters, TRESHAM secures the door.

Now speak ! or, wait—
I'll bid you speak directly.

[Sits himself.
Now repeat

Firmly and circumstantially the tale
You just now told me ; it eludes me ; either

I did not listen, or the half is gone Away from me. How long have you lived here ?

Here in my house, your father kept our woods

Before you ?

Ger. —As his father did, my lord.
I have been eating sixty years, almost,
Your bread.

Tresh. Yes, yes. You ever were of
all The servants in my father's house, I
know,
The trusted one. You'll speak the truth.

Ger. I'll speak
God's truth. Night after night . . .

Tresh. Since when ?

Ger. At least
A month—each midnight has some man access

To Lady Mildred's chamber.

Tresh. Tush, 'access'—
No wide words like 'access' to me !

Ger. He runs Along the woodside, crosses to the South, Takes the left tree that ends the avenue . . .

Tresh. The last great yew-tree ?

Ger. You might stand upon The main boughs like a platform. Then he . . .

Tresh. Quick !

Ger. Climbs up, and, where theylessen at the top,

—I cannot see distinctly, but he throws,
I think—for this I do not vouch—a line That reaches to the Lady's casement—

Tresh. —Which
He enters not ! Gerard—some wretched
fool

Dares pry into my sister's privacy !
When such are young, it seems a precious thing

To have approached,—to merely have approached,
Got sight of, the abode of her they set Their frantic thoughts upon ! He does not enter ?

Gerard ?

Ger. There is a lamp that 's full in the midst,
Under a red square in the painted glass Of Lady Mildred's . . .

Tresh. Leave that name out ! Well That lamp ?

Ger. —Is moved at midnight higher
up
To one pane—a small dark-blue pane

he waits

For that among the boughs : at sight of
that,

I see him, plain as I see you, my lord,
Open the Lady's casement, enter there . . .

Tresh. —And stay ?

Ger. An hour, two hours.

Tresh. And this you saw Once ?—twice ?—quick !

Ger. Twenty times.

Tresh. And what brings you Under the yew-trees ?

Ger. The first night I left My range so far, to track the stranger stag

That broke the pale, I saw the man.

Tresh. Yet sent No cross-bow shaft through the marauder ?

Ger. But
He came, my lord, the first time he was
seen,

In a great moonlight, light as any day,
From Lady Mildred's chamber.

Tresh. [after a pause.] You have no
cause

—Who could have cause to do my sister
wrong ?

Ger. Oh, my lord, only once—let me say this once

Speak what is on my mind ! Since first I noted

All this, I've groaned as if a fiery net Plucked me this way and that—fire, if I turned

To her, fire if I turned to you, and fire, If down I flung myself and strove to
die.

The lady could not have been seven years old

When I was trusted to conduct her safe Through the deer-herd to stroke the snow-white fawn

I brought to eat bread from her tiny
hand

Within a month. She ever had a smile To greet me with—she . . . if it could undo

What's done, to lop each limb from off this trunk . . .

All that is foolish talk, not fit for you—I mean, I could not speak and bring her hurt

For Heaven's compelling. But when I was fixed To hold my peace, each morsel of your food Eaten beneath your roof, my birth-place
 too, Choked me. I wish I had grown mad in doubts
 What it behoved me do. This morn it seemed
 Either I must confess to you, or die :
 Now it is done, I seem the vilest worm That crawls, to have betrayed my Lady!
Tresh. No—Gerard !
Ger. Let me go !
Tresh. A man, you say—What man ? Young ? Not a vulgar hind ? What dress ?
Ger. A slouched hat and a large dark foreign cloak Wraps his whole form ; even his face is hid ;
 But I should judge him young : no hind, be sure !
Tresh. Why ?
Ger. He is ever armed : his sword projects Beneath the cloak.
Tresh. Gerard,—I will not say No word, no breath of this !
Ger. Thanks, thanks, my lord !
[Goes.]
TRESHAM paces the room. After a pause Oh, thought's absurd !—as with some monstrous fact That, when ill thoughts beset us, seems
 to give Merciful God that made the sun and stars
 The waters and the green delights of
 earth,
 The lie ! I apprehend the monstrous
 fact—Yet know the Maker of all worlds is
 good,
 And yield my reason up, inadequate To reconcile what yet I do behold—Blasting my sense ! There's cheerfu day outside—
 This is my library—and this the chair
 My father used to sit in carelessly, After his soldier-fashion, while I stood Between his knees to question him : and
 here,
 Gerard our grey retainer,—as he says, Fed with our food, from sire to son, an age,—
 Has told a story—I am to believe !
 That Mildred . . . oh no, no ! both tales are true,
 Her pure cheek's story and the forester's !
 Would she, or could she, err—much less,
 confound
 All guilts of treachery, of craft, of . . .
 Heaven
 Keep me within Its hand !—I will sit
 here Until thought settles and I see my
 course.
 Avert, oh God, only this woe from me !
[As he sinks his head between his arms on the table, GUENDOLEN'S voice is heard at the door.]
 Lord Tresham ! [She knocks.] Is Lord Tresham there ?
[TRESHAM, hastily turning, pulls down the first book above him and opens it.] Tresh. Come in ! [She enters.]
 Ah, Guendolen—good morning.
Guen. Nothing more ?
Tresh. What should I say more ?
Guen. Pleasant question ! more ?
 This more ! Did I besiege poor Mildred's brain
 Last night till close on morning with
 'the Earl'—
 The Earl'—whose worth did I asseverate Till I am very fain to hope that . . .
 Thorold,
 What is all this ? You are not well !
Tresh. Who, I ?
 You laugh at me.
Guen. Has what I'm fain to hope Arrived, then ? Does that huge tome show some blot
 In the Earl's 'scutcheon come no longer
 back Than Arthur's time ?
Tresh. When left you Mildred's chamber ?
Guen. Oh late enough, I told you !
 The main thing
 To ask is, how I left her chamber,—sure,

Content yourself, she'll grant this paragon

Of Earls no such ungracious . . .

Tresh. Send her here !

Guen. Thorold ?

Tresh. I mean — acquaint her, Guendolen, —

—But mildly !

Guen. Mildly ?

Tresh. Ah, you guessed aright !

I am not well : there is no hiding it.

But tell her I would see her at her leisure—

That is, at once ! here in the Library !

The passage in that old Italian book

We hunted for so long is found, say,—
found—

And if I let it slip again . . . you see,

That she must come—and instantly !

Guen. I'll die

Piecemeal, record that, if there have not gloomed

Some blot in the 'scutcheon !

Tresh. Go ! or, Guendolen,

Be you at call,—with Austin, if you choose,—

In the adjoining gallery ! There, go !

[GUENDOLEN goes.]

Another lesson to me ! you might bid A child disguise his heart's sore, and conduct

Some sly investigation point by point With a smooth brow, as well as bid me catch

The inquisitorial cleverness some praise !
If you had told me yesterday, 'There's

one
You needs must circumvent and practise
with,

Entrap by policies, if you would worm
The truth out : and that one is—Mildred ! 'There—

There—reasoning is thrown away on it !
Prove she's unchaste . . . why, you may after prove

That she's a poisoner, traitress, what you will !

Where I can comprehend nought, nought's to say,

Or do, or think ! Force on me but the first

Abomination,—then outpour all plagues,
And I shall ne'er make count of them !

Enter MILDRED.

Mil.

What book

Is it I wanted, Thorold ? Guendolen

Thought you were pale—you are not pale ! That book ?

That's Latin surely !

Tresh. Mildred, here's a line—

(Don't lean on me—I'll English it for
you)

'Love conquers all things.' What love conquers them ?

What love should you esteem—best
love ?

Mil.

True love.

Tresh. I mean, and should have said, whose love is best

Of all that love or that profess to love ?

Mil. The list's so long—there's father's, mother's, husband's . . .

Tresh. Mildred, I do believe a brother's love

For a sole sister must exceed them all !

For see now, only see ! there's no alloy Of earth that creeps into the perfect'st
gold

Of other loves—no gratitude to claim ;
You never gave her life—not even aught That keeps life—never tended her, instructed,

Enriched her—so your love can claim no right

O'er hers save pure love's claim : that's what I call

Freedom from earthliness. You'll never
hope

To be such friends, for instance, she and
you,

As when you hunted cowslips in the woods,

Or played together in the meadow hay.
Oh yes—with age, respect comes, and your worth

Is felt, there's growing sympathy of
~~~~~

There's ripened friendship, there's confirmed esteem,

—Much head these make against the new-comer !

The startling apparition—the strange
youth—

Whom one half-hour's conversing with,
or, say,

Mere gazing at, shall change (beyond all change

This Ovid ever sang about ! ) your soul
 . . . Her soul, that is,—the sister's soul !

With her
 'Twas winter yesterday ; now, all is warmth,

The green leaf's springing and the turtle's voice,

'Arise and come away !' Come whither ?
 —far

Enough from the esteem, respect, and all

The brother's somewhat insignificant Array of rights ! all which he knows
 before—

Has calculated on so long ago !
 I think such love, (apart from yours and mine,)

Contented with its little term of life, Intending to retire betimes, aware How soon the background must be place
 for it,

—I think, am sure, a brother's love exceeds

All the world's love in its unworldli-
 ness.

Mil. What is this for ?

Tresh. This, Mildred, is it for !

Oh, no, I cannot go to it so soon !
 That's one of many points my haste left out—

Each day, each hour throws forth its silk-slight film

Between the being tied to you by birth, And you, until those slender threads compose

A web that shrouds her daily life of hopes

And fears and fancies, all her life, from
 yours—

So close you live and yet so far apart !
 And must I rend this web, tear up, break down

The sweet and palpitating mystery That makes her sacred ? You—for you

I mean,
 Shall I speak—shall I not speak ?

Mil. Speak !

Tresh. I will.

Is there a story men could—any man Could tell of you, you would conceal from me ?

I'll never think there's falsehood on that lip !

Say 'There is no such story men could tell,'

And I'll believe you, though I disbelieve The world—the world of better men than I,

And women such as I suppose you.
 Speak !

[After a pause.] Not speak ? Explain then ! clear it up, then ! Move

Some of the miserable weight away That presses lower than the grave ! Not speak ?

Some of the dead weight, Mildred ! Ah, if I

Could bring myself to plainly make their charge

Against you ! Must I, Mildred ? Silent
 still ?

[After a pause.] Is there a gallant that has night by night

Admittance to your chamber ?

[After a pause.] Then, his name !
 Till now, I only had a thought for you :

But now,—his name !

Mil. Thorold, do you devise Fit expiation for my guilt, if fit

There be ! 'tis nought to say that I'll endure

And bless you,—that my spirit yearns to purge

Her stains off in the fierce renewing fire ;
 But do not plunge me into other guilt !

Oh, guilt enough ! I cannot tell his name.

Tresh. Then judge yourself ! How should I act ? Pronounce !

Mil. Oh, Thorold, you must never tempt me thus !

To die here in this chamber by that sword

Would seem like punishment—so should I glide,

Like an arch-cheat, into extremest bliss !
 'Twere easily arranged for me ! but
 you—

What would become of you ?

Tresh. And what will now Become of me ? I'll hide your shame
 and mine

From every eye ; the dead must heave their hearts
 Under the marble of our chapel-floor ;

They cannot rise and blast you ! You Of the lattice, practised in the stealthy may wed tread, Your paramour above our mother's The low voice and the noiseless come-tomb ; and-go !
 Our mother cannot move from 'neath Not one composer of the Bacchant's your foot. mien
 We two will somehow wear this one day Into—what you thought Mildred's, in out : a word !
 But with to-morrow hastens here—the Know her !
     Earl ! Guen. Oh, Mildred, look to me, at The youth without suspicion that faces least !
     come Thorold—she's dead, I'd say, but that From Heaven, and hearts from . . . she stands whence proceed such hearts ? Rigid as stone and whiter !
 I have dispatched last night at your Tresh. You have heard . . .
     command Guen. Too much ! you must proceed A missive bidding him present himself no further !
 To-morrow here—thus much is said ; Mil. Yes—the rest Proceed ! All's truth ! Go from me !
 Is understood as if 'twere written down— Tresh. All is truth, 'His suit finds favour in your eyes : '— She tells you ! Well, you know, or now dictate ought to know, This morning's letter that shall counter- All this I would forgive in her. I'd con-mand Each precept the harsh world enjoins, Last night's—do dictate that ! I'd take Mil. But, Thorold—if Our ancestors' stern verdicts one by one,
 I will receive him as I said ? I'd bind myself before them to exact Tresh. The prescribed vengeance—and one
     Mil. I will receive him ! word of hers, Tresh. [Starting up.] Ho there ! The sight of her, the bare least memory Guendolen ! Of Mildred, my one sister, my heart's pride
                     Above all prides, my all in all so long, Would scatter every trace of my resolve !
                     What were it silently to waste away And see her waste away from this day
                     forth,
                     Two scathed things with leisure to repent,
                     And grow acquainted with the grave,
                     and die,
                     Tired out if not at peace, and be forgotten ?
                     It were not so impossible to bear !
                     But this—that, fresh from last night's pledge renewed Of love with the successful gallant
                     there,
                     She calmly bids me help her to entice, Inveigle an unconscious trusting youth Who thinks her all that's chaste, and good, and pure,

GUENDOLEN and AUSTIN enter.
 And, Austin, you are welcome too !
     Look there !
 The woman there !
     Aus. & Guen. How ? Mildred ?
     Tresh. Mildred once !
 Now the receiver night by night, when
     sleep
 Blesses the inmates of her father's house, —I say, the soft sly wanton that receives Her guilt's accomplice 'neath this roof which holds You, Guendolen, you, Austin, and has held A thousand Treshams—never one like
     her !
 No lighter of the signal-lamp her quick Foul breath near quenches in hot eagerness
 To mix with breath as foul ! no loosener

—Invites me to betray him . . . who so fit As honour's self to cover shame's arch-
deed ?

—That she'll receive Lord Mertoun—(her own phrase)—

This, who could bear ? Why, you have heard of thieves,

Stabbers, the earth's disgrace—who yet have laughed,

'Talk not of tortures to me—I'll betray

No comrade I've pledged faith to !'— you have heard

Of wretched women—all but Mildreds—tied

By wild illicit ties to losels vile You'd tempt them to forsake ; and they'll reply

'Gold, friends, repute, I left for him, I have

In him, why should I leave him then for
gold,

Repute, or friends ?'—and you have felt your heart

Respond to such poor outcasts of the world

As to so many friends ; bad as you

You've felt they were God's men and women still,

So, not to be disowned by you ! But she,
That stands there, calmly gives her lover up

As means to wed the Earl that she may hide

Their intercourse the surelier ! and, for
this,

I curse her to her face before you all !
Shame hunt her from the earth ! Then Heaven do right

To both ! It hears me now—shall judge her then !

[As MILDRED faints and falls, TRESHAM rushes out.

Aus. Stay, Tresham, we'll accompany you !

Guen. We ?

What, and leave Mildred ? We ? why, where's my place

But by her side, and where's yours but by mine ?

Mildred—one word—only look at me,
then !

Aus. No, Guendolen ! I echo Thorold's voice !

She is unworthy to behold . . .
Guen. Us two ?

If you spoke on reflection, and if I Approved your speech—if you (to put the thing

At lowest) you, the soldier, bound to make

The King's cause yours, and fight for it, and throw

Regard to others of its right or wrong, —If with a death-white woman you can help,

Let alone sister, let alone a Mildred,
You left her—or if I, her cousin, friend

This morning, playfellow but yesterday, Who said, or thought at least a thousand
times,

I'd serve you if I could,' should now face round

And say, 'Ah, that's to only signify I'd serve you while you're fit to serve
yourself—

So long as fifty eyes await the turn Of yours to forestall its yet half-formed wish,

I'll proffer my assistance you'll not need—

When every tongue is praising you, I'll join

The praisers' chorus—when you're hemmed about

With lives between you and detraction
—lives

To be laid down if a rude voice, rash
eye,

Rough hand should violate the sacred ring

Their worship throws about you,— then indeed,

Who'll stand up for you stout as I ?'
If so

We said and so we did,—not Mildred
there

Would be unworthy to behold us both,
But we should be unworthy, both of us,
To be beheld by—by—your meanest
dog,

Which, if that sword were broken in your face

Before a crowd, that badge torn off your
breast,

And you cast out with hootings and contempt, —Would push his way thro' all the hooters, gain Your side, go off with you and all your shame To the next ditch you chose to die in !
 Austin,
 Do you love me ? Here 's Austin, Mildred,—here 's Your brother says he does not believe half—No, nor half that—of all he heard ! He says, Look up and take his hand !
Aus. Look up and take My hand, dear Mildred !
Mil. I—I was so young !
 Beside, I loved him, Thorold—and I had No mother—God forgot me—so I fell !
Guen. Mildred !
Mil. Require no further !
 Did I dream
 That I could palliate what is done ?
 All 's true.
 Now, punish me ! A woman takes my hand !
 Let go my hand ! You do not know,
 I see—
 I thought that Thorold told you Guen. What is this ?
 Where start you to ?
Mil. Oh Austin, loosen me !
 You heard the whole of it—your eyes were worse,
 In their surprise, than Thorold's ! Oh, unless You stay to execute his sentence, loose My hand ! Has Thorold gone, and are you here ?
Guen. Here, Mildred, we two friends of yours will wait Your bidding ; be you silent, sleep or muse !
 Only, when you shall want your bidding
 done,
 How can we do it if we are not by ?
 Here 's Austin waiting patiently your
 will !
 One spirit to command, and one to love
 And to believe in it and do its best, Poor as that is, to help it—why, the
 world

Has been won many a time, its length and breadth,
 By just such a beginning !
Mil. I believe If once I threw my arms about your
 neck
 And sunk my head upon your breast, that I Should weep again !
Guen. Let go her hand now, Austin.
 Wait for me. Pace the gallery and
 think
 On the world's seemings and realities, Until I call you. [AUSTIN goes.]
Mil. No—I cannot weep !
 No more tears from this brain—no sleep—no tears !
 O Guendolen, I love you !
Guen. Yes : and 'love' Is a short word that says so very
 much !
 It says that you confide in me.
Mil. Confide !
Guen. Your lover's name, then ! I've so much to learn,
 Ere I can work in your behalf !
Mil. My friend,
 You know I cannot tell his name.
Guen. At least
 He is your lover ? and you love him
 too ?
Mil. Ah, do you ask me that ?—but I am fallen
 So low !
Guen. You love him still, then ?
Mil. My sole prop Against the guilt that crushes me ! I say, Each night ere I lie down, 'I was so
 young—
 I had no mother—and I loved him so !'
 And then God seems indulgent, and I dare
 Trust Him my soul in sleep.
Guen. How could you let us E'en talk to you about Lord Mertoun
 then ?
Mil. There is a cloud around me.
Guen. But you said You would receive his suit in spite of
 this ?
Mil. I say there is a cloud . . .
Guen. No cloud to me !

Lord Mertoun and your lover are the same!

Mil. What maddest fancy . . .

Guen. [calling aloud.] Austin! (Spare your pains—

When I have got a truth, that truth I keep)—

Mil. By all you love, sweet Guendolen, forbear!

Have I confided in you . . .

Guen. Just for this!

Austin!—Oh, not to guess it at the first!

But I did guess it—that is, I divined—Felt by an instinct how it was—why else

Should I pronounce you free from all that heap

Of sins which had been irredeemable? I felt they were not yours—what other way

Than this, not yours? The secret's wholly mine!

Mil. If you would see me die before his face . . .

Guen. 'T'd hold my peace! And if the Earl returns

To-night?

Mil. Ah, Heaven, he's lost!

Guen. I thought so! Austin!

Enter AUSTIN.

Oh, where have you been hiding?

Aus. Thorold's gone, I know not how, across the meadow-land.

I watched him till I lost him in the skirts

Of the beech-wood.

Guen. Gone? All thwarts us!

Mil. Thorold too?

Guen. I have thought. First lead this Mildred to her room.

Go on the other side: and then we'll seek

Your brother; and I'll tell you, by the way,

The greatest comfort in the world. You said

There was a clue to all. Remember, Sweet,

He said there was a clue! I hold it. Come!

ACT III

SCENE I.—The end of the Yew-tree Avenue under MILDRED'S window. A light seen through a central red pane.

Enter TRESHAM through the trees.

Again here! But I cannot lose myself. The heath—the orchard—I have traversed glades

And dells and bosky paths which used to lead

Into green wild-wood depths, bewildering

My boy's adventurous step. And now they tend Hither or soon or late; the blackest shade

Breaks up, the thronged trunks of the trees ope wide,

And the dim turret I have fled from, fronts

Again my step; the very river put its arm about me and conducted me

To this detested spot. Why then, I'll shun

Their will no longer—do your will with me!

Oh, bitter! To have reared a towering scheme

Of happiness, and to behold it razed, Were nothing: all men hope, and see their hopes

Frustrate, and grieve awhile, and hope anew.

But I . . . to hope that from a line like ours

No horrid prodigy like this would spring,

Were just as though I hoped that from these old

Confederates against the sovereign day, Children of older and yet older sires,

Whose living coral berries dropped, as now

On me, on many a baron's surcoat once,

On many a beauty's wimple—would proceed

No poison-tree, to thrust, from Hell its root,

Hither and thither its strange snaky arms.

Why came I here ? What must I do ? Mer. I am armed, fool !
[a bell strikes.] A bell ? Tresh. Yes, Midnight ! and 'tis at midnight . . . Or no ? You'll come into the light, or Ah, I catch no ?
 —Woods, river, plains, I catch your My hand is on your throat—refuse !—

 And I obey you ! Hist ! This tree Where have I heard . . . no—that was

After a pause, enter MERTOUN Tresh. You're armed : that's well.
cloaked as before Your name—who are you ?
Mer. Not Mer. (Tresham !—she is lost !)

 voluptuous beat you bear yourself Of hope and fear, my heart ! I thought Exactly as, in curious dreams I've had

 I never saw it lovelier than now [He throws off his disguises.]
 It rises for the last time. If it sets, Tresh. Mertoun !

If you once taught me the unteachable, Explained how you can live so, and so

With God's help I retain, despite my
sense,

The old belief—a life like yours is still Impossible ! Now draw !

Mer. Not for my sake, Do I entreat a hearing—for your sake,
And most, for her sake !

Tresh. Ha, ha, what should I Know of your ways ? A miscreant like
yourself,

How must one rouse his ire ?—A blow ?
—that's pride

No doubt, to him ! one spurns him, does one not ?

Or sets the foot upon his mouth—or spits

Into his face ! Come—which, or all of these ?

Mer. 'Twixt him, and me, and Mildred, Heaven be judge !

Can I avoid this ? Have your will, my lord !

[He draws, and, after a few passes, falls.

Tresh. You are not hurt ?

Mer. You'll hear me now !

Tresh. But rise !

Mer. Ah, Tresham, say I not 'you'll hear me now !'

And what procures a man the right to
speak

In his defence before his fellow-man,

But—I suppose—the thought that presently

He may have leave to speak before his
God

His whole defence ?

Tresh. Not hurt ? It cannot be !
You made no effort to resist me.

Where Did my sword reach you ? Why not have returned

My thrusts ? Hurt where ?

Mer. My lord—

Tresh. How young he is !

Mer. Lord Tresham, I am very young,
and yet

I have entangled other lives with mine.
Do let me speak ! and do believe my
speech,

That when I die before you presently,—

Tresh. Can you stay here till I return with help ?

Mer. Oh, stay by me ! When I was less than boy

I did you grievous wrong, and knew it
not—

Upon my honour, knew it not ! Once known,

I could not find what seemed a better
way

To right you than I took : my life—you feel

How less than nothing had been giving
you

The life you've taken ! But I thought my way

The better—only for your sake and hers.

And as you have decided otherwise, Would I had an infinity of lives

To offer you ! Now say—instruct me
—think !

Can you from out the minutes I have left

Eke out my reparation ? Oh—think
—think !

For I must wring a partial—dare I say, Forgiveness from you, ere I die ?

Tresh. I do

Forgive you.

Mer. Wait and ponder that great
word !

Because, if you forgive me, I shall hope To speak to you of—Mildred !

Tresh. Mertoun.—haste And anger have undone us. 'Tis not
you

Should tell me for a novelty you're young—

Thoughtless—unable to recall the Past !
Be but your pardon ample as my
own !

Mer. Ah, Tresham, that a sword-stroke and a drop

Of blood or two, should bring all this
about !

Why, 'twas my very fear of you—my
love

Of you—(what passion's like a boy's for one

Like you ?)—that ruined me ! I dreamed of you—

You, all accomplished, courted everywhere,
 The scholar and the gentleman. I burned
 To knit myself to you: but I was young,
 And your surpassing reputation kept me So far aloof! Oh, wherefore all that
 love?
 With less of love, my glorious yesterday Of praise and gentle words and kindest looks,
 Had taken place perchance six months ago!
 Even now—how happy we had been!
 And yet
 I know the thought of this escaped you, Tresham!
 Let me look up into your face—I feel 'Tis changed above me—yet my eyes are glazed.
 Where? where?
[As he endeavours to raise himself, his eye catches the lamp.]
 Ah, Mildred! What will Mildred do?
 Tresham, her life is bound up in the life That's bleeding fast away!—I'll live—must live, There! if you'll only turn me I shall
 live
 And save her! Tresham—Oh, had you but heard!
 Had you but heard! What right have you to set The thoughtless foot upon her life and
 mine,
 And then say, as we perish, 'Had I
 thought,
 All had gone otherwise.' We've sinned
 and die:
 Never you sin, Lord Tresham!—for you'll die,
 And God will judge you.
Tresh. Yes, be satisfied—That process is begun.
Mer. And she sits there Waiting for me! Now, say you this to
 her—
 You—not another—say, I saw him die As he breathed this—'I love her'— you don't know What those three small words mean!
 Say, loving her

Lowers me down the bloody slope to
 death
 With memories . . . I speak to her—not
 you,
 Who had no pity—will have no remorse, Perchance intend her . . . Die along
 with me,
 Dear Mildred!—'tis so easy—and you'll So much unkindness! Can I lie at rest, With rude speech spoken to you, ruder deeds
 Done to you—heartless men to have my
 heart,
 And I tied down with grave-clothes and the worm,
 Aware, perhaps, of every blow—Oh
 God!—
 Upon those lips—yet of no power to tear The felon stripe by stripe? Die, Mildred! Leave Their honourable world to them—for
 God
 We're good enough, though the world casts us out!
[A whistle is heard.]
Tresh. Ho, Gerard!
Enter GERARD, AUSTIN, and GUEN-DOLEN, with lights.
 No one speak! you see what's done!
 I cannot bear another voice!
Mer. There's light—Light all about me, and I move to it.
 Tresham, did I not tell you—did you
 not Just promise to deliver words of mine
 To Mildred?
Tresh. I will bear those words to her.
Mer. Now?
Tresh. Now. Lift you the body, Gerard, and leave me
 The head.
[As they have half raised MERTOUN, he turns suddenly.]
Mer. I knew they turned me—turn me not from her!
 There! stay you! there!
Guen. [After a pause.] Austin, remain
 you here
 With Thorold until Gerard comes with help—

Then lead him to his chamber. I must go To Mildred.

Tresh. Guendolen, I hear each word You utter—did you hear him bid me
give

His message? Did you hear my promise? I,

And only I, see Mildred!

Guen. She will die.

Tresh. Oh no, she will not die! I dare not hope She'll die. What ground have you to think she'll die?

Why, Austin's with you!

Aus. Had we but arrived Before you fought!

Tresh. There was no fight at all!
He let me slaughter him—the boy!

I'll trust
The body there to you and Gerard—
thus!

Now bear him on before me.

Aus. Whither bear him?

Tresh. Oh, to my chamber! When we meet there next,

We shall be friends.

[They bear out the body of MERTOUN.

Will she die, Guendolen?

Guen. Where are you taking me?

Tresh. He fell just here!

Now answer me. Shall you in your whole life —You who have nought to do with Mertoun's fate,

Now you have seen his breast upon the turf,

Shall you e'er walk this way if you can help?

When you and Austin wander arm-in-arm

Through our ancestral grounds, will not a shade

Be ever on the meadow and the waste—Another kind of shade than when the night

Shuts the woodside with all its whispers up?

But will you ever so forget his breast
As willingly to cross this bloody turf Under the black yew avenue? That's well!

You turn your head! and I then?—

Guen.

What is done
Is done! My care is for the living.

Thorold,

Bear up against this burden—more remains

To set the neck to!

Tresh.

Dear and ancient trees
My fathers planted, and I loved so well!
What have I done that, like some fabled crime

Of yore, lets loose a fury leading thus Her miserable dance amidst you all?

Oh, never more for me shall winds intone

With all your tops a vast antiphony, Demanding and responding in God's praise!

Hers ye are now—not mine! Farewell
—Farewell!

SCENE II.—MILDRED'S Chamber. MILDRED alone.

He comes not! I have heard of those who seemed Resourceless in prosperity, — you thought

Sorrow might slay them when she listed —yet

Did they so gather up their diffused strength

At her first menace, that they bade her strike,

And stood and laughed her subtlest skill to scorn.

Oh, 'tis not so with me! the first woe fell,

And the rest fall upon it, not on me:

Else should I bear that Henry comes not?—fails

Just this first night out of so many nights?

Loving is done with! Were he sitting now,

As so few hours since, on that seat, we'd love

No more—contrive no thousand happy ways

To hide love from the loveless, any more!

I think I might have urged some little point

In my defence, to Thorold; he was breathless

For the least hint of a defence ; but no !
The first shame over, all that would might fall.

No Henry ! Yet I merely sit and
think

The morn's deed o'er and o'er. I must have crept

Out of myself. A Mildred that has lost Her lover—oh, I dare not look upon Such woe ! I crouch away from it !

'Tis she,
Mildred, will break her heart, not I !
The world

Forsakes me—only Henry's left me—
left ?

When I have lost him, for he does not
come,

And I sit stupidly . . . Oh Heaven, break up

This worse than anguish, this mad apathy,

By any means or any messenger !

Tresh. [without.] Mildred !

Mil. Come in ! Heaven hears me !

[Enter TRESHAM.] You ? alone ?

Oh, no more cursing !

Tresh. Mildred, I must sit.

There—you sit !

Mil. Say it, Thorold—do not look The curse—deliver all you come to
say !

What must become of me ? Oh speak that thought

Which makes your brow and cheek so pale !

Tresh. My thought ?

Mil. All of it !

Tresh. How we waded—years ago—After those water-lilies, till the plash, I know not how, surprised us ; and you dared

Neither advance nor turn back : so we stood

Laughing and crying until Gerard
came—

Once safe upon the turf, the loudest, too, For once more reaching the relinquished
prize !

How idle thoughts are—some men's dying men's !

Mildred,—

Mil. You call me kindlier by my

Than even yesterday—what is in that ?

Tresh. It weighs so much upon my mind that I

This morning took an office not my
own !

I might . . . of course, I must be glad or grieved,

Content or not, at every little thing That touches you—I may with a wrung
heart

Even reprove you, Mildred ; I did
more :

Will you forgive me ?

Mil. Thorold ? do you mock ?
Or no . . . and yet you bid me . . . say that word !

Tresh. Forgive me, Mildred !—are you silent, Sweet ?

Mil. [starting up.] Why does not Henry Mertoun come to-night ?
Are you, too, silent ?

[Dashing his mantle aside, and pointing to his scabbard, which is empty.

Ah, this speaks for you !

You've murdered Henry Mertoun ! now proceed !

What is it I must pardon ? This and
all ?

Well, I do pardon you—I think I do.
Thorold, how very wretched you must
be !

Tresh. He bade me tell you . . .

Mil. What I do forbid Your utterance of ! so much that you may tell

And will not—how you murdered him
. . . but, no !

You'll tell me that he loved me, never
more

Than bleeding out his life there—must
I say

'Indeed,' to that ? Enough ! I pardon
you !

Tresh. You cannot, Mildred ! for the harsh words, yes :

Of this last deed Another's Judge—whose doom

I wait in doubt, despondency, and fear.

Mil. Oh true ! there's nought for me to pardon ! True !

You loosed my soul of all its cares at
once—

Death makes me sure of him for ever !

You
Tell me his last words ? He shall tell me them,
And take my answer—not in words, but reading
Himself the heart I had to read him late,

Which death . . .

Tresh. Death ? you are dying too ? Well said

Of Guendolen ! I dared not hope you'd die :

But she was sure of it.

Mil. Tell Guendolen

I loved her, and tell Austin . . .

Tresh. Him you loved :
And me ?

Mil. Ah, Thorold ! was 't not rashly
done

To quench that blood, on fire with youth and hope

And love of me—whom you loved too,
and yet

Suffered to sit here waiting his approach While you were slaying him ? Oh, doubtlessly

You let him speak his poor confused boy's-speech

—Do his poor utmost to disarm your wrath

And respite me !—you let him try to give

The story of our loves, and ignorance,
And the brief madness, and the long

despair—
You let him plead all this, because your code

Of honour bids you hear before you
strike :

But at the end, as he looked up for life Into your eyes—you struck him down !

Tresh. No ! no !
Had I but heard him—had I let him

Half the truth—less—had I looked long
on him,

I had desisted ! Why, as he lay there, Themoon on his flushed cheek, I gathered

all
The story ere he told it ! I saw through The troubled surface of his crime and

yours

A depth of purity immovable !

Had I but glanced, where all seemed turbidest

Had gleamed some inlet to the calm
beneath !

I would not glance—my punishment 's at hand.

There, Mildred, is the truth ! and you—say on—

You curse me ?

Mil. As I dare approach that Heaven Which has not bade a living thing
despair,

Which needs no code to keep Its grace from stain,

But bids the vilest worm that turns on
It

Desist and be forgiven,—I—forgive not,
But bless you, Thorold, from my soul of souls ! [Falls on his neck.

There ! do not think too much upon the
Past !

The cloud that 's broke was all the same a cloud

While it stood up between my friend and you !

You hurt him 'neath its shadow : but is that

So past retrieve ? I have his heart, you
know ;

I may dispose of it : I give it you !
It loves you as mine loves ! Confirm me, Henry ! [Dies.

Tresh. I wish thee joy, Beloved ! I am glad

In thy full gladness !
Guen. [without.] Mildred ! Tresham !

[Entering with AUSTIN.] Thorold, I could desist no longer. Ah, she swoons !

That 's well.

Tresh. Oh ! better far than that !
Guen. She 's dead !

Let me unlock her arms !
Tresh. She threw them thus

About my neck, and blessed me, and then died :

—You'll let them stay now, Guen-dolen !

Aus. Leave her
And look to him ! What ails you, Thorold ?

Guen. White

As she—and whiter ! Austin ! quick—this side !

Aus. A froth is oozing through his clenched teeth—

Both lips, where they're not bitten through, are black !

Speak, dearest Thorold !

Tresh. Something does weigh down My neck beside her weight : thanks :

I should fall

But for you, Austin, I believe !—there,
there—

'Twill pass away soon !—ah,—I had forgotten—

I am dying.

Guen. Thorold—Thorold—why was
this ?

Tresh. I said, just as I drank the poison off,

The earth would be no longer earth to
me,

The life out of all life was gone from
me !

There are blind ways provided, the foredone

Heart-weary player in this pageant-
world

Drops out by, letting the main masque defile

By the conspicuous portal :—I am
through—

Just through !

Guen. Don't leave him, Austin ! death is close.

Tresh. Already Mildred's face is peacefuller !

I see you, Austin—feel you—here's my
hand,

Put yours in it—you, Guendolen, yours
too !

You're Lord and Lady now—you're Treshams ; name

And fame are yours : you hold our 'Scutcheon up.

Austin, no Blot on it ! You see how blood

Must wash one blot away : the first blot came

And the first blood came. To the vain world's eye

All's gules again : no care to the vain
world,

From whence the red was drawn !

Aus. No blot shall come !

Tresh. I said that : yet it did come !
Should it come,

Vengeance is God's, not man's. Remember me !

[Dies.

Guen. [letting fall the pulseless arm.]

Ah, Thorold, we can but—remember you !

PLACE, The Palace at Juliers.

TIME, 16—.

ACT I

Morning.—SCENE. A corridor leading to the Audience-chamber.

GAUCELME, CLUGNET, MAUFROY, and other Courtiers, round GUIBERT, who is silently reading a paper: as he drops it at the end—

Gui. That this should be her birthday; and the day

We all invested her, twelve months ago, As the late Duke's true heiress and our liege;

And that this also must become the
day...

Oh, miserable lady!

First Court. Ay, indeed?

Second Court. Well, Guibert?

Third Court. But your news, my friend, your news!

The sooner, friend, one learns Prince Berthold's pleasure,

The better for us all: how writes the Prince?

Give me—I'll read it for the common
good.

Gui. In time, sir—but, till time comes, pardon me!

Our old Duke just disclosed his child's retreat,

Declared her true succession to his rule,
And died: this birthday was the day, last year,

We convoyed her from Castle Ravestein—

That sleeps out trustfully its extreme
age

On the Meuse' quiet bank, where she lived queen

Over the water-buds,—to Juliers' court With joy and bustle. Here again we
stand;

Sir Gancelme's buckle's constant to his cap:

To-day's much such another sunny
day!

Gau. Come, Guibert, this outgrows a jest, I think!

You're hardly such a novice as to need

The lesson, you pretend.

Gui. What lesson, sir ?
That everybody, if he'd thrive at court, Should, first and last of all, look to
himself ?

Why, no : and therefore, with your good example, (—Ho, Master Adolf !)—to myself I'll
look.

Enter ADOLF.

Gui. The Prince's letter ; why, of all men else,
Comes it to me ?

Adolf. By virtue of your place, Sir Guibert ! 'Twas the Prince's express charge,
His envoy told us, that the missive
there Should only reach our lady by the hand

Of whosoever held your place.

Gui. Enough ! [ADOLF retires.] Then, gentles, who'll accept a certain poor

Indifferently honourable place, My friends, I make no doubt, have gnashed their teeth

At leisure minutes these half-dozen
years,

To find me never in the mood to quit ?
—Who asks may have it, with my blessing, and—

This to present our lady. Who'll accept ?

You,—you,—you ? There it lies, and may, for me !

Mau. [a youth, picking up the paper, reads aloud.]

'Prince Berthold, proved by titles following

Undoubted Lord of Juliers, comes this
day

To claim his own, with licence from the Pope,

The Emperor, the Kings of Spain and France' . . .

Gau. Sufficient 'titles following,' I
judge !

Don't read another ! Well,—'to claim
his own ?'

Mau. '—And take possession of the Duchy held

Since twelve months, to the true heir's prejudice,

By ' . . . Colombe, Juliers' mistress, so she thinks,

And Ravestein's mere lady, as we find !
Who wants the place and paper ?

Guibert's right !
I hope to climb a little in the world,— I'd push my fortunes,—but, no more than he,

Could tell her on this happy day of
days,

That, save the nosegay in her hand,
perhaps,

There's nothing left to call her own !
Sir Clugnet,

You famish for promotion ; what say
you ?

Clug. [an old man.] To give this letter were a sort, I take it,

Of service : services ask recompense :
What kind of corner may be Ravestein ?

Gui. The castle ?—Oh, you'd share her fortunes ? Good !

Three walls stand upright, full as good as four,

With no such bad remainder of a roof.
Clug. Oh,—but the town ?

Gui. Five houses, fifteen huts ;
A church whereto was once a spire, 'tis
judged ;

And half a dyke, except in time of thaw.

Clug. Still, there's some revenue ?
Gui. Else Heaven forefend !

You hang a beacon out, should fogs
increase ;

So, when the Autumn floats of pine-wood steer

Safe 'mid the white confusion, thanks
to you,

Their grateful raftsmen fling a guilder
in ;

—That's if he means to pass your way next time.

Clug. If not ?
Gui. Hang guilders, then—he blesses you

Clug. What man do you suppose me ?
Keep your paper !

And, let me say, it shows no handsome spirit

To dally with misfortune: keep your place!

Gau. Some one must tell her.

Gui. Some one may: you may

Gau. Sir Guibert, 'tis no trifle turns me sick

Of court-hypocrisy at years like mine,
But this goes near it. Where's there news at all?

Who'll have the face, for instance, to affirm

He never heard, e'en while we crowned the girl,

That Juliers' tenure was by Salic law;

That one, confessed her father's cousin's child,

And, she away, indisputable heir, Against our choice protesting and the Duke's,

Claimed Juliers?—nor, as he preferred his claim,

That first this, then another potentate, Inclined to its allowance?—I, or you,

Or any one except the lady's self?

Oh, it had been the direst cruelty To break the business to her! Things might change:

At all events, we'd see next masque at end,

Next mummery over first: and so the edge

Was taken off sharp tidings as they came,

Till here's the Prince upon us, and there's she —Wreathing her hair, a song between her lips,

With just the faintest notion possible That some such claimant earns a livelihood

About the world, by feigning grievances—

Few pay the story of, but grudge its price,

And fewer listen to, a second time.
Your method proves a failure; now try mine!

And, since this must be carried . . .

Gui.[snatching the paper from him.]
By your leave!

Your zeal transports you! 'Twill not serve the Prince

So much as you expect, this course you'd take.

If she leaves quietly her palace,—well;
But if she died upon its threshold,—no:

He'd have the trouble of removing her.
Come, gentles, we're all—what the devil knows!

You, Gauceleme, won't lose character, beside—

You broke your father's heart superiorly To gather his succession—never blush!

You're from my province, and, be comforted,

They tell of it with wonder to this day—
You can afford to let your talent sleep!

We'll take the very worst supposed, as true:

There, the old Duke knew, when he hid his child

Among the river-flowers at Ravestein, With whom the right lay! Call the Prince our Duke

There, she's no Duchess, she's no anything

More than a young maid with the bluest eyes—

And now, sirs, we'll not break this young maid's heart

Coolly as Gauceleme could and would!
No haste!

His talent's full-blown, ours but in the bud—

We'll not advance to his perfection yet—

Will we, Sir Maufroy? See, I've ruined Maufroy

For ever as a courtier!

Gau. Here's a coil!

And, count us, will you? Count its residue,

This boasted convoy, this day last year's crowd!

A birthday, too—a gratulation-day!

I'm dumb: bid that keep silence!

Mau. and others. Eh, Sir Guibert?

He's right: that does say something: that's bare truth.

Ten—twelve, I make: a perilous dropping-off!

Gui. Pooh—is it audience hour?
The vestibule

Swarms too, I wager, with the common sort

That want our privilege of entry here.

Gau. Adolf! [Re-enter ADOLF.]

Who's outside?

Gui. Oh, your looks suffice!
Nobody waiting?

Mau. [looking through the door-folds.]

Scarce our number!

Gui. 'Sdeath!
Nothing to beg for, to complain about?
It can't be! Ill news spreads, but not so fast

As thus to frighten all the world!

Gau. The world Lives out of doors, sir—not with you and me

By presence-chamber porches, stateroom stairs, Wherever warmth's perpetual: outside's free

To every wind from every compass-
point,
And who may get nipped needs be weather-wise.

The Prince comes and the lady's People
go;

The snow-goose settles down, the swallows flee—

Why should they wait for winter-time?
'Tis instinct;

Don't you feel somewhat chilly?

Gui. That's their craft?
And last year's crowders-round and criers-forth,

That strewed the garlands, overarched
the roads,

Lit up the bonfires, sang the loyal songs!
Well, 'tis my comfort, you could never call me

The People's Friend! The People keep their word—

I keep my place: don't doubt I'll entertain

The People when the Prince comes, and the People

Are talked of! Then, their speeches—no one tongue

Found respite, not a pen had holiday —For they wrote, too, as well as spoke, these knaves!

Now see: we tax and tithe them, pill and poll,

They wince and fret enough, but pay they must

We manage that,—so, pay with a good grace

They might as well, it costs so little
more.

But when we've done with taxes, meet folk next

Outside the toll-booth and the rating-
place,

In public—there they have us if they
will,

We're at their mercy after that, you
see!

For one tax not ten devils could extort—

Over and above necessity, a grace; This prompt disbosoming of love, to wit—

Their vine-leaf wrappage of our tribute-penny,

And crowning attestation, all works
well.

Yet this precisely do they thrust on us!
These cappings quick, and crook-and-cringsings low,

Hand to the heart, and forehead to the knee,

With grin that shuts the eyes and opes the mouth—

So tender they their love; and, tender
made,

Go home to curse you, the first do it you ask.

As if their souls were any longer theirs!
As if they had not given ample warrant

To who should clap a collar on their
neck,

Rings in their nose, a goad to either
flank,

And take them for the brute they boast themselves!

Stay—there's a bustle at the outer door—

And somebody entreating . . . that's my name!

Adolf.—I heard my name!

Adolf. 'Twas probably The Suitor.

Gui. Oh, there is one?
Adolf. With a suit

He'd fain enforce in person.
Gui. The good heart —And the great fool! Just ope the mid-door's fold!

Is that a lappet of his cloak, I see?

Adolf. If it bear plenteous signs of travel . . . ay,

The very cloak my comrades tore!

Gui. Why tore?

Adolf. He seeks the Duchess' presence in that trim:

Since daybreak, was he posted hereabouts

Lest he should miss the moment.

Gui. Where's he now?

Adolf. Gone for a minute possibly, not more.

They have do oneought to thrust him back.

Gui. Ay—but my name, I caught?

Adolf. Oh, sir—he said

—What was it?—You had known him formerly,

And, he believed, would help him did you guess

He waited now—you promised him as much—

The old plea! 'Faith, he's back,—renews the charge!

[Speaking at the door.] So long as the man parleys, peace outside!

Nor be too ready with your halberts, there!

Gau. My horse bespattered, as he blocked the path,

A thin sour man, not unlike somebody.

Adolf. He holds a paper in his breast, whereon

He glances when his cheeks flush and his brow

At each repulse—

Gau. I noticed he'd a brow.

Adolf. So glancing, he grows calmer, leans awhile

Over the balustrade, adjusts his dress, And presently turns round, quiet again,

With some new pretext for admittance. —Back!

(To GUIBERT.)—Sir, he has seen you! Now cross halberts! Ha—

Pascal is prostrate—there lies Fabian too—

No passage! Whither would the mad-man press?

Close the doors quick on me!

Gui. Too late—he's here.

Enter, hastily, and with dress, VALENCE.

Val. Sir Guibert, will you help me?

—Me, that come

Charged by your townsmen, all who starve at Cleves,

To represent their heights and depths of woe

Before our Duchess and obtain relief! Such errands barricade such doors, it seems:

But not a common hindrance drives me back

On all the sad yet hopeful faces, lit With hope for the first time, which sent me forth!

Cleves, speak for me! Cleves' men and women, speak—

Who followed me—your strongest—many a mile

That I might go the fresher from their ranks,

—Who sit—your weakest—by the city gates,

To take me fuller of what news I bring As I return—for I must needs return!

Can I? 'Twere hard, no listener for their wrongs,

To turn them back upon the old despair—

Harder, Sir Guibert, than imploring thus—

So, I do—any way you please—implore!

If you . . . but how should you remember Cleves?

Yet they of Cleves remember you so well!

—Ay, comment on each trait of you they keep,

Your words and deeds caught up at second hand,—

Proud, I believe, at bottom of their hearts,

Of the very levity and recklessness Which only prove that you forget their wrongs.

Cleves, the grand town, whose men and women starve,

Is Cleves forgotten?—Then, remember me!

You promised me that you would help me once

For other purpose : will you keep your word ?

Gui. And who may you be, friend ?

Val. Valence of Cleves.

Gui. Valence of . . . not the Advocate of Cleves,

I owed my whole estate to, three years back ?

Ay, well may you keep silence ! Why, my lords,

You've heard, I'm sure, how, Pente-cost three years,

I was so nearly ousted of my land

By some knaves'-pretext,—(eh ? when you refused me

Your ugly daughter, Clugnet,)—and you've heard

How I recovered it by miracle

—(When I refused her !) Here 's the very friend, —Valence of Cleves, all parties have to thank !

Nay, Valence, this procedure 's vile in you—

I'm no more grateful than a courtier should,

But politic am I—I bear a brain,

Can cast about a little, might require Your services a second time ! I tried

To tempt you with advancement here to court

—'No !'—well, for curiosity at least

To view our life here—'No !'—our Duchess, then,—

A pretty woman 's worth some pains to see,

Nor is she spoiled, I take it, if a crown Completes the forehead pale and tresses pure . . .

Val. Our city trusted me its miseries, And I am come.

Gui. So much for taste ! But 'come,'—

So may you be, for anything I know, To beg the Pope's cross, or Sir Clugnet's daughter,

And with an equal chance you get all three !

If it was ever worth your while to come, Was not the proper way worth finding too ?

Val. Straight to the palace-portal, sir, I came—

Gui. —And said ?—

Val. —That I had brought the miseries

Of a whole city to relieve.

Gui. —Which saying Won your admittance ? You saw me,

indeed,

And here, no doubt, you stand : as certainly,

My intervention, I shall not dispute, Procures you audience ; which, if I procure,—

That paper 's closely written—by Saint Paul,

Here flock the Wrongs, follow the Remedies,

Chapter and verse, One, Two, A, B, and C—

Perhaps you'd enter, make a reverence, And launch these 'miseries' from first to last ?

Val. How should they let me pause or turn aside ?

Gau. [to VALENCE.] My worthysir, one question : you've come straight

From Cleves, you tell us : heard you any talk

At Cleves about our lady ?

Val. Much.

Gau. And what ?

Val. Her wish was to redress all wrongs she knew.

Gau. That, you believed ?

Val. You see me, sir !

Gau. —Nor stopped Upon the road from Cleves to Juliers

here,

For any—rumours you might find afloat ?

Val. I had my townsmen's wrongs to busy me.

Gau. This is the lady's birthday, do you know ?

—Her day of pleasure ?

Val. —I know that the great, For pleasure born, should still be on the

watch

To exclude pleasure when a duty offers : Even as the lowly too, for duty born,

May ever snatch a pleasure if in reach :

Both will have plenty of their birth-right, sir !

Gau. [Aside to GUIBERT.] Sir Guibert, here's your man! No scruples now—

You'll never find his like! Time presses hard.

I've seen your drift and Adolf's too, this while,

But you can't keep the hour of audience back

Much longer, and at noon the Prince arrives.

[Pointing to VALENCE.] Entrust him with it—fool no chance away!

Gui. —Him?

Gau. —With the missive!

What's the man to her?

Gui. No bad thought!—Yet, 'tis yours—who ever played The tempting serpent: else, 'twere no bad thought!

I should—and do—mistrust it for your sake,

Or else...

Enter an Official who communicates with ADOLF.

Adolf. The Duchess will receive the Court!

Gui. Give us a moment, Adolf! Valence, friend,

I'll help you: we of the service, you're to mark,

Have special entry, while the herd... the folks

Outside, get access through our help alone.

—Well, it is so, was so, and I suppose So ever will be: your natural lot is, therefore,

To wait your turn and opportunity, And probably miss both. Now, I engage To set you, here and in a minute's space,

Before the lady, with full leave to plead Chapter and verse, and A, and B, and C, To heart's content.

Val. I grieve that I must ask,— This being, yourself admit, the custom here,—

To what the price of such a favour mounts?

Gui. Just so! You're not without a courtier's tact!

Little at court, as your quick instinct prompts,

Do such as we without a recompense.

Val. Yours is?—

Gui. A trifle: here's a document 'Tis some one's duty to present her Grace—

I say, not mine—these say, not theirs—such points

Have weight at court. Will you relieve us all

And take it? Just say, 'I am bidden lay

This paper at the Duchess' feet.'

Val. No more?

I thank you, sir!

Adolf. Her Grace receives the Court!

Gui. [Aside.] Now, sursum corda, quoth the mass-priest! Do—

Whoever's my kind saint, do let alone These pushings to and fro, and pullings

back;

Peaceably let me hang o' the devil's arm

The downward path, if you can't pluck me off

Completely! Let me live quite his, or yours!

[The Courtiers begin to range themselves, and move towards the door.

After me, Valence! So, our famous Cleves

Lacks bread? Yet don't we gallants buy their lace?

And dear enough—it beggars me, I know,

To keep my very gloves fringed properly!

This, Valence, is our Great State Hall you cross;

Yon grey urn's veritable marcasite, The Pope's gift: and those salvers testify

The Emperor. Presently, you'll set your foot

... But you don't speak, friend Valence! Val. I shall speak.

Gau. [Aside to GUIBERT.] Guibert—it were no such ungraceful thing

If you and I, at first, seemed horror-struck

With the bad news. Look here, what you shall do!

Suppose you, first, clap hand to sword and cry
'Yield strangers our allegiance? First I'll perish Beside your Grace!'—and so give me the cue
To...

Gui. Clap your hand to note-book and jot down
That to regale the Prince with? I conceive!

[To VALENCE.] Do, Valence, speak, or I shall half suspect You're plotting to supplant us, me the
first,
I' the lady's favour: is't the grand harangue

You mean to make, that thus engrosses
you?
—Which of her virtues you'll apostrophize?

Or is't the fashion you aspire to start,
Of that close-curled, not unbecoming
hair?

—Or what else ponder you?

Val. My townsmen's wrongs!

ACT II

Noon.—SCENE. The Presence-chamber.

The DUCHESS and SABYNE.

The D. Announce that I am ready for the Court!

Sab. 'Tis scarcely audience-hour, I think—your Grace May best consult your own relief, no
doubt,
And shun the crowd; but few can have arrived...

The D. Let those not yet arrived, then, keep away!

'Twas me, this day, last year at Ravestein, You hurried. It has been full time,
beside,

This half-hour. Do you hesitate?

Sab. Forgive me!

The D. Stay, Sabyne; let me hasten to make sure

Of one true thanker: here with you begins
My audience, claim you first its privilege!

It is my birth's event they celebrate:
You need not wish me more such happy
days,

But—ask some favour! Have you none to ask?

Has Adolf none, then? this was far from least

Of much I waited for impatiently, Assure yourself! It seemed so natural Your gift, beside this bunch of river-bells,

Should be the power and leave of doing
good

To you, and greater pleasure to myself.
You ask my leave to-day to marry Adolf?

The rest is my concern.

Sab. Your Grace is ever Our Lady of dear Ravestein,—but, for Adolf...

The D. 'But'? You have not, sure, changed in your regard And purpose towards him?

Sab. We change!

The D. Well, then? Well?

Sab. How could we two be happy, and, most like,

Leave Juliers, when—when... but 'tis audience-time!

The D. 'When, if you left me, I were left indeed!'

Would you subjoin that?—Bid the Court approach!

—Why should we play thus with each other, Sabyne?

Do I not know, if courtiers prove remiss,

If friends detain me, and get blame for
it,

There is a cause? Of last year's fervid throng

Scarce one half comes now!

Sab. [Aside.] One half? No, alas!

The D. So can the mere suspicion of a cloud

Over my fortunes, strike each loyal
heart.

They've heard of this Prince Berthold;
and, forsooth,

Each foolish arrogant pretence he makes,

May grow more foolish and more arrogant,

They please to apprehend! I thank their love!

Admit them!

Sab. [Aside.] How much has she really learned?

The D. Surely, whoever's absent, Tristan waits?

—Or at least Romuald, whom my father raised

From nothing—come, he's faithful to me, come!

(Sabyne, I should but be the prouder—
yes,

And fitter to comport myself aright)

Not Romuald? Xavier—what said he to that?

For Xavier hates a parasite, I know!

[SABYNE goes out.]

The D. Well, sunshine's everywhere, and summer too.

Next year 'tis the old place again,
perhaps—

The water-breeze again, the birds again.

—It cannot be! It is too late to be!

What part had I, or choice in all of it?

Hither they brought me; I had not to
think

Nor care, concern myself with doing
good

Orill, my task was just—to live,—to live,
And, answering ends there was no need explain,

To render Juliers happy—so they said,
All could not have been falsehood!

Some was love,

And wonder and obedience. I did all They looked for: why then cease to do it now?

Yet this is to be calmly set aside, And—ere next birthday's dawn, for aught I know,

Things change, a claimant may arrive,
and I . . .

It cannot nor it shall not be! His
right?

Well then, he has the right, and I have
not,

—But who bade all of you surround my
life

And close its growth up with your Ducal crown

Which, plucked off rudely, leaves me perishing?

I could have been like one of you,— loved, hoped,

Feared, lived and died like one of you—but you

Would take that life away and give me
this,

And I will keep this! I will face you!
Come!

Enter the Courtiers and VALENCE.

The Courtiers. Many such happy mornings to your Grace!

The D. [Aside, as they pay their devoir.] The same words—the same faces,—the same love!

I have been over-fearful. These are few;

But these, at least, stand firmly: these are mine!

As many come as may; and if no
more,

'Tis that these few suffice—they do suffice!

What succour may not next year bring me? Plainly,

I feared too soon. [To the Court.] I thank you, sirs: all thanks!

Val. [Aside, as the DUCHESS passes from one group to another, conversing.]

'Tis she—the vision this day last year
brought,

When, for a golden moment at our Cleves,

She tarried in her progress hither.
Cleves

Chose me to speak its welcome, and I spoke

—Not that she could have noted the recluse

—Ungainly, old before his time—who gazed.

Well, Heaven's gifts are not wasted, and that gaze

Kept, and shall keep me to the end, her
own!

She was above it—but so would not sink My gaze to earth! The People caught it, hers—

Thenceforward, mine; but thus entirely mine,

Who shall affirm, had she not raised my
soul

Ere she retired and left me—them?

She turns—

There's all her wondrous face at once!

The ground

Reels and . . . [suddenly occupying himself with his paper.] These wrongs of theirs I have to plead!

The D. [to the Court.] Nay, compliment enough! And kindness, self Should pause before it wish me more such years.

'Twas fortunate that thus, ere youth escaped,

I tasted life's pure pleasure—one such, pure,

Is worth a thousand, mixed—and youth's for pleasure:

Mine is received; let my age pay for it.

Gau. So, pay, and pleasure paid for, thanks your Grace,

Should never go together?

Gau.

How, Sir Gaucelme?

Hurry one's feast down unenjoyingly

At the snatched breathing-intervals of work?

As good you saved it till the dull day's-end

When, stiff and sleepy, appetite is gone! Eat first, then work upon the strength of it!

The D. True: you enable me to risk my Future,

By giving me a Past beyond recall.

I lived, a girl, one happy leisure year: Let me endeavour to be the Duchess now!

And so,—what news, Sir Guibert, spoke you of?

[As they advance a little, and GUIBERT speaks—

—That gentleman?

Val. [Aside.] I feel her eyes on me!

Gau. [to VALENCE.] The Duchess, sir, inclines to hear your suit!

Advance! He is from Cleves.

Val. [coming forward.] [Aside.] Their wrongs—their wrongs!

The D. And you, sir, are from Cleves? How fresh in mind, The hour or two I passed at queenly Cleves!

She entertained me bravely, but the best

Of her good pageant seemed its standers-by.

With insuppressive joy on every face! What says my ancient, famous, happy Cleves?

Val. Take the truth, lady—you are made for truth!

So think my friends: nor do they less deserve

The having you to take it, you shall think,

When you know all—nay, when you only know

How, on that day you recollect at Cleves,

When the poor acquiescing multitude Who thrust themselves with all their woes apart

Into unnoticed corners, that the few, Their means sufficed to muster trappings for,

Might fill the foreground, occupy your sight

With joyous faces fit to bear away And boast of as a sample of all Cleves

—How, when to daylight these crept out once more,

Clutching, unconscious, each his empty rags

Whence the scant coin, which had not half bought bread,

That morn he shook forth, counted piece by piece,

And, well-advisedly, on perfumes spent them

To burn, or flowers to strew, before your path

—How, when the golden flood of music and bliss

Ebb'd, as their moon retreated, and again

Left the sharp black-point rocks of misery bare

—Then I, their friend, had only to suggest

'Saw she the horror as she saw the pomp!'

And as one man they cried 'He speaks the truth—

Show her the horror! Take from our own mouths

Our wrongs and show them, she will see them too!'

—This they cried, lady ! I have brought the wrongs.

The D. Wrongs ? Cleves has wrongs —apparent now and thus ?

I thank you—in that paper ? Give it me !

Val. (There, Cleves ! ) In this !
(What did I promise, Cleves ? )

Our weavers, clothiers, spinners are reduced

Since . . . Oh, I crave your pardon ! I forget

I buy the privilege of this approach, And promptly would discharge my debt. I lay

This paper humbly at the Duchess' feet !

[Presenting GUIBERT's paper.

Gui. Stay ! for the present . . .

The D. Stay, sir ? I take aught That teaches me their wrongs with greater pride

Than this your Ducal circlet. Thank you, sir !

[The DUCHESS reads hastily ; then, turning to the Courtiers—

What have I done to you ? Your deed or mine

Was it, this crowning me ? I gave myself

No more a title to your homage, no, Than church-flowers, born this season, wrote the words

In the saint's-book that sanctified them first.

For such a flower, you plucked me !
well, you erred—

Well, 'twas a weed—remove the eye-sore quick !

But should you not remember it has lain

Steeped in the candles' glory, palely shrined,

Nearer God's Mother than most earthly things ?

—That if 't be faded 'tis with prayer's sole breath—

That the one day it boasted was God's day ?

Still, I do thank you ! Had you used respect

Here might I dwindle to my last white leaf,

Here lose life's latest freshness, which even yet

May yield some wandering insect rest and food.

So, fling me forth, and—all is best for all !

[After a pause.] Prince Berthold, who art Juliers' Duke, it seems—

The King's choice, and the Emperor's, . . . and the Pope's—

Be mine, too ! Take this People ! Tell not me

Of rescripts, precedents, authorities, —But take them, from a heart that yearns to give !

Find out their love,—I could not ; find their fear,—

I would not ; find their like,—I never shall,

Among the flowers !

Colombe of Ravestein

Thanks—God she is no longer Duchess here !

Val. [advancing to GUIBERT.] Sir Guibert,—knight, they call you—this of mine

Is the first step I ever set at court.

You dared make me your instrument, I find ;

For that, so sure as you and I are men,
We reckon to the utmost presently :

But as you are a courtier and I none, Your knowledge may instruct me. I,

already,

Have too far outraged, by my ignorance Of courtier-ways, this lady, to proceed

A second step and risk addressing her —I am degraded—you, let me address !

Out of her presence, all is plain enough
What I shall do—but in her presence,

too,
Surely there's something proper to be done !

[To the others.] You, gentles, tell me if I guess aright—

May I not strike this man to earth ?

The Courtiers. [as GUIBERT springs forward, withholding him.] Let go !

—The Clothiers' spokesman, Guibert ? Grace a churl ?

The D. [to VALENCE.] Oh, be acquainted with your party, sir !

He's of the oldest lineage Juliers boasts;
A lion crests him for a cognisance;
'Scorning to waver'—that's his 'scutcheon's word;

His office with the new Duke—probably The same in honour as with me: or
more,
By so much as this gallant turn deserves:

He's now, I dare say, of a thousand times

The rank and influence that remain
with her

Whose part you take! So, lest for taking it

You suffer . . .

Val. I may strike him then to earth?

Gui. [falling on his knee.] Great and dear lady, pardon me! Hear once!

Believe me and be merciful—be just!
I could not bring myself to give that paper

Without a keener pang than I dared meet —And so felt Clugnet here, and Maufroy here

—No one dared meet it. Protestation's cheap,—

But, if to die for you did any good, [To GAUCHELME.] Would not I die, sir?
Say your worst of me!

But it does no good, that's the mournful truth.

And since the hint of a resistance, even,
Would just precipitate, on you the first,
A speedier ruin—I shall not deny, Saving myself indubitable pain,
I thought to give you pleasure (who might say?)

By showing that your only subject found To carry the sad notice, was the man Precisely ignorant of its contents;
A nameless, mere provincial advocate;
One whom 'twas like you never saw before,

Never would see again. All has gone wrong;

But I meant right, God knows, and you, I trust!

The D. A nameless advocate, this gentleman?—

—(I pardon you, Sir Guibert!)

Gui. [rising, to VALENCE.]—Sir, and you?—

Val.—Rejoice that you are lightened of a load.

Now, you have only me to reckon with!
The D. One I have never seen, much less obliged?—

Val. Dare I speak, lady?

The D. Dare you! Heard you not I rule no longer?

Val. Lady, if your rule Were based alone on such a ground as these [Pointing to the Courtiers.

Could furnish you,—abjure it! They have hidden

A source of true dominion from your sight.

The D. You hear them—no such source is left . . .

Val. Hear Cleves! Whose haggard craftsmen rose to starve this day, Starve now, and will lie down at night to starve,

Sure of a like to-morrow—but as sure Of a most unlike morrow-after-that, Since end things must, end howsoever things may.

What curbs the brute-force instinct in its hour?

What makes—instead of rising, all as one,

And teaching fingers, so expert to wield Their tool, the broadsword's play or carbine's trick,

—What makes that there's an easier help, they think,

For you, whose name so few of them can spell,

Whose face scarce one in every hundred saw,—

You simply have to understand their wrongs,

And wrongs will vanish—so, still trades are plied,

And swords lie rusting, and myself stand here?

There is a vision in the heart of each Of justice, mercy, wisdom; tenderness To wrong and pain, and knowledge of its cure:

And these, embodied in a woman's form

That best transmits them, pure as first received, From God above her, to mankind below.

Will you derive your rule from such a ground,

Or rather hold it by the suffrage, say,
Of this man—thus—and this?

The D. [after a pause.] You come from Cleves.

How many are at Cleves of such a mind?

Val. [from his paper.] 'We, all the manufacturers of Cleves'—

The D. Or stay, sir—lest I seem too covetous—

Are you my subject? such as you describe

Am I to you, though to no other man?

Val. [from his paper.]—'Valence, ordained your Advocate at Cleves'—

The D. [replacing the coronet.] Then I remain Cleves' Duchess! Take you note, While Cleves but yields one subject of this stamp,

I stand her lady till she waves me off!
For her sake, all the Prince claims I withhold;

Laugh at each menace; and, his power defying,

Return his missive with its due contempt!

[Casting it away.

Gui. [picking it up.]—Which to the Prince I will deliver, Lady, [Note it down, Gauceime]—with your message too!

The D. I think the office is a subject's, sir!

—Either . . . how style you him?—my special guarder

The Marshal's—for who knows but violence

May follow the delivery!—Or, perhaps, My Chancellor's—for law may be to urge

On its receipt!—Or, even my Chamberlain's—

For I may violate established form!

[To VALENCE.] Sir,—for the half-hour till this service ends,

Will you become all these to me?

Val. [falling on his knee.] My Liege!

The D. Give me!

[The Courtiers present their badges of office.

[Putting them by.]—Whatever was their virtue once,

They need new consecration! [raising VALENCE.] Are you mine?

—I will be Duchess yet! [She retires.

The Courtiers. Our Duchess yet!

A glorious lady! Worthy love and dread!

I'll stand by her,—and I, what'er betide!

Gui. [to VALENCE.] Well done, well done, sir! I care not who knows,

You have done nobly, and I envy you—Tho' I am but unfairly used, I think:

For when one gets a place like this I hold,

One gets too the remark that its mere wages,

The pay and the preferment, make our prize.

Talk about zeal and faith apart from these,

We're laughed at—much would zeal and faith subsist

Without these also! Yet, let these be stopped,

Our wages discontinue,—then, indeed, Our zeal and faith, (we hear on every side,)

Are not released—having been pledged away

I wonder, with what zeal and faith in turn?

Hard money purchased me my place!

No, no—

I'm right, sir—but your wrong is better still,

If I had time and skill to argue it.

Therefore, I say, I'll serve you, how you please—

If you like,—fight you, as you seem to wish—

(The kinder of me that, in sober truth, I never dreamed I did you any harm) . . .

Gau. —Or, kinder still, you'll introduce, no doubt.

His merits to the Prince who's just at hand,
And let no hint drop he's made Chancellor, And Chamberlain, and Heaven knows what beside!

Clug. [to VALENCE.] You stare, young sir, and threaten! Let me say, That at your age, when first I came to court,

I was not much above a gentleman;

While now . . .

Val. —You are Head-Lackey?

With your office I have not yet been graced, sir!

Other Courtiers to Clug. Let him talk! Fidelity, disinterestedness,

Excuse so much! Men claimed my worship ever

Who, staunchly and steadfastly . . .

Enter ADOLF.

Adolf. The Prince arrives!

Courtiers. Ha? How?

Adolf. He leaves his guard a stage behind At Aix, and enters almost by himself.

First Court. The Prince! This foolish business puts all out!

Second Court. Let Gaucelme speak first!

Third Court. Better I began About the state of Juliers: should one say All's prosperous and inviting him?

Fourth Court. —Or rather

All's prostrate and imploring him!

Fifth Court. That's best!

Where's the Cleves' paper, by the way?

Fourth Court. [to VALENCE.] Sir—sir—If you'll but give that paper—trust it me, I'll warrant . . .

Fifth Court. Softly, sir—the Marshal's duty!

Clug. Has not the Chamberlain a hearing first

By virtue of his patent?

Gau. Patents?—Duties?

All that, my masters, must begin again! One word composes the whole controversy:

We're simply now—the Prince's!

The Others. Ay—the Prince's!

Enter SABYNE.

Sab. Adolf! Bid . . . Oh, no time for ceremony!

Where's whom our lady calls her only subject?

She needs him! Who is here the Duchess's?

Val. [starting from his reverie.] Most gratefully I follow to her feet!

ACT III

Afternoon. SCENE.—The Vestibule.

Enter PRINCE BERTHOLD and MELOCHIOR.

Berth. A thriving little burgh this Juliers looks.

[Half-apart.] Keep Juliers, and as good you kept Cologne:

Better try Aix, though!—

Mel. Please 't your Highness speak 't

Berth. [as before.] Aix, Cologne, Frankfurt,—Milan;—Rome!—

Mel. —The Grave.

—More weary seems your Highness, I remark,

Than sundry conquerors whose path I've watched

Through fire and blood to any prize they gain.

I could well wish you, for your proper sake,

Had met some shade of opposition here

—Found a blunt seneschal refuse unlock,

Or a scared usher lead your steps astray.

You must not look for next achievement's palm

So easily: this will hurt your conquering!

Berth. My next? Ay—as you say, my next and next!

Well, I am tired, that's truth, and moody too,

This quiet entrance-morning; listen why!

Our little burgh, now, Juliers—'tis indeed

One link, however insignificant,

Of the great chain by which I reach my hope,

—A link I must secure ; but otherwise, You'd wonder I esteemed it worth my grasp.

Just see what life is, with its shifts and turns !

It happens now—this very nook—to be A place that once . . . but a short while since, neither—

When I lived an ambiguous hanger-on Of foreign courts, and bore my claims
about,

Discarded by one kinsman, and the other

A poor priest merely,—then, I say, this
place

Shone my ambition's object ; to be Duke—

Seemed then, what to be Emperor seems
now.

My rights were far from being judged as plain

In those days as of late, I promise you :
And 'twas my day-dream, Lady Colombe here

Might e'en compound the matter, pity
me,

Be struck, say, with my chivalry and
grace

(I was a boy !)—bestow her hand at
length,

And make me Duke, in her right if not
mine.

Here am I, Duke confessed, at Juliers
now !

Hearken : if ever I be Emperor, Remind me what I felt and said to-day !

Mel. All this consoles a bookish man like me !

—And so will weariness cling to you !
Wrong,

Wrong ! Had you sought the Lady's court yourself,—

Faced the redoubtables composing it, Flattered this, threatened that man, bribed the other,— Pleaded, by writ and word and deed, your cause,—

Conquered a footing inch by painful inch,—

And, after long years' struggle, pounced
at last

On her for prize,—the right life had been lived,

And justice done to divers faculties Shut in that brow. Yourself were visible

As you stood victor, then ! whom now —(your pardon !)

I am forced narrowly to search and
see—

So are you hid by helps—this Pope, your uncle—

Your cousin, the other King ! You are a mind,—

They, body : too much of mere legs-and-arms

Obstructs the mind so ! Match these with their like :

Match mind with mind !
Berth. And where's your mind to match ?

They show me legs-and-arms to cope withal !

I'd subjugate this city—where's its
mind ?

[The Courtiers enter slowly.

Mel. Got out of sight when you came troops and all !

And in its stead, here greets you flesh-and-blood—

A smug oeconomy of both, this first !
[As CLUGNET bows obsequiously.

Well done, gout, all considered !—I may go ?

Berth. Help me receive them !
Mel. Oh, they just will say

What yesterday at Aix their fellows
said,—

At Treves, the day before !—Sir Prince,
my friend,

Why do you let your life slip thus ?— Meantime,

I have my little Juliers to achieve—
The understanding this tough Platonist.

Your holy uncle disinterred, Amelius—Lend me a company of horse and foot.

To help me through his tractate—gain my Duchy !

Berth. And Empire, after that is gained, will be— ?

Mel. To help me through your uncle's comment, Prince ! [Goes

Berth. Ah ? Well ! he o'er-refines—the scholar's fault !

How do I let my life slip ? Say, this
life,

I lead now, differs from the common
life

Of other men in mere degree, not kind, Of joys and griefs,—still there is such degree—

Mere largeness in a life is something,
sure,—

Enough to care about and struggle for,
In this world: for this world, the size of things;

The sort of things, for that to come, no
doubt!

A great is better than a little aim:

And when I wooed Priscilla's rosy
mouth

And failed so, under that grey convent-
wall,

Was I more happy than I should be
now

[By this time, the Courtiers are ranged before him.]

If failing of my Empire? Not a whit!

—Here comes the mind, it once had tasked me sore

To baffle, but for my advantages!

All's best as 'tis—these scholars talk and talk!

[Sits himself.]

The Courtiers. Welcome our Prince to Juliers!—to his Heritage!

Our dutifullest service proffer we!

Clug. I, please your Highness, having exercised

The function of Grand Chamberlain at
court,

With much acceptance, as men testify...

Berth. I cannot greatly thank you, gentlemen!

The Pope declares my claim to the Duchy founded

On strictest justice; if you concede it, therefore,

I do not wonder: and the kings my
friends

Protesting they will see such claim enforced,

You easily may offer to assist us.

But there's a slight discretionary
power

To serve me in the matter, you've had long.

Though late you use it. This is well to
say—

But could you not have said it months
ago?

I'm not denied my own Duke's trun-cheon, true—

'Tis flung me—I stoop down, and from the ground

Pick it, with all you placid standers-
by—

And now I have it, gems and mire at
once,

Grace go with it to my soiled hands, you
say!

Gui. (By Paul, the Advocate our doughty friend

Cuts the best figure!)

Gau. If our ignorance May have offended, sure our loyalty...

Berth. Loyalty? Yours?—Oh—of yourselves you speak!

—I mean the Duchess all this time, I
hope!

And since I have been forced repeat my claims

As if they never had been made before,
As I began, so must I end, it seems.

The formal answer to the grave demand!

What says the lady?

Courtiers. [One to another.] First Court. Marshal! Second Court.

Orator!

Gui. A variation of our mistress'
way!

Wipe off his boots' dust, Clugnet!— that, he waits!

First Court. Your place!

Second Court. Just now it was your
own!

Gui. The devil's!

Berth. [to GUIBERT.] Come forward, friend—you with the paper,
there!

Is Juliers the first city I've obtained?

By this time, I may boast proficiency

In each decorum of the circumstance!

Give it me as she gave it—the petition (Demand, you style it)—what's required, in brief?

What title's reservation, appanage's Allowance?—I heard all at Treves, last week!

Gau. [to GUIBERT.] 'Give it him as she gave it!'

Gui. And why not ?
 [To BERTHOLD.] The lady crushed your summons thus together, And bade me, with the very greatest scorn
 So fair a frame could hold, inform you . . .
Courtiers. Stop—Idiot !

Gui. —Inform you she denied your
 claim,

Defied yourself ! (I tread upon his heel, The blustering Advocate !)

Berth. By heaven and earth !
 Dare you jest, sir ?

Gui. Did they at Treves, last week ?

Berth. [starting up.] Why then, I look much bolder than I knew,

And you prove better actors than I
 thought,

Since, as I live, I took you as you entered

For just so many dearest friends of mine, Fled from the sinking to the rising

power
 —The sneaking'st crew, in short, I e'er despised !

Whereas, I am alone here for the moment,

With every soldier left behind at Aix !
 Silence ? That means the worst—I thought as much !

 What follows next then ?

Courtiers. Gracious Prince—he raves !

Gui. He asked the truth and why not get the truth ?

Berth. Am I a prisoner ? Speak, will somebody ?

—But why stand paltering with imbeciles ?

Let me see-her, or . . .

Gui. Her, without her leave, Shall no one see—she's Duchess yet !

Courtiers. [Footsteps without, as they are disputing.] Good chance !

She's here—the Lady Colombe's self !
Berth. 'Tis well !

[Aside.] Array a handful thus against my world ?

Not ill done, truly ! Were not this a
 mind

To match one's mind with ? Colombe !
 —Let us wait !

I failed so, under that grey convent-wall !

She comes !
Gui. The Duchess ! strangers, range yourselves !

[As the DUCHESS enters in conversation with VALENCE, BERTHOLD and the Courtiers fall back a little.

The D. Presagefully it beats, presagefully,

My heart: the right is Berthold's and
 not mine !

Val. Grant that he has the right, dare I mistrust

Your power to acquiesce so patiently As you believe, in such a dream-like
 change

Of fortune—change abrupt, profound, complete ?

The D. Ah, the first bitterness is over
 now !

Bitter I may have felt it to confront The truth, and ascertain those natures' value

I had so counted on—that was a pang—
 But I did bear it, and the worst is over :
 Let the Prince take them !

Val. —And take Juliers too ?
 —Your People without crosses, wands, and chains—

Only with hearts ?
The D. There I feel guilty, sir !

I cannot give up what I never had :
 For these I ruled, not them—these stood between.

Shall I confess, sir ? I have heard by stealth

Of Berthold from the first ; more news
 and more :

Closer and closer swam the thundercloud,

But I was safely housed with these, I
 knew !

At times, when to the casement I would
 turn,

At a bird's passage or a flower-trail's play, I caught the storm's red glimpses on its edge—

Yet I was sure some one of all these
 friends

Would interpose : I followed the bird's flight,

Or plucked the flower—some one would interpose !

Val. Not one thought on the People —and Cleves there

The D. So, sadly conscious my real sway was missed,
Its shadow goes without so much
regret :

Else could I not again thus calmly bid
you,

Answer Prince Berthold !

Val. Then you acquiesce ?

The D. Remember over whom it was I ruled !

Gus. [stepping forward.] Prince Berthold, yonder, craves an audience,
Lady !

The D. [to VALENCE.] I only have to turn, and I shall face Prince Berthold ! Oh, my very heart is sick !

It is the daughter of a line of Dukes,
This scornful insolent adventurer Will bid depart from my dead father's halls !

I shall not answer him—dispute with
him—

But, as he bids, depart ! Prevent it,
sir !

Sir—but a mere day's respite ! Urge for me

—What I shall call to mind I should have urged

When time's gone by—'twill all be mine, you urge !

A day—an hour—that I myself may lay

My rule down ! 'Tis too sudden—must not be !

The world's to hear of it ! Once done
—for ever !

How will it read, sir ? How be sung
about ?

Prevent it !

Berth. [approaching.] Your frank indignation, Lady, Cannot escape me ! Overbold I seem—

But somewhat should be pardoned my surprise,

At this reception,—this defiance, rather.
And if, for their and your sakes, I rejoice

Your virtues could inspire a trusty few To make such gallant stand in your behalf,

I cannot but be sorry, for my own,
Your friends should force me to retrace my steps,

Since I no longer am permitted speak After the pleasant peaceful course prescribed

No less by courtesy than relationship Which, if you once forgot, I still remember.

But never must attack pass unrepelled.
Suffer, that through you, I demand of
these,

Who controverts my claim to Juliers ?
The D. —Me,

You say, you do not speak to—
Berth. Of your subjects

I ask, then : whom do you accredit ?
Where

Stand those should answer ?

Val. [advancing.] The Lady is alone !

Berth. Alone, and thus ? So weak and yet so bold ?

Val. I said she was alone—
Berth. —And weak, I said.

Val. When is man strong until he feels alone ?

It was some lonely strength at first, be
sure,

Created organs, such as those you seek,
By which to give its varied purpose
shape—

And, naming the selected ministrants, Took sword, and shield, and sceptre,— each, a man !

That strength performed its work and passed its way :

You see our Lady : there, the old shapes stand !

—A Marshal, Chamberlain, and Chancellor—

'Be helped their way, into their death put life

And find advantage !'—so you counsel
us.

But let strength feel alone, seek help
itself,—

And, as the inland-hatched sea-creature hunts

The sea's breast out,—as, littered 'mid the waves,

The desert-brute makes for the desert's joy,

So turns our lady to her true resource,
Passing o'er hollow fictions, worn-out types,

—So, I am first her instinct fastens on!
And prompt I say, as clear as heart can

The People will not have you; nor shall have!

It is not merely I shall go bring Cleves
And fight you to the last,—though that does much,

And men and children,—ay, and women too,

Fighting for home, are rather to be feared

Than mercenaries fighting for their pay—

But, say you beat us, since such things have been,

And, where this Juliers laughed, you set your foot

Upon a steaming bloody plash—what then?

Stand you the more our Lord that there you stand?

Lord it o'er troops whose force you concentrate,

A pillared flame whereto all ardours tend—

Lord it 'mid priests whose schemes you amplify,

A cloud of smoke 'neath which all shadows brood—

But never, in this gentle spot of earth,
Can you become our Colombe, our play-queen,

For whom, to furnish lilies for her hair, We'd pour our veins forth to enrich the soil!

—Our conqueror? Yes!—Our despot? Yes!—Our Duke?

Know yourself, know us!

Berth. [who has been in thought.]

Know your lady, also!

[Very deferentially.]—To whom I needs must exculpate myself

From having made a rash demand, at least.

Wherefore to you, sir, who appear to be Her chief adviser, I submit my claims,

[Giving papers.]

But, this step taken, take no further step,
Until the Duchess shall pronounce their worth.

Here be our meeting-place; at night, its time:

Till when I humbly take the lady's leave!

[He withdraws. As the DUCHESS turns to VALENCE, the Courtiers interchange glances and come forward a little.]

First Court. So, this was their device!

Second Court. No bad device!

Third Court. You'd say they love each other, Guibert's friend From Cleves, and she, the Duchess!

Fourth Court. —And moreover,
That all Prince Berthold comes for, is to help

Their loves!

Fifth Court. Pray, Guibert, what is next to do?

Gui. [advancing.] I laid my office at the Duchess' foot—

Others. And I—and I—and I!

The D. I took them, sirs!

Gui. [Apart to VALENCE.] And now, sir, I am simple knight again—Guibert, of the great ancient house, as yet

That never bore affront; whate'er your birth,—

As things stand now, I recognize yourself

(If you'll accept experience of some date)

As like to be the leading man o' the time,

Therefore as much above me now, as I Seemed above you this morning. Then.

I offered

To fight you: will you be as generous
And now fight me?

Val. Ask when my life is mine!

Gui. ('Tis hers now!)

Clug. [Apart to VALENCE, as Guibert turns from him.] You, sir, have insulted me

Grossly,—will grant me, too, the self-same favour You've granted him, just now, I make no question?

Val. I promise you, as him, sir !
Clug. Do you so ?
Handsomely said ! I hold you to it, sir !
 You'll get me reinstated in my office
 As you will Guibert !

The D. I would be alone !

[They begin to retire slowly : as VALENCE is about to follow—

Alone sir—only with my heart,—you stay !

Gau. You hear that ? Ah, light breaks upon me ! Cleves—
 It was at Cleves some man harangued us all—

With great effect,—so those who listened said, My thoughts being busy elsewhere : was this he ?

Guibert,—your strange, disinterested man !

Your uncorrupted, if uncourtly friend !
 The modest worth you mean to patronize !

He cares about no Duchesses, not he—His sole contest is with the wrongs of Cleves !

What, Guibert ? What, it breaks on you at last ?

Gui. Would this hall's floor were a mine's roof !—I'd back And in her very face . . .

Gau. Apply the match That fired the train,—and where would you be, pray ?

Gui. With him !

Gau. Stand, rather, safe outside with me !
 The mine's charged—shall I furnish you the match

And place you properly ?—To the antechamber !

Gui. Can you ?

Gau. Try me ! — Your friend's in fortune !

Gui. Quick—
 To the antechamber !—He is pale with bliss !

Gau. No wonder ! Mark her eyes !

Gui. To the antechamber

[The Courtiers retire.

The D. Sir, could you know all you have done for me

You were content ! You spoke, and I am saved !

Val. Be not too sanguine, Lady !
 Ere you dream,
 That transient flush of generosity Fades off, perchance ! The man, beside, is gone,—

Whom we might bend ; but see, the papers here—

Inalterably his requirement stays,
 And cold hard words have we to deal with now.

In that large eye there seemed a latent pride,

To self-denal not incompetent,
 But very like to hold itself dispensed From such a grace : however, let us hope !

He is a noble spirit in noble form.
 I wish he less had bent that brow to smile

As with the fancy how he could subject

Himself upon occasion to—himself !
 From rudeness, violence, you rest secure ;

But do not think your Duchy rescued yet !

The D. You,—who have opened a new world to me,
 Will never take the faded language up Of that I leave ? My Duchy—keeping it,

Or losing it—is that my sole world now ?

Val. Ill have I spoken if you thence despise

Juliers ; although the lowest, on true grounds,

Be worth more than the highest rule, on false :

Aspire to rule, on the true grounds !

The D. Nay, hear—

False, I will never—rash, I would not be !

This is indeed my Birthday—soul and body,

Its hours have done on me the work of years.

You hold the requisition : ponder it !
 If I have right, my duty's plain : if he—

Say so, nor ever change a tone of voice !

At night you meet the Prince; meet me at eve:

Till when, farewell! This discomposes
you?

Believe in your own nature, and its force

Of renovating mine. I take my stand Only as under me the earth is firm:

So, prove the first step stable, all will prove!

That first, I choose—[laying her hand on his,]—the next to take, choose you! [She withdraws.]

Val. [after a pause.] What drew down this on me? On me, dead
once,

She thus bids live,—since all I hitherto Thought dead in me, youth's ardours and emprise,

Burst into life before her, as she bids Who needs them! Whither will this reach, where end?

Her hand's print burns on mine . . .
Yet she's above—

So very far above me! All's too
plain:

I served her when the others sank
away,

And she rewards me as such souls
reward—

The changed voice, the suffusion of the
cheek,

The eye's acceptance, the expressive
hand,

—Reward, that's little, in her generous
thought,

Though all to me . . .

I cannot so disclaim Heaven's gift, nor call it other than it is!

She loves me!

[Looking at the Prince's papers.]— Which love, these, perchance, forbid.

Can I decide against myself—pronounce

She is the Duchess and no mate for me?

—Cleves, help me! Teach me,—every haggard face,—

To sorrow and endure! I will do
right

Whatever be the issue. Help me, Cleves!

ACT IV

Evening.—SCENE. An Antechamber.

Enter the Courtiers.

Mau. Now then, that we may speak —how spring this mine?

Gau. Is Guibert ready for its match?
He cools!

Not so friend Valence with the Duchess
there!

'Stay, Valence! are not you my better
self?'

And her cheek mantled—

Gui. Well, she loves him, sir:

And more,—since you will have it I grow cool,—

She's right: he's worth it.

Gau. For his deeds to-day?

Say so!

Gui. What should I say beside?

Gau. Not this—

For friendship's sake leave this for me to say—

That we're the dupes of an egregious cheat!

This plain, unpractised suitor, who found way

To the Duchess through the merest die's turn-up—

A year ago, had seen her and been seen, Loved and been loved.

Gui. Impossible!

Gau. —Nor say,

How sly and exquisite a trick, more-
over,

Was this which—taking not their stand on facts

Boldly, for that had been endurable, But, worming on their way by craft, they choose Resort to, rather,—and which you and

we,
Sheep-like, assist them in the playing

off!

The Duchess thus parades him as preferred,

Not on the honest ground of preference, Seeing first, liking more, and there an

end—

But as we all had started equally,

And at the close of a fair race he proved
The only valiant, sage, and loyal man.

Herself, too, with the pretty fits and starts,—

The careless, winning, candid ignorance Of what the Prince might challenge or forego—

She had a hero in reserve ! What risk Ran she ? This deferential easy Prince Who brings his claims for her to ratify —He's just her puppet for the nonce !
You'll see,—

Valence pronounces, as is equitable,
Against him : off goes the confederate :
As equitably, Valence takes her hand !

The Chancellor. You run too fast : her hand, no subject takes.

Do not our archives hold her father's
will ?

That will provides against such accident,—

And gives next heir, Prince Berthold, the reversion

Of Juliers, which she forfeits, wedding
so.

Gau. I know that, well as you,—but does the Prince ?

Knows Berthold, think you, that this plan, he helps,

For Valence's ennoblement,—would end, If crowned with the success which seems its due,

In making him the very thing he plays,
The actual Duke of Juliers ? All agree That Colombe's title waived or set aside, He is next heir.

The Chan. Incontrovertibly.

Gau. Guibert, your match, now, to the train !

Gui. Enough !

I'm with you : selfishness is best again !
I thought of turning honest—what a dream !

Let's wake now !

Gau. Selfish, friend, you never were :

'Twas but a series of revenges taken On your unselfishness for prospering ill.
But now that you're grown wiser, what's our course ?

Gui. —Wait, I suppose, till Valence weds our lady,
And then, if we must needs revenge our-

Apprise the Prince.

Gau. —The Prince, ere then dismissed

With thanks for playing his mock part so well ?

Tell the Prince now, sir ! Ay, this very
night—

Ere he accepts his dole and goes his
way,

Explain how such a marriage makes him
Duke,

Then trust his gratitude for the surprise !

Gui. —Our lady wedding Valence all
the same

As if the penalty were undisclosed !
Good ! If she loves, she'll not disown her love,

Throw Valence up. I wonder you see
that.

Gau. The shame of it—the suddenness and shame !

Within her, the inclining heart—with-
out,

A terrible array of witnesses—And Valence by, to keep her to her
word,

With Berthold's indignation or disgust !
We'll try it !—Not that we can venture
much.

Her confidence we've lost for ever.— Berthold's

Is all to gain !

Gui. To-night, then, venture we !
Yet—if lost confidence might be renewed ?

Gau. Never in noble natures ! With the base ones,—

Twist off the crab's claw, wait a smarting-while,

And something grows and grows and gets to be

A mimic of the lost joint, just so like As keeps in mind it never, never will Replace its predecessor ! Crabs do
that :

But lop the lion's foot—and . . .

Gui. To the Prince !

Gau. [Aside.] And come what will to the lion's foot, I pay you,

My cat's-paw, as I long have yearned to pay !

[Aloud.] Footsteps ! Himself ! 'Tis Valence breaks on us,

Exulting that their scheme succeeds.

We'll hence—

And perfect ours! Consult the archives, first—

Then, fortified with knowledge, seek the Hall!

Clug. [to GAUCHELME as they retire.]

You have not smiled so since your father died!

As they retire, enter VALENCE with papers.

Val. So must it be! I have examined these

With scarce a palpitating heart—so calm,

Keeping her image almost wholly off. Setting upon myself determined watch, Repelling to the uttermost his claims, And the result is . . . all men would pronounce

And not I, only, the result to be— Berthold is heir; she has no shade of right

To the distinction which divided us, But, suffered to rule first, I know not why,

Her rule connived at by those Kings and Popes,

To serve some devil's-purpose,—now 'tis gained,

Whate'er it was, the rule expires as well.

—Valence, this rapture . . . selfish can it be?

Eject it from your heart, her home!— It stays!

Ah, the brave world that opens on us both!

—Do my poor townsmen so esteem it? Cleves,—

I need not your pale faces! This, reward

For service done to you? Too horrible! I never served you: 'twas myself I served!

Nay, served not—rather saved from punishment

Which, had I failed you then, would plague me now!

My life continues yours, and your life, mine.

But if, to take God's gift, I swerve no step—

Cleves!—if I breathe no prayer for it— if she,

[Footsteps without.]

Colombe, that comes now, freely gives herself—

Will Cleves require, that, turning thus to her,

I . . .

Enter PRINCE BERTHOLD.

Pardon, sir—I did not look for you Till night, in the Hall; nor have as yet declared

My judgment to the lady.

Berth. So I hoped.

Val. And yet I scarcely know why that should check

The frank disclosure of it first to you— What her right seems, and what, in consequence,

She will decide on—

Berth. That I need not ask.

Val. You need not: I have proved the lady's mind—

And, justice being to do, dare act for her.

Berth. Doubtless she has a very noble mind.

Val. Oh, never fear but she'll in each conjuncture

Bear herself bravely! she no whit depends

On circumstance; as she adorns a throne,

She had adorned . . .

Berth. A cottage—in what book Have I read that, of every queen that lived?

A throne? You have not been instructed, sure,

To forestall my request?

Val. 'Tis granted, sir—

My heart instructs me. I have scrutinized

Your claims . . .

Berth. Ah—claims, you mean, at first preferred!

I come, before the hour appointed me, To pray you let those claims at present rest,

In favour of a new and stronger one.

Val. You shall not need a stronger: on the part

Of the lady, all you offer I accept, Since one clear right suffices: yours is clear.

Propose!

Berth. I offer her my hand.

Val. Your hand?

Berth. A Duke's, yourself say; and,
at no far time, Something here whispers me—the Emperor's.

The lady's mind is noble; which induced

This seizure of occasion ere my claims Were—settled, let us amicably say!

Val. Your hand!

Berth. (He will fall down and kiss it next!)

Sir, this astonishment's too flattering, Nor must you hold your mistress' worth so cheap.

Enhance it, rather,—urge that blood is
blood—

The daughter of the Burgraves, Land-graves, Markgraves, Remains their daughter; I shall scarce gainsay!

Elsewhere or here, the lady needs must
rule:

Like the imperial crown's great chryso-prase,

They talk of—somewhat out of keeping
there,

And yet no jewel for a meaner cap.

Val. You wed the Duchess?

Berth. Cry you mercy, friend!

Will the match influence many fortunes
here?

A natural solicitude enough!

Be certain, no bad chance it proves for
you!

However high you take your present
stand,

There's prospect of a higher still remove—

For Juliers will not be my resting-place, And, when I have to choose a substitute

To rule the little burgh, I'll think of you.
You need not give your mates a character!

And yet I doubt your fitness to supplant The grey smooth Chamberlain: he'd hesitate

A doubt his lady could demean herself
So low as to accept me. Courage, sir!
I like your method better: feeling's play Is franker much, and flatters me beside.

Val. I am to say, you love her?

Berth. Say that too!

Love has no great concernment, thinks
the world,

With a Duke's marriage. How go precedents

In Juliers' story—how use Juliers' Dukes?

I see you have them here in goodly
row;

You must be Luitpold,—ay, a stalwart sire!

—Say, I have been arrested suddenly In my ambition's course, its rocky
course,

By this sweet flower: I fain would gather it

And then proceed—so say and speedily —(Nor stand there like Duke Luitpold's brazen self!)

Enough, sir: you possess my mind, I
think.

This is my claim, the others being withdrawn,

And to this be it that, in the Hall to-
night,

Your lady's answer comes; till when,
farewell!

[He retires.]

Val. [after a pause.] The heavens and earth stay as they were; my
heart

Beats as it beat: the truth remains the
truth!

What falls away, then, if not faith in
her?

Was it my faith, that she could estimate

Love's value,—and, such faith still guiding me,

Dare I now test her?—or grew faith so
strong

Solely because no power of test was
mine?

Enter the DUCHESS.

The D. My fate, sir! Ah, you turn away: all's over!

But you are sorry for me? be not so!
What I might have become, and never
was,

Regret with me ; what I have merely
been,

Rejoice I am no longer ; what I seem Beginning now, in my new state, to be, Hope that I am,—for, once my rights proved void,

This heavy roof seems easy to exchange For the blue sky outside—my lot hence-
forth !

Val. And what a lot is Berthold's !

The D. How of him ?

Val. He gathers earth's whole good into his arms,

Standing, as man now, stately, strong and wise—

Marching to fortune, not surprised by
her.

One great aim, like a guiding-star,
above—

Which tasks strength, wisdom, stateli-ness, to lift

His manhood to the height that takes the prize ;

A prize not near—lest overlooking earth He rashly spring to seize it—nor remote,

So that he rest upon his path content :
But day by day, while shimmering grows shine,

And the faint circlet prophesies the orb,
He sees so much as, just evolving these,
The stateliness, the wisdom and the
strength,

To due completion, will suffice this life,
And lead him at his grandest to the grave.

After this star, out of a night he springs ; A beggar's cradle for the throne of thrones

He quits ; so, mounting, feels each step he mounts,

Nor, as from each to each exultingly
He passes, overleaps one grade of joy.
This, for his own good :—with the world, each gift

Of God and man,—reality, tradition, Fancy and fact—so well environ him,
That as a mystic panoply they serve—
Of force, untenanted, to awe mankind, And work his purpose out with half the
world,

While he, their master, dexterously
slipt

From such encumbrance, is meantime employed

With his own prowess on the other half.
Thus shall he prosper, every day's success

Adding, to what is he, a solid strength—
An airy might to what encircles him, Till at the last, so life's routine lends
help,

That as the Emperor only breathes and moves,

His shadow shall be watched, his step or stalk

Become a comfort or a portent, how He trails his ermine take significance,—

Till even his power shall cease to be most power,

And men shall dread his weakness more, nor dare

Peril their earth its bravest, first and
best,

Its typified invincibility.

Thus shall he go on, greatening, till he ends—

The man of men, the spirit of all flesh,
The fiery centre of an earthy world !

The D. Some such a fortune I had dreamed should rise

Out of my own—that is, above my power

Seemed other, greater potencies to stretch—

Val. For you ?

The D. It was not I moved there, I think ;

But one I could,—though constantly
beside,

And aye approaching,—still keep distant from,

And so adore. 'Twas a man moved
there !

Val. Who ?

The D. I felt the spirit, never saw the
face.

Val. See it ! 'Tis Berthold's ! He enables you

To realize your vision.

The D. Berthold ?

Val. Duke—Emperor to be : he proffers you his
hand.

The D. Generous and princely !

Val. He is all of this

- The D.* Thanks, Berthold, for my father's sake! no hand Degrades me!
- Val.* You accept the proffered hand?
- The D.* That he should love me!
- Val.* 'Loved' I did not say!
- Had that been—love might so incline the Prince
To the world's good, the world that's at his foot,—
I do not know, this moment, I should dare Desire that you refused the world—and Cleves—
The sacrifice he asks.
- The D.* Not love me, sir?
- Val.* He scarce affirmed it.
- The D.* May not deeds affirm?
- Val.* What does he? . . . Yes, yes, very much he does!
- All the shame saved, he thinks, and sorrow saved—Immitigable sorrow, so he thinks,— Sorrow that's deeper than we dream, perchance!
- The D.* Is not this love?
- Val.* So very much he does!
- For look, you can descend now gracefully:
All doubts are banished, that the world might have,
Or worst, the doubts yourself, in after-
time,
May call up of your heart's sincereness
now.
To such, reply, 'I could have kept my
rule—
Increased it to the utmost of my dreams—
Yet I abjured it!' This, he does for you:
It is munificently much!
- The D.* Still 'much'!
- But why is it not love, sir? Answer
me!
- Val.* Because not one of Berthold's words and looks Had gone with love's presentment of a flower
To the beloved: because bold confidence,
Open superiority, free pride—Love owns not, yet were all that Berthold owned:
- Because where reason, even, finds no flaw, Unnervingly a lover's instinct may.
- The D.* You reason, then, and doubt?
- Val.* I love, and know.
- The D.* You love?—How strange!
I never cast a thought On that! Just see our selfishness!
you seemed So much my own . . . I had no ground—
and yet,
I never dreamed another might divide My power with you, much less exceed it.
- Val.* Lady,
I am yours wholly.
- The D.* Oh, no, no, not mine!
'Tis not the same now, never more can
be!
- Your first love, doubtless! Well, what's gone from me?
- What have I lost in you?
- Val.* My heart replies—No loss there! So, to Berthold back
again!
This offer of his hand, he bids me
make—
Its obvious magnitude is well to weigh.
- The D.* She's . . . yes, she must be very fair for you!
- Val.* I am a simple Advocate of Cleves.
- The D.* You! With the heart and brain that so helped me, I fancied them exclusively my own,
Yet find are subject to a stronger sway!
She must be . . . tell me, is she very fair?
- Val.* Most fair, beyond conception or belief!
- The D.* Black eyes?—no matter!
Colombe, the world leads Its life without you, whom your friends professed
The only woman—see how true they spoke!
One lived this while, who never saw
your face,
Nor heard your voice—unless . . . Is she from Cleves?
- Val.* Cleves knows her well!
- The D.* Ah—just a fancy, now!
When you poured forth the wrongs of Cleves,—I said,

—Thought, that is, afterward . . .

Val. You thought of me ?

The D. Of whom else ? Only such great cause, I thought, For such effect : see what true love can do !

Cleves is his love !—I almost fear to ask . . . And will not. This is idling : to our work !

Admit before the Prince, without reserve,

My claims misgrounded ; then may follow better

. . . When you poured out Cleves' wrongs impetuously,

Was she in your mind ?

Val. All done was done for her —To humble me !

The D. She will be proud at least !

Val. She ?

The D. When you tell her.

Val. That will never be.

The D. How—are there sweeter things you hope to tell ?

No, sir ! You counselled me,—I counsel you

In the one point I—any woman—can ! Your worth, the first thing ; let her own come next—

Say what you did through her, and she through you—

The praises of her beauty afterward ! Will you ?

Val. I dare not.

The D. Dare not .

Val. She I love

Suspects not such a love in me.

The D. You jest !

Val. The lady is above me and away !

Not only the brave form, and the bright mind,

And the great heart, combine to press me low—

But all the world calls rank divides us. The D. Rank ?

Now grant me patience ! Here's a man declares

Oracularly in another's case—

Sees the true value and the false, for them—

Nay, bids them see it, and they straight do see !

You called my court's love worthless—so it turned :

I threw away as dross my heap of wealth,

And here you stickle for a piece or two ! First—has she seen you ?

Val. Yes.

The D. She loves you, then.

Val. One flash of hope burst ; then succeeded night :

And all's at darkest now. Impossible !

The D. We'll try : you are—so to speak—my subject yet ?

Val. As ever—to the death !

The D. Obey me, then !

Val. I must.

The D. Approach her, and . . . No ! First of all

Get more assurance. ' My instructress,' say,

' Was great, descended from a line of

And even fair '—(wait why I say this folly)—

' She said, of all men, none for eloquence,

Courage, and (what cast even these to shade)

The heart they sprung from,—none deserved like him

Who saved her at her need : if she said this,

What should not one I love, say ? '

Val. Heaven—this hope—Oh, lady, you are filling me with fire !

The D. Say this !—nor think I bid you cast aside

One touch of all the awe and reverence ! Nay—make her proud for once to heart's content

That all this wealth of heart and soul's her own !

Think you are all of this,—and, thinking it,

. . . (Obey !)

Val. I cannot choose.

The D. Then, kneel to her !

[VALENCE sinks on his knee.

I dream !

Val. Have mercy ! Yours, unto the death,—

I have obeyed. Despise, and let me die. The D. Alas, sir, is it to be ever thus ?

Even with you as with the world? I know This morning's service was no vulgar deed Whose motive, once it dares avow itself, Explains all done and infinitely more,
 So, takes the shelter of a nobler cause.
 Your service named its true source,—loyalty!
 The rest's unsaid again. The Duchess bids you, Rise, sir! The Prince's words were in debate.
Val. [rising.] Rise? Truth, as ever, Lady, comes from you!
 I should rise—I who spoke for Cleves, can speak
 For Man—yet tremble now, who stood firm then!
 I laughed—for 'twas past tears—that Cleves should starve.
 With all hearts beating loud the infamy,
 And no tongue daring trust as much to air!
 Yet here, where all hearts speak, shall I be mute?
 Oh Lady, for your own sake look on me!
 On all I am, and have, and do—heart, brain, Body and soul,—this Valence and his gifts!
 I was proud once—I saw you—and they sank,
 So that each magnified a thousand times Were nothing to you—but such nothingness.
 Would a crown gild it, or a sceptre prop, A treasure speed, a laurel-wreath enhance?
 What is my own desert? But should your love Have . . . there's no language helps here . . . singled me,— Then—Oh, that wild word 'then!'—be just to love, In generosity its attribute!
 Love, since you pleased to love! All's cleared—a stage For trial of the question kept so long;
 Judge you—Is Love or Vanity the best?

You, solve it for the world's sake—you, speak first What all will shout one day—you, vindicate Our earth and be its angel! All is said.
 Lady, I offer nothing—I am yours,
 But for the cause' sake, look on me and him And speak!
The D. I have received the Prince's message: Say, I prepare my answer!
Val. Take me, Cleves!
[He withdraws.]
The D. Mournful—that nothing's what it calls itself!
 Devotion, zeal, faith, loyalty—mere love!
 And, love in question, what may Berthold's be?
 I did ill to mistrust the world so soon—Already was this Berthold at my side.
 The valley-level has its hawks, no doubt;
 May not the rock-top have its eagles, too?
 Yet Valence . . . let me see his rival then!

ACT V

Night.—SCENE. The Hall.

Enter BERTHOLD and MELCHIOR.

Mel. And here you wait the matter's issue?

Berth. Here.

Mel. I don't regret I shut Amelius, then.

But tell me, on this grand disclosure,—how Behaved our spokesman with the forehead?

Berth. Oh,

Turned out no better than the foreheadless—

Was dazzled not so very soon, that's all!

For my part, this is scarce the hasty, showy,

Chivalrous measure you give me credit of.

Perhaps I had a fancy,—but 'tis gone.

—Let her commence the unfriended innocent,
And carry wrongs about from court to court ?

No, truly ! The least shake of fortune's sand,

—My uncle-Pope chokes in a coughing-
fit,

King Philip takes a fancy to blue eyes,— And wondrously her claims would brighten up !

Forth comes a new gloss on the ancient
law,

O'er-looked provisoes, past o'er premises,

Follow in plenty. No : 'tis the safer step.
The hour beneath the convent-wall is
lost :

Juliers and she, once mine, are ever mine.

Mel. Which is to say, you, losing heart already,

Elude the adventure !

Berth. Not so—or, if so—

Why not confess at once, that I advise None of our kingly craft and guild just
now

To lay, one moment, down their privilege

With the notion they can any time at pleasure

Retake it ? that may turn out hazardous !

We seem, in Europe, pretty well at end O' the night, with our great masque :

those favoured few

Who keep the chamber's top, and honour's chance

Of the early evening, may retain their
place

And figure as they list till out of breath.
But it is growing late ; and I observe

A dim grim kind of tipstaves at the doorway

Not only bar new-comers entering now, But caution those who left, for any
cause,

And would return, that morning draws too near ;

The ball must die off, shut itself up.
We—

I think, may dance lights out and sunshine in,

And sleep off headache on our frippery :

But friend the other, who cunningly stole out,

And, after breathing the fresh air out-
side,

Means to re-enter with a new costume,
Will be advised go back to bed, I fear.

I stick to privilege, on second thoughts !

Mel. Yes—you evade the adventure !

—And, beside,

Give yourself out for colder than you
are.

—King Philip, only, notes the lady's
eyes ?

Don't they come in for somewhat of the motive

With you too ?

Berth. Yes—no : I am past that
now !

Gone 'tis : I cannot shut my eyes to
fact.

Of course, I might by forethought and contrivance

Reason myself into a rapture. Gone !
And something better come instead, no
doubt.

Mel. So be it ! Yet, all the same, proceed my way,

Though to your end ; so shall you prosper best.

The lady,—to be won for selfish ends,— Will be won easier my unselfish . . .

call it,

Romantic way.

Berth. Won easier ?

Mel. Will not she ?

Berth. There I profess humility without bound !

Ill cannot speed—not I—the Emperor !

Mel. And I should think the Emperor best waived,

From your description of her mood and
way !

You could look, if it pleased you, into hearts ;

But are too indolent and fond of watching

Your own—you know that, for you study it.

Berth. Had you but seen the orator her friend,

So bold and voluble an hour before, Abashed to earth at aspect of the
change !

Make her an Empress ? Ah, that changed the case !
 Oh, I read hearts ! And for my own behoof, I court her with my true worth : see the event !
 I learned my final lesson on that head
 When years ago,—my first and last essay !
 Before my uncle could obtain the ear Of his superior, help me from the dirt—Prisoilla left me for a Brabant Duke Whose cheek was like the topaz on his thumb.
 I am past illusion on that score.
Mel. Here comes The lady—
Berth. —And there you go ! But do not ! Give me Another chance to please you. Hear me plead !
Mel. You'll keep, then, to the lover, to the man ?
Enter the DUCHESS—followed by ADOLF and SARYNE, and, after an interval, by the Courtiers.
Berth. Good auspice to our meeting !
The D. May it prove !
 —And you, sir, will be Emperor one day ?
Berth. (Ay—that's the point !) I may be Emperor.
The D. 'Tis not for my sake only, I am proud Of this you offer : I am prouder far That from the highest state should duly spring
 The highest, since most generous, of deeds.
Berth. (Generous—still that !) You underrate yourself.
 You are, what I, to be complete, must have—Find now, and may not find, another time.
 While I career on all the world for stage,
 There needs at home my representative.
The D. —Such, rather, would some warrior-woman be—One dowered with lands and gold, or rich in friends—

One like yourself !
Berth. Lady, I am myself,
 And have all these : I want what's not myself, Nor has all these. Why give one hand two swords ?
 Here's one already : be a friend's next gift
 A silk glove, if you will—I have a sword !
The D. You love me, then ?
Berth. Your lineage I revere, Honour your virtue, in your truth believe,
 Do homage to your intellect, and bow before your peerless beauty.
The D. But, for love—
Berth. A further love I do not understand.
 Our best course is to say these hideous truths,
 And see them, once said, grow endurable :
 Like waters shuddering from their central bed, Black with the midnight bowels of the earth,
 That, once up-spouted by an earthquake's throes,
 A portent and a terror—soon subside, Freshen apace, take gold and rainbow hues In sunshine, sleep in shadow, and, at last, Grow common to the earth as hills or trees—Accepted by all things they came to scare.
The D. You cannot love, then ?
Berth. —Charlemagne, perhaps !
 Are you not over-curious in love-lore ?
The D. I have become so, very recently.
 It seems, then, I shall best deserve esteem, Respect, and all your candour promises,
 By putting on a calculating mood—Asking the terms of my becoming yours ?
Berth. Let me not do myself injustice, neither !
 Because I will not condescend to fictions

That promise what my soul can ne'er acquit,
 It does not follow that my guarded phrase
 May not include far more of what you seek,
 Than wide professions of less scrupulous
 men.
 You will be Empress, once for all :
 with me
 The Pope disputes supremacy—you
 stand
 And none gainsays, the earth's first woman !

The D. That—Or simple Lady of Ravestein again ?

Berth. The matter's not in my arbitrement !
 Now I have made my claims—which I regret—
 Cede one, cede all !

The D. This claim then, you enforce ?

Berth. The world looks on.

The D. And when must I decide ?

Berth. When, Lady ? Have I said thus much so promptly For nothing ? Poured out, with such pains, at once
 What I might else have suffered to ooze

Droplet by droplet in a lifetime long, For aught less than as prompt an answer, too ?

All's fairly told now : who can teach you more ?

The D. I do not see him.

Berth. I shall ne'er deceive.
 This offer should be made befittingly Would time allow the better setting
 forth

The good of it, with what is not so
 good,

Advantage, and disparagement as well—But as it is, the sum of both must serve.

I am already weary of this place—My thoughts are next stage on to Rome. Decide !

The Empire—or, not even Juliers
 now !

Hail to the Empress—farewell to the Duchess !

[The Courtiers, who have been drawing nearer and nearer, interpose.

Courtiers. —'Farewell,' Prince ? when we break in at our risk—

Clug. Almost upon court-licence trespassing—

Courtiers. —To point out how your claims are valid yet !

You know not, by the Duke her father's
 will,

The lady, if she weds beneath her
 rank,

Forfeits her Duchy in the next heir's favour—

So 'tis expressly stipulate. And if It can be shown 'tis her intent to wed

A subject, then yourself, next heir, by
 right

Succeed to Juliers.

Berth. What insanity ?—

Gui. Sir, there's one Valence—the pale fiery man

You saw and heard, this morning—thought, no doubt,

Was of considerable standing here :
 I put it to your penetration, Prince,

If aught save love, the truest love for
 her,

Could make him serve the lady as he did !

He's simply a poor advocate of Cleves —Creeps here with difficulty, finds a
 place

With danger, gets in by a miracle, And for the first time meets the lady's
 face—

So runs the story : is that credible ?
 For, first—no sooner in, than he's apprised

Fortunes have changed ; you are all-powerful here,

The lady as powerless : he stands fast by her !

The D. [Aside.] And do such deeds spring up from love alone ?

Gui. But here occurs the question, does the lady

Love him again ? I say, How else can she ?

Can she forget how he stood singly
 forth

In her defence, dared outrage all of us,

- Insult yourself—for what, save love's reward ?
- The D. [Aside.]* And is love then the sole reward of love ?
- Gui.* But, love him as she may and must—you ask,
- Means she to wed him ? 'Yes,' both natures answer !
- Both, in their pride, point out the sole result—
- Nought less would he accept nor she propose !
- For each conjuncture was she great enough
- Will be, for this !
- Clug.* Though, now that this is known,
- Policy, doubtless, urges she deny . . .
- The D.* —What, sir, and wherefore ?
- since I am not sure
- That all is any other than you say ?
- You take this Valence, hold him close to me,
- Him with his actions : can I choose but look ?
- I am not sure, love trulier shows itself
- Than in this man, you hate and would degrade,
- Yet, with your worst abatement, show me thus.
- Nor am I—(thus made look within myself,
- Ere I had dared,)—now that the look is dared—
- Sure that I do not love him !
- Gui.* Hear you, Prince ?
- Berth.* And what, sirs, please you, may this prattle mean
- Unless to prove with what alacrity
- You give your lady's secrets to the world ?
- How much indebted, for discovering
- That quality, you make me, will be found
- When next a keeper for my own's to seek !
- Courtiers.* 'Our Lady ?'
- Berth.* —She assuredly remains !
- The D.* Ah, Prince—and you too can be generous ?
- You could renounce your power, if this were so,
- And let me, as these phrase it, wed my love
- Yet keep my Duchy ? You perhaps exceed
- Him, even, in disinterestedness !
- Berth.* How, lady, should all this affect my purpose ?
- Your will and choice are still as ever, free !
- Say, you have known a worthier than myself
- In mind and heart, of happier form and face—
- Others must have their birthright : I have gifts,
- To balance theirs, not blot them out of sight.
- Against a hundred other qualities,
- I lay the prize I offer. I am nothing—
- Wed you the Empire ?
- The D.* And my heart away ?
- Berth.* When have I made pretension to your heart ?
- I give none. I shall keep your honour safe ;
- With mine I trust you, as the sculptor trusts
- Yon marble woman with the marble rose,
- Loose on her hand, she never will let fall,
- In graceful, slight, silent security.
- You will be proud of my world-wide career,
- And I content in you the fair and good.
- What were the use of planting a few seeds,
- The thankless climate never would mature—
- Affections all repelled by circumstance ?
- Enough : to these no credit I attach,—
- To what you own, find nothing to object.
- Write simply on my requisition's face
- What shall content, my friends—that you admit,
- As Colombe of Ravestein, the claims therein,
- Or never need admit them, as my wife—
- And either way, all's ended.
- The D.* Let all end !
- Berth.* The requisition !

Courtiers.

—Valence holds, Her joy thereat ?

of course !

Val.

I cannot.

Berth. Desire his presence !

Mel.

No one can :

[ADOLF goes out.]

All draws to a conclusion, therefore.

Courtiers. [to each other.] Out it all comes yet !

Val. [Aside.]

So !

He'll have his word against the bargain still !

No after-judgment—no first thought revised—

He's not the man to tamely acquiesce !

Her first and last decision !—me, she leaves—

One passionate appeal—upbraiding even,

Takes him—a simple heart is flung aside,

Might turn the tide again ! Despair not yet !

The ermine o'er a heartless breast embraced !

Oh heaven, this mockery has been played too oft !

Berth. [to MELOHIOB.] The Empire has its old success, my friend !

Once, to surprise the angels—twice, that fiends

Mel. You've had your way : before the spokesman comes,

Recording, might be proud they chose not so—

Let me, but this once, work a problem out,

Thrice, many thousand times, to teach the world

And ever more be dumb. The Empire wins ?

All men should pause, misdoubt their strength, since men

To better purpose I have read my books !

Could have such chance yet fail so signally,

Enter VALENCE.

—But ever—ever—this farewell to Heaven,

Mel. [to the Courtiers.] Apart, my masters !

Welcome to earth—this taking death for life—

[To VALENCE.] Sir, one word with you ! I am a poor dependent of the Prince's—Pitched on to speak, as of slight consequence ;

This spurning love and kneeling to the world—

You are no higher, I find : in other words,

Oh heaven, it is too often and too old !

We two, as probably the wisest here, Need not hold diplomatic talk like fools. Suppose I speak, divesting the plain fact Of all their tortuous phrases, fit for them ?

Mel. Well, on this point—what but an absurd rumour

Do you reply so, and what trouble saved !

Arises—these, its source—its subject, you !

The Prince, then—an embroiled strange heap of news

Your faith and loyalty misconstruing, They say, your service claims the lady's hand !

This moment reaches him—if true or false,

Of course, nor Prince nor Lady can respond :

All dignity forbids he should inquire In person, or by worthier deputy ;

Yet something must be said—for, were it true

Yet somehow must inquire, lest slander come :

You made such claim, the Prince would . . .

And so, 'tis I am pitched on. You have heard

Val.

Well, sir,—would ?

His offer to your lady ?

Mel. —Not only probably withdraw his suit,

Val.

Yes.

But, very like, the lady might be forced Accept your own.—Oh, there are reasons why !

I could not imitate—I hardly envy— I do admire you! All is for the best!

Too costly a flower were you, I see it now,

To pluck and set upon my barren helm To wither—any garish plume will do! I'll not insult you and refuse your Duchy—

You can so well afford to yield it me, And I were left, without it, sadly off! As it is—for me—if that will flatter you,

A somewhat wearier life seems to remain

Than I thought possible where... 'faith, their life

Begins already—they're too occupied To listen—and few words content me best!

The D. Adolf and Sabyne follow us—

Gwi. [starting from the Courtiers.]— And I?

Do I not follow them, if I mayn't you? Shall not I get some little duties up At Ravestein and emulate the rest?

God save you, Gaucelme! 'Tis my Birthday, too!

Berth. You happy handful that remain with me

. . . That is, with Dietrich the black Barnabite

I shall leave over you—will earn your wages,

Or Dietrich has forgot to ply his trade! Meantime,—go copy me the precedents Of every installation, proper styles, And pedigrees of all your Juliers' Dukes—

While I prepare to go on my old way, And somewhat wearily, I must confess!

The D. [with a light joyous laugh as she turns from them.] Come, Valence, to our friends—God's earth . . .

Val. [as she falls into his arms.]—And thee!

SCENE.—LURIA's Camp between Florence and Pisa.

ACT I

MORNING.

BRACCIO, as dictating to his Secretary; PUCCIO standing by.

Brac. [to Puc.] Then, you join battle in an hour?

Puc. Not I;
Luria, the Captain.

Brac. [to the Sec.] 'In an hour, the battle.'

[To Puc.] Sir, let your eye run o'er this loose digest,
And see if very much of your report Have slipped away through my civilian phrase.

Does this instruct the Signory aright
How army stands with army?

Puc. [taking the paper.] All seems
here:

—That Luria, seizing with our city's force

The several points of vantage, hill and
plain,

Shuts Pisa safe from help on every side,
And, baffling the Lucchese arrived too late,
Must, in the battle he delivers now, Beat her best troops and first of chiefs.

Brac. So sure?
Tiburzio's a consummate captain too!

Puc. Luria holds Pisa's fortune in his hand.

Brac. [to the Sec.] 'The Signory hold Pisa in their hand.'

Your own proved soldiery's our warrant, sir:

So, while my secretary ends his task, Have out two horsemen, by the open roads,

To post with it to Florence!

Puc. [returning the paper.] All seems here ; Unless . . . Ser Braccio, 'tis my last report !
 Since Pisa's outbreak, and my overthrow,
 And Luria's hastening at the city's call To save her, as he only could, no doubt ; Till now that she is saved or sure to be,—

Whatever you tell Florence, I tell you :
 Each day's note you, her Commissary, make

Of Luria's movements, I myself supply.
 No youngster am I longer, to my cost ;
 Therefore while Florence gloried in her choice

And vaunted Luria, whom but Luria, still,
 As if zeal, courage, prudence, conduct, faith,

Had never met in any man before,
 I saw no pressing need to swell the cry.
 But now, this last report and I have done—

So, ere to-night comes with its roar of praise,

'Twere not amiss if some one old i' the trade

Subscribed with, ' True, for once rash counsel 's best.

This Moor of the bad faith and doubtful race,

This boy to whose untried sagacity, Raw valour, Florence trusts without reserve

The charge to save her,—justifies her choice ;

In no point has this stranger failed his friends :

Now praise ! ' I say this, and it is not here.

Brac. [to the Sec.] Write, ' Puccio, superseded in the charge, By Luria, bears full witness to his worth,

And no reward our Signory can give Their champion but he'll back it cheerfully.'

Aught more ? Five minutes hence, both messengers !

[Puccio goes.

Brac. [after a pause, and while he slowly tears the paper into shreds.]

I think . . . (pray God, I hold in fit contempt

This warfare's noble art and ordering,
 And,—once the brace of prizers fairly matched,

Poleaxe with poleaxe, knife with knife

Spit properly at what men term their skill !—)

Yet here I think our fighter has the odds.

With Pisa's strength diminished thus and thus,

Such points of vantage in our hands and such,

Lucca still off the stage, too,—all 's assured :

Luria must win this battle. Write the Court,

That Luria's trial end and sentence pass !

Sec. Patron,—

Brac. Ay, Lapo ?

Sec. If you trip, I fall ;

'Tis in self-interest I speak—

Brac. Nay, nay,
 'You overshoot the mark, my Lapo !
 Nay !

When did I say pure love 's impossible ?

I make you daily write those red cheeks thin,

Load your young brow with what concerns it least,

And, when we visit Florence, let you pace

The Piazza by my side as if we talked,
 Where all your old acquaintances may see :

You'd die for me, I should not be surprised !

Now then !

Sec. Sir, look about and love yourself !

Step after step, the Signory and you Tread gay till this tremendous point 's to pass ;

Which, pass not, pass not, ere you ask yourself,—

Bears the brain steadily such draughts of fire,

Or too delicious may not prove the pride

Of this long secret Trial you dared plan, Dare execute, you solitary here, With the grey-headed toothless fools at home,
Who think themselves your lords, they are such slaves ?

If they pronounce this sentence as you bid,

Declare the treason, claim its penalty,—
And sudden out of all the blaze of life,
On the best minute of his brightest day,
From that adoring army at his back, Thro' Florence' joyous crowds before his face,

Into the dark you beckon Luria . . .

Brac. Then—
Why, Lapo, when the fighting-people
vaunt,

We of the other craft and mystery,
May we not smile demure, the danger

Sec. Sir, no, no, no,—the danger, and your spirit

At watch and ward ? Where's danger on your part,
With that thin fitting instantaneous steel,

'Gainst the blind bull-front of a bruteforce world ?

If Luria, that's to perish sure as fate, Should have been really guiltless after
all ?

Brac. Ah, you have thought that ?

Sec. Here I sit, your scribe, And in and out goes Luria, days and
nights ;

This Puccio comes ; the Moor his other
friend, Husain ; they talk—all that's feigned easily ;

He speaks (I would not listen if I could, Reads, orders, counsels :—but he rests sometimes,—

I see him stand and eat, sleep stretched an hour

On the lynx-skins, yonder ; hold his bared black arms

Into the sun from the tent-opening

When his horse drops the forage from his teeth

And neighs to hear him hum his Moorish songs.

That man believes in Florence, as the saint

Tied to the wheel believes in God !

Brac. How strange—on too have thought that !

Sec. Do but you think too,
And all is saved ! I only have to write,
The man seemed false awhile, proves true at last ;

Bury it' . . . so I write to the Signory . . .
'Bury this Trial in your breasts for ever, Blot it from things or done or dreamed
about :

So Luria shall receive his meed to-day With no suspicion what reverse was near,—

As if no meteoric finger hushed The doom-word just on the destroyer's
lip,

Motioned him off, and let life's sun fall straight.'

Brac. [looks to the wall of the tent.] Did he draw that ?

Sec. With charcoal, when the watch Made the report at midnight ; Lady Domizia

Spoke of the unfinished Duomo, you
remember ;

That is his fancy how a Moorish front Might join to, and complete, the body, —a sketch,—

And again where the cloak hangs, yonder in the shadow.

Brac. He loves that woman.

Sec. She is sent the spy Of Florence,—spies on you as you on
him :

Florence, if only for Domizia's sake, Is surely safe. What shall I write ?

Brac. I see—
A Moorish front, nor of such ill design !
Lapo, there's one thing plain and positive ;

Man seeks his own good at the whole world's cost.

What ? If to lead our troops, stand forth our chiefs,

And hold our fate, and see us at their
beck,

Yet render up the charge when peace returned,

Have ever proved too much for Florentines,

Even for the best and bravest of our— Even that he loves this lady who believes

 Virtue on virtue still have fallen away Lest I one minute lose her from my foolish best,

 When all was done they frightened nobody)

Perk in our faces in the street, forsooth,
With our own warrant and allowance.

No!

The whole procedure 's overcharged,— its end

In too strict keeping with the bad first step.

To conquer Pisa was sheer inspiration ?

Well then, to perish for a single fault, Let that be simple justice !—There, my Lapo !

A Moorish front ill suits our Duomo's body—

Blot it out—and bid Luria's sentence
come !

[LURIA, who, with DOMIZIA, has entered unobserved at the close of the last phrase, now advancing.

And Luria, Luria, what of Luria now ?

Brac. Ah, you so close, sir ? Lady Domizia too ?

I said it needs must be a busy moment For one like you—that you were now i' the thick

Of your duties, doubtless, while we idlers sat . . .

Lur. No—in that paper,—it was in that paper

What you were saying !

Brac. Oh—my day's dispatch !
I censure you to Florence : will you
see ?

Lur. See your dispatch, your last, for the first time ?

Well, if I should, now ? For in truth,
Domizia,

He would be forced to set about another,

In his sly cool way, the true Florentine, To mention that important circumstance ;

So, while he wrote I should gain time, such time !

Do not send this !

Brac. And wherefore ?

Lur. These Lucchese Are not arrived—they never will arrive !

And I must fight to-day, arrived or
not ;

And I shall beat Tiburzio, that is sure :
And then will be arriving his Lucchese,
But slowly, oh so slowly, just in time

To look upon my battle from the hills, Like a late moon, of use to nobody !

And I must break my battle up, send
forth,

Surround on this side, hold in check on
that—

Then comes to-morrow, we negotiate, You make me send for fresh instructions home,

—Incompleteness, incompleteness !

Brac.

Ah, we scribes !

Why, I had registered that very point,
The non-appearance of our foes' ally,
As a most happy fortune ; both at once Were formidable—singly faced, each falls.

Lur. So, no great battle for my Florentines !

No crowning deed, decisive and complete,

For all of them, the simple as the wise, Old, young, alike, that do not understand

Our wearisome pedantic art of war, By which we prove retreat may be
success,

Delay—best speed,—half loss, at times,
—whole gain :

They want results—as if it were their fault !

And you, with warmest wish to be my
friend,

Will not be able now to simply say
'Your servant has performed his task
—enough !

You ordered, he has executed : good !
Now walk the streets in holiday attire,

Congratulate your friends, till noon strikes fierce,

Then form bright groups beneath the Duomo's shade !

No ! you will have to argue and explain,

Persuade them, all is not so ill in the
end,

Tease, tire them out ! Arrive, arrive, Lucchese !

Dom. Well, you will triumph for the Past enough,

Whatever be the Present's chance ; no
service

Falls to the ground with Florence : she awaits

Her saviour, will receive him fittingly.

Lur. Ah, Braccio, you know Florence! will she, think you, Receive one . . . what means 'fittingly receive'?

—Receive compatriots, doubtless—I am none:

And yet Domizia promises so much!

Brac. Kind women still give men a woman's prize.

I know not o'er which gate most boughs will arch,

Nor if the Square will wave red flags or blue:

I should have judged, the fullest of rewards

Our State gave Luria, when she made him chief

Of her whole force, in her best captain's place.

Lur. That, my reward? Florence on my account

Relieved Ser Puccio?—mark you, my reward!

And Puccio's having all the fight's true joy—

Goes here and there, gets close, may fight, himself,

While I must order, stand aloof, o'ersee!

That was my calling—there was my true place!

I should have felt, in some one over me, Florence impersonate, my visible Head,

As I am over Puccio,—taking life Directly from her eye! They give me

you:

But do you cross me, set me half to work?

I enjoy nothing—but I will, for once! Decide, shall we join battle? may I wait?

Brac. Let us compound the matter; wait till noon:

Then, no arrival,—

Lur. Ah, noon comes too fast! I wonder, do you guess why I delay Involuntarily the final blow

As long as possible? Peace follows it! Florence at peace, and the calm studious heads

Come out again, the penetrating eyes; As if a spell broke, all's resumed, each art

You boast, more vivid that it slept awhile.

'Gainst the glad heaven, o'er the white palace-front

The interrupted scaffold climbs anew; The walls are peopled by the painter's brush;

The statue to its niche ascends to dwell.

The Present's noise and trouble have retired

And left the eternal Past to rule once more;—

You speak its speech and read its records plain,

Greece lives with you, each Roman breathes your friend:

—But Luria—where will then be Luria's place?

Dom. Highest in honour, for that Past's own sake,

Of which his actions, sealing up the sum By saving all that went before from wreck,

Will range as part, with which be worshipped too.

Lur. Then I may walk and watch you in your streets

Leading the life my rough life helps no more,

So different, so new, so beautiful—Nor fear that you will tire to see parade

The club that slew the lion, now that crooks

And shepherd-pipes come into use again?

For very lone and silent seems my East In its drear vastness: still it spreads, and still

No Braccios, no Domizias anywhere—Not ever more!—Well, well, to-day is ours!

Dom. [to BRAC.] Should he not have been one of us?

Lur. Oh, no! Not one of you, and so escape the thrill

Of coming into you, of changing thus,—Feeling a soul grow on me that restricts

The boundless unrest of the savage heart!

The sea heaves up, hangs loaded o'er the land,

Breaks there and buries its tumultuous strength ;

Horror, and silence, and a pause awhile :
Lo, inland glides the gulf-stream, miles away,

In rapture of assent, subdued and still,
'Neath those strange banks, those unimagined skies !

Well, 'tis not sure the quiet lasts for ever !

Your placid heads still find rough hands new work ;

Some minutes' chance—there comes the need of mine—

And, all resolved on, I too hear at last.
Oh, you must find some use for me, Ser Braccio !

You hold my strength ; 'twere best dispose of it !

What you created, see that you find food for—

I shall be dangerous else !

Brac. How dangerous, Sir ?

Lur. Oh, there are many ways, Domizia warns me,

And one with half the power that I possess,

Grows very formidable ! Do you doubt ?
Why, first, who holds the army . . .

Dom. While we talk, Morn wears ; we keep you from your proper place

In the field.

Lur. Nay, 'to the field I move no more :

My part is done, and Puccio's may begin.

I cannot trench upon his province longer

With any face.—You think yourselves so safe ?

Why see—in concert with Tiburzio, now—

One could . . .

Dom. A trumpet !

Lur. My Lucchese at last !
Arrived, as sure as Florence stands !
your leave !

Dom. How plainly is true greatness charactered

By such unconsciousness as Luria's here,

Strength sharing least the secret of itself !

Be it with head that schemes or hand that acts,

Such save the world which none but they could save,

Yet think whate'er they did, that world could do.

Brac. Yes : and how worthy note, that these same great ones

In hand or head, with such unconsciousness

And all its due entailed humility, Should never shrink, so far as I perceive,

From taking up whatever offices involve the whole world's safety or mishap,

Into their mild hands as a thing of course !

The statish finds it natural to lead
The mob who might as easily lead him—

The soldier marshals troops who know as much—

Statish and soldier verily believe !
While we poor scribes . . . you catch me thinking, now,

That I shall in this very letter write

What none of you are able ! To it, Lapo !

This last, worst, all-affected childish fit Of Luria's, this be-praised unconscious-

ness,

Convinces me ; the Past was no child's play :

It was a man beat Pisa,—not a child.
All's mere dissimulation—to remove

The fear, he best knows we should entertain.

The utmost danger was at hand. Is 't written ?

Now make a duplicate, lest this should fail,

And speak your fullest on the other side.

Sec. I noticed he was busily repairing My half-effacement of his Duomo sketch,

And, while he spoke of Florence, turned to it,

Enter LURIA and HUSAIN.

Dom. Well, and the movement—is it as you hope ?

'Tis Lucca ?

Lur. Ah, the Pisan trumpet merely !

Tiburzio's envoy, I must needs receive.

Dom. Whom I withdraw before ; tho' if I lingered

You could not wonder, for my time fleets fast.

The overtaking night brings such reward !

—And where will then be room for me ? Yet still Remember who was first to promise it, And envied those who also can perform !

[Goes.]

Lur. This trumpet from the Pisans ?—

Hus. In the camp ;

A very noble presence—Braccio's visage On Puccio's body—calm and fixed and good ;

A man I seem as I had seen before : Most like, it was some statue had the face.

Lur. Admit him ! This will prove the last delay.

Hus. Ay, friend, go on, and die thou going on !

Thou heardest what the grave woman said but now :

To-night rewards thee. That is well to hear ;

But stop not therefore : hear it, and go on !

Lur. Oh, their reward and triumph and the rest

They round me in the ears with, all day long ?

All that, I never take for earnest, friend !

Well would it suit us,—their triumphal arch

Or storied pillar,—thee and me, the Moors !

But gratitude in those Italian eyes—

That, we shall get ?

Hus. It is too cold an air.

Our sun rose out of yonder mound of mist :

Where is he now ? So, I trust none of them !

Lur. Truly ?

Hus. I doubt and fear. There stands a wall

'Twixt our expansive and explosive race And those absorbing, concentrating men !

They use thee !

Lur. And I feel it, Husain ; yes, And care not—yes, an alien force like mine

Is only called to play its part outside Their different nature ; where its sole use seems

To fight with and keep off an adverse force

As alien,—which repelled, mine too withdraws :

Inside, they know not what to do with me ;

Thus I have told them laughingly and oft,

But long since was prepared to learn the worst.

Hus. What is the worst ?

Lur. I will forestall them, Husain, And speak my destiny, they dare not speak—

Banish myself before they find the heart. I will be first to say, 'The work rewards ! I know, for all your praise, my use is over, So may it prove !—meanwhile 'tis best I go,

And carry safe my memories of you all To other scenes of action, newer

lands.'—

Thus leaving them confirmed in their belief

They would not easily have tired of me. You think this hard to say ?

Hus. Say it or not, So thou but go, so they but let thee go !

This hating people, that hate each the other,

And in one blandness to us Moors unite—

Locked each to each like slippery snakes, I say,

Which still in all their tangles, hissing
 tongue
 And threatening tail, ne'er do each other harm ;
 While any creature of a better blood, They seem to fight for, while they circle
 safe
 And never touch it,—pines without a wound,
 Withers away beside their eyes and
 breath.
 See thou, if Puccio come not safely out Of Braccio's grasp, this Braccio sworn his foe,
 As Braccio safely from Domizia's toils Who hates him most !—But thou, the friend of all,
 . . . Come out of them !

Lur. The Pisan trumpet now !

Hus. Breathe free—it is an enemy, no friend ! [Goes.]

Lur. He keeps his instincts, no new culture mars
 Their perfect use in him ; just so the brutes
 Rest not, are anxious without visible
 cause,
 When change is in the elements at work, Which man's trained senses fail to apprehend.
 But here,—he takes the distant chariotwheels
 For thunder, festal fire for lightning's flash,
 The finer traits of cultivated life
 For treachery and malevolence : I see !

Enter TIBURZIO.

Lur. Quick, sir, your message ! I but wait your message To sound the charge. You bring not overtures For truce ?—I would not, for your General's sake, You spoke of truce—a time to fight is
 come,
 And, whatsoever the fight's event, he His honest soldier's name to beat me
 with,
 Or leaves me all himself to beat, I trust !

Tib. I am Tiburzio.

Lur. You ? 'Tis—yes . . .
 Tiburzio !
 You were the last to keep the ford i' the valley
 From Puccio, when I threw in succours
 there !
 Why, I was on the heights—through the defile
 Ten minutes after, when the prey was lost !
 You wore an open skull-cap with a twist
 Of water-reeds—the plume being hewn
 away ;
 While I drove down my battle from the heights,
 —I saw with my own eyes !

Tib. And you are Luria Who sent my cohort, that laid down its arms

In error of the battle-signal's sense, Back safely to me at the critical time—
 One of a hundred deeds—I know you !
 Therefore

To none but you could I . . .

Lur. No truce, Tiburzio !

Tib. Luria, you know the peril imminent
 On Pisa,—that you have us in the toils, Us her last safeguard, all that intercepts
 The rage of her implacablest of foes From Pisa,—if we fall to-day, she falls.
 Tho' Lucca will arrive, yet, 'tis too late.
 You have so plainly here the best of it,
 That you must feel, brave soldier as you
 are,

How dangerous we grow in this extreme,
 How truly formidable by despair.
 Still, probabilities should have their weight—

The extremest chance is ours, but, that chance failing,

You win this battle. Wherefore say I this ?

To be well apprehended when I add,
 This danger absolutely comes from you.
 Were you, who threaten thus, a Florentine . . .

Lur. Sir, I am nearer Florence than her sons.

I can, and have perhaps obliged the State,

Nor paid a mere son's duty.

Tib.

Even so!

Were you the son of Florence, yet endued

With all your present nobleness of soul, No question, what I must communicate Would not detach you from her.

Lur.

Me, detach?

Tib. Time urges: you will run
presently

Pisa, you never knew, for Florence's
sake

You think you know. I have from time to time

Made prize of certain secret missives sent

From Braccio here, the Commissary, home—

And knowing Florence otherwise, I piece

The entire chain out, from these its scattered links.

Your trial occupies the Signory; They sit in judgment on your conduct
now.

When men at home inquire into the acts

Which in the field e'en foes appreciate . . .

Brief, they are Florentines! You, saving them,

Will seek the sure destruction saviours
find.

Lur. Tiburzio—

Tib.

All the wonder is of course.

I am not here to teach you, nor direct,
Only to loyally apprise—scarce that.

This is the latest letter, sealed and safe,
As it left here an hour ago. One way

Of two thought free to Florence, I command.

The duplicate is on its road; but
this,—

Read it, and then I shall have more to
say.

Lur. Florence!

Tib.

Now, were yourself a

Florentine,
This letter, let it hold the worst it can,
Would be no reason you should fall

away.

The mother city is the mother still,
And recognition of the children's service

Her own affair; reward—there's no
reward!

But you are bound by quite another tie; Nor nature shows, nor reason, why at
first

A foreigner, born friend to all alike, Should give himself to any special State

More than another, stand by Florence's
side

Rather than Pisa's; 'tis as fair a city You war against, as that you fight for—famed

As well as she in story, graced no less With noble heads and patriotic hearts:

Nor to a stranger's eye would either
cause,

Stripped of the cumulative loves and hates

Which take importance from familiar
view,

Stand as the right, and sole to be upheld.

Therefore, should the preponderating
gift

Of love and trust, Florence was first to throw,

Which made you hers not Pisa's, void the scale,—

Old ties dissolving, things resume their
place

And all begins again. Break seal and read!

At least let Pisa offer for you now!
And I, as a good Pisan, shall rejoice—

Though for myself I lose, in gaining you,
This last fight and its opportunity;

The chance it brings of saving Pisa yet,
Or in the turn of battle dying so

That shame should want its extreme bitterness.

Lur. Tiburzio, you that fight for Pisa
now

As I for Florence . . . say my chance were yours!

You read this letter, and you find . . .
no, no!

Too mad!

Tib. I read the letter, find they purpose

When I have crushed their foe, to crush me: well?

Lur. You, being their captain, what is it you do?

Tib. Why, as it is, all cities are alike—Pisa will pay me much as Florence you ;
I shall be as belied, whate'er the event, As you, or more : my weak head, they will say, Prompted this last expedient, my faint
heart
Entailed on them indelible disgrace, Both which defects ask proper punishment.
Another tenure of obedience, mine !
You are no son of Pisa's : break and read !

Lur. And act on what I read ? What act were fit ?
If the firm-fixed foundation of my faith In Florence, which to me stands for mankind,
—If that breaks up and, disimprisoning From the abyss . . . Ah friend, it cannot
be !

You may be very sage, yet—all the
world
Having to fail, or your sagacity,
You do not wish to find yourself alone !
What would the world be worth ?
Whose love be sure ?

The world remains—you are deceived !

Tib. Your hand !
I lead the vanguard.—If you fall,
beside,

The better—I am left to speak ! For
me,

This was my duty, nor would I rejoice
If I could help, it misses its effect ;
And after all you will look gallantly Found dead here with that letter in your breast.

Lur. Tiburzio—I would see these people once

And test them ere I answer finally !
At your arrival let the trumpet sound :
If mine returns not then the wonted cry,
It means that I believe—am Pisa's !

Tib. Well ! [Goes.]

Lur. My heart will have it he speaks true ! My blood

Beats close to this Tiburzio as a friend.
If he had stepped into my watch-tent,
night

And the wild desert full of foes around, I should have broke the bread and given the salt

Secure, and, when my hour of watch
was done,

Taken my turn to sleep between his knees,

Safe in the untroubled brow and honest
cheek.

Oh, world, where all things pass and nought abides,

Oh, life the long mutation—is it so ?
Is it with life as with the body's change ?

—Where, e'en tho' better follow, good must pass,

Nor manhood's strength can mate with boyhood's grace,

Nor age's wisdom, in its turn, find
strength,

But silently the first gift dies away,
And though the new stays, never both at once !

Life's time of savage instinct o'er with
me,

It fades and dies away, past trusting
more,

As if to punish the ingratitude With which I turned to grow in these new lights,

And learned to look with European
eyes.

Yet it is better, this cold certain way.
Where Braccio's brow tells nothing,— Puccio's mouth,

Domizia's eyes reject the searcher—yes !
For on their calm sagacity I lean,

Their sense of right, deliberate choice of good,

Sure, as they know my deeds, they deal
with me.

Yes, that is better—that is best of all !
Such faith stays when mere wild belief would go !

Yes—when the desert creature's heart, at fault

Amid the scattering tempest's pillared sands,

Betrays its steps into the pathless
drift—

The calm instructed eye of man holds
fast

By the sole bearing of the visible star, Sure that when slow the whirling wreck
subsides,

The boundaries, lost now, shall be found
again,—

The palm-trees and the pyramid over
all.

Yes: I trust Florence: Pisa is deceived.

Enter BRACCIO, PUCCIO, and DOMIZIA.

Brac. Noon's at an end: no Lucca?

You must fight.

Lur. Do you remember ever, gentle
friends,

I am no Florentine?

Dom. It is yourself Who still are forcing us importunately, To bear in mind what else we should forget.

Lur. For loss!—For what I lose in being none!

No shrewd man, such as you yourselves respect,

But would remind you of the stranger's loss

In natural friends and advocates at home,

Hereditary loves, even rivalships,
With precedents for honour and reward.

Still, there's a gain, too! If you take it so,

The stranger's lot has special gain as
well!

Do you forget there was my own far East

I might have given away myself to, once,
As now to Florence, and for such a gift,

Stood there like a descended deity?

There, worship greets us! what do I get here? [Shows the letter.

See! Chance has put into my hand the means

Of knowing what I earn, before I work!
Should I fight better, should I fight the
worse,

With your crown palpably before me?
see!

Here lies my whole reward! Best know it now,

Or keep it for the end's entire delight?

Brac. If you serve Florence as the vulgar serve,

For swordsman's-pay alone,—break seal and read!

In that case, you will find your full desert!

Lur. Give me my one last happy moment, friends!

You need me now, and all the gratitude

This letter can contain with never balance

The after-feeling that your need's at
end!

This moment . . . Oh, the East has use with you!

Its sword still flashes—is not flung
aside

With the past praise, in a dark corner
yet!

How say you? 'Tis not so with Florentines—

Captains of yours—for them, the ended
war

Is but a first step to the peace begun —He who did well in war, just earns the right

To begin doing well in peace, you
know!

And certain my precursors,—would not such

Look to themselves in such a chance as
this,

Secure the ground they trod upon,
perhaps?

For I have heard, by fits, or seemed to
hear,

Of strange occurrences, ingratitude, Treachery even,—say that one of you

Surmised this letter carried what might turn

To harm hereafter, cause him prejudice—

What would he do?

Dom. [hastily.] Thank God and take revenge!

Turn her own force against the city
straight,

And even at the moment when the foe Sounded defiance . . .

[TIBURZIO'S trumpet sounds in the distance.

Lur. Ah, you Florentines!
So would you do? Wisely for you, no
doubt!

My simple Moorish instinct bids me sink
The obligation you relieve me from,

Still deeper! [To Puc.] Sound our answer, I should say!

And thus :—[tearing the paper.]—The battle! That solves every doubt!

ACT III

AFTERNOON.

PUCCIO, as making a report to JACOPO.

Puc. And here, your Captain must report the rest ;

For, as I say, the main engagement over,

And Luria's special part in it performed,

How could subalterns like myself expect Leisure or leave to occupy the field And glean what dropped from his wide harvesting ?

I thought, when Lucca at the battle's end

Came up, just as the Pisan centre broke, That Luria would detach me and prevent

The flying Pisans seeking what they found,

Friends in the rear, a point to rally by. But no—more honourable proved my post !

I had the august captive to escort Safe to our camp—some other could pursue,

Fight, and be famous ; gentler chance was mine—

Tiburzio's wounded spirit must be soothed !

He's in the tent there.

Jac. Is the substance down ? I write—'The vanguard beaten, and both wings

In full retreat—Tiburzio prisoner'—

And now,—'That they fell back and formed again

On Lucca's coming.'—Why then, after all,

'Tis half a victory, no conclusive one ?

Puc. Two operations where a sole had served.

Jac. And Luria's fault was—?

Puc. Oh, for fault . . . not much ! He led the attack, a thought impetuously, —There's commonly more prudence ; now, he seemed To hurry measures, otherwise well-judged ;

By over-concentrating strength, at first,

Against the enemy's van, both sides escaped : That's reparable—yet it is a fault.

Enter BRACCIO.

Jac. As good as a full victory to Florence,

With the advantage of a fault beside—

What is it, Puccio ?—that by pressing forward

With too impetuous . . .

Brac. The report anon ! Thanks, Sir—you have elsewhere a charge, I know.

[PUCCIO goes.] There's nothing done but I would do again ;

Yet, Lapo, it may be the Past proves nothing,

And Luria has kept faithful to the end.

Jac. I was for waiting.

Brac. Yes : so was not I. He could not choose but tear that letter—true !

Still, certain of his tones, I mind, and looks—

You saw, too, with a fresher soul than I. So, Porzio seemed an injured man, they

Well, I have gone upon the broad, sure ground.

Enter LURIA, PUCCIO, and DOMIZIA.

Lur. [to Puc.] Say, at his pleasure I will see Tiburzio :

All's at his pleasure.

Dom. [to Lur.] Were I not so sure You would reject, as you do constantly,

Praise,—I might tell you what you have deserved

Of Florence by this last and crowning feat :

But words are vain.

Lur. Nay, you may praise me now !

I want instruction every hour, I find, On points where once I saw least need of it ;

And praise, I have been used to do without,

Seems not so easy to dispense with now : After a battle half one's strength is gone—

And glorious passion in us once appeased, Our reason's calm cold dreadful voice begins.

All justice, power and beauty scarce appear Monopolized by Florence, as of late,
To me, the stranger: you, no doubt, may know

Why Pisa needs must give her rival place.
And I am growing nearer you, perhaps,
For I, too, want to know and be assured.
When a cause ceases to reward itself,
Its friend needs fresh sustainments;
praise is one,
And here stand you—you, Lady, praise
me well.

But yours—(your pardon)—is unlearned
praise:

To the motive, the endeavour, the heart's self,
Your quick sense looks: you crown and call aright

The soul of the purpose, ere 'tis shaped as act, Takes flesh i' the world, and clothes itself a king.

But when the act comes, stands for what
'tis worth,
—Here's Puccio, the skilled soldier, he's my judge!

Was all well, Puccio?

Puc. All was . . . must be well:
If we beat Lucca presently, as doubtless . . .

—No, there's no doubt, we must—all was well done.

Lur. In truth? But you are of the trade, my Puccio!
You have the fellow-craftsman's sympathy.

There's none knows like a fellow of the craft,

The all-unestimated sum of pains
That go to a success the world can see:
They praise then, but the best they never know

—While you know!—Oh, if envy mix
with it,

Hate even, still the bottom-praise of all, Whatever be the dregs, that drop's pure gold!

—For nothing's like it; nothing else records

Thosedaily, nightly drippings in the dark Of the heart's blood, the world lets drop away

For ever—so, pure gold that praise
must be!

And I have yours, my soldier! yet the
best

Is still to come—there's one looks on
apart

Whom all refers to, failure or success; What's done might be our best, our utmost work,

And yet inadequate to serve his need.
Here's Braccio now, for Florence—here's our service—

Well done for us, is it well done for
him?

His chosen engine, tasked to its full
strength

Answers his end? Should he have chosen higher?

Do we help Florence, now our best is
done?

Brac. This battle, with the foregone services, Saves Florence.

Lur. Why then, all is very well!
Here am I in the middle of my friends, Who know me and who love me, one
and all!

And yet . . . 'tis like . . . this instant while I speak

Is like the turning-moment of a dream When . . . Ah, you are not foreigners like me!

Well then, one always dreams of friends at home;

And always comes, I say, the turning-point

When something changes in the friendly
eyes

That love and look on you . . . so slight, so slight . . .

And yet it tells you they are dead and
gone,

Or changed and enemies, for all their
words,

And all is mockery and a maddening
show.

You, now, so kind here, all you Floren-
tines,

What is it in your eyes . . . those lips, those brows . . .

Nobody spoke it . . . yet I know it well!—

Come now—this battle saves you, all's at end,

Your use of me is o'er, for good, for evil,—

Come now, what's done against me, while I speak,

In Florence? Come! I feel it in my blood,

My eyes, my hair, a voice is in my ear
That spite of all this smiling and kind speech

You are betraying me! What is it you do?

Have it your way, and think my use is over—

That you are saved and may throw off the mask—

Have it my way, and think more work remains

Which I could do,—so, show you fear me not!

Or prudent be, or generous, as you choose,

But tell me—tell what I refused to know

At noon, lest heart should fail me! Well? That letter?

My fate is known at Florence! What is it?

Brac. Sir, I shall not conceal what you divine.

It is no novelty for innocence To be suspected, but a privilege:

The after certain compensation comes. Charges, I say not whether false or true,

Have been preferred against you some time since,

Which Florence was bound, plainly, to receive,

And which are therefore undergoing now

The due investigation. That is all. I doubt not but your innocence will prove Apparent and illustrious, as to me,

To them this evening, when the trial ends.

Lur. My trial?

Dom. Florence, Florence to the end,

My whole heart thanks thee!

Puc. [to BRAC.] What is 'Trial,' sir?

It was not for a trial—surely, no—
I furnished you those notes from time to time?

I held myself aggrieved—I am a man—
And I might speak,—ay, and speak mere truth, too,

And yet not mean at bottom of my heart

What should assist a—Trial, do you say?

You should have told me!

Dom. Nay, go on, go on!
His sentence! Do they sentence him?

What is it?

The block? Wheel?

Brac. Sentence there is none as yet,

Nor shall I give my own opinion here
Of what it should be, or is like to be.

When it is passed, applaud or disapprove!

Up to that point, what is there to impugn?

Lur. They are right, then, to try me?
Brac. I assert,

Maintain, and justify the absolute right Of Florence to do all she can have done

In this procedure,—standing on her guard,

Receiving even services like yours
With utmost fit suspicious wariness.

In other matters, keep the mummery up!
Take all the experiences of the whole

world,
Each knowledge that broke through a heart to life, Each reasoning which, to work out, cost a brain,

—In other cases, know these, warrant

these,
And then dispense with them—'tis very

well!
Let friend trust friend, and love demand its like,

And gratitude be claimed for benefits,— There's grace in that—and when the fresh heart breaks,

The new brain proves a martyr, what of them?

Where is the matter of one moth the more

Singed in the candle, at a summer's end?

But Florence is no simple John or James
 To have his toy, his fancy, his conceit,
 That he 's the one excepted man by fate,
 And, when fate shows him he 's mistaken there, Die with all good men's praise, and yield his place To Paul and George intent to try their chance !
 Florence exists because these pass away ;
 She 's a contrivance to supply a type Of Man, which men's deficiencies refuse ;
 She binds so many, that she grows out of them—Stands steady o'er their numbers, though they change
 And pass away—there 's always what upholds, Always enough to fashion the great show.
 As, see, yon hanging city, in the sun,
 Of shapely cloud substantially the same !
 A thousand vapours rise and sink again,
 Are interfused, and live their life and die,— Yet ever hangs the steady show 't the air Under the sun's straight influence : that is well !
 That is worth heaven to hold, and God to bless !
 And so is Florence,—the unseen sun above, Which draws and holds suspended all of us,— Binds transient mists and vapours into one, Differing from each and better than they all.
 And shall she dare to stake this permanence On any one man's faith ? Man's heart is weak, And its temptations many : let her prove Each servant to the very uttermost Before she grant him her reward, I say !
Dom. And as for hearts she chances to mistake, Wronged hearts, not destined to receive reward,

Though they deserve it, did she only know !
 —What should she do for these ?
Brac. What does she not ?
 Say, that she gives them but herself to serve !
 Here 's Luria—what had profited his strength,
 When half an hour of sober fancying Had shown him step by step the uselessness Of strength exerted for its proper sake ?
 But the truth is, she did create that strength, Drew to the end the corresponding means.
 The world is wide—are we the only men ?
 Oh, for the time, the social purpose's sake, Use words agreed on, bandy epithets, Call any man, sole great and wise and good !
 But shall we, therefore, standing by ourselves, Insult our souls and God with the same speech ?
 There, swarm the ignoble thousands under Him—What marks us from the hundreds and the tens ?
 Florence took up, turned all one way the soul Of Luria with its fires, and here he stands !
 She takes me out of all the world as him, Fixing my coldness till like ice it checks
 The fire ! So, Braccio, Luria, which is best ?
Lur. Ah, brave me ? And is this indeed the way To gain your good word and sincere esteem ?
 Am I the baited tiger that must turn And fight his baiters to deserve their praise ?
 Obedience has no fruit then ?—Be it so Do you indeed remember I stand here
 The Captain of the conquering army,—mine—
 With all your tokens, vraise and promise, ready

To show for what their names were when you gave,
 Not what you style them now you take
 away ?
 If I call in my troops to arbitrate,
 And in their first enthusiastic thrill Of victory, tell them how you menace
 me—Commending to their plain instinctive
 sense,
 My story first, your comment afterward,—
 Will they take, think you, part with you or me ?
 When I say simply, I, the man they
 know,
 Ending my work, ask payment, and find
 Florence
 Has all this while provided silently Against the day of pay and proving
 words,
 By what you call my sentence that's
 to come—
 Will they sit waiting it complacently ?
 When I resist that sentence at their
 head,
 What will you do, my mild antagonist ?
Brac. I will rise up like fire, proud and triumphant That Florence knew you thoroughly and by me,
 And so was saved. 'See, Italy,' I'll
 say,
 'The need of our precautions ! here's
 a man
 Was far advanced, just touched on the reward
 Less subtle cities had accorded him ; But we were wiser : at the end comes
 this !'
 And from that minute all your strength will go.
 The very stones of Florence cry against The all-exacting, unenduring Luria, Resenting her first slight probation
 thus ;
 As if he, only, shone and cast no shade, He, only, walked the earth with privilege Against suspicion, free from causing
 fear :
 So, for the first inquisitive mother's-
 word,

He turned, and stood on his defence,
 forsooth !
 Reward ? You will not be worth punishment !
Lur. And Florence knew me thus !
 Thus I have lived,— And thus you, with the clear fine intellect, Braccio, the cold acute instructed
 mind,
 Out of the stir, so calm and unconfused, Reported me—how could you otherwise !
 Ay ?—and what dropped from you, just now, moreover ?
 Your information, Puccio ?—did your skill
 And understanding sympathy approve Such a report of me ? Was this the
 end ?
 Or is even this the end ? Can I stop
 here—
 You, Lady, with the woman's stand
 apart,
 The heart to see with, not man's learned
 eyes,
 ... I cannot fathom why you should destroy
 The unoffending one, you call your
 friend—
 So, looking at the good examples here
 Of friendship, 'tis but natural I ask—Had you a further end, in all you
 spoke,
 Than profit to me, in those instances Of perfidy from Florence to her chiefs—All I remember now for the first
 time ?
Dom. I am a daughter of the Traver-sari,
 Sister of Porzio and of Berto both.
 I have foreseen all that has come to pass.
 I knew the Florence that could doubt their faith, Must needs mistrust a stranger's—holding back Reward from them, must hold back his reward.
 And I believed, the shame they bore and died,
 He would not bear, but live and fight against—

Seeing he was of other stuff than they.

Lur. Hear them ! All these against one foreigner !

And all this while, where is in the whole world

To his good faith a single witness ?

Tiburzio. [who has entered during the preceding dialogue.] Here !

Thus I bear witness to it, not in word But deed. I live for Pisa ; she's not lost

By many chances—much prevents from that !

Her army has been beaten, I am here,
But Lucca comes at last, one chance exists.

I rather would see Pisa three times lost Than saved by any traitor, even by you ;

The example of a traitor's happy fortune Would bring more evil in the end than good ;—

Pisa rejects such : save yourself and her !
I, in her name, resign forthwith to you My charge,—the highest of her offices.
You shall not, by my counsel, turn on Florence

Her army, give her calumny that ground—

Nor bring it with you : be you all we gain !

And all she'll lose,—a head to deck some bridge,

And save the crown's cost that should deck the head.

Leave her to perish in her perfidy, Plague-stricken and stripped naked to all eyes,

A proverb and a bye-word in all mouths !
Go you to Pisa ! Florence is my place—

Leave me to tell her of the rectitude, I, from the first, told Pisa, knowing it.
To Pisa !

Dom. Ah, my Braccio, are you caught ?

Brac. Puccio, good soldier and selected man,

Whom I have ever kept beneath my eye, Ready, as fit, to serve in this event

Florence, who clear foretold it from the first—

Through me, she gives you the command and charge

She takes, through me, from him who held it late !

A painful trial, very sore, was yours :
All that could draw out, marshal in array

The selfish passions 'gainst the public good—

Slights, scorn, neglects, were heaped on you to bear :

And ever you did bear and bow the head !

It had been sorry trial, to precede Your feet, hold up the promise of reward

For luring gleam ; your footsteps kept the track

Through dark and doubt : take all the light at once !

Trial is over, consummation shines ;
Well have you served, as well henceforth command !

Puc. No, no . . . I dare not ! I am grateful, glad ;

But Luria—you shall understand he's wronged—

And he's my Captain—this is not the way

We soldiers climb to fortune : think again !

The sentence is not even passed, beside !

I dare not . . . where's the soldier could ?

Lur. Now, Florence—Is it to be ?—You will know all the strength

Of the savage—to your neck the proof must go ?

You will prove the brute nature ? Ah, I see !

The savage plainly is impassible—
He keeps his calm way through insulting words,

Sarcastic looks, sharp gestures—one of which Would stop you, fatal to your finer sense :

But if he steadily advances, still Without a mark upon his callous hide,

Through the mere brushwood you grow angry with,

And leave the tatters of your flesh upon,

—You have to learn that when the true bar comes,
The thick mid-forest, the real obstacle,
Which when you reach, you give the labour up, Nor dash on, but lie down composed before,

—He goes against it, like the brute he is!
It falls before him, or he dies in his course!

I kept my course through past ingratitude—

I saw—it does seem, now, as if I saw,
Could not but see, those insults as they fell,

—Ay, let them glance from off me, very like,

Laughing, perhaps, to think the quality
You grew so bold on, while you so

The Moor's dull mute inapprehensive mood, Was saving you. I bore and kept my course.

Now real wrong fronts me—see if I succumb!
Florence withstands me?—I will punish her!

At night my sentence will arrive, you say!

Till then I cannot, if I would, rebel —Unauthorized to lay my office down, Retaining my full power to will and do:
After—it is to see. Tiburzio, thanks!
Go; you are free: join Lucca. I suspend

All further operations till to-night.
Thank you, and for the silence most of all!

[To Brac.] Let my complacent bland accuser go,

And carry his self-approving head and heart

Safe through the army which would trample him

Dead in a moment at my word or sign!
Go, sir, to Florence; tell friends what I say—

That while I wait their sentence, theirs waits them!

[To Dom.] You, Lady,—you have black Italian eyes!

I would be generous if I might . . . Oh, yes—

For I remember how so oft you seemed Inclined at heart to break the barrier down

Which Florence finds God built between us both.

Alas, for generosity! this hour Demands strict justice: bear it as you may!

I must—the Moor,—the Savage,—pardon you.

[To Puc.] Puccio, my trusty soldier, see them forth!

ACT IV

EVENING.

Enter PUCCIO and JACOPO.

Puc. What Luria will do? Ah, 'tis yours, fair sir, Your and your subtle-witted master's part,

To tell me that; I tell you what he can.

Jac. Friend, you mistake my station: I observe

The game, watch how my betters play, no more.

Puc. But mankind are not pieces—there's your fault!

You cannot push them, and, the first move made,

Lean back to study what the next should be,

In confidence that, when 'tis fixed upon,
You'll find just where you left them, blacks and whites:

Men go on moving when your hand's away.

You build, I notice, firm on Luria's faith

This whole time,—firmer than I choose to build,

Who never doubted it—of old, that is—
With Luria in his ordinary mind:

But now, oppression makes the wise man mad.

How do I know he will not turn and stand

And hold his own against you, as he may?
Suppose he but withdraws to Pisa—well,—

Then, even if all happens to your wish,
Which is a chance...

Jac. Nay—'twas an oversight, Not waiting till the proper warrant
came:

You could not take what was not ours
to give.

But when at night the sentence really comes,

And Florence authorizes past dispute Luria's removal and your own advance,
You will perceive your duty and accept?

Puc. Accept what? muster-rolls of soldiers' names?

An army upon paper?—I want men, Their hearts as well as hands—and where's a heart

That's not with Luria, in the multitude I come from walking through by Luria's
side?

You gave them Luria, set him on to grow, Head-like, upon their trunk, one blood feeds both,

They feel him there, and live, and well know why!

—For they do know, if you are ignorant, Who kept his own place and respected theirs,

Managed their ease, yet never spared
his own.

All was your deed: another might have served—

There's peradventure no such dearth of men—

But you chose Luria—so, they grew to
him.

And now, for nothing they can understand,

Luria's removed, off is to roll the head—
The body's mine—much I shall do with it!

Jac. That's at the worst.

Puc. No—at the best, it is!
Best, do you hear? I saw them by his
side.

Only we two with Luria in the camp Are left that know the secret? You think that?

Hear what I saw: from rear to van, no
heart

But felt the quiet patient hero there Was wronged, nor in the moveless ranks
an eye

But glancing told its fellow the whole story

Of that convicted silent knot of spies Who passed thro' them to Florence; they might pass—

No breast but gladlier beat when free of such!

Our troops will catch up Luria, close him round,

Lead him to Florence as their natural
lord,

Partake his fortunes, live or die with
him.

Jac. And by mistake catch up along with him

Puccio, no doubt, compelled in self-despite

To still continue Second in Command!

Puc. No, Sir, no second nor so fortunate!

Your tricks succeed with me too well
for that!

I am as you have made me, and shall
die

A mere trained fighting-hack to serve your end;

With words, you laugh at while they leave your mouth,

For my life's rules and ordinance of
God!

I have to do my duty, keep my faith, And earn my praise, and guard against my blame,

As I was trained. I shall accept your
charge,

And fight against one better than myself,

Spite of my heart's conviction of his worth—

That, you may count on!—just as hitherto

I have gone on, persuaded I was wronged,

Slighted, and moody, terms we learn by rote,—

All because Luria superseded me—Because the better nature, fresh-inspired,

Mounted above me to its proper place!
What mattered all the kindly gracious-
ness,

And cordial brother's-bearing? This was clear—

I, once the captain, was subaltern now,
And so must keep complaining like a fool !

Go, take the curse of a lost man, I say !
You neither play your puppets to the end, Nor treat the real man,—for his real-ness' sake

Thrust rudely in their place,—with such regard

As might console them for their altered rank.

Me, the mere steady soldier, you depose For Luria, and here's all your pet deserves !

Of what account, then, are my services ?
One word for all : whatever Luria does, —If backed by his indignant troops he turns

In self-defence and Florence goes to ground,—

Or for a signal, everlasting shame, He pardons you, simply seeks better
friends

And heads the Pisan and the Lucchese troops

—And if I, for you ingrates past belief, Resolve to fight against a man called false,

Who, inasmuch as he was true, fights
there—

Whichever way he win, he wins for me,
For every soldier, for the true and good !
Sir, chronicling the rest, omit not this !

As they go, enter LURIA and HUSAIN.

Hus. Saw'st thou ?—For they are gone ! The world lies bare Before thee, to be tasted, felt and seen Like what it is, now Florence goes
away !

Thou livest now, with men art man
again !

Those Florentines were eyes to thee of
old ;

But Braccio, but Domizia, gone is each :
There lie beneath thee thine own multitudes.

Saw'st thou ?

Lur. I saw.

Hus. Then, hold thy course, my King !

The years return. Let thy heart have its way !

Ah, they would play with thee as with all else ?

Turn thee to use, and fashion thee anew, Find out God's fault in thee as in the
rest ?

Oh, watch but, listen only to these men Once at their occupation ! Ere ye know, The free great heaven is shut, their stifling pall

Drops till it frets the very tingling hair, So weighs it on our head,—and, for the
earth,

Our common earth is tethered up and
down,

Over and across—' here shalt thou move,' they say !

Lur. Ay, Husain ?

Hus. So have they spoiled all beside !

So stands a man girt round with Florentines,

Priests, greybeards, Braccios, women, boys and spies,

All in one tale, each singing the same
song,

How thou must house, and live at bed and board,

Take pledge and give it, go their every
way,

Breathe to their measure, make thy blood beat time

With theirs—or, all is nothing—thou art lost—

A savage . . . how shouldst thou perceive as they ?

Feel glad to stand 'neath God's close naked hand !

Look up to it ! Why, down they pull thy neck,

Lest it crush thee, who feel'st it and wouldst kiss,

Without their priests that needs must glove it first,

Lest peradventure it offend thy lip !

Love Woman ! Why, a very beast thou art !

Thou must . . .

Lur. Peace, Husain !

Hus. Ay, but, spoiling all,
For all, else true things, substituting
false,

That they should dare spoil, of all instincts, thine !

Should dare to take thee with thine instincts up, Thy battle-ardours, like a ball of fire,
 And class them and allow them place and play
 So far, no farther—unabashed the while!
 Thou with the soul that never can take rest—Thou born to do, undo, and do again,
 And never to be still,—wouldst thou make war?
 Oh, that is commendable, just and right!
 ‘Come over,’ say they, ‘have the honour due In living out thy nature! Fight thy best:
 It is to be for Florence, not thyself!
 For thee, it were a horror and a plague;
 For us, when war is made for Florence, see, How all is changed: the fire that fed on earth
 Now towers to heaven!’—
Lur. And what sealed up so long My Husain’s mouth?
Hus. Oh, friend, oh, lord—for me, What am I?—I was silent at thy side,
 Who am a part of thee. It is thy hand, Thy foot that glows when in the heart fresh blood
 Boils up, thou heart of me! Now, live again!
 Again love as thou likest, hate as free!
 Turn to no Braccios nor Domizias now,
 To ask, before thy very limbs dare move,
 If Florence’ welfare be concerned thereby!
Lur. So clear what Florence must expect of me?
Hus. Both armies against Florence!
 Take revenge!
 Wide, deep—to live upon, in feeling now,—
 And after, in remembrance, year by year—
 And, with the dear conviction, die at last!
 She lies now at thy pleasure: pleasure have!

Their vaunted intellect that gilds our sense,
 And blends with life, to show it better by,
 —How think’st thou?—I have turned that light on them!
 They called our thirst of war a transient thing;
 ‘The battle-element must pass away From life,’ they said, ‘and leave a tranquil world.’
 —Master, I took their light and turned it full On that dull turgid vein they said would burst
 And pass away; and as I looked on life, Still everywhere I tracked this, though it hid And shifted, lay so silent as it thought, Changed off the hue yet ever was the same.
 Why, ’twas all fighting, all their nobler life!
 All work was fighting, every harm—defeat,
 And every joy obtained—a victory!
 Be not their dupe!
 —Their dupe? That hour is past!
 Here stand’st thou in the glory and the calm!
 All is determined! Silence for me now!
 [HUSAIN goes.]
Lur. Have I heard all?
Dom. [advancing from the background.]
 No, Luria, I remain!
 Not from the motives these have urged on thee, Ignoble, insufficient, incomplete,
 And pregnant each with sure seeds of decay,
 As failing of sustainment from thyself, —Neither from low revenge, nor Nor savage lust of power, nor one, nor all, Shalt thou abolish Florence! I proclaim The angel in thee, and reject the sprites Which ineffectual crowd about his strength,

And mingle with his work and claim a share !
 Inconsciously to the augustest end Thou hast arisen : second not in rank So much as time, to him who first ordained
 That Florence, thou art to destroy,
 should be.
 Yet him a star, too, guided, who broke
 first
 The pride of lonely power, the life
 apart,
 And made the eminences, each to each,
 Lean o'er the level world and let it lie Safe from the thunder henceforth 'neath their tops ;
 So the few famous men of old combined,
 And let the multitude rise underneath, And reach them, and unite—so Florence
 grew :
 Braccio speaks true, it was well worth the price.
 But when the sheltered many grew in
 pride
 And grudged the station of the elected ones,
 Who, greater than their kind, are truly great
 Only in voluntary servitude—Time was for thee to rise, and thou art
 here.
 Such plague possessed this Florence :
 who can tell
 The mighty girth and greatness at the
 heart
 Of those so perfect pillars of the grove She pulled down in her envy ? Who
 as I,
 The light weak parasite born but to twine Round each of them and, measuring them, live ?
 My light love keeps the matchless circle
 safe,
 My slender life proves what has pass'd
 away.
 I lived when they departed ; lived to cling
 To thee, the mighty stranger ; thou wouldst rise
 And burst the thralldom, and avenge, I knew.

I have done nothing ; all was thy strong heart.
 But a bird's weight can break the infant tree
 Which after holds an aery in its arms, And 'twas my care that nought should warp thy spire
 From rising to the height ; the roof is reached :
 Break through and there extends the sky above !
 Go on to Florence, Luria ! 'Tis man's
 cause !
 Fail thou, and thine own fall is least to dread !
 Thou keepest Florence in her evil way, Encouragest her sin so much the more—
 And while the bloody Past is justified, Thou all the surelier dost the Future
 wrong,
 The chiefs to come, the Lurias yet unborn,
 That, greater than thyself, are reached o'er thee Who giv'st the vantage-ground their foes require,
 As o'er my prostrate House thyself wast reached !
 Man calls thee, God requites thee. All
 is said,
 The mission of my House fulfilled at
 last :
 And the mere woman, speaking for
 herself,
 Reserves speech—it is now no woman's
 time.

[DOMIZIA goes.
Lur. Thus at the last must figure Luria, then !
 Doing the various work of all his
 friends,
 And answering every purpose save his
 own.
 No doubt, 'tis well for them to wish ;
 but him—
 After the exploit what were left ?
 Perchance
 A little pride upon the swarthy brow, At having brought successfully to bear
 'Gainst Florence' self her own especial arms,—
 Her craftiness, impelled by fiercer
 strength

From Moorish blood than feeds the northern wit—
 But after!—once the easy vengeance willed, Beautiful Florence at a word laid low —(Not in her Domes and Towers and Palaces, Not even in a dream, that outrage!)—
 low,
 As shamed in her own eyes henceforth
 for ever,
 Low, for the rival cities round to see,
 Conquered and pardoned by a hureling Moor!
 —For him, who did the irreparable
 wrong,
 What would be left, his life's illusion fled,—
 What hope or trust in the forlorn wide
 world?
 How strange that Florence should mistake me so!
 Whence grew this? What withdrew her faith from me?
 Some cause! These fretful-blooded children talk Against their mother, — they are wronged, they say—Notable wrongs her smile makes up
 again!
 So, taking fire at each supposed offence,
 They may speak rashly, suffer for their
 speech:
 But what could it have been in word or deed
 That injured me? Some one word spoken more Out of my heart, and all had changed
 perhaps!
 My fault, it must have been,—for,
 what gain they?
 Why risk the danger? See, what I could do!
 And my fault, wherefore visit upon
 them,
 My Florentines? The generous revenge,
 I meditate! To stay here passively, Go at their summons, be as they dispose—Why, if my very soldiers keep their ranks,

And if I pacify my chiefs, what then?
 I ruin Florence, teach her friends mistrust,
 Confirm her enemies in harsh belief, And when she finds one day, as she must find,
 The strange mistake, and how my heart was hers, Shall it console me, that my Floren-
 tines
 Walk with a sadder step, a graver face, Who took me with such frankness, praised me so,
 At the glad outset? Had they loved me less,
 They had less feared what seemed a change in me.
 And after all, who did the harm? Not
 they!
 How could they interpose with those old fools
 In the council? Suffer for those old fools' sakes—
 They, who made pictures of me, sang the songs About my battles? Ah, we Moors get blind
 Out of our proper world where we can
 see!
 The sun that guides is closer to us!
 There—
 There, my own orb! He sinks from out the sky!
 Why, there! a whole day has he blessed the land, My land, our Florence all about the hills,
 The fields and gardens, vineyards, olive-grounds,
 All have been blest—and yet we Florentines
 With minds intent upon our battle here, Found that he rose too soon, or else too
 late,
 Gave us no vantage, or gave Pisa
 more—
 And so we wronged him! Does he turn in ire
 To burn the earth that cannot understand?
 Or drop out quietly, and leave the sky, His task once ended? Night wipes blame away.

Another morning from my East shall
 spring
 And find all eyes at leisure, more disposed
 To watch and understand its work, no
 doubt.
 So, praise the new sun, the successor
 praise,
 Praise the new Luria, and forget the old!
[Taking a phial from his breast.
 —Strange! This is all I brought from my own land
 To help me: Europe would supply the
 rest,
 All needs beside, all other helps save
 this!
 I thought of adverse fortune, battles
 lost,
 The natural upbraidings of the loser,
 And then this quiet remedy to seek At end of the disastrous day—

[He drinks.
 'Tis sought!

This was my happy triumph-morning:
 Florence
 Is saved: I drink this, and ere night,— die!—Strange!

ACT V

NIGHT.

LURIA and PUCCIO.

Lur. I thought to do this, not to talk this: well, Such were my projects for the city's
 good,
 To help her in attack or by defence.
 Time, here as elsewhere, soon or late may take Our foresight by surprise thro' chance and change;

But not a little we provide against —If you see clear on every point.

Puc. Most clear.

Lur. Then all is said—not much, if you count words,
 Yet for an understanding ear enough;
 And all that my brief stay permits,
 beside.
 Nor must you blame me, as I sought to teach
 My elder in command, or threw a doubt

Upon the very skill, it comforts me To know I leave,—your steady soldier-ship
 Which never failed me: yet, because it seemed A stranger's eye might haply note defect
 That skill, through use and custom, overlooks,
 I have gone into the old cares once
 more,
 As if I had to come and save again Florence—that May—that morning!
 'Tis night now.
 Well—I broke off with?...
 Puc. Of the past campaign You spoke—of measures to be kept in
 mind
 For future use.

Lur. True, so... but, time—no time!
 As well end here: remember this, and
 me!

Farewell now!
 Puc. Dare I speak?
 Lur. —The South o' the river—
 How is the second stream called... no,
 —the third?

Puc. Pesa.

Lur. And a stone's-cast from the fording-place,
 To the East,—the little mount's name?
 Puc. Lupo.

Lur. Ay!
 Ay—there the tower, and all that side is safe!

With San Romano, West of Evola, San Miniato, Scala, Empoli, Five towers in all,—forget not!

Puc. Fear not me!

Lur. —Nor to memorialize the Council now,
 I' the easy hour, on those battalions'
 claim

On the other side, by Staggia on the hills, Who kept the Sienese at check!

Puc. One word—

Sir, I must speak! That you submit
 yourself
 To Florence' bidding, howsoever it
 prove,
 And give up the command to me—is
 much,

Too much, perhaps: but what you tell me now,
Even will affect the other course you choose—

Poor as it may be, peril even that!
Refuge you seek at Pisa: yet these plans

All militate for Florence, all conclude Your formidable work to make her queen

Of the country,—which her rivals rose against

When you began it,—which to interrupt,

Pisa would buy you off at any price!
You cannot mean to sue for Pisa's help,
With this made perfect and on record?

Lur. I—
At Pisa, and for refuge, do you say?

Puc. Where are you going, then?
You must decide

On leaving us, a silent fugitive, Alone, at night—you, stealing through our lines,

Who were this morning's Luria,—you
escape

To painfully begin the world once more,
With such a Past, as it had never been!
Where are you going?

Lur. Not so far, my Puccio, But that I hope to hear, enjoy and
praise

(If you mind praise from your old captain yet)

Each happy blow you strike for Florence!

Puc. —Ay, But ere you gain your shelter, what may come?

For see—though nothing's surely known as yet,

Still—truth must out—I apprehend the worst.

If mere suspicion stood for certainty Before, there's nothing can arrest the steps

Of Florence toward your ruin, once on foot.

Forgive her fifty times, it matters not!
And having disbelieved your innocence,
How can she trust your magnanimity?
You may do harm to her—why then,
you will!

And Florence is sagacious in pursuit.
Have you a friend to count on?

Lur. One sure friend.

Puc. Potent?

Lur. All-potent.

Puc. And he is apprised?

Lur. He waits me.

Puc. So!—Then I, put in your place,

Making my profit of all done by you, Calling your labours mine, reaping their fruit,

To these, the State's gift, now add this
of yours—

That I may take to my peculiar store
All your instructions to do Florence good.

And if, by putting some few happily In practice, I should both advantage
her

And draw down honour on myself,— what then?

Lur. Do it, my Puccio! I shall know and praise.

Puc. Though, so, men say, 'mark what we gain by change

—A Puccio for a Luria!

Lur. Even so!

Puc. Then, not for fifty hundred Florences,

Would I accept one office save my own, Fill any other than my rightful post

Here at your feet, my Captain and my Lord!

That such a cloud should break, such trouble be,

Ere a man settle, soul and body, down Into his true place and take rest for ever!

Here were my wise eyes fixed on your right-hand,

And so the bad thoughts came and the worse words,

And all went wrong and painfully
enough,—

No wonder,—till, the right spot stumbled on,

All the jar stops, and there is peace at
once!

I am yours now,—a tool your right-hand wields!

God's love, that I should live, the man
I am,

On orders, warrants, patents and the like,

As if there were no glowing eye i' the world,
 To glance straight inspiration to my brain,
 No glorious heart to give mine twice the beats!
 For, see—my doubt, where is it?—fear? 'tis flown!
 And Florence and her anger are a tale To scare a child! Why, half-a-dozen words Will tell her, spoken as I now can Her error, my past folly—and all's right,
 And you are Luria, our great chief again!
 Or at the worst—which worst were best of all—
 To exile or to death I follow you!
Lur. Thanks, Puccio! Let me use the privilege You grant me: if I still command you, —stay!
 Remain here—my vicegerent, it shall be,
 And not successor: let me, as of old,
 Still serve the State, my spirit prompting yours—Still triumph, one for both. There! Leave me now!
 You cannot disobey my first command?
 Remember what I spoke of Jacopo,
 And what you promised to concert with him!
 Send him to speak with me—nay, no farewell—You shall be by me when the sentence comes. [Puccio goes.] So, there's one Florentine returns again!
 Out of the genial morning-company,
 One face is left to take into the night.

Enter JACOPO.

Jac. I wait for your commands, Sir.
Lur. What, so soon?
 I thank your ready presence and fair word.
 I used to notice you in early days
 As of the other species, so to speak, Those watchers of the lives of us who act—

That weigh our motives, scrutinize our thoughts.
 So, I propound this to your faculty As you would tell me, were a town to take . . . That is, of old. I am departing hence Under these imputations; that is nought—
 I leave no friend on whom they may rebound, Hardly a name behind me in the land,
 Being a stranger: all the more behoves That I regard how altered were the case With natives of the country, Florentines, On whom the like mischance should fall: the roots
 O' the tree survive the ruin of the trunk—
 No root of mine will throb—you understand.
 But I had predecessors, Florentines, Accused as I am now, and punished so—The Traversari: you know more than I How stigmatized they are, and lost in shame.
 Now, Puccio, who succeeds me in command, Both served them and succeeded, in due time;
 He knows the way, holds proper documents,
 And has the power to lay the simple truth Before an active spirit, as I know yours:
 And also there's Tiburzio, my new friend,
 Will, at a word, confirm such evidence,
 He being the chivalric soul we know.
 I put it to your instinct—were't not well,
 —A grace, though but for contrast's sake, no more,— If you who witness, and have borne a share Involuntarily, in my mischance, Should, of your proper motion, set your skill To indicate—that is, investigate
 The reason or the wrong of what befell
 Those famous citizens, your countrymen?

Nay, you shall promise nothing : but reflect,

And if your sense of justice prompt you
—good !

Jac. And if, the trial past, their fame stand clear

To all men's eyes, as yours, my Lord, to mine—

Their ghosts may sleep in quiet satisfied !

For me, a straw thrown up into the air,
My testimony goes for a straw's worth.
I used to hold by the instructed
brain,

And move with Braccio as the master-wind ;

The heart leads sureher : I must move
with you—

As greatest now, who ever were the best.
So, let the last and humblest of your servants

Accept your charge, as Braccio's heretofore,

And offer homage, by obeying you !
[JACOPO goes.]

Lur. Another!—Luria goes not poorly
forth !

If we could wait ! The only fault's with time :

All men become good creatures—but so slow !

Enter DOMIZIA

Lur. Ah, you once more ?

Dom. Domizia, that you knew, Performed her task, and died with it.
'Tis I,

Another woman, you have never known.
Let the Past sleep now.

Lur. I have done with it.

Dom. How inexhaustibly the spirit grows !

One object, she seemed erewhile born to reach

With her whole energies and die content,—

So like a wall at the world's end it
stood,

With nought beyond to live for,—is it reached ?

Already are new undreamed energies Outgrowing under, and extending further

To a new object ;—there's another
world !

See ! I have told the purpose of my life :
'Tis gained—you are decided, well or ill—

You march on Florence, or submit to
her—

My work is done with you, your brow declares.

But—leave you ? More of you seems yet to reach !

I stay for what I just begin to see.
Lur. So that you turn not to the
Past !

Dom. You trace Nothing but ill in it—my selfish impulse,

Which sought its ends and disregarded
yours ?

Lur. Speak not against your nature : best, each keep

His own—you, yours—most, now, when I keep mine,

—At least, fall by it, having too weakly
stood.

God's finger marks distinctions, all so
fine,

We would confound : the lesser has its use,

Which, when it apes the greater, is foregone.

I, born a Moor, lived half a Florentine ;
But, punished properly, can end, a Moor.

Beside, there is what makes me understand

Your nature : I have seen it.

Dom. Aught like mine ?
Lur. In my own East . . . if you would stoop and help

My barbarous illustration ! it sounds ill—

Yet there's no wrong at bottom—rather, praise.

Dom. Well ?

Lur. We have creatures there, which if you saw

The first time, you would doubtless marvel at,

For their surpassing beauty, craft, and
strength.

And though it were a lively moment's shock

Wherein you found the purpose of Giving Thought's character and per-those tongues manence That seemed innocuous in their lambent To the too-transitory Feeling there—play, Writing God's messages in mortal Yet, once made know such grace re- words!
 quires such guard, . Instead of which, I leave my fated field Your reason soon would acquiesce, I For this where such a task is needed think, least,
 In the wisdom which made all things Where all are born consummate in the art for the best— I just perceive a chance of making So, take them, good with ill, con- mine,— tentedly, And then, deserting thus my early post, The prominent beauty with the secret I wonder that the men I come among sting. Mistake me! There, how all had I am glad to have seen you wondrous understood, Florentines: Still brought fresh stuff for me to stamp and keep,
 Yet . . . Fresh instinct to translate them into law!
Dom. I am here to listen. Me, who . . .
Lur. My own East! Dom. Who here the greater task How nearer God we were! He glows achieve, above More needful even: who have brought With scarce an intervention, presses close fresh stuff And palpitatingly, His soul o'er ours! For us to mould, interpret and prove We feel Him, nor by painful reason right,— know! New feelings fresh from God, which,
 The everlasting minute of creation could we know Is felt there; Now it is, as it was O' the instant, where had been our need Then; of them?
 All changes at His instantaneous will, —Whose life re-teaches us what life Not by the operation of a law should be,
 Whose maker is elsewhere at other What faith is, loyalty and simpleness, work! All, their revealment taught us so long His hand is still engaged upon His since world— That, having mere tradition of the Man's praise can forward it, Man's fact,— prayer suspend, Truth copied falteringly from copies For is not God all-mighty?—To recast faint, The world, erase old things and make The early traits all dropped away,—we them new, said What costs it Him? So, man breathes On sight of faith like yours, 'so looks nobly there! not faith And inasmuch as Feeling, the East's We understand, described and taught gift, before.'
 Is quick and transient—comes, and lo, But still, the truth was shown; and is gone— though at first While Northern Thought is slow and It suffer from our haste, yet trace by durable, trace Surely a mission was reserved for me, Old memories reappear, the likeness Who, born with a perception of the power grows, And use of the North's thought for us Our slow Thought does its work, and of the East, all's re-known.

Oh, noble Luria! what you have decreed I see not, but no animal revenge,
 No brute-like punishment of bad by worse—
 It cannot be, the gross and vulgar way Traced for me by convention and mistake, Has gained that calm approving eye and brow!
 Spare Florence, after all! Let Luria trust
 To his own soul, and I will trust to him!
Lur. In time!
Dom. How, Luria?
Lur. It is midnight now,
 And they arrive from Florence with my fate.
Dom. I hear no step.
Lur. I feel it, as you say.

Enter HUSAIN.
Hus. The man returned from Florence!
Lur. As I knew.
Hus. He seeks thee.
Lur. And I only wait for him.
 Aught else?
Hus. A movement of the Lucchese troops Southward—
Lur. Toward Florence? Have out instantly . . .
 Ah, old use clings! Puccio must care henceforth!
 In—quick—'tis nearly midnight! Bid him come!

Enter TIBURZIO, BRACCIO, and PUCCIO.
Lur. Tiburzio?—not at Pisa?
Tib. I return From Florence: I serve Pisa, and must
 think
 By such procedure I have served her best.
 A people is but the attempt of many To rise to the completer life of one;
 And those who live as models for the mass
 Are singly of more value than they all.
 Such man are you, and such a time is this That your sole fate concerns a nation
 more Than its apparent welfare; and to prove

Your rectitude, and duly crown the
 same,
 Imports it far beyond the day's event, Its battle's loss or gain: the mass
 remains,— Keep but the model safe, new men will rise
 To study it, and other days to prove How great a good was Luria's having lived.
 I might go try my fortune as you bade, And joining Lucca, helped by your
 disgrace,
 Repair our harm—so were to-day's work done;
 But where find Luria for our sons to
 see?
 No, I look farther. I have testified (Declaring my submission to your arms)
 Her full success to Florence, making clear Your probity, as none else could: I spoke—
 And it shone clearly!
Lur. Ah—till Braccio spoke!
Brac. Till Braccio told in just a word the whole—
 His old great error, and return to knowledge:
 Which told . . . Nay, Luria, I should droop the head,
 I, whom shame rests with! yet I dare look up,
 Sure of your pardon when I sue for it, Knowing you wholly—so, let midnight
 end!
 Sunrise approaches! Still you answer
 not?
 The shadow of the night is past away;
 Our circling faces here 'mid which it grew Are all that felt it: they close round you now
 To witness its completest vanishing.
 Speak, Luria! Here begins your true career:
 Look up to it! All now is possible,
 The glory and the grandeur of each
 dream:
 And every prophecy shall be fulfilled Save one—(nay, now your word must come at last)
 —That you would punish Florence!
Hus. [pointing to LURIA'S dead body.]
 That is done.

A SOUL'S TRAGEDY

1846

PART FIRST, BEING WHAT WAS CALLED THE POETRY OF CHIAPPINO'S LIFE: AND PART SECOND, ITS PROSE

PART I

Inside LUITOLFO'S house at Faenza.

CHIAPPINO, EULALIA.

Eu. What is it keeps Luitolfo?
Night's fast falling,
And 'twas scarce sunset . . . had the Ave-bell Sounded before he sought the Provost's
House?
I think not: all he had to say would
take

Few minutes, such a very few, to say!
How do you think, Chiappino? If our lord

The Provost were less friendly to your
friend

Than everybody here professes him, I should begin to tremble—should not
you?

Why are you silent when so many times
I turn and speak to you?

Ch. That's good!

Eu. You laugh?

Ch. Yes. I had fancied nothing that bears price

In the whole world was left to call my
own;

And, may be, felt a little pride thereat.
Up to a single man's or woman's love, Down to the right in my own flesh and
blood,

There's nothing mine, I fancied,—till
you spoke!

—Counting, you see, as 'nothing' the permission

To study this peculiar lot of mine In silence: well, go silence with the
rest

Of the world's good! What can I say, shall serve?

Eu. This,—lest you, even more than needs, embitter

Our parting: say your wrongs have cast, for once,

A cloud across your spirit!

Ch. How a cloud?

Eu. No man nor woman loves you, did you say?

Ch. My God, were 't not for Thee!

Eu. Ay, God remains,
Even did men forsake you.

Ch. Oh, not so!

Were 't not for God, I mean, what hope of truth—

Speaking truth, hearing truth, would stay with man?

I, now—the homeless, friendless, penni-
less,

Proscribed and exiled wretch who speak
to you,—

Ought to speak truth, yet could not, for my death,

(The thing that tempts me most) help speaking lies

About your friendship, and Luitolfo's courage,

And all our townsfolk's equanimity,— Through sheer incompetence to rid
myself

Of the old miserable lying trick Caught from the liars I have lived with,

—God,

Did I not turn to Thee! it is Thy prompting

I dare to be ashamed of, and Thy counsel

Would die along my coward lip, I
know—

But I do turn to Thee! This craven
tongue,

These features which refuse the soul its
way,

Reclaim Thou! Give me truth—truth, power to speak —And after be sole present to approve

The spoken truth!—or, stay, tha spoken truth,
Who knows but you, too, migh
approve?

Eu. Ah, well—Keep silence, then, Chiappino!

Ch. You would hear And shall now,—why the thing we'r pleased to style
My gratitude to you and all you
friends

For service done me, is just gratitude
So much as yours was service—and no
more.

I was born here, so was Luitolfo,—both At one time, much with the same circumstance

Of rank and wealth; and both, up to this night

Of parting company, have side by side Still fared, he in the sunshine—I, the shadow.

'Why?' asks the world: 'Because, replies the world

To its complacent self, 'these play-
fellows,

Who took at church the holy-water drop

One from the other's finger, and so
forth,—

Were of two moods: Luitolfo was the proper

Friend-making, everywhere friend-finding soul,

Fit for the sunshine, so, it followed him.

A happy-tempered bringer of the best Out of the worst; who bears with what's past cure,

And puts so good a face on 't—wisely passive

Where action's fruitless, while he remedies

In silence what the foolish rail against;
A man to smooth such natures as

Of opposition must exasperate—

No general gauntlet-gatherer for the

Against the strong, yet over-scrupulous At lucky junctures; one who won't forego

The after-battle work of binding wounds,

Because, forsooth, he'd have to bring
himself

To side with wound-inflictors for their leave!

—Why do you gaze, nor help me to repeat

What comes so glibly from the common
mouth,

About Luitolfo and his so-styled friend?

Eu. Because, that friend's sense is obscured...

Ch. I thought You would be readier with the other half

Of the world's story,—my half!—Yet,
'tis true,

For all the world does say it! Say your worst!

True, I thank God, I ever said 'you
sin,'

When a man did sin: if I could not say it,

I glared it at him,—if I could not glare
it,

I prayed against him,—then my part seemed over;

God's may begin yet—so it will, I trust!

Eu. If the world outraged you, did
we?

Ch. What's 'me' That you use well or ill? It's Man, in
me,

All your successes are an outrage to,
You all, whom sunshine follows, as you
say!

Here's our Faenza birthplace; they send here

A Provost from Ravenna: how he rules,

'ou can at times be eloquent about.

Then, end his rule!'—'Ah yes, one stroke does that!

but patience under wrong works slow and sure.

Must violence still bring peace forth?
He, beside,

Returns so blandly one's obeisance!
ah—

Some latent virtue may be lingering yet, Some human sympathy which, once excite,

and all the lump were leavened quietly—

So, no more talk of striking, for this time !'
 But I, as one of those he rules, won't bear These pretty takings-up and layings-down Our cause, just as you think occasion suits !
 Enough of earnest, is there ? You'll play, will you ?
 Diversify your tactics,—give submission, Obsequiousness and flattery a turn,
 While we die in our misery patient deaths ?
 We all are outraged then, and I the first !
 I, for mankind, resent each shrug and smirk,
 Each beck and bend, each . . . all you do and are,
 I hate !
Eu. We share a common censure, then.
 'Tis well you have not poor Luitolfo's part Nor mine to point out in the wide offence.
Ch. Oh, shall I let you so escape me, Lady ?
 Come, on your own ground, Lady,—from yourself, (Leaving the people's wrong, which most is mine,) What have I got to be so grateful for ?
 These three last fines, no doubt, one on the other Paid by Luitolfo ?
Eu. Shame, Chiappino !
Ch. Shame Fall presently on who deserves it most !
 —Which is to see. He paid my fines—my friend,
 Your prosperous smooth lover presently,
 Then, scarce your wooer,—soon, your husband : well—
 I loved you.
Eu. Hold !
Ch. You knew it, years ago.
 When my voice faltered and my eyes grew dim Because you gave me your silk mask to hold—My voice that greatens when there's need to curse
 The People's Provost to their heart's content, —My eyes, the Provost, who bears all men's eyes, Banishes now because he cannot bear,—
 You knew . . . but you do your parts—my part, I :
 So be it ! you flourish—I decay. All's well !
Eu. I hear this for the first time.
Ch. The fault's there ?
 Then, my days spoke not, and my nights of fire Were voiceless ? Then, the very heart may burst Yet all prove nought, because' no minding speech Tells leisurely that thus it is and thus ?
 Eulalia ! truce with toying for this once !
 A banished fool, who troubles you to-night For the last time—why, what's to fear from me ?
 You knew I loved you !
Eu. Not so, on my faith !
 You were my now-affianced lover's friend—Came in, went out with him, could speak as he.
 All praise your ready parts and pregnant wit ;
 See how your words come from you in a crowd !
 Luitolfo's first to place you o'er himself In all that challenges respect and love :
 Yet you were silent then, who blame me now.
 I say all this by fascination, sure—I am all but wed to one I love, yet listen !
 It must be, you are wronged, and that the wrongs Luitolfo pities . . .
Ch. —You too pity ? Do !
 But hear first what my wrongs are ; so began This talk and so shall end this talk. I say, Was 't not enough that I must strive (I saw)

To grow so far familiar with your charms As next contrive some way to win them —which
 To do, an age seemed far too little—for,
     see!
 We all aspire to Heaven—and there is
     Heaven
 Above us—go there! Dare we go?
     no, surely!
 How dare we go without a reverent
     pause,
 A growing less unfit for Heaven?—
     Even so,
 I dared not speak: the greater fool, it
     seems!
 Was 't not enough to struggle with such folly,
 But I must have, beside, the very man Whose slight, free, loose and incapacious
     soul
 Gave his tongue scope to say whate'er he would —Must have him load me with his benefits
 For fortune's fiercest stroke?
Eu. Justice to him That's now entreating, at his risk
     perhaps,
 Justice for you! Did he once call those acts
 Of simple friendship—bounties, benefits?
Ch. No—the straight course had been to call them so—Then, I had flung them back, and kept
     myself Unhampered, free as he to win the prize
 We both sought—but 'the gold was dross,' he said,
 'He loved me, and I loved him not—to spurn
 A trifle out of superfluity:
 He had forgotten he had done as
     much.
 So had not I!—Henceforth, try as I could
 To take him at his word, there stood by
     you My benefactor—who might speak and laugh
 And urge his nothings—even banter me

Before you—but my tongue was tied,
     A dream!
 Let's wake: your husband . . . how you shake at that!
 Good—my revenge!
Eu. Why should I shake?
     What forced,
 Or forces me to be Luitolfo's bride?
Ch. There's my revenge, that nothing forces you.
 No gratitude, no liking of the eye Nor longing of the heart, but the poor bond
 Of habit—here so many times he came,
 So much he spoke,—all these compose the tie
 That pulls you from me. Well, he paid my fines, Nor missed a cloak from wardrobe, dish from table—
 —He spoke a good word to the Provost
     here—
 Held me up when my fortunes fell away —It had not looked so well to let me
     drop—
 Men take pains to preserve a tree-stump, even,
 Whose boughs they played beneath—much more a friend.
 But one grows tired of seeing, after the
     first,
 Pains spent upon impracticable stuff Like me: I could not change—you know the rest.
 I've spoke my mind too fully out, for
     once,
 This morning to our Provost; so, ere
     night
 I leave the city on pain of death: and
     now
 On my account there's gallant intercession
 Goes forward—that's so graceful!— and anon He'll noisily come back: 'the intercession
 Was made and fails—all's over for us
     both—
 'Tis vain contending—I would better
     go.
 And I do go—and so, to you he turns Light of a load; and ease of that permits

His visage to repair its natural bland Oeconomy, sore broken late to suit My discontent. Thus, all are pleased—you, with him,

He with himself, and all of you with me —Who, say the citizens, had done far better

In letting people sleep upon their woes, If not possessed with talent to relieve
them

When once they woke;—but then I had, they'll say,

Doubtless some unknown compensating
pride

In what I did; and as I seem content With ruining myself, why, so should they be:

And so they are, and so be with his prize

The devil, when he gets them speedily!
Why does not your Luitolfo come?

I long
To don this cloak and take the Lugo path.

It seems you never loved me, then?

Eu. Chiappino!

Ch. Never?

Eu. Never.

Ch. That's sad: say what I might,
There was no helping being sure thus
while

You loved me—love like mine must have return,

I thought—no river starts but to some
sea.

And had you loved me, I could soon devise

Some specious reason why you stifled
love,

Some fancied self-denial on your part,
Which made you choose Luitolfo; so, excepting

From the wide condemnation of all
here,

One woman. Well, the other dream may break!

If I knew any heart, as mine loved you, Loved me, tho' in the vilest breast
'twere lodged,

I should, I think, be forced to love
again:

Else there's no right nor reason in the
world.

Eu. 'If you knew,' say you,—but I did not know:

That's where you're blind, Chiappino!
—a disease

Which if I may remove, I'll not repent The listening to. You cannot, will not,
see

How, place you but in every circumstance

Of us, you are just now indignant at,
You'd be as we.

Ch. I should be? . . . that, again!
I, to my Friend, my Country and my
Love,

Be as Luitolfo and these Faentines?

Eu. As we.

Ch. Now, I'll say something to remember!

I trust in nature for the stable laws Of beauty and utility—Spring shall plant,

And Autumn garner to the end of
time:

I trust in God—the right shall be the
right

And other than the wrong, while He endures:

I trust in my own soul, that can perceive

The outward and the inward, nature's
good

And God's: so, seeing these men and
myself,

Having a right to speak, thus do I
speak.—

I'll not curse . . . God bears with them —well may I—

But I—protest against their claiming
me.

I simply say, if that's allowable, I would not . . . broadly . . . do as they have done.

—God curse this townful of born slaves, bred slaves,

Branded into the blood and bone, slaves! Curse

Whoever loved, above his liberty, House, land or life! and . . .

[A knocking without.
—bless my hero-friend,

Luitolfo!

Eu. How he knocks!

Ch. The peril, Lady!

'Chiappino, I have run a risk! My God!
How when I prayed the Provost—(he's my friend)—

To grant you a week's respite of his sentence

That confiscates your goods, and exiles you,

He shrugged his shoulder—I say, shrugged it! Yes,

And fright of that drove all else from my head.

Here's a good purse of scudi—off with
you!

Lest of that shrug come what God only knows!

The scudi—friend, they're trash—no thanks, I beg!

Take the north gate,—for San Vitale's suburb

Whose double taxes you appealed against,

In discomposure at your ill-success

Is apt to stone you: there, there—only
go!

Beside, Eulalia here looks sleepily.

Shake . . . oh, you hurt me, so you squeeze my wrist!

—Is it not thus you'll speak, adventurous friend?

[As he opens the door, LUITOLFO rushes in, his garments dis-ordered.

Eu. Luitolfo! Blood?

Luit. There's more—and more of it!

Eulalia—take the garment . . . no . . .
you, friend!

You take it and the blood from me—you dare!

Eu. Oh, who has hurt you? where's the wound?

Ch. 'Who,' say you?
The man with many a touch of virtue
yet!

The Provost's friend has proved too frank of speech,

And this comes of it. Miserable hound!
This comes of temporizing, as I said!

Here's fruit of your smooth speeches and fair looks!

Now see my way! As God lives, I go straight

To the palace and do justice, once for all

Luit. What says he?

Ch. I'll do justice on him.

Luit. Him?

Ch. The Provost.

Luit. I've just killed him.

Eu. Oh, my God!

Luit. My friend, they're on my trace —they'll have me—now!

They're round him, busy with him:
soon they'll find

He's past their help, and then they'll be on me!

Chiappino! save Eulalia . . . I forget . . .
Were you not bound . . . for . . .

Ch. Lugo!

Luit. Ah—yes—yes—That was the point I prayed of him to
change.

Well—go—be happy . . . is Eulalia safe?
They're on me!

Ch. 'Tis through me they reach you, then!

Friend, seem the man you are! Lock arms—that's right.

Now tell me what you've done; explain how you

That still professed forbearance, still preached peace,

Could bring yourself . . .

Luit. What was peace for, Chiappino?

I tried peace—did that promise, when peace failed,

Strife should not follow? All my peaceful days

Were just the prelude to a day like this.
I cried 'You call me "friend,"—save my true friend!

Save him, or lose me!'

Ch. But you never said You meant to tell the Provost thus and thus!

Luit. Why should I say it? What else did I mean?

Ch. Well? He persisted?

Luit. 'Would so order it You should not trouble him too soon
again.'

I saw a meaning in his eye and lip;
I poured my heart's store of indignant
words

Out on him: then—I know not! He retorted,

And I . . . some staff lay there to hand
—I think

He bade his servants thrust me out—I struck . . .

Ah, they come! Fly you, save yourselves, you two!

The dead back-weight of the beheading axe!

The glowing trip-hook, thumbscrews and the gadge!

Eu. They do come! Torches in the Place! Farewell,

Chiappino! You can work no good to
us—

Much to yourself; believe not, all the world

Must needs be cursed henceforth!

Ch. And you?

Eu. I stay.

Ch. Ha, ha! Now, listen! I am master here!

This was my coarse disguise; this paper shows

My path of flight and place of refuge—
see—

Lugo—Argenta—past San Nicolo—Ferrara, then to Venice and all 's safe!

Put on the cloak! His people have to fetch

A compass round about. There 's time
enough

Ere they can reach us—so you straightway make

For Lugo . . . Nay, he hears not! On with it—

The cloak, Luitolfo, do you hear me?
See—

He obeys 'he knows not how. Then, if I must . . .

Answer me! Do you know the Lugo gate?

Eu. The north-west gate, over the bridge!

Luit. I know!

Ch. Well, there—you are not frightened? all my route

Is traced in that: at Venice you'll escape

Their power. Eulalia, I am master
here!

[Shouts from without. He pushes out LUITOLFO, who complies mechanically.

In time! nay, help me with him—So!
—he 's gone.

Eu. What have you done? On you, perchance, all know

The Provost's hater, will men's vengeance fall

As our accomplice.

Ch. Mere accomplice? See!

[Putting on LUITOLFO's vest.

Now, Lady, am I true to my profession, Or one of these?

Eu. You take Luitolfo's place?

Ch. Die for him.

Eu. Well done!

Ch. How the people tarry!
I can't be silent . . . I must speak . . . or sing—

How natural to sing now!

Eu. Hush and pray!

We are to die; but even I perceive

'Tis not a very hard thing so to die.

My cousin of the pale-blue tearful
eyes,

Poor Cesca, suffers more from one day's
life

With the stern husband; Tisbe's heart goes forth

Each evening after that wild son of hers, To track his thoughtless footstep through the streets:

How easy for them both to die like

this!

I am not sure that I could live as
they.

Ch. Here they come, crowds! They pass the gate? Yes!—No!—

One torch is in the court-yard. Here flock all.

Eu. At least Luitolfo has escaped.
What cries!

Ch. If they would drag one to the market-place,

One might speak there!

Eu. List, list!

Ch. They mount the steps.

Enter the Populace.

Ch. I killed the Provost!

[The populace speaking together.] 'Twas Chiappino, friends!

Our saviour.—The best man at last as
first!

He who first made us see what chains we wore,

He also strikes the blow that shatters
them,

He at last saves us—our best citizen !

—Oh, have you only courage to speak
now ?

My eldest son was christened a year
since

'Cino' to keep Chiappino's name in
mind—

Cino, for shortness merely, you observe !
The city's in our hands.—The guards are fled ;

Do you, the cause of all, come down—come down—

Come forth to counsel us, our chief, our
king,

Whate'er rewards you ! Choose your own reward !

The peril over, its reward begins !

Come and harangue us in the marketplace !

Eu. Chiappino !

Ch. Yes . . . I understand
your eyes !

You think I should have promptlier disowned

This deed with its strange unforeseen
success,

In favour of Luitolfo—but the peril,
So far from ended, hardly seems begun.
To-morrow, rather, when a calm succeeds,

We easily shall make him full amends :
And meantime . . . if we save them as they pray,

And justify the deed by its effects ?

Eu. You would, for worlds, you had denied at once.

Ch. I know my own intention, be assured !

All's well ! Precede us, fellow-citizens !

PART II

The Market-place. LUITOLFO in disguise mingling with the Populace assembled opposite the Provost's Palace.

First Bystander (To LUIT.) You, a friend of Luitolfo's ? Then, your friend is vanished,—in all probability killed on the night that his patron the tyrannical Provost was loyally suppressed here, exactly a month ago, by our illustrious fellow-citizen, thrice-noble saviour, and new Provost that is like to be, this very morning.—Chiappino !

Luit. He the new Provost ?

Second Bys. Up those steps will he go, and beneath yonder pillar stand, while Ogniben, the Pope's Legate from Ravenna, reads the new dignitary's title to the people, according to established usage : for which reason, there is the assemblage you inquire about.

Luit. Chiappino—the old Provost's successor ? Impossible ! But tell me of that presently. What I would know first of all is, wherefore Luitolfo must so necessarily have been killed on that memorable night ?

Third Bys. You were Luitolfo's friend ? So was I. Never, if you will credit me, did there exist so poor-spirited a milk-sop ! He, with all the opportunities in the world, furnished by daily converse with our oppressor, would not stir a finger to help us : and, when Chiappino rose in solitary majesty and . . . how does one go on saying ? . . . dealt the godlike blow,—thus Luitolfo, not unreasonably fearing the indignation of an aroused and liberated people, fled precipitately. He may have got trodden to death in the press at the south-east gate, when the Provost's guards fled through it to Ravenna, with their wounded master,—if he did not rather hang himself under some hedge.

Luit. Or why not simply have lain perdue in some quiet corner,—such as San Cassiano, where his estate was,—receiving daily intelligence from some sure friend, meanwhile, as to the turn matters were taking here—how, for instance, the Provost was not dead after all, only wounded—or, as to-day's news would seem to prove, how Chiappino was not Brutus the Elder, after all, only the new Provost—and thus Luitolfo be enabled to watch a favourable opportunity for returning—might it not have been so ?

Third Bys. Why, he may have taken that care of himself, certainly, for he came of a cautious stock. I'll tell you how his uncle, just such another gingerly treader on tiptoes with finger on lip,—how he met his death in the great plague-year: dico vobis! Hearing that the seventeenth house in a certain street was infected, he calculates to pass it in safety by taking plentiful breath, say, when he shall arrive at the eleventh house; then scouring by, holding that breath, till he be got so far on the other side as number twenty-three, and thus elude the danger.—And so did he begin; but, as he arrived at thirteen, we will say,—thinking to improve on his precaution by putting up a little prayer to St. Nepomucene of Prague, this exhausted so much of his lungs' reserve, that at sixteen it was clean spent,—consequently at the fatal seventeen he inhaled with a vigour and persistence enough to suck you any latent venom out of the heart of a stone—Ha, ha!

Luit. [Aside.] (If I had not lent that man the money he wanted last spring, I should fear this bitterness was attributable to me.) Luitolfo is dead then, one may conclude?

Third Bys. Why, he had a house here, and a woman to whom he was affianced; and as they both pass naturally to the new Provost, his friend and heir...

Luit. Ah, I suspected you of imposing on me with your pleasantry! I know Chiappino better.

First Bys. (Our friend has the bile! after all, I do not dislike finding somebody vary a little this general gape of admiration at Chiappino's glorious qualities.) Pray, how much may you know of what has taken place in Faenza since that memorable night?

Luit. It is most to the purpose, that I know Chiappino to have been by profession a hater of that very office of Provost, you now charge him with proposing to accept.

First Bys. Sir, I'll tell you. That night was indeed memorable; up we rose, a mass of us, men, women, children—out fled the guards with the body of the tyrant—we were to defy the world: but, next grey morning, 'What will Rome say?' began everybody—(you know we are governed by Ravenna, which is governed by Rome). And quietly into the town, by the Ravenna road, comes on muleback a portly personage, Ogniben by name, with the quality of Pontifical Legate—trots briskly through the streets humming a 'Our première gentes,' and makes directly for the Provost's Palace—there it faces you. 'One Messer Chiappino is your leader? I have known three-and-twenty leaders of revolts!' (laughing gently to himself)—'Give me the help of your arm from my mule to yonder steps under the pillar—So! And now, my revolters and good friends, what do you want? The guards burst into Ravenna last night bearing your wounded Provost—and, having had a little talk with him, I take on myself to come and try appease the disorderliness, before Rome, hearing of it, resort to another method: 'tis I come, and not another, from a certain love I confess to; of composing differences. So, do you understand, you are about to experience this unheard-of tyranny from me, that there shall be no heading nor hanging, no confiscation nor exile,—I insist on your simply pleasing yourselves,—and now, pray, what does please you? To live without any government at all? Or having decided for one, to see its minister murdered by the first of your body that chooses to find himself wronged, or disposed for reverting to first principles and a justice anterior to all institutions,—and so will you carry matters, that the rest of the world must at length unite and put down such a den of wild beasts? As for vengeance on what has just taken place,—once for all, the wounded man assures me he cannot conjecture who struck him—and this so earnestly, that one may be sure he knows perfectly well what intimate acquaintance could find admission to speak with him late last evening. I come not for vengeance therefore, but from pure curiosity to hear what you will do next.'—And thus he ran on, easily and volubly, till he seemed to arrive quite naturally at the praise of law, order, and paternal government by somebody from rather a distance. All our citizens were in the snare, and about to be friends with so congenial an adviser; but that Chiappino suddenly stood forth, spoke out indignantly, and set things right again.

Luit. Do you see? I recognize him there!

Third Bys. Ay, but mark you, at the end of Chiappino's longest period in praise of a pure republic,—And by whom do I desire such a government should be administered, perhaps, but by one like yourself?—returns the Legate: thereupon speaking for a quarter of an hour together, on the natural and only legitimate government by the best and wisest. And it should seem there was soon discovered to be no such vast discrepancy at bottom between this and Chiappino's theory, place but each in its proper light. 'Oh, are you there?' quoth Chiappino:—'In that, I agree,' returns Chiappino, and so on.

Luit. But did Chiappino cede at once to this?

First Bys. Why, not altogether at once. For instance, he said that the difference between him and all his fellows was, that they seemed all wishing to be kings in one or another way, '—whereas what right,' asked he, 'has any man to wish to be superior to another?'—whereat, 'Ah, Sir,' answers the Legate, 'this is the death of me, so often as I expect something is really going to be revealed to us by you clearer-seers, deeper-thinkers—this—that your right hand (to speak by a figure) should be found taking up the weapon it displayed so ostentatiously, not to destroy any dragon in our path, as was prophesied, but simply to cut off its own fellow left-hand: yourself set about attacking yourself—for see now! Here are you who, I make sure, glory exceedingly in knowing the noble nature of the soul, its divine impulses, and so forth; and with such a knowledge you stand, as it were, armed to encounter the natural doubts and fears as to that same inherent nobility, that are apt to waylay us, the weaker ones, in the road of life. And when we look eagerly to see them fall before you, lo, round you wheel, only the left hand gets the blow; one proof of the soul's nobility destroys simply another proof, quite as good, of the same,—you are found delivering an opinion like this! Why, what is this perpetual yearning to exceed, to subdue, to be better than, and a king over, one's fellows,—all that you so disclaim,—but the very tendency yourself are most proud of, and under another form, would oppose to it,—only in a lower stage of manifestation? You don't want to be vulgarly superior to your fellows after their poor fashion—to have me hold solemnly up your gown's tail, or hand you an express of the last importance from the Pope, with all these bystanders noticing how unconcerned you look the while: but neither does our gaping friend, the Burgess yonder, want the other kind of kingship, that consists in understanding better than his fellows this and similar points of human nature, nor to roll under his tongue this sweeter morsel still,—the feeling that, through immense philosophy, he does not feel, he rather thinks, above you and me! And so chatting, they glided off arm in arm.

Luit. And the result is . . .

First Bys. Why, that a month having gone by, the indomitable Chiappino, marrying as he will Luitolfo's love—at all events succeeding to Luitolfo's goods,—becomes the first inhabitant of Faenza, and a proper aspirant to the Provostship; which we assemble here to see conferred on him this morning. The Legate's Guard to clear the way! He will follow presently.

Luit. (withdrawing a little.) I understand the drift of Eulalia's communications less than ever. Yet she surely said, in so many words, that Chiappino was in urgent danger: wherefore, disregarding her injunction to continue in my retreat and await the result of, what she called, some experiment yet in process—I hastened here without her leave or knowledge—what could I else?—But if what they say be true—if it were for such a purpose, she and Chiappino kept me away . . . Oh, no, no! I must confront him and her before I believe this of them. And at the word, see!

Enter CHIAPPINO and EULALIA.

Eu. We part here, then? The change in your principles would seem to be complete.

Ch. Now, why refuse to see that in my present course I change no principles, only re-adapt them and more adroitly? I had despaired of, what you may call the material instrumentality of life; of ever being able to rightly operate on mankind through such a deranged machinery as the existing modes of government: but now, if I suddenly discover how to inform these perverted institutions with fresh purpose, bring the functionary limbs once more into immediate communication with, and subjection to, the soul I am about to bestow on them—do you see? Why should one desire to invent, as long as it remains possible to renew and transform? When all further hope of the old organization shall be extinct, then, I grant you, it may be time to try and create another.

Eu. And there being discoverable some hope yet in the hitherto much-abused old system of absolute government by a Provost here, you mean to take your time about endeavouring to realize those visions of a perfect State, we once heard of?

Ch. Say, I would fain realize my conception of a Palace, for instance, and that there is, abstractedly, but a single way of erecting one perfectly.

Here, in the market-place is my allotted building-ground; here I stand without a stone to lay, or a labourer to help me,—stand, too, during a short day of life, close on which the night comes. On the other hand, circumstances suddenly offer me . . . turn and see it . . . the old Provost's House to experiment upon—ruinous, if you please, wrongly constructed at the beginning, and ready to tumble now. But materials abound, a crowd of workmen offer their services; here, exists yet a Hall of Audience of originally noble proportions, there, a Guest-chamber of symmetrical design enough: and I may restore, enlarge, abolish or unite these to heart's content. Ought I not rather make the best of such an opportunity, than continue to gaze disconsolately with folded arms on the flat pavement here, while the sun goes slowly down, never to rise again? Since you cannot understand this nor me, it is better we should part as you desire.

Eu. So, the love breaks away too!

Ch. No, rather my soul's capacity for love widens—needs more than one object to content it,—and, being better instructed, will not persist in seeing all the component parts of love in what is only a single part,—nor in finding the so many and so various loves, united in the love of a woman,— manifold uses in one instrument, as the savage has his sword, sceptre and idol, all in one club-stick. Love is a very compound thing. I shall give the intellectual part of my love to Men, the mighty dead, or illustrious living; and determine to call a mere sensual instinct by as few fine names as possible. What do I lose?

Eu. Nay, I only think, what do I lose? and, one more word—which shall complete my instruction—does friendship go too? What of Luitolfo, the author of your present prosperity?

Ch. How the author?—

Eu. That blow now called yours . . .

Ch. Struck without principle or purpose, as by a blind natural operation yet to which all my thought and life directly and advisedly tended. I would have struck it, and could not. He would have done his utmost to avoid striking it, yet did so. I dispute his right to that deed of mine—a final action with him, from the first effect of which he fled away—a mere first step with me, on which I base a whole mighty superstructure of good to follow. Could he get good from it?

Eu. So we profess, so we perform!

Enter OGNIBEN. EULALIA stands apart.

Ogni. I have seen three-and-twenty leaders of revolts!—By your leave, Sir! Perform? What does the lady say of Performing?

Ch. Only the trite saying, that we must not trust Profession, only Performance.

Ogni. She'll not say that, Sir, when she knows you longer; you'll instruct her better. Ever judge of men by their professions! For though the bright moment of promising is but a moment and cannot be prolonged, yet, if sincere in its moment's extravagant goodness, why, trust it and know the man by it, I say—not by his performance—which is half the world's work, interfere as the world needs must, with its accidents and circumstances,—the profession was purely the man's own. I judge people by what they might be,—not are, nor will be.

Ch. But have there not been found, too, performing natures, not merely promising?

Ogni. Plenty. Little Bindo of our town, for instance, promised his friend, great ugly Masaccio, once, 'I will repay you!'—for a favour done him: so, when his father came to die, and Bindo succeeded to the inheritance, he sends straightway for Masaccio and shares all with him—gives him half the land, half the money, half the kegs of wine in the cellar. 'Good,' say you—and it is good. But had little Bindo found himself possessor of all this wealth some five years before—on the happy night when Masaccio procured him that interview in the garden with his pretty cousin

Lisa—instead of being the beggar he then was,—I am bound to believe that in the warm moment of promise he would have given away all the wine-kegs, and all the money, and all the land, and only reserved to himself some hut on a hill-top hard by, whence he might spend his life in looking and seeing his friend enjoy himself: he meant fully that much, but the world interfered.—To our business! Did I understand you just now within-doors? You are not going to marry your old friend's love, after all?

Ch. I must have a woman that can sympathize with, and appreciate me, I told you.

Ogni. Oh, I remember! you, the greater nature, needs must have a lesser one (—avowedly lesser—contest with you on that score would never do!)—such a nature must comprehend you, as the phrase is, accompany and testify of your greatness from point to point onward. Why, that were being not merely as great as yourself, but greater considerably! Meantime, might not the more bounded nature as reasonably count on your appreciation of it, rather?—on your keeping close by it, so far as you both go together, and then going on by yourself as far as you please! Thus God serves us!

Ch. And yet a woman that could understand the whole of me, to whom I could reveal alike the strength and the weakness—

Ogni. Ah, my friend, wish for nothing so foolish! Worship your Love, give her the best of you to see; be to her like the western lands (they bring us such strange news of) to the Spanish Court—send her only your lumps of gold, fans of feathers, your spirit-like birds, and fruits and gems—so shall you, what is unseen of you, be supposed altogether a Paradise by her,—as these western lands by Spain—though I warrant there is filth, red baboons, ugly reptiles and squalor enough, which they bring Spain as few samples of as possible. Do you want your mistress to respect your body generally? Offer her your mouth to kiss : don't strip off your boot and put your foot to her lips ! You understand my humour by this time ? I help men to carry out their own principles : if they please to say two and two make five, I assent, so they will but go on and say, four and four make ten !

Ch. But these are my private affairs ; what I desire you to occupy yourself about, is my public appearance presently : for when the people hear that I am appointed Provost, though you and I may thoroughly discern—and easily, too—the right principle at bottom of such a movement, and how my republicanism remains thoroughly unaltered, only takes a form of expression hitherto commonly judged . . . and heretofore by myself . . . incompatible with its existence—when thus I reconcile myself to an old form of government instead of proposing a new one . . .

Ogni. Why, you must deal with people broadly. Begin at a distance from this matter and say,—new truths, old truths ! sirs, there is nothing new possible to be revealed to us in the moral world—we know all we shall ever know, and it is for simply reminding us, by their various respective expedients, how we do know this and the other matter, that men get called prophets, poets and the like. A philosopher's life is spent in discovering that, of the half-dozen truths he knew when a child, such an one is a lie, as the world states it in set terms ; and then, after a weary lapse of years, and plenty of hard-thinking, it becomes a truth again after all, as he happens to newly consider it and view it in a different relation with the others : and so he restates it, to the confusion of somebody else in good time. As for adding to the original stock of truths,—impossible ! Thus, you see the expression of them is the grand business :—you have got a truth in your head about the right way of governing people, and you took a mode of expressing it which now you confess to be imperfect—but what then ? There is truth in falsehood, falsehood in truth. No man ever told one great truth, that I know, without the help of a good dozen of lies at least, generally unconscious ones : and as when a child comes in breathlessly and relates a strange story, you try to conjecture from the very falsities in it, what the reality was,—do not conclude that he saw nothing in the sky, because he assuredly did not see a flying horse there as he says,—so, through the contradictory expression, do you see, men should look painfully for, and trust to arrive eventually at, what you call the true principle at bottom. Ah, what an answer is there ! to what will it not prove applicable !—' Contradictions ? '—Of course there were, say you !

Ch. Still, the world at large may call it inconsistency, and what shall I urge in reply ?

Ogni. Why, look you, when they tax you with tergiversation or duplicity, you may answer—you begin to perceive that, when all's done and said, both great parties in the State, the advocates of change in the present system of things, and the opponents of it, patriot and anti-patriot, are found working together for the common good, and that in the midst of their efforts for and against its progress, the world somehow or other still advances—to which result they contribute in equal proportions, those who spent their life in pushing it onward as those who gave theirs to the business of pulling it back. Now, if you found the world stand still between the opposite forces, and were glad, I should conceive you : but it steadily advances, you rejoice to see ! By the side of such a rejoicer, the man who only winks as he keeps cunning and quiet, and says, ' Let yonder hot-headed fellow fight out my battle ; I, for one, shall win in the end by the blows he gives, and which I ought to be giving '—even he seems graceful in his avowal, when one considers that he might say, ' I shall win quite as much by the blows our antagonist gives him, and from which he saves me—I thank the antagonist equally ! ' Moreover, you may enlarge on the loss of the edge of party-animosity with age and experience . . .

Ch. And naturally time must wear off such asperities: the bitterest adversaries get to discover certain points of similarity between each other, common sympathies—do they not?

Ogni. Ay, had the young David but sat first to dine on his cheeses with the Philistine, he had soon discovered an abundance of such common sympathies. He of Gath, it is recorded, was born of a father and mother, had brothers and sisters like another man,—they, no more than the sons of Jesse, were used to eat each other. But, for the sake of one broad antipathy that had existed from the beginning, David slung the stone, cut off the giant's head, made a spoil of it, and after ate his cheeses alone, with the better appetite, for all I can learn. My friend, as you, with a quickened eye-sight, go on discovering much good on the worse side, remember that the same process should proportionably magnify and demonstrate to you the much more good on the better side. And when I profess no sympathy for the Goliaths of our time, and you object that a large nature should sympathize with every form of intelligence, and see the good in it, however limited—I answer, so I do; but preserve the proportions of my sympathy, however finelier or widelier I may extend its action. I desire to be able, with a quickened eye-sight, to descry beauty in corruption where others see foulness only,—but I hope I shall also continue to see a redoubled beauty in the higher forms of matter, where already everybody sees no foulness at all. I must retain, too, my old power of selection, and choice of appropriation, to apply to such new gifts; else they only dazzle instead of enlightening me. God has His archangels and consorts with them: though He made too, and intimately sees what is good in, the worm. Observe, I speak only as you profess to think and so ought to speak: I do justice to your own principles, that is all.

Ch. But you very well know that the two parties do, on occasion, assume each other's characteristics. What more disgusting, for instance, than to see how promptly the newly emancipated slave will adopt, in his own favour, the very measures of precaution, which pressed soreliest on himself as institutions of the tyranny he has just escaped from? Do the classes, hitherto without opinion, yet leave to express it? there is a con-ederacy immediately, from which—exercise your individual right and dissent, and woe be to you!

Ogni. And a journey over the sea to you!—That is the generous way. Cry—emancipated slaves, the first excess, and off I go! The first time a poor devil, who has been bastinadoed steadily his whole life long, finds himself let alone and able to legislate, so, begins pettishly, while he rubs his soles, 'Woe be to whoever brings anything in the shape of a stick this way!'—you, rather than give up the very innocent pleasure of carrying one to switch flies with,—you go away, to everybody's sorrow. Yet you were quite reconciled to staying at home while the governors used to pass, every now and then, some such edict as 'Let no man indulge in owning a stick which is not thick enough to chastise our slaves, if need require.' Well, there are pre-ordained hierarchies among us, and a profane vulgar subjected to a different law altogether; yet I am rather sorry you should see it so clearly: for, do you know what is to—all but save you at the Day of Judgment, all you men of genius? It is this—that, while you generally began by pulling down God, and went on to the end of your life, in one effort at setting up your own genius in His place,—still, the last, bitterest concession wrung with the utmost unwillingness from the experience of the very loftiest of you, was invariably—would one think it?—that the rest of mankind, down to the lowest of the mass, stood not, nor ever could stand, just on a level and equality with yourselves. That will be a point in the favour of all such, I hope and believe!

Ch. Why, men of genius are usually charged, I think, with doing just the reverse; and at once acknowledging the natural inequality of mankind, by themselves participating in the universal craving after, and deference to, the civil distinctions which represent it. You wonder they pay such undue respect to titles and badges of superior rank.

Ogni. Not I! (always on your own ground and showing, be it noted!) Who doubts that, with a weapon to brandish, a man is the more formidable? Titles and badges are exercised as such a weapon, to which you and I look up wistfully. We could pin lions with it moreover, while in its present owner's hands it hardly prods rats. Nay, better than a mere weapon of easy mastery and obvious use, it is a mysterious divining rod that may serve us in undreamed-of ways. Beauty, strength, intellect—men often have none of these, and yet conceive pretty accurately what kind of advantages they would bestow on the possessor. We know at least what it is we make up our mind to forego, and so can apply the fittest substitute in our power; wanting beauty, we cultivate good humour; missing wit, we get riches: but the mystic unimaginable operation of that gold collar and string of Latin names which suddenly turned poor stupid little peevish Cecco of our town into natural Lord of the best of us—a Duke, he is now! there indeed is a virtue to be revered!

Ch. Ay, by the vulgar: not by Messere Stiatto the poet, who pays more assiduous court to him than anybody.

Ogni. What else should Stiatto pay court to? He has talent, not honour and riches: men naturally covet what they have not.

Ch. No—or Cecco would covet talent, which he has not, whereas he covets more riches, of which he has plenty already.

Ogni. Because a purse added to a purse makes the holder twice as rich: but just such another talent as Stiatto's, added to what he now possesses, what would that profit him? Give the talent a purse indeed, to do something with! But lo, how we keep the good people waiting. I only desired to do justice to the noble sentiments which animate you, and which you are too modest to duly enforce. Come, to our main business: shall we ascend the steps? I am going to propose you for Provost to the people; they know your antecedents, and will accept you with a joyful unanimity: whereon I confirm their choice. Rouse up! are you nerving yourself to an effort? Beware the disaster of Messere Stiatto we were talking of; who, determining to keep an equal mind and constant face on whatever might be the fortune of his last new poem with our townsmen,—heard too plainly 'hiss, hiss, hiss,' increase every moment: till at last the man fell senseless—not perceiving that the portentous sounds had all the while been issuing from between his own nobly clenched teeth, and nostrils narrowed by resolve.

Ch. Do you begin to throw off the mask?—to jest with me, having got me effectually into your trap?

Ogni. Where is the trap, my friend? You hear what I engage to do, for my part: you, for yours, have only to fulfil your promise made just now within doors, of professing unlimited obedience to Rome's authority in my person. And I shall authorize no more than the simple re-establishment of the Provostship and the conferment of its privileges upon yourself: the only novel stipulation being a birth of the peculiar circumstances of the time.

Ch. And that stipulation?

Ogni. Just the obvious one—that in the event of the discovery of the actual assailant of the late Provost...

Ch. Ha!

Ogni. Why, he shall suffer the proper penalty, of course; what did you expect?

Ch. Who heard of this?

Ogni. Rather, who needed to hear of this?

Ch. Can it be, the popular rumour never reached you...

Ogni. Many more such rumours reach me, friend, than I choose to receive: those which wait longest have best chance. Has the present one sufficiently waited? Now is its time for entry with effect. See the good people crowding about yonder palace-steps—which we may not have to ascend, after all ! My good friends—(nay, two or three of you will answer every purpose)—who was it fell upon and proved nearly the death of your late Provost ?—his successor desires to hear, that his day of inauguration may be graced by the act of prompt, bare justice we all anticipate. Who dealt the blow that night, does anybody know ?

Luitolfo. [coming forward.] I !

All. Luitolfo !

Luit. I avow the deed, justify and approve it, and stand forth now, to relieve my friend of an unearned responsibility. Having taken thought, I am grown stronger : I shall shrink from nothing that awaits me. Nay, Chiappino—we are friends still : I dare say there is some proof of your superior nature in this starting aside, strange as it seemed at first. So, they tell me, my horse is of the right stock, because a shadow in the path frightens him into a frenzy, makes him dash my brains out. I understand only the dull mule's way of standing stockishly, plodding soberly, suffering on occasion a blow or two with due patience.

Eu. I was determined to justify my choice, Chiappino ; to let Luitolfo's nature vindicate itself. Henceforth we are undivided, whatever be our fortune.

Ogni. Now, in these last ten minutes of silence, what have I been doing, deem you ?—Putting the finishing stroke to a homily of mine, I have long taken thought to perfect, on the text 'Let whoso thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.' To your house, Luitolfo ! Still silent, my patriotic friend ? Well, that is a good sign, however. And you will go aside for a time ? That is better still. I understand—it would be easy for you to die of remorse here on the spot and shock us all, but you mean to live and grow worthy of coming back to us one day. There, I will tell everybody ; and you only do right to believe you must get better as you get older. All men do so,—they are worst in childhood, improve in manhood, and get ready in old age for another world. Youth, with its beauty and grace, would seem bestowed on us for some such reason as to make us partly endurable till we have time for really becoming so of ourselves, without their aid ; when they leave us. The sweetest child we all smile on for his pleasant want of the whole world to break up, or suck in his mouth, seeing no other good in it—would be rudely handled by that world's inhabitants, if he retained those angelic infantine desires when he has grown six feet high, black and bearded : but, little by little, he sees fit to forego claim after claim on the world, puts up with a less and less share of its good as his proper portion,—and when the octogenarian asks barely a sup of gruel and a fire of dry sticks, and thanks you as for his full allowance and right in the common good of life,—hoping nobody may murder him,—he who began by asking and expecting the whole of us to bow down in worship to him,—why, I say he is advanced, far onward, very far, nearly out of sight like our friend Chiappino yonder. And now—(Ay, good-bye to you ! He turns round the north-west gate : going to Lugo again ? Good-bye !)—And now give thanks to God, the keys of the Provost's Palace to me, and yourselves to profitable meditation at home. I have known Four-and-twenty leaders of revolts.

IN A BALCONY

A SCENE

1855

In a Balcony.

CONSTANCE and NORBERT.

Nor. Now.

Con. Not now.

Nor. Give me them again, those hands—

Put them upon my forehead, how it throbs!

Press them before my eyes, the fire comes through.

You cruellest, you dearest in the world, Let me! the Queen must grant whate'er I ask—

How can I gain you and not ask the Queen?

There she stays waiting for me, here stand you.

Some time or other this was to be asked; Now is the one time—what I ask, I gain—

Let me ask now, Love!

Con. Do, and ruin us.

Nor. Let it be now, Love! All my soul breaks forth.

How I do love you! give my love its way!

A man can have but one life and one death,

One heaven, one hell. Let me fulfil my fate—

Grant me my heaven now. Let me know you mine,

Prove you mine, write my name upon your brow,

Hold you and have you, and then die away

If God please, with completion in my soul.

Con. I am not yours then? how content this man?

I am not his, who change into himself, Have passed into his heart and beat its beats,

Who give my hands to him, my eyes, my hair,

Give all that was of me away to him! So well, that now, my spirit turned his own,

Takes part with him against the woman here,

Bids him not stumble at so mere a straw As caring that the world be cognisant How he loves her and how she worships him.

You have this woman, not as yet that world.

Go on, I bid, nor stop to care for me By saving what I cease to care about, The courtly name and pride of circumstance—

The name you'll pick up and be cumbered with

Just for the poor parade's sake, nothing more;

Just that the world may slip from under you—

Just that the world may cry 'So much for him—

The man predestined to the heap of crowns:

There goes his chance of winning one, at least!

Nor. The world!

Con. You love it. Love me quite as well,

And see if I shall pray for this in vain! Why must you ponder what it knows or thinks?

Nor. You pray for—what, in vain?

Con. Oh my heart's heart, How I do love you, Norbert!—that is right!

But listen, or I take my hands away. You say, 'let it be now'—you would go now

And tell the Queen, perhaps six steps from us,

You love me—so you do, thank God !
Nor. Thank God !
Con. Yes, Norbert,—but you fain would tell your love, And, what succeeds the telling, ask of
 her My hand. Now take this rose and look at it, Listening to me. You are the minister, The Queen's first favourite, nor without a cause.
 To-night completes your wonderful year's-work (This palace-feast is held to celebrate) Made memorable by her life's success, That junction of two crowns, on her sole
 head,
 Her house had only dreamed of anciently.
 That this mere dream is grown a stable
 truth,
 To-night's feast makes authentic.
 Whose the praise ?
 Whose genius, patience, energy, achieved
 What turned the many heads and broke the hearts ?
 You are the fate—your minute's in the
 heaven.
 Next comes the Queen's turn. ' Name your own reward !'
 With leave to clench the Past, chain the
 To-come,
 Put out an arm and touch and take the sun
 And fix it ever full-faced on your earth, Possess yourself supremely of her life,— You choose the single thing she will not grant ;
 Nay, very declaration of which choice Will turn the scale and neutralize your work.
 At best she will forgive you, if she can.
 You think I'll let you choose—her cousin's hand ?
Nor. Wait. First, do you retain your old belief
 The Queen is generous,—nay, is just ?
Con. There, there !
 So men make women love them, while they know
 No more of women's hearts than . . .
 look you here,
 You that are just and generous beside,

Make it your own case. For example
 now,
 I'll say—I let you kiss me and hold my hands—
 Why ? do you know why ? I'll instruct you, then—
 The kiss, because you have a name at
 court,
 This hand and this, that you may shut in each
 A jewel, if you please to pick up such.
 That's horrible! Apply it to the Queen—Suppose, I am the Queen to whom you ' I was a nameless man ; you needed
 me :
 Why did I proffer you my aid ? there
 stood
 A certain pretty cousin at your side.
 Why did I make such common cause
 with you ?
 Access to her had not been easy else.
 You give my labours here abundant
 praise ?
 ' Faith, labour, which she overlooked, grew play.
 How shall your gratitude discharge it-
 self ?
 Give me her hand !'
Nor. And still I urge the same.
 Is the Queen just ? just—generous or no !
Con. Yes, just. You love a rose ; no harm in that :
 But was it for the rose's sake or mine
 You put it in your bosom ? mine, you
 said—
 Then, mine you still must say or else be false.
 You told the Queen you served her for herself :
 If so, to serve her was to serve yourself,
 She thinks, for all your unbelieving face !
 I know her. In the hall, six steps from
 us,
 One sees the twenty pictures ; there 's a life Better than life, and yet no life at all.
 Conceive her born in such a magic dome, Pictures all round her ! why, she sees
 the world,
 Can recognize its given things and facts,
 The fight of giants or the feast of gods, Sages in senate, beauties at the bath,

Chaces and battles, the whole earth's display, Landscape and sea-piece, down to flowers and fruit—
 And who shall question that she knows
     them all,
 In better semblance than the things outside ?
 Yet bring into the silent gallery Some live thing to contrast in breath
     and blood,
 Some lion, with the painted lion there—You think she'll understand com-posedly ?
 —Say, ' that 's his fellow in the hunting-piece Yonder, I've turned to praise a hundred
     times ? '
 Not so. Her knowledge of our actual
     earth,
 Its hopes and fears, concerns and sympathies,
 Must be too far, too mediate, too unreal.
 The real exists for us outside, not her : How should it, with that life in these four walls,
 That father and that mother, first to last No father and no mother—friends, a heap,
 Lovers, no lack—a husband in due time,
 And every one of them alike a lie !
 Things painted by a Rubens out of nought
 Into what kindness, friendship, love
     should be ;
 All better, all more grandiose than life, Only no life ; mere cloth and surface-
     paint,
 You feel, while you admire. How should she feel ?
 Yet now that she has stood thus fifty
     years
 The sole spectator in that gallery, You think to bring this warm real struggling love
 In to her of a sudden, and suppose She'll keep her state untroubled ?
     Here's the truth—
 She'll apprehend its value at a glance, Prefer it to the pictured loyalty ?
 You only have to say ' so men are made,
 For this they act ; the thing has many names,
 But this the right one : and now, Queen, be just ! '
 And life slips back ; you lose her at the
     word :
 You do not even for amends gain me.
 He will not understand ! oh, Norbert, Norbert,
 Do you not understand ?
     Nor.      The Queen 's the Queen,
 I am myself—no picture, but alive
 In every nerve and every muscle, here At the palace-window o'er the people's street,
 As she in the gallery where the pictures glow :
 The good of life is precious to us both.
 She cannot love ; what do I want with
     rule ?
 When first I saw your face a year ago I knew my life's good, my soul heard one voice—
 ' The woman yonder, there 's no use of
     life But just to obtain her ! heap earth's woes in one And bear them—make a pile of all earth's joys
 And spurn them, as they help or help
     not this ;
 Only, obtain her ! '—How was it to be ?
 Ifound you were the cousin of the Queen ;
 I must then serve the Queen to get to
     you.
 No other way. Suppose there had been
     one,
 And I, by saying prayers to some white
     star
 With promise of my body and my soul, Might gain you,—should I pray the star or no ?
 Instead, there was the Queen to serve !
     I served,
 Helped, did what other servants failed
     to do.
 Neither she sought nor I declared my
     end.
 Her good is hers, my recompense be-
     mine,
 I therefore name you as that recompense.
 She dreamed that such a thing could never be ?
 Let her wake now. She thinks there was more cause

In love of power, high fame, pure loyalty ?
 Perhaps she fancies men wear out their lives Chasing such shades. Then, I've a fancy too ;
 I worked because I want you with my
 soul :
 I therefore ask your hand. Let it be now !
Con. Had I not loved you from the very first,
 Were I not yours, could we not steal out
 thus
 So wickedly, so wildly, and so well, You might become impatient. What's conceived
 Of us without here, by the folks within ?
 Where are you now ? immersed in cares of state—
 Where am I now ?—intent on festal robes—
 We two, embracing under death's spread hand !
 What was this thought for, what that scruple of yours Which broke the council up ?—to bring about
 One minute's meeting in the corridor !
 And then the sudden sleights, strange secrecies, Complots inscrutable, deep telegraphs, Long-planned chance-meetings, hazards of a look,
 ' Does she know ? does she not know ?
 saved or lost ?'
 A year of this compression's ecstasy All goes for nothing ! you would give this up For the old way, the open way, the world's,
 His way who beats, and his who sells his wife !
 What tempts you ?—their notorious happiness, That you're ashamed of ours ? The best you'll gain
 Will be, the Queen grants all that you require,
 Concedes the cousin, rids herself of you And me at once, and gives us ample
 leave
 To live like our five hundred happy
 friends.

The world will show us with officious
 hand
 Our chamber-entry and stand sentinel, Where we so oft have stolen across its traps !
 Get the world's warrant, ring the falcons' feet,
 And make it duty to be bold and swift,
 Which long ago was nature. Have it so !
 We never hawked by rights till flung from fist ?
 Oh, the man's thought !—no woman's such a fool.
Nor. Yes, the man's thought and my thought, which is more—One made to love you, let the world take note !
 Have I done worthy work ? be love's the praise, Though hampered by restrictions, barred against
 By set forms, blinded by forced secrecies !
 Set free my love, and see what love can
 do Shown in my life—what work will spring from that !
 The world is used to have its business
 done
 On other grounds, find great effects produced For power's sake, fame's sake, motives in men's mouth.
 So, good : but let my low ground shame their high !
 Truth is the strong thing. Let man's life be true !
 And love's the truth of mine. Time prove the rest !
 I choose to wear you stamped all over
 me,
 Your name upon my forehead and my
 breast,
 You, from the sword's blade to the ribbon's edge,
 That men may see, all over, you in me—That pale loves may die out of their pretence
 In face of mine, shames thrown on love fall off.
 Permit this, Constance ! Love has been so long Subdued in me, eating me through and
 through,

That now it's all of me and must have
way.

Think of my work, that chaos of intrigues,

Those hopes and fears, surprises and delays,

That long endeavour, earnest, patient, slow,

Trembling at last to its assured result—Then think of this revulsion! I resume

Life after death, (it is no less than life, After such long unlovely labouring days)

And liberate to beauty life's great need Of the beautiful, which, while it prompted work, Suppress itself erewhile. This eve's

the time—
This eve intense with yon first trembling

star
We seem to pant and reach; scarce ought between The earth that rises and the heaven that bends;

All nature self-abandoned, every tree

Flung as it will, pursuing its own
thoughts

And fixed so, every flower and every weed,

No pride, no shame, no victory, no defeat;

All under God, each measured by itself.
These statues round us stand abrupt,

distinct,
The strong in strength, the weak in weakness fixed,

The Muse for ever wedded to her lyre,

The Nymph to her fawn, the Silence to her rose:

See God's approval on His universe!
Let us do so—aspire to live as these

In harmony with truth, ourselves being
true!

Take the first way, and let the second
come!

My first is to possess myself of you;
The music sets the march-step—forward,

then!
And there's the Queen, I go to claim you of,

The world to witness, wonder and applaud.

Our flower of life breaks open. No delay!

Con. And so shall we be ruined, both of us.

Norbert, I know her to the skin and bone—

You do not know her, were not born to
it,

To feel what she can see or cannot see.
Love, she is generous,—ay, despite your

smile,
Generous as you are: for, in that thin frame Pain-twisted, punctured through and through with cares,

There lived a lavish soul until it starved Debarred all healthy food. Look to the soul—

Pity that, stoop to that, ere you begin (The true man's-way) on justice and your rights,

Exactions and acquittance of the Past!

Begin so—see what justice she will deal!
We women hate a debt as men a gift.

Suppose her some poor keeper of a school

Whose business is to sit thro' summer-months

And dole out children leave to go and
play,

Herself superior to such lightness—she In the arm-chair's state and pedagogic

pomp,
To the life, the laughter, sun and youth

outside—
We wonder such a face looks black on

us?
I do not bid you wake her tenderness,

(That were vain truly—none is left to wake)

But, let her think her justice is engaged To take the shape of tenderness, and

mark
If she'll not coldly pay its warmest need!

Does she love me, I ask you? not a
whit:

Yet, thinking that her justice was engaged

To help a kinswoman, she took me up—Did more on that bare ground than other loves Would do on greater argument. For

me,
I have no equivalent of such cold kind To pay her with, but love alone to give

If I give anything. I give her love :
I feel I ought to help her, and I will.

So, for her sake, as yours, I tell you twice

That women hate a debt as men a gift.

If I were you, I could obtain this grace—Could lay the whole I did to love's
account,

Nor yet be very false as courtiers go—Declaring my success was recompense ; It would be so, in fact : what were it
else ?

And then, once loose her generosity,— Oh, how I see it ! then, were I but you To turn it, let it seem to move itself,
And make it offer what I really take,
Accepting just, in the poor cousin's hand, Her value as the next thing to the Queen's—

Since none loves Queens directly, none dares that,

And a thing's shadow or a name's mere echo

Suffices those who miss the name and
thing !

You pick up just a ribbon she has worn,
To keep in proof how near her breath you came.

Say, I'm so near I seem a piece of her—Ask for me that way—(oh, you understand)

You'd find the same gift yielded with a grace,

Which, if you make the least show to extort . . .

—You'll see ! and when you have ruined both of us, Dissertate on the Queen's ingratitude !

Nor. Then, if I turn it that way, you consent ?

'Tis not my way ; I have more hope in
truth :

Still, if you won't have truth—why, this
indeed,

Were scarcely false, as I'd express the sense.

Will you remain here ?

Con. O best heart of mine, How I have loved you ! then, you take my way ?

Are mine as you have been her minister, Work out my thought, give it effect for
me,

Paint plain my poor conceit and make it serve ?

I owe that withered woman everything—Life, fortune, you, remember ! Take my part—

Help me to pay her ! Stand upon your rights ?

You, with my rose, my hands, my heart on you ?

Your rights are mine—you have no rights but mine.

Nor. Remain here. How you know
me !

Con. Ah, but still—{He breaks from her : she remains.
Dance-music from within.

Enter the QUEEN.

Queen. Constance !—She is here as he said. Speak ! quick !

Is it so ? is it true—or false ? One word !

Con. True.

Queen. Mercifullest Mother, thanks to thee !

Con. Madam !

Queen. I love you, Constance, from my soul.

Now say once more, with any words you
will,

'Tis true, all true, as true as that I speak.

Con. Why should you doubt it ?
Queen. Ah,

why doubt ? why doubt ?

Dear, make me see it ! Do you see it so ?

None see themselves ; another sees them best.

You say ' why doubt it ? '—you see him
and me.

It is because the Mother has such grace That if we had but faith—wherein we fail—

Whate'er we yearn for would be granted
us ;

Howbeit we let our whims prescribe
despair,

Our very fancies thwart and cramp our
will,

And so, accepting life, abjure ourselves.
Constance, I had abjured the hope of love And of being loved, as truly as you palm

The hope of seeing Egypt from that plot.

Con. Heaven !

But it was so, Constance, And say 'she's old, she's grown unit was so ! lovely quite Men say—or do men say it? fancies Who ne'er was beauteous: men want say— beauty still.'
 'Stop here, your life is set, you are Well, so I feared—the curse ! so I felt grown old. sure.
 Too late—no love for you, too late for Con. Be calm. And now you feel not love— sure, you say ?
 Leave love to girls. Be queen: let Queen. Constance, he came,—the Constance lovè !' coming was not strange—One takes the hint—half meets it like Do not I stand and see men come and a child, go ?
 Ashamed at any feelings that oppose. I turned a half-look from my pedestal
 'Oh, love, true, never think of love Where I grow marble—' one young man again ! the more !
 I am a queen: I rule, not love, indeed.' He will love some one,—that is nought So it goes on; so a face grows like to me:
 this, What would he with my marble state-Hair like this hair, poor arms as lean as liness ?' these, Yet this seemed somewhat worse than Till,—nay, it does not end so, I thank heretofore ; God ! The man more gracious, youthful, like a god,
 Con. I cannot understand— And I still older, with less flesh to Queen. The happier you ! change—Constance, I know not how it is with We two those dear extremes that long men : to touch.
 For women, (I am a woman now like It seemed still harder when he first
 you)
 There is no good of life but love—but Absorbed to labour at the state-affairs love ! The old way for the old end—interest.
 What else looks good, is some shade Oh, to live with a thousand beating flung from love— hearts Love gilds it, gives it worth. Be Around you, swift eyes, serviceable warned by me, hands, Never you cheat yourself one instant ! Professing they've no care but for your Love, cause, Give love, ask only love, and leave the Thought but to help you, love but for rest ! yourself,
 O Constance, how I love you ! And you the marble statue all the time Con. I love you. They praise and point at as preferred to Queen. I do believe that all is come life, through you. Yet leave for the first breathing I took you to my heart to keep it warm woman's cheek, When the last chance of love seemed First dancer's, gipsy's, or street bala-dead in me; dine's !
 I thought your fresh youth warmed my Why, how I have ground my teeth to withered heart. hear men's speech Oh, I am very old now, am I not ? Stifled for fear it should alarm my ear, -Not so ! it is true and it shall be true ! Their gait subdued lest step should Con. Tell it me: let me judge if true startle me, or false.
 Queen. Ah, but I fear you ! you will look at me Their eyes declined, such queendom to respect,

Their hands alert, such treasure to preserve, While not a man of them broke rank and spoke,
 Or wrote me a vulgar letter all of love,
 Or caught my hand and pressed it like a hand.
 There have been moments, if the sentinel Lowering his halbert to salute the queen,
 Had flung it brutally and clasped my knees,
 I would have stooped and kissed him with my soul.
Con. Who could have comprehended?
Queen. Ay, who—who ?
 Why, no one, Constance, but this one who did.
 Not they, not you, not I. Even now perhaps It comes too late—would you but tell the truth.
Con. I wait to tell it.
Queen. Well, you see, he came, Outfaced the others, did a work this year Exceeds in value all was ever done,
 You know—it is not I who say it—all Say it. And so (a second pang and worse)
 I grew aware not only of what he did,
 But why so wondrously. Oh, never work Like his was done for work's ignoble sake—It must have finer aims to lure it on !
 I felt, I saw, he loved—loved somebody.
 And Constance, my dear Constance, do you know,
 I did believe this while 'twas you he loved.
Con. Me, madam ?
Queen. It did seem to me, your face Met him where'er he looked : and whom but you Was such a man to love ? it seemed to me,
 You saw he loved you, and approved the love,
 And so you both were in intelligence.
 You could not loiter in the garden, step Into this balcony, but I straight was stung And forced to understand. It seemed so true, So right, so beautiful, so like you both,
 That all this work should have been done by him
 Not for the vulgar hope of recompense, But that at last—suppose, some night like this—Borne on to claim his due reward of me, He might say, ' Give her hand and pay me so.'
 And I (O Constance, you shall love me now !)
 I thought, surmounting all the bitterness, —' And he shall have it. I will make her blest, My flower of youth, my woman's self that was,
 My happiest woman's self that might have been !
 These two shall have their joy and leave me here.'
 Yes—yes—
Con. Thanks !
Queen. And the word was on my lips
 When he burst in upon me. I looked to hear A mere calm statement of his just desire For payment of his labour. When—O Heaven, How can I tell you ? cloud was on my And thunder in my ears at that first word Which told 'twas love of me, of me, did all—He loved me—from the first step to the last, Loved me !
Con. You did not hear . . . you thought he spoke Of love ? what if you should mistake ?
Queen. No, no—
 No mistake ! Ha, there shall be no mistake !
 He had not dared to hint the love he felt—
 You were my reflex—(how I understood !)
 He said you were the ribbon I had worn,
 He kissed my hand, he looked into my eyes,

And love, love was the end of every phrase.
 Love is begun—this much is come to pass,
 The rest is easy. Constance, I am yours—
 I will learn, I will place my life on you,
 But teach me how to keep what I have won.
 Am I so old ? this hair was early grey ;
 But joy ere now has brought hair brown again,
 And joy will bring the cheek's red back, I feel.
 I could sing once too ; that was in my youth.
 Still, when men paint me, they declare me . . . yes, Beautiful—for the last French painter did !
 I know they flatter somewhat ; you are frank—
 I trust you. How I loved you from the first !
 Some queens would hardly seek a cousin out And set her by their side to take the eye :
 I must have felt that good would come from you.
 I am not generous—like him—like you !
 But he is not your lover after all—It was not you he looked at. Saw you him ?
 You have not been mistaking words or looks !
 He said you were the reflex of myself—
 And yet he is not such a paragon To you, to younger women who may choose Among a thousand Norberts. Speak the truth !
 You know you never named his name to me—
 You know, I cannot give him up—ah God, Not up now, even to you !
Con. Then calm yourself.
Queen. See, I am old—look here, you happy girl, I will not play the fool, deceive myself ;
 'Tis all gone—put your cheek beside my cheek—

Ah, what a contrast does the moon behold !
 But then I set my life upon one chance,
 The last chance and the best—am I not left,
 My soul, myself ? All women love great men If young or old—it is in all the tales—Young beauties love old poets who can love—
 Why should not he, the poems in my soul,
 The love, the passionate faith, the sacrifice,
 The constancy ? I throw them at his feet.
 Who cares to see the fountain's very shape,
 And whether it be Triton's or a Nymph's That pours the foam, makes rainbows all around ?
 You could not praise indeed the empty conch ;
 But I'll pour floods of love and hide myself.
 How I will love him ! cannot men love love ?
 Who was a queen and loved a poet once Humpbacked, a dwarf ? ah, women can do that !
 Well, but men too ; at least, they tell you so.
 They love so many women in their youth,
 And even in age they all love whom they
 And yet the best of them confide to friends That 'tis not beauty makes the lasting love—
 They spend a day with such and tire the next ;
 They like soul,—well then, they like phantasy, Novelty even. Let us confess the truth, Horrible though it be—that prejudice, Prescription . . . curses ! they will love a queen.
 They will—they do. And will not, does not—he ?
Con. How can he ? You are wedded—'tis a name
 We know, but still a bond. Your rank remains,

His rank remains. How can he, nobly souled

As you believe and I incline to think, Aspire to be your favourite, shame and all ?

Queen. Hear her ! there, there now—could she love like me ?

What did I say of smooth-cheeked youth and grace ?

See all it does or could do ! so, youth
loves !

Oh, tell him, Constance, you could never
do

What I will—you, it was not born in ! I Will drive these difficulties far and fast As yonder mists curdling before the moon.

I'll use my light too, gloriously retrieve My youth from its enforced calamity, Dissolve that hateful marriage, and be
his,

His own in the eyes alike of God and
man.

Con. You will do—dare do . . . pause on what you say !

Queen. Hear her ! I thank you, Sweet, for that surprise.

You have the fair face : for the soul, see mine !

I have the strong soul : let me teach
you, here.

I think I have borne enough and long
enough,

And patiently enough, the world
remarks,

To have my own way now, unblamed by all.

It does so happen (I rejoice for it) This most unhopèd-for issue cuts the knot.

There's not a better way of settling claims

Than this ; God sends the accident
express :

And were it for my subjects' good, no
more,

'Twere best thus ordered. I am thankful now,

Mute, passive, acquiescent. I receive,
And bless God simply, or should almost
fear

To walk so smoothly to my ends at last.
Why, how I baffle obstacles, spurn fate !

How strong I am ! could Norbert see me now !

Con. Let me consider. It is all too

Queen. You, Constance, learn of me ; do you, like me !

You are young, beautiful : my own,
best girl,

You will have many lovers, and love
one—

Light hair, not hair like Norbert's, to suit yours,

And taller than he is, for yourself are tall.

Love him, like me ! give all away to
him ;

Think never of yourself ; throw by your
pride,

Hope, fear,—your own good as you saw it once,

And love him simply for his very self.
Remember, I (and what am I to you ?)

Would give up all for one, leave throne, lose life,

Do all but just unlove him ! He loves
me.

Con. He shall.

Queen. You, step inside my inmost heart.

Give me your own heart : let us have one heart.

I'll come to you for counsel ; ' this he says,

This he does ; what should this amount to, pray ?

Beseech you, change it into current coin.

Is that worth kisses ? shall I please him
there ?

And then we'll speak in turn of you—
what else ?

Your love, according to your beauty's
worth,

For you shall have some noble love, all
gold :

Whom choose you ? we will get him at your choice.

—Constance, I leave you. Just a minute since,

I felt as I must die or be alone Breathing my soul into an ear like yours :

Now, I would face the world with my new life,

With my new crown. I'll walk around the rooms ; This is your means. I give you all myself.

And then come back and tell you how it feels. Nor. I take you and thank God.

How soon a smile of God can change the world ! Con. Look on through years !

How we are made for happiness—how work We cannot kiss, a second day like this ; Else were this earth, no earth.

Grows play, adversity a winning fight ! Nor. With this day's heat We shall go on through years of cold.

True, I have lost so many years. What then ? Con. So, best ! I try to see those years—I think I see.

Many remain : God has been very good. You, stay here. 'Tis as different from dreams, you look back

From the mind's cold calm estimate of bliss, And lay all to the first glow—not sit down

As these stone statues from the flesh and blood. For ever brooding on a day like this

The comfort thou hast caused mankind, God's moon ! While seeing the embers whiten and love die.

[She goes out, leaving CONSTANCE. Dance-music from within.]

NORBERT enters.

Nor. Well ! we have but one minute and one word.

Con. I am yours, Norbert !

Nor. Yes, mine.

Con. Not till now !

You were mine. Now I give myself to you.

Nor. Constance !

Con. Your own ! I know the thriftier way

Of giving—haply, 'tis the wiser way. Meaning to give a treasure, I might dole Coin after coin out (each, as that were all,

With a new largess still at each despair) And force you keep in sight the deed,

Exhaustless till the end my part and yours, preserve

My giving and your taking ; both our joys

Dying together. Is it the wiser way ? I choose the simpler ; I give all at once.

Know what you have to trust to, trade upon !

Use it, abuse it,—anything but think Hereafter, 'Had I known she loved me so,

And what my means, I might have thriven with it.'

Nor. I take you and thank God.

Con. Look on through years !

We cannot kiss, a second day like this ;

Else were this earth, no earth.

Nor. With this day's heat

We shall go on through years of cold.

Con. So, best !

I try to see those years—I think I see.

You walk quick and new warmth comes ;

you look back

And lay all to the first glow—not sit down

For ever brooding on a day like this

While seeing the embers whiten and love die.

Yes, love lives best in its effect ; and mine,

Full in its own life, yearns to live in yours.

Nor. Just so. I take and know you all at once.

Your soul is disengaged so easily,

Your face is there, I know you ; give me time,

Let me be proud and think you shall know me.

My soul is slower : in a life I roll

The minute out whereto you condense yours—

The whole slow circle round you I must move,

To be just you. I look to a long life

To decompose this minute, prove its worth.

'Tis the sparks' long succession one by one

Shall show you, in the end, what fire was crammed

In that mere stone you struck : how could you know,

If it lay ever unproved in your sight,

As now my heart lies ? your own warmth would hide

Its coldness, were it cold.

Con. But how prove, how ?

Nor. Prove in my life, you ask ?

Con. Quick, Norbert—how ?

Nor. That's easy told. I count life just a stuff

To try the soul's strength on, educe the

Who keeps one end in view makes all things serve.
 'As with the body—he who hurls a lance Or heaps up stone on stone, shows strength alike, So I will seize and use all means to prove And show this soul of mine you crown as yours,
 And justify us both.

Con. Could you write books, Paint pictures! one sits down in poverty And writes or paints, with pity for the rich.

Nor. And loves one's painting and one's writing, then,
 And not one's mistress! All is best, believe,
 And we best as no other than we are.
 We live, and they experiment on life—
 Those poets, painters, all who stand aloof To overlook the farther. Let us be The thing they look at! I might take your face And write of it and paint it—to what end?
 For whom? what pale dictatress in the air Feeds, smiling sadly, her fine ghost-like form With earth's real blood and breath, the beauteous life She makes despised for ever? You are mine, Made for me, not for others in the world,
 Nor yet for that which I should call my art,
 The cold-calm power to see how fair you look.

I come to you—I leave you not, to write Or paint. You are, I am. Let Rubens there Paint us.

Con. So, best!

Nor. I understand your soul.
 You live, and rightly sympathize with life,
 With action, power, success. This way is straight;
 And days were short beside, to let me change

The craft my childhood learnt: my craft shall serve.
 Men set me here to subjugate, enclose, Manure their barren lives, and force the fruit
 First for themselves, and afterward for me In the due tithe; the task of some one man,
 By ways of work appointed by themselves.

I am not bid create—they see no star Transfiguring my brow to warrant that—But bind in one and carry out their wills.
 So I began: to-night sees how I end.
 What if it see, too, my first outbreak here Amid the warmth, surprise and sympathy,
 And instincts of the heart that teach the head?
 What if the people have discerned at length
 The dawn of the next nature, the new man Whose will they venture in the place of theirs,
 And who, they trust, shall find them out new ways To heights as new which yet he only sees?
 I felt it when you kissed me. See this Queen, This People—in our phrase, this mass of men—See how the mass lies passive to my hand And how my hand is plastic, and you by To make the muscles iron! Oh, an end Shall crown this issue as this crowns the first!

My will be on this People! then, the strain,
 The grappling of the potter with his clay,
 The long uncertain struggle,—the success And consummation of the spirit-work,
 Some vase shaped to the curl of the god's lip, While rounded fair for lower men to see The Graces in a dance all recognize With turbulent applause and laughs of heart!

So triumph ever shall renew itself ;
Ever shall end in efforts higher yet, Ever begin . . .

Con. I ever helping ?

Nor. Thus !

[As he embraces her, the QUEEN enters.]

Con. Hist, madam—so I have performed my part.

You see your gratitude's true decency, Norbert ? a little slow in seeing it !
Begin, to end the sooner. What's a kiss ?

Nor. Constance !

Con. Why, must I teach it you again ?

You want a witness to your dullness, sir ?

What was I saying these ten minutes long ?

Then I repeat—when some young handsome man

Like you has acted out a part like yours,
Is pleased to fall in love with one beyond,
So very far beyond him, as he says—
So hopelessly in love, that but to speak Would prove him mad,—he thinks judiciously,

And makes some insignificant good soul Like me, his friend, adviser, confidant And very stalking-horse to cover him In following after what he dares not face—
When his end's gained—(sir, do you understand ?)

When she, he dares not face, has loved him first,

—May I not say so, madam ?—tops his hope,

And overpasses so his wildest dream,
With glad consent of all, and most of her
The confidant who brought the same about—

Why, in the moment when such joy

I do hold that the merest gentleman Will not start rudely from the stalking-horse.

Dismiss it with a 'There, enough of you !' Forget it, show his back unmannerly ;
But like a liberal heart will rather turn
And say, 'A tingling time of hope was ours—'

Betwixt the fears and falterings—we two lived

A chanceful time in waiting for the prize :

The confidant, the Constance, served not ill !

And though I shall forget her in due time,

Her use being answered now, as reason bids,

Nay as herself bids from her heart of hearts,

Still, she has rights, the first thanks go to her,

The first good praise goes to the prosperous tool,

And the first—which is the last—rewarding kiss.'

Nor. Constance ? it is a dream—ah see, you smile !

Con. So, now his part being properly performed,

Madam, I turn to you and finish mine
As duly ; I do justice in my turn.

Yes, madam, he has loved you—long and well ;

He could not hope to tell you so—'twas I Whom served to prove your soul accessible.
I led his thoughts on, drew them to their place

When else they had wandered out into despair,

And kept love constant towards its natural aim.

Enough, my part is played ; you stoop half-way

And meet us royally and spare our fears :

'Tis like yourself. He thanks you, so do I.

Take him—with my full heart ! my work is praised

By what comes of it. Be you happy, both !

Yourself—the only one on earth who can—

Do all for him, much more than a mere heart

Which though warm is not useful in its warmth

As the silk vesture of a queen ! fold that Around him gently, tenderly. For him—

For him,—he knows his own part.

Nor. Have you done ?

I take the jest at last. Should I speak now ?

Was yours the wager, Constance, foolish child,

Or did you but accept it ? Well—at least

You lose by it.

Con. Nay, madam, 'tis your turn !
Restrain him still from speech a little more,

And make him happier and more confident !

Pity him, madam, he is timid yet !

Mark, Norbert ! do not shrink now !
Here I yield

My whole right in you to the Queen, observe !

With her go put in practice the great schemes

You team with, follow the career else closed—

Be all you cannot be except by her !
Behold her !—Madam, say for pity's

Anything—frankly say you love him !
Else

He'll not believe it : there's more earnest in

His fear than you conceive : I know the man.

Nor. I know the woman somewhat, and confess

I thought she had jested better : she begins

To overcharge her part. I gravely wait Your pleasure, madam : where is my reward ?

Queen. Norbert, this wild girl (whom I recognize Scarce more than you do, in her fancy-fit, Eccentric speech and variable mirth,

Not very wise perhaps and somewhat bold,

Yet suitable, the whole night's work (being strange)

—May still be right : I may do well to speak

And make authentic what appears a dream

To even myself. For, what she says, is true—

Yes, Norbert—what you spoke but now of love,

Devotion, stirred no novel sense in me,
But justified a warmth felt long before.

Yes, from the first—I loved you, I shall say :

Strange ! but I do grow stronger, now 'tis said.

Your courage helps mine : you did well to speak

To-night, the night that crowns your twelvemonths' toil—

But still I had not waited to discern Your heart so long, believe me. From the first

The source of so much zeal was almost plain,

In absence even of your own words just now

Which opened out the truth. 'Tis very strange,

But takes a happy ending—in your love Which mine meets : be it so : as you choose me,

So I choose you.

Nor. And worthily you choose !
I will not be unworthy your esteem,

No, madam. I do love you ; I will meet Your nature, now I know it. This was well.

I see,—you dare and you are justified :
But none had ventured such experiment,

Less versed than you in nobleness of heart,

Less confident of finding such in me.
I joy that thus you test me ere you grant

The dearest, richest, beauteousest and best

Of women to my arms : 'tis like yourself.
So—back again into my part's set words—

Devotion to the uttermost is yours,
But no, you cannot, madam, even you,

Create in me the love our Constance does.
Or—something truer to the tragic phrase—

Not yon magnolia-bell superb with scent Invites a certain insect—that's myself—

But the small eye-flower nearer to the ground.

I take this lady.

Con. Stay—not hers, the trap—Stay, Norbert—that mistake were worst of all.

He is too cunning, madam ! It was I,

I, Norbert, who . . .

Nor. You, was it, Constance ? Then,
But for the grace of this divinest hour Which gives me you, I might not pardon
here.

I am the Queen's ; she only knows my brain—

She may experiment therefore on my
heart

And I instruct her too by the result.

But you, Sweet, you who know me, who so long

Have told my heart-beats over, held my
life

In those white hands of yours,—it is not well !

Con. Tush ! I have said it, did I not say it all ?

The life, for her—the heart-beats, for her sake !

Nor. Enough ! my cheek grows red,
I think. Your test ?

There's not the meanest woman in the
world,

Nor she I least could love in all the world, Whom, did she love me, did love prove
itself,

I dared insult as you insult me now.
Constance, I could say, if it must be said,

'Take back the soul you offer—I keep
mine'

But—'Take the soul still quivering on your hand,

The soul so offered, which I cannot use,
And, please you, give it to some playful
friend,

For—what's the trifle he requites me
with ?'

I, tempt a woman, to amuse a man, That two may mock her heart if it succumb ?

No ! fearing God and standing 'neath
His heaven,

I would not dare insult a woman so,
Were she the meanest woman in the
world.

And he, I cared to please, ten emperors !

Con. Norbert !

Nor. I love once as I live but once.

What case is this to think or talk about ?
I love you. Would it mend the case at all Should such a step as this kill love in me ?

Your part were done : account to God
for it.

But mine—could murdered love get up
again,

And kneel to whom you pleased to designate,

And make you mirth ? It is too horrible.
You did not know this, Constance ? now
you know

That body and soul have each one life, but one :

And here's my love, here, living, at your feet.

Con. See the Queen ! Norbert—this one more last word—

If thus you have taken jest for earnest—
thus

Loved me in earnest . . .

Nor. Ah, no jest holds here !
Where is the laughter in which jests
break up,

And what this horror that grows palpable ?

Madam—why grasp you thus the balcony ?

Have I done ill ? Have I not spoken the
truth ?

How could I other ? Was it not your test,
To try me, and what my love for Constance meant ?

Madam, your royal soul itself approves,
The first, that I should choose thus ! so one takes

A beggar—asks him what would buy his child,

And then approves the expected laugh of scorn

Returned as something noble from the Speak, Constance, I'm the beggar ! Ha, what's this ?

You two glare each at each like panthers
now.

Constance, the world fades ; only you stand there !

You did not, in to-night's wild whirl of
things,

Sell me—your soul of souls, for any price ?
No—no—'tis easy to believe in you.

Was it your love's mad trial to o'ertop Mine by this vain self-sacrifice ? well,
still—

Though I should curse, I love you. I am love Con. On the breast of God.
 And cannot change: love's self is at your feet. [The QUEEN goes out.] Con. Feel my heart; let it die against your own!
Nor. Against my own! explain not;
 let this be.
 This is life's height.
Con. Yours! Yours! Yours! Yours!
Nor. You and I—Why care by what meanders we are here In the centre of the labyrinth? men have died Trying to find this place, which we have Con. Found, found!
Nor. Sweet, never fear what she can do!

We are past harm now.
Con. I thought of men—as if you were a man.
 Tempting him with a crown!
Nor. This must end here—
 It is too perfect!
Con. There's the music stopped.
 What measured heavy tread? it is one blaze
 About me and within me.
Nor. Oh, some death Will run its sudden finger round this spark
 And sever us from the rest—
Con. And so do well.
 Now the doors open—
Nor. 'Tis the guard comes.
Con. Kiss!

ACT I

SCENE I. A House near Whitehall.— HAMPDEN, HOLLIS, the younger VANE, RUDYARD, FIENNES, and many of the Presbyterian Party: LOUDON and other Scots Commissioners.

Vane. I say, if he be here—

Rud. (And he is here!)

Hol. For England's sake let every man be still Nor speak of him, so much as say his
 name,
 Till Pym rejoin us! Rudyard! Henry
 Vane!
 One rash conclusion may decide our
 course
 And with it England's fate—think—England's fate!

Hampden, for England's they should be still ! King Vane. You say so, Hollis ? Well, (Hampden, I will speak out !)—in aught I must be still ! he feared
 It is indeed too bitter that one man, To venture on before ; taught Tyranny Any one man's mere presence should Her dismal trade, the use of all her tools, suspend To ply the scourge yet screw the gag so England's combined endeavour : little close need That strangled agony bleeds mute to To name him ! death—
Rud. For you are his brother, How he turns Ireland to a private stage Hollis ! For training infant villanies, new ways Hamp. Shame on you, Rudyard ! Of wringing treasure out of tears and time to tell him that, blood, When he forgets the Mother of us all. Unheard oppressions nourished in the Rud. Do I forget her ? dark
Hamp. You talk idle hate To try how much man's nature can endure Against her foe : is that so strange a —If he dies under it, what harm ? if not, thing ? Why, one more trick is added to the rest Is hating Wentworth all the help she Worth a king's knowing, and what Ire-needs ? land bears
A Puritan. The Philistine strode, England may learn to bear : how all cursing as he went : this while But David—five smooth pebbles from That man has set himself to one dear the brook task, Within his scrip . . . The bringing Charles to relish more and Rud. Be you as still as David ! more Fien. Here's Rudyard not ashamed Power, power without law, power and to wag a tongue blood too—Stiff with ten years' disuse of Parlia- —Can I be still ?
 ments ; Hamp. For that you should be still.
 Why, when the last sat, Wentworth sat Vane. Oh, Hampden, then and now !
 with us ! The year he left us, Rud. Let's hope for news of them The People in full Parliament could now he returns— wrest He that was safe in Ireland, as we The Bill of Rights from the reluctant thought ! King ; —But I'll abide Pym's coming. And now, he'll find in an obscure small Vane. Now, by Heaven room
 They may be cool who can, silent who Astealthy gathering of great-hearted men will— That take up England's cause : England Some have a gift that way ! Wentworth is here !
 is here,
 Here, and the King's safe closeted with Hamp. And who despairs of England ?
 him Rud. That do I, Ere this. And when I think on all If Wentworth comes to rule her. I am that's past sick
 Since that man left us, how his single arm To think her wretched masters, Hamil-Rolled the advancing good of England ton, back The muckworm Cottington, the maniac And set the woeful Past up in its place, — Laud, Exalting Dagon where the Ark should May yet be longed-for back again. I say, be— I do despair.
Vane. And, Rudyard, I'll say this—

Which all true men say after me, not loud
 But solemnly and as you'd say a prayer !
 This King, who treads our England underfoot, Has just so much—it may be fear or craft—
 As bids him pause at each fresh outrage ; friends, He needs some sterner hand to grasp his own,
 Some voice to ask, ' Why shrink ?—am I not by ?'
 Now, one whom England loved for serving her, Found in his heart to say, ' I know where best
 The iron heel shall bruise her, for she leans Upon me when you trample.' Witness, you !
 So Wentworth heartened Charles, and England fell.
 But inasmuch as life is hard to take From England . . .
Many Voices. Go on, Vane ! 'Tis well said, Vane !
Vane. —Who has not so forgotten Runnymede !— Voices. 'Tis well and bravely spoken, Vane ! Go on !
Vane. There are some little signs of late she knows The ground no place for her ! She glances round, Wentworth has dropped the hand, is gone his way.
 On other service : what if she arise ?
 No ! the King beckons, and beside him stands
 The same bad man once more, with the same smile And the same gesture. Now shall England crouch, Or catch at us and rise ?
Voices. The Renegade !
 Haman ! Athithophel !
Hamp. Gentlemen of the North,
 It was not thus, the night your claims were urged,
 And we pronounced the League and 'Covenant

The cause of Scotland, England's cause as well !
 Vane there, sat motionless the whole night through.
Vane. Hampden !
Fien. Stay, Vane !
Lou. Be just and patient, Vane !
Vane. Mind how you counsel patience, Loudon ! you Have still a Parliament, and this your League To back it ; you are free in Scotland still :
 While we are brothers, hope's for England yet.
 But know you wherefore Wentworth comes ? to quench
 This last of hopes ? that he brings war with him ?
 Know you the man's self ? what he dares ?
Lou. We know,
 All know—'tis nothing new.
Vane. And what's new, then,
 In calling for his life ? Why, Pym himself—
 You must have heard—ere Wentworth dropped our cause
 He would see Pym first ; there were many more Strong on the people's side and friends of his,
 Eliot that's dead, Rudyard and Hampden here,
 But for these Wentworth cared not ; only, Pym
 He would see—Pym and he were sworn, 'tis said,
 To live and die together ; so, they met At Greenwich. Wentworth, you are sure, was long, Specious enough, the devil's argument Lost nothing on his lips ; he'd have * Pym own A patriot could not play a purer part Than follow in his track ; they two combined Might put down England. Well, Pym heard him out ;
 One glance—you know Pym's eye—one word was all :
 ' You leave us, Wentworth ! while your head is on,

I'll not leave you.'

Hamp. Has he left Wentworth, then?
Has England lost him? Will you let him

Or put your crude surmises in his mouth?
Away with this! Will you have Pym or Vane?

Voices. Wait Pym's arrival! Pym shall speak.

Hamp. Meanwhile
Let Loudon read the Parliament's report From Edinburgh: our last hope, as Vane says,

Is in the stand it makes. Loudon!

Vane. No, no!
Silent I can be: not indifferent!

Hamp. Then each keep silence, praying God to spare His anger, cast not England quite away In this her visitation!

A Puritan. Seven years long
The Midianite drove Israel into dens And caves. Till God sent forth a mighty man,

Pym enters.

Even Gideon!

Pym. Wentworth's come: nor sickness, care,
The ravaged body nor the ruined soul,
More than the winds and waves that beat his ship, Could keep him from the King. He has not reached Whitehall: they've hurried up a Council there

To lose no time and find him work enough.

'Where's Loudon? your Scots' Parliament...

Lou. Holds firm:
We were about to read reports.

Pym. The King
Has just dissolved your Parliament.

Lou. and other Scots. Great God!
An oath-breaker! Stand by us, England, then!

Pym. The King's too sanguine; doubtless Wentworth's here;
But still some little form might be kept up.

Hamp. Now speak, Vane! Rudyard, you had much to say!

Hol. The rumour's false, then...

Pym. Ay, the Court gives out His own concerns have brought him back: I know

'Tis the King calls him: Wentworth

The tribe of Cottingtons and Hamiltons Whose part is played; there's talk enough, by this,—

Merciful talk, the King thinks: time is now

To turn the record's last and bloody leaf That, chronicling a nation's great despair,

Tells they were long rebellious, and their lord

Indulgent, till, all kind expedients tried,
He drew the sword on them and reigned in peace.

Laud's laying his religion on the Scots Was the last gentle entry: the new page Shall run, the King thinks, 'Wentworth thrust it down

At the sword's point.'

A Puritan. I'll do your bidding, Pym, England's and God's—one blow!

Pym. A goodly thing—
We all say, friends, it is a goodly thing To right that England! Heaven grows dark above:

Let's snatch one moment ere the thunder fall,

To say how well the English spirit comes out

Beneath it! All have done their best, indeed,

From lion Eliot, that grand Englishman,
To the least here: and who, the least one here,

When she is saved (for her redemption dawns, Dimly, most dimly, but it dawns—it dawns)

Who'd give at any price his hope away
Of being named along with the Great Men?

We would not—no, we would not give that up!

Hamp. And one name shall be dearer than all names.

When children, yet unborn, are taught that name

After their fathers',—taught what matchless man . . .

Pym. . . . Saved England ? What if Wentworth's should be still That name ?

Rud. and others. We have just said it,
Pym! His death Saves her ! We said it—there's no way
beside !

I'll do God's bidding, Pym! They struck down Joab
And purged the land.

Vane. No villanous striking-down !

Rud. No, a calm vengeance : let the whole land rise
And shout for it. No Feltons !

Pym. . . . Rudyard, no !
England rejects all Feltons ; most of all Since Wentworth . . . Hampden, say the trust again
Of England in her servants—but I'll
think You know me, all of you. Then, I believe,
Spite of the Past, Wentworth rejoins you, friends !

Vane and others. Wentworth ? aposttate ! Judas ! double-dyed A traitor ! Is it Pym, indeed . . .

Pym. . . . Who says Vane never knew that Wentworth, loved that man,
Was used to stroll with him, arm locked in arm,
Along the streets to see the people pass
And read in every island-countenance Fresh argument for God against the
King,— Never sat down, say, in the very house Where Eliot's brow grew broad with noble thoughts, (You've joined us, Hampden—Hollis, you as well.)
And then left talking over Gracchus'
death . . .

Vane. To frame, we know it well, the choicest clause
In the Petition of Right : he framed such clause
One month before he took at the King's
hand
His Northern Presidency, which that Bill

Denounced.
Pym. Too true ! Never more, never
more Walked we together ! Most alone I went.
I have had friends—all here are fast my
friends—
But I shall never quite forget that friend.
And yet it could not but be real in him !
You, Vane,—you Rudyard, have no right to trust To Wentworth : but can no one hope
with me ?
Hampden, will Wentworth dare shed English blood Like water ?

Hamp. Ireland is Aceldama.
Pym. Will he turn Scotland to a hunting-ground
To please the King, now that he knows
the King ?
The People or the King ? and that King,
Charles!
Hamp. Pym, all here know you :
you'll not set your heart On any baseless dream. But say one
deed
Of Wentworth's, since he left us . . .

Vane. [Shouting without.
There ! he comes,
And they shout for him ! Wentworth's at Whitehall,
The King embracing him, now, as we
speak,
And he, to be his match in courtesies, Taking the whole war's risk upon him-
self,
Now, while you tell us here how changed he is !
Hear you ?
Pym. And yet it 'tis a dream, no
more,
That Wentworth chose their side, and brought the King To love it as though Laud had loved it
first,
And the Queen after ;—that he led their cause Calm to success, and kept it spotless
through,
So that our very eyes could look upon The travail of our souls and close content That violence, which something mars even right

Which sanctions it, had taken off no
grace

From its serene regard. Only a dream!

Hamp. We meet here to accomplish certain good

By obvious means, and keep tradition
up

Of free assemblages, else obsolete, In this poor chamber: nor without effect

Has friend met friend to counsel and confirm,

As, listening to the beats of England's
heart,

We spoke its wants to Scotland's prompt reply

By these her delegates. Remains
alone

That word grow deed, as with God's help it shall—

But with the devil's hindrance, who doubts too?

Looked we or no that tyranny should turn

Her engines of oppression to their use?
Whereof, suppose the worst be Wentworth here—

Shall we break off the tactics which succeed

In drawing out our formidablest foe, Let bickering and disunion take their
place?

Or count his presence as our conquest's
proof,

And keep the old arms at their steady
play?

Proceed to England's work! Fiennes, read the list!

Fiennes. Ship-money is refused or fiercely paid

In every county, save the northern parts Where Wentworth's influence . . .

(shouting.)

Vane. I, in England's name, Declare her work, this way, at end! Till
now,

Up to this moment, peaceful strife was
best.

We English had free leave to think; till
now,

We had a shadow of a Parliament In Scotland. But all's changed: they change the first,

They try brute-force for law, they, first of all . . .

Voices. Good! Talk enough! The old true hearts with Vane!

Vane. Till we crush Wentworth for her, there's no act

Serves England!

Voices. Vane for England!

Pym. Pym should be Something to England. I seek Wentworth, friends.

SCENE II.—Whitehall.

LADY CARLISLE and WENTWORTH.

Went. And the King?

Lady Car. Wentworth, lean on me! sit then,—

I'll tell you all; this horrible fatigue Will kill you.

Went. No; or—Lucy, just your arm;

I'll not sit till I've cleared this up with
him:

After that, rest. The King?

Lady Car. Confides in you.

Went. Why? or, why now?—They have kind throats, the knaves!

Shout for me—they!

Lady Car. You come so strangely soon:

Yet we took measures to keep off the crowd—

Did they shout for you?

Went. Wherefore should they not?

Does the King take such measures for himself?

Beside, there's such a dearth of malcontents,

You say!

Lady Car. I said but few dared carp at you.

Went. At me? at us, I hope! The King and I!

He's surely not disposed to let me bear
The fame away from him of these late deeds

In Ireland? I am yet his instrument

Be it for well or ill? He trusts me, too!

Lady Car. The King, dear Wentworth, purposes, I said,

To grant you, in the face of all the Court . . .

Went. All the Court! Evermore the Court about us!

Savile and Holland, Hamilton and Vane About us,—then the King will grant me—what?

That he for once put these aside and say—

‘Tell me your whole mind, Wentworth!’

Lady Car. You professed You would be calm.

Went. Lucy, and I am calm! How else shall I do all I come to do, Broken, as you may see, body and mind,

How shall I serve the King? time wastes meanwhile,

You have not told me half. His foot-step! No.

Quick, then, before I meet him,—I am calm—

Why does the King distrust me?

Lady Car. He does not Distrust you.

Went. Lucy, you can help me; you Have even seemed to care for me: one word!

Is it the Queen?

Lady Car. No, not the Queen: the party That poisons the Queen’s ear, Savile and Holland.

Went. I know, I know: and Vane, too, he’s one too?

Go on—and he’s made Secretary. Well? Or leave them out and go straight to the charge;

The charge!

Lady Car. Oh, there’s no charge, no precise charge;

Only they sneer, make light of—one may say,

Nibble at what you do.

Went. I know! but Lucy, I reckoned on you from the first!—Go on!

—Was sure could I once see this gentle friend

When I arrived, she’d throw an hour away

To help her . . . what am I?

Lady Car. You thought of me, Dear Wentworth?

Went. But go on! The party here!

Lady Car. They do not think your Irish Government

Of that surpassing value . . .

Went. The one thing Of value! The one service that the crown May count on! All that keeps these very Vanes

In power, to vex me—not that they do vex,

Only it might vex some to hear that service

Decried, the sole support that’s left the King!

Lady Car. So the Archbishop says.

Went. Ah? well, perhaps The only hand held up in my defence May be old Laud’s! These Hollands, then, these Saviles Nibble? They nibble?—that’s the very word!

Lady Car. Your profit in the Customs, Bristol says, Exceeds the due proportion: while the tax . . .

Went. Enough! ‘tis too unworthy,—I am not So patient as I thought! What’s Pym about?

Lady Car. Pym?

Went. Pym and the People.

Lady Car. Oh, the Faction! Extinct—of no account: there’ll never be Another Parliament.

Went. Tell Savile that! You may know—(ay, you do—the creatures here Never forget!) that in my earliest life I was not . . . much that I am now! The King

May take my word on points concerning Pym

Before Lord Savile’s, Lucy, or if not, I bid them ruin their wise selves, not me, These Vanes and Hollands! I’ll not be their tool

Who might be Pym’s friend yet.

But there’s the King!

Where is he?

Lady Car. Just apprised that you arrive.

Went. And why not here to meet me? I was told

He sent for me, nay, longed for me !

Lady Car. Because,— He is now . . . I think a Council 's sitting
now
About this Scots affair.

Went. A Council sits ?
They have not taken a decided course Without me in the matter ?

Lady Car. I should say . . .
Went. The war ? They cannot have agreed to that ?

Not the Scots' war ?—without consulting me—

Me, that am here to show how rash it is,

How easy to dispense with ?—Ah, you too

Against me ! ' well,—the King may take his time.

—Forget it, Lucy ! cares make peevish : mine

Weigh me (but 'tis a secret) to my grave.

Lady Car. For life or death I am your own, dear friend ! [Goes out.

Went. Heartless ! but all are heartless here. Go now,

Forsake the People !—I did not for-

The People : they shall know it—when the King

Will trust me !—who trusts all beside at once,

While I have not spoke Vane and Savile fair,

And am not trusted : have but saved the Throne :

Have not picked up the Queen's glove prettily,

And am not trusted. But he'll see me now.

Weston is dead : the Queen's half English now—

More English : one decisive word will brush

These insects from . . . the step I know so well !

The King ! But now, to tell him . . . no —to ask

What's in me he distrusts :—or, best begin

By proving that this frightful Scots affair

Is just what I foretold. So much to say,

And the flesh fails, now ! and the time is come,

And one false step no way to be repaired !
You were avenged, Pym, could you look on me !

Pym enters.

Went. I little thought of you just then.

Pym. No ? I Think always of you, Wentworth.

Went. The old voice !
I wait the King, sir.

Pym. True—you look so pale !
A Council sits within ; when that breaks up He'll see you.

Went. Sir, I thank you.

Pym. Oh, thank Laud !
You know when Laud once gets on Church affairs

The case is desperate : he'll not be long

To-day : he only means to prove, to-day, We English all are mad to have a hand

In butchering the Scots for serving God

After their fathers' fashion : only that !
Went. Sir, keep your jests for those who relish them !

(Does he enjoy their confidence ?) 'Tis

kind
To tell me what the Council does.

Pym. You grudge That I should know it had resolved on

war Before you came ? no need : you shall have all The credit, trust me.

Went. Have the Council dared—They have not dared . . . that is—I know

you not.
Farewell, sir : times are changed.

Pym. —Since we two met At Greenwich ? Yes : poor patriots though we be,

You cut a figure, makes some slight

return
For your exploits in Ireland ! Changed

indeed,
Could our friend Eliot look from out his

grave !
Ah, Wentworth, one thing for acquaintance' sake,

Just to decide a question ; have you,
now,

Felt your old self since you forsook us ?
Went. Sir !

Pym. Spare me the gesture ' you misapprehend !

Think not I mean the advantage is with
me.

I was about to say that, for my part,
I never quite held up my head since
then,—

Was quite myself since then : for first,
you see,

I lost all credit after that event With those who recollect how sure I was Wentworth would outdo Eliot on our
side.

Forgive me : Savile, old Vane, Holland
here,

Eschew plain-speaking : 'tis a trick I keep.

Went. How, when, where, Savile, Vane and Holland speak,

Plainly or otherwise, would have my
scorn,

All of my scorn, sir . . .

Pym. . . . Did not my poor thoughts Claim somewhat ?

Went. Keep your thoughts ! believe the King

Mistrust's me for their prattle, all these Vanes

And Saviles ! make your mind up, o'
God's love,

That I am discontented with the King !
Pym. Why, you may be : I should be, that I know,

Were I like you.
Went. Like me ?

Pym. I care not much

For titles : our friend Eliot died no
Lord,

Hampden's no Lord, and Savile is a
Lord :

But you care, since you sold your soul
for one.

I can't think, therefore, your soul's purchaser

Did well to laugh you to such utter
scorn

When you twice prayed so humbly for its price,

The thirty silver pieces . . . I should say,

The Earldom you expected, still expect,
And may. Your letters were the movingest !

Console yourself : I've borne him prayers
just now

From Scotland not to be oppressed by Laud,

Words moving in their way : he'll pay,
be sure,

As much attention as to those you sent.
Went. False, sir !—Who showed them you ? suppose it so,

The King did very well . . . nay, I was glad

When it was shown me : I refused, the
first !

John Pym, you were my friend—forbear me once !

Pym. Oh, Wentworth, ancient brother of my soul,

That all should come to this !
Went. Leave me !

Pym. My friend,
Why should I leave you ?

Went. To tell Rudyard this,
And Hampden this !

Pym. Whose faces once were bright At my approach—now sad with doubt and fear,

Because I hope in you—yes, Wentworth,
you

Who never mean to ruin England—you Who shake off, with God's help, an obscene dream

In this Ezekiel chamber, where it crept Upon you first, and wake, yourself—your true

And proper self, our Leader, England's Chief,

And Hampden's friend !
This is the proudest day !

Come Wentworth ! Do not even see the King !

The rough old room will seem itself
again !

We'll both go in together : you've not seen

Hampden so long : come : and there's Fiennes : you'll have

To know young Vane. This is the proudest day !

[The King enters. WENTWORTH lets fall PYM's hand.

Cha. Arrived, my Lord?—This gentleman, we know, Was your old friend.
The Scots shall be informed What we determine for their happiness.
[Pym goes out.]
You have made haste, my Lord.
Went. Sir, I am come . . .
Cha. To see an old familiar—nay, 'tis well; Aid us with his experience: this Scots' League And Covenant spreads too far, and we have proofs That they intrigue with France: the Faction, too, Whereof your friend there is the head and front, Abets them,—as he boasted, very like.
Went. Sir, trust me! but for this once, trust me, sir!
Cha. What can you mean?
Went. That you should trust me, sir!
 Oh—not for my sake! but 'tis sad, so sad That for distrusting me, you suffer—you Whom I would die to serve: sir, do you think That I would die to serve you?
Cha. But rise, Wentworth!
Went. What shall convince you? What does Savile do To prove him . . . Ah, one can't tear out one's heart And show it, how sincere a thing it is!
Cha. Have I not trusted you?
Went. Say aught but that!
 There is my comfort, mark you: all will be So different when you trust me—as you shall!
 It has not been your fault,—I was away, Mistook, maligned, how was the King to know?
 I am here, now—he means to trust me, now—
 All will go on so well!
Cha. Be sure I do—I've heard that I should trust you: as you came,
 Your friend, the Countess, told me . . .
Went. No,—hear nothing—

Be told nothing about me! you're not told Your right-hand serves you, or your children love you!
Cha. You love me, Wentworth: rise!
Went. I can speak now.
 I have no right to hide the truth. 'Tis I Can save you; only I. Sir, what must be?
Cha. Since Laud's assured (the minutes are within) —Loath as I am to spill my subjects' blood . . .
Went. That is, he'll have a war: what's done is done!
Cha. They have intrigued with France; that's clear to Laud.
Went. Has Laud suggested any way to meet The war's expense?
Cha. He'd not decide so far Until you joined us.
Went. Most considerate!
 He's certain they intrigue with France, these Scots?
Cha. Pym should know.
Went. The People for us—were the People for us!
 Sir, a great thought comes to reward your trust:
 Summon a Parliament! in Ireland first, Then, here.
Cha. In truth?
Went. That saves us! that puts off
 The war, gives time to right their grievances—To talk with Pym. I know the Faction, as Laud styles it, tutors Scotland: all their plans Suppose no Parliament: in calling one You take them by surprise. Produce the proofs Of Scotland's treason; then bid England help:
 Even Pym will not refuse.
Cha. You would begin With Ireland?
Went. Take no care for that: that's sure To prosper.

Cha. You shall rule me. You were best Return at once : but take this ere you go !
Now, do I trust you ? You're an Earl :
my Friend
Of Friends : yes, while . . . You hear me not !
Went. Say it all o'er again—but once again :
The first was for the music—once again !
Cha. Strafford, my friend, there may have been reports, Vain rumours. Henceforth touching Strafford is To touch the apple of my sight : why gaze so earnestly ?

Went. I am grown young again, And foolish. What was it we spoke of ?

Cha. Ireland,
The Parliament,—

Went. I may go when I will ?
—Now ?

Cha. Are you tired so soon of us ?
Went. My King !

But you will not so utterly abhor
A Parliament ? I'd serve you any way.

Cha. You said just now this was the only way.

Went. Sir, I will serve you !
Cha. Strafford, spare yourself—You are so sick, they tell me.

Went. 'Tis my soul That's well and prospers, now !

This Parliament—We'll summon it, the English one—I'll

care
For everything. You shall not need them much.

Cha. If they prove restive . . .
Went. I shall be with you.

Cha. Ere they assemble ?
Went. I will come, or else

Deposit this infirm humanity
I' the dust. My whole heart stays with you, my King !

[As WENTWORTH goes out, the QUEEN enters.

Cha. That man must love me !
Queen. Is it over then ?

Why, he looks yellower than ever ! well,
At least we shall not hear eternally Of service—services : he's paid at least.

Cha. Not done with : he engages to surpass All yet performed in Ireland.

Queen. I had thought Nothing beyond was ever to be done.

The war, Charles—will he raise supplies enough ?

Cha. We've hit on an expedient ; he . . . that is,

I have advised . . . we have decided on The calling—in Ireland—of a Parliament.

Queen. O truly ! You agree to that ?
Is that

The first fruit of his counsel ? But I

As much.

Cha. This is too idle, Henriette !
I should know best. He will strain every nerve,

And once a precedent established . . .
Queen. Notice

How sure he is of a long term of favours !
He'll see the next, and the next after that ;

No end to Parliaments !
Cha. Well, it is done.

He talks it smoothly, doubtless. If, indeed, The Commons here . . .

Queen. Here ! you will summon them

Here ? Would I were in France again to see A King !

Cha. But Henriette . . .
Queen. Oh, the Scots see clear !

Why should they bear your rule ?
Cha. But listen, Sweet !

Queen. Let Wentworth listen—you confide in him !

Cha. I do not, Love—I do not so confide !

The Parliament shall never trouble us
... Nay, hear me ! I have schemes, such schemes : we'll buy

The leaders off : without that, Wentworth's counsel

Had ne'er prevailed on me. Perhaps I call it

To have excuse for breaking it for ever, And whose will then the blame be ? See you not ?

Come, Dearest !—look ! the little fairy, Strafford revived our Parliaments ;
 now, before,
 That cannot reach my shoulder ! War was but talked of ; there's an Dearest, come ! army, now :

Still, we've a Parliament ! Poor Ireland
bears

ACT II

SCENE I.—(As in Act I, Scene I.)

The same Party enters.

Rud. Twelve subsidies !

Vane. O Rudyard, do not laugh
 At least !

Rud. True : Strafford called the Parliament—

'Tis he should laugh !

A Puritan. Out of the serpent's root Comes forth a cockatrice.

Fien. —A stinging one,
 If that's the Parliament : twelve subsidies !

A stinging one ! but, brother, where's your word

For Strafford's other nest-egg, the Scots'
 war ?

The Puritan. His fruit shall be a fiery flying serpent.

Fien. Shall be ? It chips the shell, man ; peeps abroad.

Twelve subsidies !—Why, how now,
Vane ?

Rud. Peace, Fiennes !

Fien. Ah ?—But he was not more a dupe than I,

Or you, or any here, the day that Pym Returned with the good news. Look up, friend Vane !

We all believed that Strafford meant us
 well

In summoning the Parliament.

HAMPDEN enters.

Vane. Now, Hampden, Clear me ! I would have leave to sleep
 again ;

I'd look the People in the face again :
 Clear me from having, from the first, hoped, dreamed

Better of Strafford !

Hamp. You may grow one day A steadfast light to England, Henry
Vane !

Rud. Meantime, by flashes I make shift to see

Another wretch (she dies the hardest
death !)

Why, speak of it in Parliament ! and,
 lo,

'Tis spoken ! so console yourselves.

Fien. The jest !
 We clamoured, I suppose, thus long, to win

The privilege of laying on our backs
 A sorer burden than the King dares lay !

Rud. Mark now : we meet at length, complaints pour in

From every county, all the land cries
 out

On loans and levies, curses ship-money, Calls vengeance on the Star-chamber ;

we lend An ear. 'Ay, lend them all the ears you have !'

Puts in the King ; 'my subjects, as you
 find,

Are fretful, and conceive great things of
 you.

Just listen to them, friends ; you'll sanction me

The measures they most wince at, make them yours,

Instead of mine, I know : and, to begin,
 They say my levies pinch them,—raise me straight

Twelve subsidies !'

Fien. All England cannot furnish Twelve subsidies !

Hol. But Strafford, just returned From Ireland—what has he to do with
 that ?

How could he speak his mind ? He left
 before

The Parliament assembled. Pym, who knows

Strafford . . .

Rud. Would I were sure we know ourselves !

What is for good, what, bad—who friend, who foe !

Hol. Do you count Parliaments no
 gain ?

Rud. A gain ?
While the King's creatures overbalance
us ?

—There's going on, beside, among our—

A quiet, slow, but most effectual course Of buying over, sapping, leavening
The lump till all is leaven. Glanville's gone.

I'll put a case ; had not the Court declared

That no sum short of just twelve subsidies

Will be accepted by the King—our House,

I say, would have consented to that offer
To let us buy off ship-money !

Hol. Most like,
If, say, six subsidies will buy it off,
The House . . .

Rud. Will grant them ! Hampden, do you hear ?

Congratulate with me ! the King's the
king,

And gains his point at last—our own assent

To that detested tax ! all's over, then !
There's no more taking refuge in this room,

Protesting, 'Let the King do what he
will,

We, England, are no party to our
shame :

'Our day will come !' Congratulate with me !

Pym enters.

Vane. Pym, Strafford called this Parliament, you say, But we'll not have our Parliaments like those

In Ireland, Pym !

Rud. Let him stand forth, your friend !

One doubtful act hides far too many sins ;

It can be stretched no more, and, to my
mind,

Begins to drop from those it covered.

Other Voices. Good !
Let him avow himself ! No fitter time !

We wait thus long for you.

Rud. Perhaps, too long !

Since nothing but the madness of the Court,

In thus unmasking its designs at once,
Has saved us from betraying England.

Stay—

This Parliament is Strafford's : let us vote

Our list of grievances too black by far
To suffer talk of subsidies : or best,

That ship-money's disposed of long ago By England : any vote that's broad
enough :

And then let Strafford, for the love of it, Support his Parliament !

Vane. And vote as well No war's to be with Scotland ! Hear you, Pym ?

We'll vote, no war ! No part nor lot in it For England !

Many Voices. Vote, no war ! Stop the new levies !

No Bishop's war ! At once ! When next we meet !

Pym. Much more when next we meet !
Friends, which of you

Since first the course of Strafford was in
doubt,

Has fallen the most away in soul from
me ?

Vane. I sat apart, even now, under God's eye,

Pondering the words that should denounce you, Pym,

In presence of us all, as one at league With England's enemy.

Pym. You are a good And gallant spirit, Henry. Take my hand

And say you pardon me for all the pain Till now ! Strafford is wholly ours.

Many Voices. Sure ? sure ?
Pym. Most sure : for Charles dissolves the Parliament

While I speak here.

—And I must speak, friends, now !
Strafford is ours. The King detects the
change,

Casts Strafford off for ever, and resumes His ancient path : no Parliament for us, No Strafford for the King !

Come, all of you,
To bid the King farewell, predict success
To his Scots' expedition, and receive Strafford, our comrade now. The next will be Indeed a Parliament!

Vane. Forgive me, Pym!
Voices. This looks like truth: Strafford can have, indeed, No choice.
Pym. Friends, follow me! He's with the King.
 Come, Hampden, and come, Rudyard, and come, Vane!
 This is no sullen day for England, sirs!
 Strafford shall tell you!
Voices. To Whitehall then! Come!

SCENE II.—Whitehall.

CHARLES and STRAFFORD.

Cha. Strafford!Straf. Is it a dream? my papers, here—Thus, as I left them, all the plans you foundSo happy—(look! the track you pressed my handFor pointing out)—and in this very room,Over these very plans, you tell me, sir, With the same face, too,—tell me just one thingThat ruins them! How's this? What may this mean?

Sir, who has done this?

Cha. Strafford, who but I?
You bade me put the rest away: indeed You are alone.Straf. Alone, and like to be!
No fear, when some unworthy scheme's grown ripe,Of those, who hatched it, leaving me to looseThe mischief on the world! Land hatches war,Falls to his prayers, and leaves the rest
to me,

And I'm alone.

Cha. At least, you knew as much When first you undertook the war.Straf. My liege, Was this the way? I said, since Land would lapA little blood, 'twere best to hurry overThe loathsome business, not to be whole monthsAt slaughter—one blow, only one, then, peace,Save for the dreams. I said, to please you bothI'd lead an Irish army to the West, While in the South an English... but you lookAs though you had not told me fifty times'Twas a brave plan! My army is all raised,

I am prepared to join it...

Cha. Hear me, Strafford!Straf.... When, for some little thing, my whole designIs set aside—(where is the wretched paper?)I am to lead—(ay, here it is)—to lead The English army: why? NorthumberlandThat I appointed, chooses to be sick—Is frightened: and, meanwhile, who answers forThe Irish Parliament? or army, either?
Is this my plan?Cha. So disrespectful, sir?Straf. My liege, do not believe it! I am yours,Yours ever: 'tis too late to think about:
To the death, yours. Elsewhere, this untoward stepShall pass for mine; the world shall think it mine.But, here! But, here! I am so seldom here,Seldom with you, my King! I, soon to rush

Alone upon a giant in the dark!

Cha. My Strafford!Straf. [examines papers awhile.]

'Seize the passes of the Tyne'!

But, sir, you see—see all I say is true?
My plan was sure to prosper, so, no cause To ask the Parliament for help; whereas We need them frightfully.Cha. Need the Parliament?Straf. Now, for God's sake, sir, not one error more!We can afford no error; we draw, now, Upon our last resource: the Parliament Must help us!

Cha. I've undone you, Strafford !
Straf. Nay—why despond, sir ? 'tis not come to that !

I have not hurt you ? Sir, what have I said To hurt you ? I unsay it ! Don't despond !

Sir, do you turn from me ?

Cha. My friend of friends !

Straf. We'll make a shift ! Leave me the Parliament !

Help they us ne'er so little and I'll make Sufficient out of it. We'll speak them fair.

They're sitting, that's one great thing ; that half gives

Their sanction to us ; that's much :
 don't despond !

Why, let them keep their money, at the worst !

The reputation of the People's help Is all we want : we'll make shift yet !

Cha. Good Strafford !

Straf. But meantime, let the sum be ne'er so small

They offer, we'll accept it : any sum—For the look of it : the least grant tells the Scots

The Parliament is ours—their staunch ally

Turned ours : that told, there's half the blow to strike !

What will the grant be ? What does Glanville think ?

Cha. Alas !

Straf. My liege ?

Cha. Strafford !

Straf. But answer me !

Have they . . . O surely not refused us half ?

Half the twelve subsidies ? We never looked

For all of them ! How many do they give ?

Cha. You have not heard : . . .

Straf. (What has he done ?)—Heard what ?

But speak at once, sir, this grows terrible !
[The King continuing silent.]

You have dissolved them !—I'll not leave this man.

Cha. 'Twas old Vane's ill-judged vehemence.

Straf. Old Vane ?

Cha. He told them, just about to vote the half,

That nothing short of all twelve subsidies

Would serve our turn, or be accepted.

Straf. Vane !

Vane ! Who, sir, promised me that very Vane . . .

O God, to have it gone, quite gone from
 me,

The one last hope—I that despair, my
 hope—

That I should reach his heart one day, and cure

All bitterness one day, be proud again And young again, care for the sunshine
 too,

And never think of Eliot any more,— God, and to toil for this, go far for this, Get nearer, and still nearer, reach this
 heart

And find Vane there !

[Suddenly taking up a paper, and continuing with a forced calmness.]

Northumberland is sick :

Well then, I take the army : Wilmot leads

The Horse, and he with Conway must secure

The passes of the Tyne : Ormond supplies

My place in Ireland. Here, we'll try the City :

If they refuse a loan—debase the coin And seize the bullion ! we've no other choice.

Herbert . . .

And this while I am here !
 with you !

And there are hosts such, hosts like Vane !
 I go,

And, I once gone, they'll close around you, sir,

When the least pique, pettiest mistrust, is sure

To ruin me—and you along with me !
 Do you see that ? And you along with
 me !

—Sir, you'll not ever listen to these men,
 And I away, fighting your battle ? Sir,

If they—if She—charge me, no matter how—

Say you, 'At any time when he returns His head is mine!' Don't stop me there! You know

My head is yours, but never stop me there!

Cha. Too shameful, Strafford! You advised the war,

And . . .

Straf. I! I! that was never spoken with Till it was entered on! That loathe the war!

That say it is the maddest, wickedest. . . Do you know, sir, I think, within my heart,

That you would say I did advise the war;

And if, through your own weakness, or what's worse,

These Scots, with God to help them, drive me back,

You will not step between the raging People

And me, to say . . .

I knew it! from the first I knew it! Never was so cold a heart! Remember that I said it—that I never Believed you for a moment!

—And, you loved me? You thought your perfidy profoundly hid

Because I could not share the whisperings With Vane? With Savile? What, the face was masked?

I had the heart to see, sir! Face of flesh, But heart of stone—of smooth, cold, frightful stone!

Ay, call them! Shall I call for you? The Scots

Goaded to madness? Or the English—Pym—

Shall I call Pym, your subject? Oh, you think I'll leave them in the dark about it all? They shall not know you? Hampden, Pym shall not?

PYM, HAMPDEN, VANE, &c. enter.

[Dropping on his knee.] Thus favoured with your gracious countenance What shall a rebel League avail against

Your servant, utterly and ever yours? So, gentlemen, the King's not even left The privilege of bidding me farewell Who haste to save the People—that you style

Your People—from the mercies of the Scots

And France their friend?

[To CHARLES.] Pym's grave grey eyes are fixed Upon you, sir!

Your pleasure, gentlemen?

Hamp. The King dissolved us—'tis the King we seek

And not Lord Strafford.

Straf. —Strafford, guilty too Of counselling the measure. [To CHARLES.] (Hush. . . you know—

You have forgotten—sir, I counselled it)

A heinous matter, truly! But the King Will yet see cause to thank me for a course

Which now, perchance . . . (Sir, tell them so!)—he blames.

Well, choose some fitter time to make your charge:

I shall be with the Scots, you understand?

Then yelp at me!

Meanwhile, your Majesty Binds me, by this fresh token of your trust . . .

[Under the pretence of an earnest farewell, STRAFFORD conducts CHARLES to the door, in such a manner as to hide his agitation from the rest: as the King disappears, they turn as by one impulse to PYM, who has not changed his original posture of surprise.]

Hamp. Leave we this arrogant strong wicked man!

Vane and others. Hence, Pym! Come out of this unworthy place

To our old room again! He's gone.

[STRAFFORD, just about to follow the King, looks back.]

Pym. Not gone! [To STRAFFORD.] Keep trust! the old appointment's made anew:

Forget not we shall meet again!

- Straf.* So be it !
 And if an army follows me ?
Vane. His friends Will entertain your army !
Pym. I'll not say You have misreckoned, Strafford : time shows. Perish, Body and spirit ! Fool to feign a doubt, Pretend the scrupulous and nice reserve Of one whose prowess should achieve the feat !
 What share have I in it ? Shall I affect To see no dismal sign above your head When God suspends his ruinous thunder
 there ?
 Strafford is doomed. Touch him no one of you !
 [PYM, HAMPDEN, &c. go out.
Straf. Pym, we shall meet again !
- LADY CARLISLE enters.
- Lady Car.* You here, child ?
 Hush—
 I know it all : hush, Strafford !
Straf. Ah ? you know ?
 Well. I shall make a sorry soldier, Lucy !
 All knights begin their enterprise, we read,
 Under the best of auspices ; 'tis morn,
 The Lady girds his sword upon the Youth
 (He 's always very young)—the trumpets sound,
 Cups pledge him, and, why, the King blesses him—
 You need not turn a page of the Romance
 To learn the Dreadful Giant's fate.
 Indeed, We've the fair Lady here ; but she
 apart,—
 A poor man, rarely having handled lance,
 And rather old, weary, and far from sure His Squires are not the Giant's friends.
 'All 's one :
 Let us go forth !
Lady Car. Go forth ?
Straf. What matters it ?
 We shall die gloriously—as the book
 says.
Lady Car. To Scotland ? not to Scotland ?
- Straf.* Am I sick Like your good brother, brave Northumberland ?
 Beside, these walls seem falling on me.
Lady Car. Strafford, The wind that saps these walls can under-
 mine
 Your camp in Scotland, too. Whence creeps the wind ?
 Have you no eyes except for Pym ?
 Look here !
 A breed of silken creatures lurk and thrive
 In your contempt. You'll vanquish Pym ?
 Old Vane
 Can vanquish you ! And Vane you think to fly ?
 Rush on the Scots ! Do nobly ! Vane's slight sneer Shall test success, adjust the praise,
- The faint result : Vane's sneer shall reach you there.
 You do not listen !
Straf. Oh,—I give that up ; There's fate in it : I give all here quite
 up.
 Care not what old Vane does or Holland
 does Against me ! 'Tis so idle to withstand—
 In no case tell me what they do !
Lady Car. But Strafford . . .
Straf. I want a little strife, beside ;
 real strife ;
 This petty, palace-warfare does me
 harm :
 I shall feel better, fairly out of it.
Lady Car. Why do you smile ?
Straf. I got to fear them, child !
 I could have torn his throat at first, old Vane's,
 As he leered at me on his stealthy way To the Queen's closet. Lord, one loses
 heart !
 I often found it in my heart to say
 'Do not traduce me to her !'
Lady Car. But the King . . .
Straf. The King stood there, 'tis not so long ago,
 —There ; and the whisper, Lucy, 'Be
 my friend
 Offriends !'—My King ! I would have . . .
Lady Car. . . . Died for him ?

- Straf.* Sworn him true, Lucy : I can die for him.
- Lady Car.* But go not, Strafford ! But you must renounce This project on the Scots ! Die ! wherefore die ?
- Charles never loved you.
- Straf.* And he never will. He 's not of those who care the more for men
- That they're unfortunate.
- Lady Car.* Then wherefore die For such a master ?
- Straf.* You that told me first How good he was—when I must leave true friends
- To find a truer friend !—that drew me here
- From Ireland,—‘ I had but to show myself
- And Charles would spurn Vane, Savile, and the rest ’—
- You, child, to ask me this ?
- Lady Car.* (If he have set His heart abidingly on Charles !)
- Then, friend,
- I shall not see you any more !
- Straf.* Yes, Lucy. There 's one man here I have to meet.
- Lady Car.* (The King ! What way to save him from the King ?
- My soul—
- That lent from its own store the charmed disguise
- That clothes the King—he shall behold my soul !)
- Strafford,—I shall speak best if you'll not gaze
- Upon me : I had never thought, indeed, To speak, but you would perish, too !
- So sure !
- Could you but know what 'tis to bear, my friend,
- One image stamped within you, turning blank
- The else imperial brilliance of your mind,—
- A weakness, but most precious,—like a flaw
- T' the diamond, which should shape forth some sweet face
- Yet to create, and meanwhile treasured there
- Lest Nature lose her gracious thought for ever !
- Straf.* When could it be ? no ! Yet . . . was it the day
- We waited in the anteroom, till Holland Should leave the presence-chamber ?
- Lady Car.* What ?
- Straf.* —That I Described to you my love for Charles ?
- Lady Car.* (Ah, no— One must not lure him from a love like that !
- Oh, let him love the King and die ! 'Tis past.
- I shall not serve him worse for that one brief
- And passionate hope, silent forever now !)
- And you are really bound for Scotland, then ?
- I wish you well : you must be very sure Of the King's faith, for Pym and all his crew
- Will not be idle—setting Vane aside !
- Straf.* If Pym is busy,—you may write of Pym.
- Lady Car.* What need, since there 's your King to take your part ?
- He may endure Vane's counsel ; but for Pym—
- Think you he'll suffer Pym to . . .
- Straf.* Child, your hair Is glossier than the Queen's !
- Lady Car.* Is that to ask A curl of me ?
- Straf.* Scotland—the weary way !
- Lady Car.* Stay, let me fasten it.
- A rival's, Strafford ?
- Straf.* [showing the George.] He hung it there : twine yours around it, child !
- Lady Car.* No—no—another time—I trifle so !
- And there 's a masque on foot. Farewell. The Court
- Is dull ; do something to enliven us
- In Scotland : we expect it at your hands.
- Straf.* I shall not fall in Scotland.
- Lady Car.* Prosper—if You'll think of me sometimes !
- Straf.* How think of him
- And not of you ? of you, the lingering streak

(A golden one) in my good fortune's eve.

Lady Car. Strafford . . . Well, when the eve has its last streak

The night has its first star. [She goes out.]

Straf. That voice of hers—

You'd think she had a heart sometimes!

His voice

Is soft too.

Only God can save him now.

Be Thou about his bed, about his path!

His path! Where's England's path?

Diverging wide

And not to join again the track my foot

Must follow—whither? All that forlorn

way

Among the tombs! Far—far—till . . .

What, they do

Then join again, these paths? For, huge in the dusk,

There's—Pym to face!

Why then, I have a foe

To close with, and a fight to fight at last Worthy my soul! What, do they beard

the King,

And shall the King want Strafford at his

need?

Am I not here? Not in the market-

place,

Pressed on by the rough artisans, so

proud

To catch a glance from Wentworth!

They'll lie down

Hungry and smile 'Why, it must end some day—

Is he not watching for our sake?'—

—Not there!

But in Whitehall, the whited sepulchre,

The . . .

Curse nothing to-night! Only one name

They'll curse in all those streets tonight. Whose fault?

Did I make kings? set up, the first, a

man

To represent the multitude, receive

All love in right of them—supplant

them so,

Until you love the man and not the

king—

The man with the mild voice and mournful eyes

Which send me forth.

—To breast the bloody sea

That sweeps before me: with one star for guide.

Night has its first, supreme, forsaken star.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Opposite Westminster Hall.

SIR HENRY VANE, LORD SAVILE, LORD
HOLLAND, and others of the Court.

Sir H. Vane. The Commons thrust you out!

Savile. And what kept you From sharing their civility?

Sir H. Vane. Kept me?

Fresh news from Scotland, sir! worse than the last.

If that may be! All's up with Strafford

there:

Nothing to bar the mad Scots marching

hither

Next Lord's-day morning. That detained me, sir!

Well now, before they thrust you out,— go on,—

Their Speaker—did the fellow Lenthall

say

All we set down for him?

Hol. Not a word missed.

Ere he began, we entered, Savile, I

And Bristol and some more, with hope to breed

A wholesome awe in the new Parliament.

But such a gang of graceless ruffians,

Vane,

As glared at us!

Vane. So many?

Savile. Not a bench

Without its complement of burly knaves;

Your hopeful son among them: Hampden leant

Upon his shoulder—think of that!

Vane. I'd think

On Lenthall's speech, if I could get at it.

Urged he, I ask, how grateful they should

prove

For this unlooked-for summons from

the King?

Hol. Just as we drilled him.

Vane. That the Scots will march

On London?

Hol. All, and made so much of it,

A dozen subsidies at least seemed sure

To follow, when . . .

Vane. Well ?

Hol. 'Tis a strange thing now !
I've a vague memory of a sort of sound,
A voice, a kind of vast, unnatural voice—Pym, sir, was speaking ! Savile, help me out :

What was it all ?

Sav. Something about 'a matter'—

No,—'a work for England.'

Hol. 'England's great revenge' He talked of.

Sav. How should I get used to Pym More than yourselves ?

Hol. However that may be,
'Twas something with which we had nought to do,
For we were 'strangers' and 'twas
'England's work'—

(All this while looking us straight in the face)

In other words, our presence might be spared.

So, in the twinkling of an eye, before I settled to my mind what ugly brute Was likest Pym just then, they yelled us out,

Locked the doors after us, and here are
we.

Vane. Eliot's old method . . .

Sav. Prithee, Vane, a truce To Eliot and his times, and the great Duke,

And how to manage Parliaments !
'Twas you

Advised the Queen to summon this :
why, Strafford

(To do him justice) would not hear of it.

Vane. Say, rather, you have done the best of turns

To Strafford : he's at York, we all know why.

I would you had not set the Scots on Strafford

Till Strafford put down Pym for us, my lord !

Sav. Was it I altered Strafford's plans ? did I . . .

Mes. The Queen, my lords—she sends me : follow me

At once ; 'tis very urgent ! she requires Your counsel : something perilous and strange

Occasions her command.

Sav. We follow, friend !
Now, Vane ;—your Parliament will plague us all !

Vane. No Strafford here beside !

Sav. If you dare hint
I had a hand in his betrayal, sir . . .

Hol. Nay, find a fitter time for quarrels—Pym

Will overmatch the best of you ; and,
think,

The Queen !

Vane. Come on, then : understand, I loathe

Strafford as much as any—but his use !
To keep off Pym—to screen a friend or two !

I would we had reserved him yet awhile.

SCENE II.—Whitehall.

The QUEEN and LADY CARLISLE.

Queen. It cannot be.

Lady Car.

It is so.

Queen. Why, the House

Have hardly met.

Lady Car. They met for that.

Queen. No, no !

Meet to impeach Lord Strafford ? 'Tis a jest.

Lady Car. A bitter one.

Queen. Consider ! 'Tis the House We summoned so reluctantly, which nothing

But the disastrous issue of the war

Persuaded us to summon. They'll wreak all

Their spite on us, no doubt ; but the old way

Is to begin by talk of grievances :

They have their grievances to busy them.

Lady Car. Pym has begun his speech.

Queen. Where's Vane ?—That is, Pym will impeach Lord Strafford if he

leaves
His Presidency ; he's at York, we know,

Since the Scots beat him : why should he leave York ?

Lady Car. Because the King sent for
him.

Queen. Ah—but if The King did send for him, he let him
know
We had been forced to call a Parliament—A step which Strafford, now I come to
think,
Was vehement against.

Lady Car. The policy Escaped him, of first striking Parliaments To earth, then setting them upon their feet
And giving them a sword: but this is idle.
Did the King send for Strafford? He will come.

Queen. And what am I to do?

Lady Car. What do? Fail, madam!
Be ruined for his sake! what matters
how,
So it but stand on record that you made An effort, only one?

Queen. The King's away At Theobalds.

Lady Car. Send for him at once: he must Dissolve the House.

Queen. Wait till Vane finds the truth
Of the report: then . . .

Lady Car. —It will matter little What the King does. Strafford that lends his arm,
And breaks his heart for you!

SIR H. VANE enters.

Vane. The Commons, madam, Are sitting with closed doors. A huge debate, No lack of noise; but nothing, I should guess,
Concerning Strafford: Pym has certainly
Not spoken yet.

Queen. [To LADY CARLISLE.] You
hear?

Lady Car. I do not hear That the King's sent for!

Sir H. Vane. Savile will be able To tell you more.

HOLLAND enters.

Queen. The last news, Holland?

Hol. Pym

Is raging like a fire. The whole House
means
To follow him together to Whitehall And force the King to give up Straf-ford.

Queen. Strafford?

Hol. If they content themselves with Strafford! Laud
Is talked of, Cottington and Windebank
too, Pym has not left out one of them—I would

You heard Pym raging!

Queen. Vane, go find the King!
Tell the King, Vane, the People follow
Pym
To brave us at Whitehall!

SAVILE enters.

Savile. Not to Whitehall—
'Tis to the Lords they go: they'll seek redress

On Strafford from his peers—the legal
way,
They call it.

Queen. (Wait, Vane!)

Sav. But the adage gives Long life to threatened men. Strafford can save

Himself so readily: at York, remember,
In his own county, what has he to fear?
The Commons only mean to frighten
him
From leaving York. Surely, he will not
come.

Queen. Lucy, he will not come!

Lady Car. Once more, the King Has sent for Strafford. He will come.

Vane. Oh, doubtless!
And bring destruction with him; that's his way.

What but his coming spoils all Conway's plan?

The King must take his counsel, choose his friends,

Be wholly ruled by him! What's the result?

The North that was to rise, Ireland to help,—

What came of it? In my poor mind, a fright

Is no prodigious punishment.

Lady Car. A fright?

Pym will fail worse than Strafford if he thinks

To frighten him. [To the QUEEN.] You will not save him, then?

Sav. When something like a charge is made, the King

Will best know how to save him: and 'tis clear,

While Strafford suffers nothing by the matter,

The King may reap advantage: this in question,

No dunning you with ship-money complaints!

n. [To LADY CARLISLE.] If we dissolve them, who will pay the army?

Protect us from the insolent Scots?

Lady Car. In truth I know not, madam. Strafford's fate concerns

Me little: you desired to learn what course

Would save him: I obey you.

Vane. Notice, too, There can't be fairer ground for taking full Revenge — (Strafford's revengeful) — than he'll have Against his old friend Pym.

Queen. Why, he shall claim Vengeance on Pym!

Vane. And Strafford, who is he To 'scape unscathed amid the accidents That harass all beside? I, for my part, Should look for something of discomfort

Had the King trusted me so thoroughly And been so paid for it.

Hol. He'll keep at York: All will blow over: he'll return no worse,

Humbled a little, thankful for a place Under as good a man. Oh, we'll dispense

With seeing Strafford for a month or two!

STRAFFORD enters.

Queen. You here!

Straf. The King sends for me, madam.

Queen. Sir,

The King...

Straf. An urgent matter that imports the King.

[To LADY CARLISLE.] Why, Lucy, what's in agitation now

That all this muttering and shrugging, see,

Begins at me? They do not speak!

Car. 'Tis welcome! For we are proud of you—happy and proud

To have you with us, Strafford! you were staunch

At Durham: you did well there! Had you not Been stayed, you might have... we said, even now,

Our hope's in you!

Sir H. Vane. [To LADY CARLISLE.] The Queen would speak with you.

Straf. Will one of you, his servants here, vouchsafe

To signify my presence to the King?

Sav. An urgent matter?

Straf. None that touches you, Lord Savile! Say, it were some treacherous, Sly, pitiful intriguing with the Scots—You would go free, at least! (They half divine My purpose!) Madam, shall I see the King?

The service I would render, much concerns

His welfare.

Queen. But his Majesty, my lord, May not be here, may...

Straf. Its importance, then, Must plead excuse for this withdrawal, madam,

And for the grief it gives Lord Savile here.

Queen. [who has been conversing with VANE and HOLLAND.] The King will see you, sir.

[To LADY CARLISLE.] Mark me: Pym's worst

Is done by now: he has impeached the Earl,

Or found the Earl too strong for him, by now.

Let us not seem instructed! We should work

No good to Strafford, but deform ourselves
With shame in the world's eye. [To STRAFFORD.] His Majesty
Has much to say with you.
Straf. Time fleeting, too !
[To LADY CARLISLE.] No means of getting them away ? And She—What does she whisper ? Does she know my purpose ?
What does she think of it ? Get them
away !
Queen [To LADY CARLISLE.] He comes to baffle Pym—he thinks the danger
Far off : tell him no word of it ! a time For help will come ; we'll not be wanting
then.
Keep him in play, Lucy—you, self-
possessed
And calm ! [To STRAFFORD.] To spare your Lordship some delay I will myself acquaint the King. [To LADY CARLISLE.] Beware !
[The QUEEN, VANE, HOLLAND, and SAVILE, go out.
Straf. She knows it ?
Lady Car. Tell me, Strafford !
Straf. Afterward !
This moment's the great moment of all
time.
She knows my purpose ?
Lady Car. Thoroughly : just now She bade me hide it from you.
Straf. Quick, dear child,
The whole o' the scheme ?
Lady Car. (Ah, he would learn if they Connive at Pym's procedure ! Could they but Have once apprised the King ! But there's no time For falsehood, now.) Strafford, the whole is known.
Straf. Known and approved ?
Lady Car. Hardly discountenanced.
Straf. And the King—say, the King consents as well ?
Lady Car. The King's not yet informed, but will not dare To interpose.
Straf. What need to wait him, then ?
He'll sanction it ! I stayed, child, tel him, long !

It vexed me to the soul—this
here.
You know him, there's no counting on
the King.
Tell him I waited long !
Lady Car. (What can he mean ?
Rejoice at the King's hollowness ?)
Straf. I knew
They would be glad of it,—all over once, I knew they would be glad : but he'd contrive,
The Queen and he, to mar, by helping it,
An angel's making.
Lady Car. (Is he mad ?) Dear
Strafford,
You were not wont to look so happy
Straf. Sweet,
I tried obedience thoroughly. I took The King's wild plan : of course, ere I could reach My army, Conway ruined it. I drew The wrecks together, raised all heaven and earth,
And would have fought the Scots : the King at once Made truce with them. Then, Lucy, then, dear child,
God put it in my mind to love, serve, die For Charles, but never to obey him
more !
While he endured their insolence at Ripon
I fell on them at Durham. But you'll tell
The King I waited ? All the anteroom Is filled with my adherents.
Lady Car. Strafford—Strafford,
What daring act is this you hint ?
Straf. No, no !
'Tis here, not daring if you knew ! all
here !
[Drawing papers from his breast.
Full proof, see, ample proof—does the Queen know
I have such damning proof ? Bedford and Essex, Broke, Warwick, Savile (did you notice Savile ?
The simper that I spoilt ?), Saye, Mandeville—Sold to the Scots, body and soul, by Pym !
Lady Car. Great heaven !

Straf. From Savile and Mainwaring! help to seize the lesser his lords, to Pym knaves;
And his losels, crushed!—Pym shall not Take care there's no escaping at backward the blow doors: Nor Savile creep aside from it! The I'll not have one escape, mind me—not Crew one!
And the Cabal—I crush them! I seem revengeful, Lucy? Did you Lady Car. And you go— know Strafford,—and now you go?— What these men dare!
Straf. —About no work Lady Car. It is so much they dare!
In the background, I promise you! I go Straf. I proved that long ago; my Straight to the House of Lords to claim turn is now! these knaves. Keep sharp watch, Goring, on the citizens;

No time to lose: the King takes fright And you, child, too, perhaps. Shall have your task; deliver this to Lady Car. Pym's strong, remember! Laud.
Straf. Very strong, as fits Laud will not be the slowest in my

The news you carry. You remain with Straf. To-night, then, let it be.
me I must see Him: you, the next after To execute the Parliament's command, Him.

I'll tell you how Pym looked. Follow me, friends!

You, gentlemen, shall see a sight this hour

To talk of all your lives. Close after me! 'My friend of friends!'

[STRAFFORD and the rest go out.]

Lady Car. The King—ever the King! No thought of one beside, whose little word Unveils the King to him—one word from me,

Which yet I do not breathe!

Ah, have I spared
Strafford a pang, and shall I seek reward

Beyond that memory? Surely too, some way

He is the better for my love. No, no—He would not look so joyous—I'll believe

His very eye would never sparkle thus,

Had I not prayed for him this long, long while.

SCENE III.—The Ante-chamber of the House of Lords.

Many of the Presbyterian Party. The Adherents of STRAFFORD, &c.

A Group of Presbyterians.—1. I tell you he struck Maxwell: Maxwell sought

To stay the Earl: he struck him and passed on.

2. Fear as you may, keep a good countenance Before these rufflers.

3. Strafford here the first,
With the great army at his back!

4. No doubt.
I would Pym had made haste: that's Bryan, hush—

The gallant pointing.

Strafford's Followers.—1. Mark these worthies, now!

2. A goodly gathering! 'Where the carcass is There shall the eagles'—what's the rest?

3. For eagles Say crows.

A Presbyterian. Stand back, sirs!
One of Strafford's Followers. Are we in Geneva?

A Presbyterian. No—nor in Ireland; we have leave to breathe.

One of Strafford's Followers. Truly? Behold how privileged we be

To serve 'King Pym'! There's Some-one at Whitehall

Who skulks obscure; but Pym struts...
The Presbyterian. Nearer.

A Follower of Strafford. Higher, We look to see him. [To his Companions.]

I'm to have St. John In charge; was he among the knaves

just now
That followed Pym within there?

Another. The gaunt man Talking with Rudyard. Did the Earl expect

Pym at his heels so fast? I like it not.

MAXWELL enters.

Another. Why, man, they rush into the net! Here's Maxwell—

Ha, Maxwell? How the brethren flock around

The fellow! Do you feel the Earl's hand yet

Upon your shoulder, Maxwell?
Max. Gentlemen,

Stand back! A great thing passes here.
A Follower of Strafford. [To another.]

The Earl
Is at his work! [To M.] Say, Maxwell, what great thing!

Speak out! [To a Presbyterian.] Friend, I've a kindness for you! Friend,

I've seen you with St. John: O stockishness!

Wear such a ruff, and never call to mind

St. John's head in a charger? How, the plague,

Not laugh?

Another. Say, Maxwell, what great thing!

Another. Nay, wait.
The jest will be to wait.

First. And who's to bear These demure hypocrites? You'd swear they came...

Came... just as we come!

- [A Puritan enters without observing STRAFFORD's Followers.
The Puritan. How goes on the work ?
 Has Pym . . .
A Follower of Strafford. The secret 's out at last. Aha, The carrion 's scented ! Welcome, crow the first !
 Gorge merrily, you with the blinking eye !
 ' King Pym has fallen ! '
The Puritan. Pym ?
A Strafford. Pym !
A Presbyterian. Only Pym ?
Many of Strafford's Followers. No, brother, not Pym only ; Vane as well, Rudyard as well, Hampden, St. John as well !
A Presbyterian. My mind misgives : can it be true ?
Another. Lost ! Lost !
A Strafford. Say we true, Maxwell ?
The Puritan. Pride before destruction, A haughty spirit goeth before a fall.
Many of Strafford's Followers. Ah now ! The very thing ! A word in season !
 A golden apple in a silver picture,
 To greet Pym as he passes !
 [The doors at the back begin to open, noise and light issuing.
Max. Stand back, all '
Many of the Presbyterians. I hold with Pym ! And I !
Strafford's Followers. Now for the text !
 He comes ! Quick !
The Puritan. How hath the oppressor ceased !
 The Lord hath broken the staff of the wicked !
 The sceptre of the rulers, he who smote
 The people in wrath with a continual stroke, That ruled the nations in his anger—he Is persecuted and none hindereth !
 [The doors open, and STRAFFORD issues in the greatest disorder, and amid cries from within of 'Void the House.'
- Straf.* Impeach me ! Pym ! I never struck, I think, The felon on that calm insulting mouth When it proclaimed—Pym's mouth proclaimed me . . . God !
 Was it a word, only a word that held The outrageous blood back on my heart —which beats !
 Which beats ! Some one word—
 'Traitor,' did he say, Bending that eye, brimfull of bitter fire,
 Upon me ?
Max. In the Commons' name, their servant Demands Lord Strafford's sword.
Straf. What did you say ?
Max. The Commons bid me ask your Lordship's sword.
Straf. Let us go forth : follow me, gentlemen !
 Draw your swords too : cut any down that bar us.
 On the King's service ! Maxwell, clear the way !
 [The Presbyterians prepare to dispute his passage.
Straf. I stay : the King himself shall see me here.
 Your tablets, fellow !
 [To MAINWARING.] Give that to the King !
 Yes, Maxwell, for the next half-hour, let be !
 Nay, you shall take my sword !
 [MAXWELL advances to take it.
 Or, no—not that !
 Their blood, perhaps, may wipe out all thus far,
 All up to that—not that ! Why, friend, you see,
 When the King lays your head beneath my foot
 It will not pay for that. Go, all of you !
Max. I dare, my lord, to disobey : none stir !
Straf. This gentle Maxwell !—Do not touch him, Bryan !
 [To the Presbyterians.] Whichever cur of you will carry this Escapes his fellows' fate. None saves his life ?

None ?

[Cries from within of 'STRAFFORD.' Slingsby, I've loved you at least :
make haste !

Stab me ! I have not time to tell you why.
You then, my Bryan ! Mainwaring, you
then !

Is it because I spoke so hastily At Allerton ? The King had vexed me.
[To the Presbyterians.] You !

—Not even you ? If I live over this,
The King is sure to have your heads, you
know !

But what if I can't live this minute
through ?
Pym, who is there with his pursuing
smile !

[Louder cries of 'STRAFFORD.' The King ! I troubled him, stood in the
way

Of his negotiations, was the one Great obstacle to peace, the Enemy Of Scotland : and he sent for me, from York,

My safety guaranteed—having prepared A Parliament—I see ! And at Whitehall The Queen was whispering with Vane—
I see

The trap ! [Tearing off the George.
I tread a gewgaw underfoot, And cast a memory from me. One stroke, now !

[His own adherents disarm him.
Renewed cries of 'STRAFFORD.'
England ! I see Thy arm in this and yield.
Pray you now—Pym awaits me—pray
you now !

[STRAFFORD reaches the doors : they open wide. HAMPDEN and a crowd discovered, and, at the bar, Pym standing apart. As STRAF-FORD kneels, the scene shuts.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Whitehall.

The KING, the QUEEN, HOLLIS, LADY CARLISLE. (VANE, HOLLAND, SAVILE, in the background.)

Lady Car. Answer them, Hollis, for his sake ! One word !

Cha. [To HOLLIS.] You stand, silent and cold, as though I were Deceiving you—my friend, my play-fellow

Of other times. What wonder after all ?
Just so, I dreamed my People loved me.

Hol. Sir,
It is yourself that you deceive, not me.
You'll quit me comforted, your mind made up

That, since you've talked thus much and grieved thus much, All you can do for Strafford has been
done.

Queen. If you kill Strafford—(come, we grant you leave, Suppose)—

Hol. I may withdraw, sir ?
Lady Car. Hear them out !
'Tis the last chance for Strafford ! Hear them out !

Hol. 'If we kill Strafford'—on the eighteenth day Of Strafford's trial—'We !'

Cha. Pym, my good Hollis—Pym, I should say !

Hol. Ah, true—sir, pardon me !
You witness our proceedings every day ;
But the screened gallery, I might have guessed,

Admits of such a partial glimpse at us, Pym takes up all the room, shuts out the view.

Still, on my honour, sir, the rest of the
place

Is not unoccupied. The Commons sit —That's England ; Ireland sends, and Scotland too,

Their representatives ; the Peers that judge

Are easily distinguished ; one remarks The People here and there : but the close curtain Must hide so much !

Queen. Acquaint your insolent crew,

This day the curtain shall be dashed aside !

It served a purpose.

Hol. Think ! This very day ?
Ere Strafford rises to defend himself ?

Cha. I will defend him, sir !—sanction the Past

This day : it ever was my purpose.
Rage

At me, not Strafford !

Lady Car. Nobly !—will he not Do nobly ?

Hol. Sir, you will do honestly ; And, for that deed, I too would be a
king.

Cha. Only, to do this now !—‘ deaf ’ (in your style)
‘ To subjects’ prayers,’—I must oppose them now.

It seems their will the Trial should proceed,—

So palpably their will !

Hol. You peril much, But it were no bright moment save for
that.

Strafford, your prime support, the sole roof-tree

That props this quaking House of Privilege,

(Floods come, winds beat, and see—the treacherous sand !)

Doubtless, if the mere putting forth an arm

Could save him, you’d save Strafford.

Cha. And they mean Calmly to consummate this wrong !
No hope ?

This ineffaceable wrong ! No pity then ?
Hol. No plague in store for perfidy ?
—Farewell !

You called me, sir—[To LADY CARLISLE] you, lady, bade me come

To save the Earl : I came, thank God
for it,

To learn how far such perfidy can go !
You, sir, concert with me on saving him Who have just ruined Strafford !

Cha. I ?—and how ?

Hol. Eighteen days long he throws, one after one,
Pym’s charges back : a blind moth-eaten law !

—He’ll break from it at last : and whom to thank ?

The mouse that gnawed the lion’s net
for him

Got a good friend,—but he, the other mouse,

That looked on while the lion freed himself—

Fared he so well, does any fable say ?

Cha. What can you mean ?

Hol. Pym never could have proved Strafford’s design of bringing up the troops

To force this kingdom to obedience :
Vane—

Your servant, not our friend, has proved
it.

Cha. Vane ?

Hol. This day. Did Vane deliver up or no

Those notes which, furnished by his son to Pym,

Seal Strafford’s fate ?

Cha. Sir, as I live, I know Nothing that Vane has done ! What treason next ?

I wash my hands of it. Vane, speak the truth !

Ask Vane himself !

Hol. I will not speak to Vane, Who speak to Pym and Hampden every
day.

Queen. Speak to Vane’s master then !
What gain to him

Were Strafford’s death ?

Hol. Ha ? Strafford cannot turn As you, sir, sit there—bid you forth, demand

If every hateful act were not set down In his commission ?—Whether you contrived

Or no, that all the violence should seem His work, the gentle ways—your own, his part

To counteract the King’s kind impulses—While . . . but you know what he could say ! And then

He might produce,—mark, sir,—a certain charge

To set the King’s express command
aside,

If need were, and be blameless ! He might add . . .

Cha. Enough !

Hol. —Who bade him break
the Parliament,
Find some pretext for setting up sword-
law !

Queen. Retire !

Cha. Once more, whatever Vane dared do,

I know not : he is rash, a fool—I know Nothing of Vane !

Hol. Well—I believe you. Sir, That's a bright moment, sir, you throw Believe me, in return, that . . . away.
[Turning to LADY CARLISLE.] Gentle Tear down the veil and save him ! lady, Queen. Go, Carlisle !
The few words I would say, the stones Lady Car. (I shall see Strafford—might hear speak to him : my heart Sooner than these,—I rather speak to Must never beat so, then ! And if I

Sir, Thoroughly know them !)
You loved me once : think on my Queen. Trust to me !
warning now ! [To CARLISLE.] Carlisle, Cha. On you and on your warning You seem inclined, alone of all the both !—Carlisle ! Court, That paper ! To serve poor Strafford : this bold plan
Queen. But consider ! of yours Cha. Give it me ! Merits much praise, and yet . . .
There, signed—will that content you ? Lady Car. Time presses, madam.
Do not speak ! Queen. Yet—may it not be something premature ?
You have betrayed me, Vane ! See ! Strafford defends himself to-day—any day, reserves
According to the tenor of that paper, Some wondrous effort, one may well

Strafford shall head it and take full Lady Car. Ay, Hollis hints as much.

Seek Strafford ! Let him have the same, Haste with the scheme—my scheme :
before I shall be there He rises to defend himself ! To watch his look. Tell him I watch Queen. In truth his look !
That your shrewd Hollis should have Queen. Stay, we'll precede you !

Like this ! You, late reluctant . . . Cha. Say—Cha. Say, Carlisle, Say, Vane is hardly ever at Whitehall !

The scheme is mine, remember ! Say, I follow you.

With you, Carlisle ! My Strafford, I can save, Lady Car. Nay, fear not me ! Nay, I have saved you, yet am scarce but still content.

Because my poor name will not cross your mind.

Strafford, how much I am unworthy
you !)

SCENE II.—A passage adjoining Westminster Hall.

*Many groups of Spectators of the Trial.
Officers of the Court, &c.*

First Spec. More crowd than ever !
Not know Hampden, man ?

That 's he, by Pym, Pym that is speaking
now.

No, truly, if you look so high you'll see Little enough of either !

Second Spec. Stay : Pym's arm Points like a prophet's rod.

Third Spec. Ay, ay, we've heard Some pretty speaking : yet the Earl escapes.

Fourth Spec. I fear it : just a foolish word or two About his children—and we see, forsooth, Not England's foe in Strafford, but the
man

Who, sick, half-blind . . .

Second Spec. What 's that Pym 's saying now

Which makes the curtains flutter ? look !
A hand

Clutches them. Ah ! The King's hand !
Fifth Spec. I had thought

Pym was not near so tall. What said he, friend ?

Second Spec. ' Nor is this way a novel way of blood,'

And the Earl turns as if to . . . look !
look !

Many Spectators. There !
What ails him ? no—he rallies, see—goes on

And Strafford smiles. Strange !

An Officer. Haselrig !

Many Spectators. Friend ? Friend ?

The Officer. Lost, utterly lost ! just when we looked for Pym

To make a stand against the ill effects Of the Earl's speech ! Is Haselrig without ?

Pym's message is to him.

Third Spec. Now, said I true ?
Will the Earl leave them yet at fault or
no ?

First Spec. Never believe it, man !
These notes of Vane's

Ruin the Earl.

Fifth Spec. A brave end : not a whit Less firm, less Pym all over. Then, the Trial

Is closed. No—Strafford means to speak again ?

An Officer. Stand back, there !

Fifth Spec. Why, the Earl is coming hither !

Before the court breaks up ! His brother,
look,—

You'd say he deprecated some fierce act In Strafford's mind just now.

An Officer. Stand back, I say !

Second Spec. Who 's the veiled woman that he talks with ?

Many Spectators. Hush—
The Earl ! the Earl !

[Enter STRAFFORD, SLINGSBY, and other Secretaries, HOLLIS, LADY CARLISLE, MAXWELL, BALFOUR, &c. STRAFFORD converses with LADY CARLISLE.

Hol. So near the end !
Be patient—Return !

Straf. [To his Secretaries.] Here—anywhere—or, 'tis freshest here !

To spend one's April here, the blossom-month !

Set it down here !

[They arrange a table, papers, &c.

So, Pym can quail, can cower Because I glance at him, yet more 's to
do ?

What 's to be answered, Slingsby ? Let us end !

[To LADY CARLISLE.] Child, I refuse his offer ; whatsoever

It be ! Too late ! Tell me no word of
him !

'Tis something, Hollis, I assure you
that—

To stand, sick as you are, some eighteen
days

Fighting for life and fame against a pack

Of very curs, that lie thro' thick and thin,

Eat flesh and bread by wholesale, and can't say

'Strafford' if it would take my life !

Lady Car.
Glance at the paper !

Straf. Already at my heels !
Pym's faulting bloodhounds scent the track again.

Peace, child ! Now, Slingsby !

[Messengers from LANE and other of STRAFFORD'S Counsel within the Hall are coming and going during the Scene.]

Straf. [setting himself to write and dictate.] I shall beat you, Hollis !

Do you know that ? In spite of St. John's tricks,

In spite of Pym—your Pym who shrank from me !

Eliot would have contrived it otherwise.

[To a Messenger.] In truth ? This slip, tell Lane, contains as much

As I can call to mind about the matter.

Eliot would have disdained . . .

[Calling after the Messenger.] And Radcliffe, say,

The only person who could answer Pym, Is safe in prison, just for that.

Well, well !

It had not been recorded in that case, I baffled you.

[To LADY CARLISLE.] Nay, child, why look so grieved ?

All's gained without the King ! You saw Pym quail ?

What shall I do when they acquit me, think you,

But tranquilly resume my task as though Nothing had intervened since I proposed

To call that traitor to account ! Such tricks,

Trust me, shall not be played a second time,

Say, even against Laud, with his grey hair—

Your good work, Hollis ! Peace ! to make amends

You, Lucy, shall be there when I impeach

Pym and his fellows.

Hol. Wherefore not protest Against our whole proceeding, long ago ?

Why feel indignant now ? Why stand this while Enduring patiently ?

Straf.

Child, I'll tell you—

You, and not Pym—you, the slight graceful girl

Tall for a flowering lily, and not Hollis—

Why I stood patient ! I was fool enough

To see the will of England in Pym's will,

To fear, myself had wronged her, and to wait

Her judgment,—when, behold, in place of it . . .

[To a Messenger who whispers.] Tell Lane to answer no such question !

Law,—

I grapple with their law ! I'm here to try My actions by their standard, not my own !

Their law allowed that levy : what's the rest

To Pym, or Lane, any but God and me ?

Lady Car. The King's so weak !

Secure this chance ! 'Twas Vane,

Never forget, who furnished Pym the notes . . .

Straf. Fit,—very fit, those precious notes of Vane,

To close the Trial worthily ! I feared

Some spice of nobleness might linger yet

And spoil the character of all the Past.

Vane eased me . . . and I will go back and say

As much—to Pym, to England ! Follow me !

I have a word to say ! There ! my defence

Is done !

Stay ! why be proud ? Why care to own

My gladness, my surprise ?—Nay, not surprise !

Wherefore insist upon the little pride Of doing all myself, and sparing him

The pain ? Child, say the triumph is my King's !

When Pym grew pale, and trembled, and sank down,

One image was before me : could I fail ? Child, care not for the Past, so indistinct, Obscure—there's nothing to forgive in it 'Tis so forgotten ! From this day begins

A new life, founded on a new belief In Charles.

Hol. In Charles ? Rather, believe in Pym !

And here he comes in proof ! Appeal to Pym !

Say how unfair . . .

Straf. To Pym ? I would say nothing !

I would not look upon Pym's face again.

Lady Car. Stay, let me have to think I pressed your hand !

[STRAFFORD and his friends go out.]

Enter HAMPDEN and VANE.

Vane. O Hampden, save that great misguided man !

Plead Strafford's cause with Pym ! I have remarked

He moved no muscle when we all declaimed

Against him : you had but to breathe—he turned

Those kind, calm eyes upon you.

[Enter PYM, the Solicitor-General St. JOHN, the Managers of the Trial, FIENNES, RUDYARD, &c.]

Rud. Horrible !

Till now all hearts were with you :
I withdraw

For one. Too horrible ! But we mistake Your purpose, Pym : you cannot snatch
away

The last spar from the drowning man.

Fien. He talks

With St. John of it—see, how quietly !
[To other Presbyterians.] You'll join us ?

Strafford may deserve the worst :
But this new course is monstrous.

Vane, take heart !

This Bill of his Attainder shall not have One true man's hand to it.

Vane. Consider, Pym !

Confront your Bill, your own Bill :
what is it ?

You cannot catch the Earl on any charge,—

No man will say the law has hold of him On any charge ; and therefore you resolve

To take the general sense on his desert,
As though no law existed, and we met To found one. You refer to Parliament To speak its thought upon this hideous
mass

Of half-borne out assertions, dubious hints

Hereafter to be cleared, distortions—ay, And wild inventions. Every man is saved

The task of fixing any single charge
On Strafford : he has but to see in him
The enemy of England.

Pym. A right scruple !

I have heard some called England's enemy

With less consideration.

Vane. Pity me !

Indeed you made me think I was your
friend !

I who have murdered Strafford, how remove

That memory from me ?

Pym. I absolve you, Vane.

Take you no care for aught that you have done !

Vane. John Hampden, not this Bill !
Reject this Bill !

He staggers through the ordeal : let him go,

Strew no fresh fire before him ! Plead for us !

When Strafford spoke, your eyes were thick with tears !

Hamp. England speaks louder : who are we, to play

The generous pardoner at her expense, Magnanimously waive advantages,

And, if he conquer us, applaud his skill ?

Vane. He was your friend.

Pym. I have heard that before.

Fien. And England trusts you.

Hamp. Shame be his, who turns

The opportunity of serving her She trusts him with, to his own mean
account—

Who would look nobly frank at her expense !

Fien. I never thought it could have come to this.

Pym. But I have made myself familiar, Fienes,

With this one thought—have walked,
and sat, and slept,

This thought before me. I have done such things,

Being the chosen man that should destroy

The traitor. You have taken up this thought

To play with, for a gentle stimulant,
To give a dignity to idler life
By the dim prospect of emprise to come,
But ever with the softening, sure belief, That all would end some strange way right at last.

Fien. Had we made out some weightier charge!

Pym. You say That these are petty charges: can we
come

To the real charge at all? There he is safe

In tyranny's stronghold. Apostasy
Is not a crime, treachery not a crime:
The cheek burns, the blood tingles, when you speak

The words, but where's the power to take revenge

Upon them? We must make occasion serve,—

The oversight here, pay for the main sin
That mocks us.

Rud. But this unexampled course,
This Bill!

Pym. By this, we roll the clouds away
Of precedent and custom, and at once Bid the great beacon-light God sets in
all,

The conscience of each bosom, shine upon

The guilt of Strafford: each shall lay his hand

Upon his breast, and judge.

Vane. I only see Strafford, nor pass his corpse for all beyond!

Rud. and others. Forgive him! He would join us, now he finds

What the King counts reward! The pardon, too,

Should be your own. Yourself should bear to Strafford

The pardon of the Commons.

Pym. Meet him? Strafford?
Have we to meet once more, then? Be
it so!

And yet—the prophecy seemed half fulfilled

When, at the Trial, as he gazed, my
youth,

Our friendship, divers thoughts came back at once

And left me, for a time... 'Tis very sad!
To-morrow we discuss the points of law With Lane—to-morrow?

Vane. Not before to-morrow—So, time enough! I knew you would relent!

Pym. The next day, Haselrig, you introduce

The Bill of his Attainder. Pray for me!

SCENE III.—Whitehall.

The King.

Cha. My loyal servant!—To defend himself

Thus irresistibly,—withholding aught
That seemed to implicate us!

We have done Less gallantly by Strafford. Well, the Future

Must recompense the Past.

She tarries long.
I understand you, Strafford, now!

The scheme—
Carlisle's mad scheme—he'll sanction it,
I fear,

For love of me. 'Twas too precipitate:
Before the army's fairly on its march,
He'll be at large: no matter.

Well, Carlisle?

Enter Pym.

Pym. Fear me not, sir:—my mission is to save,

This time.

Cha. To break thus on me! Unannounced!

Pym. It is of Strafford I would speak.

Cha. No more Of Strafford! I have heard too much from you.

Pym. I spoke, sir, for the People: will you hear

A word upon my own account?

Cha. Of Strafford?
(So, turns the tide already? Have we tamed

The insolent brawler?—Strafford's eloquence

Is swift in its effect.) Lord Strafford, sir,

Has spoken for himself.

Pym. Sufficiently.

I would apprise you of the novel course
The People take: the Trial fails.

Cha. Yes—yes—
We are aware, sir: for your part in it Means shall be found to thank you.

Pym. Pray you, read This schedule! I would learn from your own mouth

—(It is a matter much concerning me)— Whether, if two Estates of us concede The death of Strafford, on the grounds set forth

Within that parchment, you, sir, can resolve

To grant your own consent to it. That Bill

Is framed by me. If you determine, sir, That England's manifested will should guide

Your judgment, ere another week such
will

Shall manifest itself. If not,—I cast Aside the measure.

Cha. You can hinder, then,
The introduction of this Bill?

Pym. I can.

Cha. He is my friend, sir: I have wronged him: mark you, Had I not wronged him, this might be.
You think

Because you hate the Earl . . . (turn not
away,

We know you hate him)—no one else could love

Strafford: but he has saved me, some affirm.

Think of his pride! And, do you know one strange,

One frightful thing? We all have used the man

As though a drudge of ours, with not a source

Of happy thoughts except in us; and
yet

Strafford has wife and children, household cares,

Just as if we had never been. Ah, sir, You are moved, even you, a solitary
man

Wed to your cause—to England if you
will!

Pym. Yes—think, my soul—to England! Draw not back!

Cha. Prevent that Bill, sir! All your course seems fair

Till now. Why, in the end, 'tis I should sign

The warrant for his death! You have said much

I ponder on; I never meant, indeed, Strafford should serve me any more. I

take
The Commons' counsel; but this Bill is yours—

Nor worthy of its leader: care not, sir, For that, however! I will quite forget

You named it to me. You are satisfied?

Pym. Listen to me, sir! Eliot laid his hand,

Wasted and white, upon my forehead
once;—

Wentworth—he's gone now!—has talked on, whole nights,

And I beside him; Hampden loves me:
sir,

How can I breathe and not wish England well,

And her King well?

Cha. I thank you, sir! who leave That King his servant. Thanks, sir!

Pym. Let me speak!
—Who may not speak again; whose spirit yearns

For a cool night after this weary day:
—Who would not have my soul turn sicker yet

In a new task, more fatal, more august,
More full of England's utter weal or woe.

I thought, sir, could I find myself with
you,

After this Trial, alone, as man to man—I might say something, warn you, pray you, save—Mark me, King Charles, save—you!

But God must do it. Yet I warn you,
sir—

(With Strafford's faded eyes yet full on me)

As you would have no deeper question moved

—'How long the Many must endure the
One,

Assure me, sir, if England give assent To Strafford's death, you will not interfere!

Or—

Cha. God forsakes me. I am in a net.
And cannot move. Let all be as you
say!

Enter LADY CARLISLE.

Lady Car. He loves you—looking beautiful with joy Because you sent me! he would spare you all The pain! he never dreamed you would forsake

Your servant in the evil day—nay, see Your scheme returned! That generous heart of his!

He needs it not—or, needing it, disdains
A course that might endanger you—you,
sir,

Whom Strafford from his inmost soul...
[Seeing Pym.] Well met!

No fear for Strafford! all that's true and brave

On your own side shall help us: we are
now

Stronger than ever.

Ha—what, sir, is this?
All is not well! What parchment have you there?

Pym. Sir, much is saved us both.

Lady Car. This Bill! Your lip Whitens—you could not read one line
to me

Your voice would falter so!

Pym. No recreant yet!
The great word went from England to
my soul,

And I arose. The end is very near.

Lady Car. I am to save him! All have shrunk beside—

'Tis only I am left! Heaven will make strong

The hand now as the heart. Then let both die!

ACT V

SCENE I.—Whitehall.

HOLLIS, LADY CARLISLE.

Hol. Tell the King, then! Come in with me!

Lady Car. Not so!
He must not hear till it succeeds.

Hol. Succeed?

No dream was half so vain—you'd rescue Strafford

And outwit Pym! I cannot tell you...
lady,

The block pursues me, and the hideous show

To-day... is it to-day? And all the while

He's sure of the King's pardon. Think,
I have

To tell this man he is to die. The King May rend his hair, for me! I'll not see Strafford!

Lady Car. Only, if I succeed, remember—Charles

Has saved him! He would hardly value
life

Unless his gift. My staunch friends wait. Go in—

You must go in to Charles!

Hol. And all beside Left Strafford long ago. The King has signed

The warrant for his death: the Queen was sick

Of the eternal subject. For the Court,—
The Trial was amusing in its way,

Only too much of it: the Earl withdrew In time. But you, fragile, alone, so
young,

Amid rude mercenaries—you devise A plan to save him! Even though it fails, What shall reward you?

Lady Car. I may go, you think,
To France with him? And you reward me, friend,

Who lived with Strafford even from his youth

Before he set his heart on state-affairs And they bent down that noble brow of his.

I have learned somewhat of his latter
life,

And all the future I shall know: but,
Hollis,

I ought to make his youth my own as
well.

Tell me,—when he is saved!

Hol. My gentle friend, He should know all and love you, but
'tis vain!

Lady Car. Love? no—too late now!
Let him love the King!

'Tis the King's scheme! I have your word, remember!
 We'll keep the old delusion up. But, quick!
 Quick! Each of us has work to do, beside!
 Go to the King! I hope—Hollis—I hope!
 Say nothing of my scheme! Hush, while we speak Think where he is! Now for my gallant friends!
Hol. Where he is? Calling wildly upon Charles, Guessing his fate, pacing the prison-floor.
 Let the King tell him! I'll not look on Strafford.

SCENE II.—The Tower.

They sing.

*O bell' andare Per barca in mare, Verso la sera
 Di Primavera!*

William. The boat's in the broad moonlight all this while—

Verso la sera Di Primavera!

And the boat shoots from underneath the moon Into the shadowy distance; only still You hear the dipping oar—

Verso la sera,

And faint, and fainter, and then all's quite gone,
 Music and light and all, like a lost star.

Anne. But you should sleep, father: you were to sleep.

Straf. I do sleep, Anne; or if not—you must know There's such a thing as . . .

Wil. You're too tired to sleep?

Straf. It will come by-and-by and all day long,

In that old quiet house I told you of:
 We sleep safe there.

Anne. Why not in Ireland?

Straf.

No!

Too many dreams!—That song's for Venice, William:

You know how Venice looks upon the map—

Isles that the mainland hardly can let go?

Wil. You've been to Venice, father?

Straf. I was young then.

Wil. A city with no King; that's why I like

Even a song that comes from Venice.

Straf. William!

Wil. Oh, I know why! Anne, do you love the King?

But I'll see Venice for myself one day.

Straf. See many lands, boy—England last of all,—

That way you'll love her best.

Wil. Why do men say

You sought to ruin her, then?

Straf. Ah,—they say that.

Wil. Why?

Straf. I suppose they must have words to say,

As you to sing.

Anne. But they make songs beside:
 Last night I heard one, in the street beneath,

That called you . . . Oh, the names!

Wil. Don't mind her, father!
 They soon left off when I cried out to them.

Straf. We shall so soon be out of it, my boy!

'Tis not worth while: who heeds a foolish song?

Wil. Why, not the King.

Straf. Well: it has been the fate Of better; and yet,—wherefore not feel sure

That Time, who in the twilight comes to mend

All the fantastic day's caprice, consign
 To the low ground once more the ignoble Term,

And raise the Genius on his orb again,— That Time will do me right?

Anne. (Shall we sing, William?

He does not look thus when we sing.)

Straf. For Ireland,

Something is done: too little, but enough

To show what might have been.

Wil.

(I have no heart

To sing now! Anne, how very sad he looks!

Oh, I so hate the King for all he says!)
Straf. Forsook them! What, the common songs will run

That I forsook the People? Nothing more?

Ay, Fame, the busy scribe, will pause, no doubt, Turning a deaf ear to her thousand slaves Noisy to be enrolled,—will register
 The curious glosses, subtle notices, Ingenious clearings-up one fain would see

Beside that plain inscription of The Name—

The Patriot Pym, or the Apostate Strafford!

[The children resume their song timidly, but break off.
Enter HOLLIS and an Attendant.

Straf. No,—Hollis? in good time!—Who is he?

Hol. One That must be present.

Straf. Ah—I understand. They will not let me see poor Laud alone.

How politic! They'd use me by degrees To solitude: and just as you came in I was solicitous what life to lead
 When Strafford's 'not so much as Constable

In the King's service.' Is there any means

To keep one's self awake? What would you do

After this bustle, Hollis, in my place?

Hol. Strafford!

Straf. Observe, not but that Pym and you

Will find me news enough—news I shall hear

Under a quince-tree by a fish-pond side At Wentworth. Garrard must be re-engaged

My newsman. Or, a better project now—What if when all's consummated, and the Saints

Reign, and the Senate's work goes swimmingly,—

What if I venture up, some day, unseen,

To saunter through the Town, notice how Pym, Your Tribune, likes Whitehall, drop quietly Into a tavern, hear a point discussed, As, whether Strafford's name were John or James—And be myself appealed to—I, who shall Myself have near forgotten!

Hol. I would speak . . .

Straf. Then you shall speak,—not now: I want just now,
 To hear the sound of my own tongue.
 This place
 Is full of ghosts.

Hol. Nay, you must hear me, Strafford!

Straf. Oh, readily! Only, one rare thing more,—

The minister! Who will advise the King, Turn his Sejanus, Richelieu and whatnot,
 And yet have health—children, for aught I know—

My patient pair of traitors! Ah,—but, William—

Does not his cheek grow thin?

Wil. 'Tis you look thin, Father!

Straf. A scamper o'er the breezy wolds Sets all to-rights.

Hol. You cannot sure forget A prison-roof is o'er you, Strafford?

Straf. No, Why, no. I would not touch on that, the first.

I left you that. Well, Hollis? Say at once,

The King can find no time to set me free!

A mask at Theobalds?

Hol. Hold: no such affair Detains him.

Straf. True: what needs so great a matter?

The Queen's lip may be sore. Well: when he pleases,—

Only, I want the air: it vexes flesh
 To be pent up so long.

Hol. The King—I bear
 His message, Strafford: pray you, let me speak!

Straf. Go, William! Anne, try o'er your song again!
[The children retire.
They shall be loyal, friend, at all events.
I know your message: you have nothing
new
To tell me: from the first I guessed as
much.
I know, instead of coming here himself Leading me forth in public by the hand,
The King prefers to leave the door ajar As though I were escaping—bids me
true
While the mob gapes upon some show prepared
On the other side of the river! Give at once
His order of release! I've heard, as well,
Of certain poor manœuvres to avoid The granting pardon at his proper risk; First, he must prattle somewhat to the Lords,
Must talk a trifle with the Commons first,
Be grieved I should abuse his confidence, And far from blaming them, and . . .
Where's the order?
Hol. Spare me!
Straf. Why, he'd not have me steal away?
With an old doublet and a steeple hat Like Prynne's? Be smuggled into France, perhaps?
Hollis, 'tis for my children! 'Twas for
them
I first consented to stand day by day And give your Puritans the best of
words,
Be patient, speak when called upon,
observe Their rules, and not return them prompt their lie!
What's in that boy of mine that he should prove Son to a prison-breaker? I shall stay And he'll stay with me. Charles should know as much—He too has children!
[Turning to HOLLISS's companion.] Sir, you feel for me!
No need to hide that face! Though it have looked Upon me from the judgment-seat . . .
I know
Strangely, that somewhere it has looked on me . . .
Your coming has my pardon, nay, my thanks.
For there is One who comes not.
Hol. Whom forgive,
As one to die!
Straf. True, all die, and all need Forgiveness: I forgive him from my
soul.
Hol. 'Tis a world's wonder: Straf-ford, you must die!
Straf. Sir, if your errand is to set me
free
This heartless jest mars much. Ha!
Tears in truth?
We'll end this! See this paper, warm—feel—warm
With lying next my heart! Whose hand is there?
Whose promise? Read, and loud for God to hear!
'Strafford shall take no hurt'—read it, I say!
'In person, honour, nor estate'—
Hol. The King . . .
Straf. I could unking him by a breath!
You sit
Where Loudon sat, who came to prophesy
The certain end, and offer me Pym's
grace
If I'd renounce the King: and I stood firm
On the King's faith. The King who lives . . .
Hol. To sign
The warrant for your death.
Straf. 'Put not your trust In princes, neither in the sons of
men,
In whom is no salvation!'
Hol. Trust in God.
The scaffold is prepared: they wait for
you:
He has consented. Cast the earth
behind!
Cha. You would not see me, Straf-ford, at your foot!
It was wrong from me! Only curse me
not!
Hol. [To STRAFFORD.] As you hope grace and pardon in your need,

Be merciful to this most wretched man ! —You never heard the People howl for [Voices from within.] blood,

Di Primavera.*

Straf. You'll be good to those children, sir ? I know You'll not believe her, even should the Queen

Think they take after one they rarely saw.

I had intended that my son should live A stranger to these matters : but you are So utterly deprived of friends ! He too Must serve you—will you not be good to him ?

Or, stay, sir, do not promise—do not swear !

You, Hollis—do the best you can for me !
I've not a soul to trust to : Wandesford's dead,

And you've got Radcliffe safe, Laud's turn comes next :

I've found small time of late for my affairs,

But I trust any of you, Pym himself—
No one could hurt them : there's an infant, too—

These tedious cares ! Your Majesty could spare them !

Nay—pardon me, my King ! I had forgotten

Your education, trials, much temptation, Some weakness : there escaped a peevish word—

'Tis gone : I bless you at the last. You know

All's between you and me : what has the world

To do with it ? Farewell !

Cha. [at the door.] Balfour ! Balfour !

Enter BALFOUR.

The Parliament !—go to them : I grant all Demands. Their sittings shall be permanent :

Tell them to keep their money if they will :

I'll come to them for every coat I wear And every crust I eat : only I choose To pardon Strafford. As the Queen shall choose !

Beside !

Bal. Your Majesty may hear them now :

The walls can hardly keep their murmurs out :

Please you retire !

Cha. Take all the troops, Balfour !
Bal. There are some hundred thousand of the crowd.

Cha. Come with me, Strafford ! You'll not fear, at least !

Straf. Balfour, say nothing to the world of this !

I charge you, as a dying man, forget You gazed upon this agony of one . . .
Of one . . . or if . . . why you may say,

Balfour,
The King was sorry : 'tis no shame in him :

Yes, you may say he even wept, Balfour,
And that I walked the lighter to the block

Because of it. I shall walk lightly, sir !
Earth fades, Heaven breaks on me : I shall stand next

Before God's throne : the moment's close at hand

When Man the first, last time, has leave to lay

His whole heart bare before its Maker, leave

To clear up the long error of a life
And choose one happiness for evermore.
With all mortality about me, Charles,
The sudden wreck, the dregs of violent death—

What if, despite the opening angel-song,
There penetrate one prayer for you ?
Be saved

Through me ! Bear witness, no one could prevent

My death ! Lead on ! ere he awake—best, now !

All must be ready : did you say, Balfour,

The crowd began to murmur ? They'll be kept

Too late for sermon at St. Antholin's !
Now ! but tread softly—children are at play

In the next room. Precede ! I follow—

Enter LADY CARLISLE, with many Attendants.

Lady Car. Me ! I stay.
Follow me, Strafford, and be saved !

The King ?
[To the KING.] Well—as you ordered, they are ranged without,
The convoy . . . [seeing the KING's state.] [To STRAFFORD.] You know all, then !

Why, I thought
It looked best that the King should save you, Charles Alone ; 'tis shame that you should owe me aught.

Or, no, not shame ! Strafford, you'll not feel shame At being saved by me ?

Hol. All true ! Oh Strafford, She saves you ! all her deed ! this lady's deed !

And is the boat in readiness ? You, friend,
Are Billingsley, no doubt ! Speak to her, Strafford !

See how she trembles, waiting for your voice !

The world's to learn its bravest story yet !

Lady Car. Talk afterward ! Long nights in France enough, To sit beneath the vines and talk of home !

Straf. You love me, child ! Ah, Strafford can be loved

As well as Vane ! I could escape, then ?
Lady Car. Haste !

Advance the torches, Bryan !
Straf. I will die.

They call me proud : but England had no right,

When she encountered me—her strength to mine—

To find the chosen foe a craven. Girl, I fought her to the utterance, I fell, I am hers now, and I will die. Beside, The lookers-on ! Eliot is all about This place with his most uncomplaining brow.

Lady Car. Strafford !
Straf. I think if you could know how much

I love you, you would be repaid, my friend !

Lady Car. Then, for my sake !
Straf. Even for your sweet sake,

I stay.
Hol. For their sake !

Straf. To bequeath a stain ?
Leave me ! Girl, humour me and let me die !

Lady Car. Bid him escape—wake, King ! Bid him escape !

Straf. True, I will go ! Die, and forsake the King ?

I'll not draw back from the last service.
Lady Car. Strafford !

Straf. And, after all, what is disgrace to me ?

Let us come, child ! That it should end this way !

Lead then ! but I feel strangely : it was not

To end this way.
Lady Car. Lean—lean on me !

Straf. My King !
Oh, had he trusted me—his friend of friends !—

Lady Car. I can support him, Hollis !
Straf. Not this way !

This gate—I dreamed of it, this very

Lady Car. It opens on the river : our good boat

Is moored below, our friends are there.
Straf. The same.

Only with something ominous and dark, Fatal, inevitable.

Lady Car. Strafford ! Strafford !
Straf. Not by this gate ! I feel what will be there !

I dreamed of it, I tell you : touch it not !

Lady Car. To save the King,—Strafford, to save the King !

[As STRAFFORD opens the door, PYM is discovered with HAMPDEN, VANE, &c. STRAFFORD falls back : PYM follows slowly and confronts him.]

Pym. Have I done well ? Speak, England ! Whose sole sake

I still have laboured for, with disregard To my own heart,—for whom my youth was made Barren, my Future waste, to offer up

Her sacrifice—this man, this Wentworth here—

Who walked in youth with me, loved me, it may be,
 And whom, for his forsaking England's cause, I hunted by all means (trusting that she Would sanctify all means) even to the block Which waits for him. And saying this, I feel No bitter pang than first I felt, the hour I swore that Wentworth might leave us, but I Would never leave him : I do leave him now.
 I render up my charge (be witness, God!) To England who imposed it. I have done Her bidding—poorly, wrongly,—it may be,
 With ill effects—for I am weak, a man : Still, I have done my best, my human best,
 Not faltering for a moment. It is done. And this said, if I say . . . yes, I will say I never loved but one man—David not More Jonathan ! Even thus, I love him now :
 And look for my chief portion in that world Where great hearts led astray are turned again, (Soon it may be, and, certes, will be soon : My mission over, I shall not live long.)—Ay, here I know I talk—I dare and must,
 Of England, and her great reward, as all I look for there ; but in my inmost heart, Believe, I think of stealing quite away To walk once more with Wentworth—my youth's friend Purged from all error, gloriously renewed, And Eliot shall not blame us. Then indeed . . .
 This is no meeting, Wentworth ! Tears increase Too hot. A thin mist—is it blood ?—
 The face I loved once. Then, the meeting be !

Straf. I have loved England too ; we'll meet then, Pym !
 As well die now ! Youth is the only time To think and to decide on a great course ; Manhood with action follows ; but 'tis dreary
 To have to alter our whole life in age— The time past, the strength gone ! as well die now.
 When we meet, Pym, I'd be set right—not now !
 Best die. Then if there's any fault, it too Dies, smothered up. Poor grey old little Laud May dream his dream out of a perfect Church In some blind corner. And there's no one left.
 I trust the King now wholly to you, Pym !
 And yet, I know not ! I shall not be there !
 Friends fall—if he have any ! And he's weak,
 And loves the Queen, and . . . Oh, my fate is nothing—Nothing ! But not that awful head—not that !
 Pym, you help England ! I, that am to die, What I must see ! 'tis here—all here ! My God !
 Let me but gasp out, in one word of fire, How Thou wilt plague him, satiating Hell !
 What ? England that you help, become through you A green and putrefying charnel, left Our children . . . some of us have children, Pym—
 Some who, without that, still must ever wear A darkened brow, an over-serious look, And never properly be young ! No word ?
 You will not say a word—to me—to Him ?
Pym. England,—I am thine own !
 Dost thou exact
 That service ? I obey thee to the end.

PAULINE <sup>1</sup>

A FRAGMENT OF A CONFESSION

PAULINE, mine own, bend o'er me—thy | Amid the faithful : sad confession first,
 soft breast | Remorse and pardon, and old claims Shall pant to mine—bend o'er me—thy | renewed, sweet eyes, | Ere I can be—as I shall be no more.
 And loosened hair, and breathing lips, | I had been spared this shame, if I had and arms | sat
 Drawing me to thee—these build up a | By thee for ever, from the first, in place screen | Of my wild dreams of beauty and of good,
 To shut me in with thee, and from all | Or with them, as an earnest of their fear, | truth.
 So that I might unlock the sleepless | No thought nor hope, having been shut brood | from thee,
 Of fancies from my soul, their lurking | No vague wish unexplained—no wan-
 place, | dering aim
 Nor doubt that each would pass, ne'er | Sent back to bind on Fancy's wings, and to return
 To one so watched, so loved, and so | Some strange fair world, where it might

 But what can guard thee but thy naked | But doubting nothing, had been led by love ? | thee,
 Ah, dearest ! whoso sucks a poisoned | Thro' youth, and saved, as one at length wound | awaked,
 Envenoms his own veins,—thou art so | Who has slept thro' a peril. Ah ! vain, good, | vain !
 So calm—if thou should'st wear a brow | Thou lovest me—the past is in its grave, less light | Tho' its ghost haunts us—still this much
 For some wild thought which, but for | is ours, me, were kept | To cast away restraint, lest a worse

 Yet till I have unlocked them it were | Wait for us in the darkness. Thou

 To hope to sing ; some woe would light | And thou art to receive not love, but

 Nature would point at one, whose | For which thou wilt be mine, and smile,

 Was bathed in her enchantments— | All shapes, and shames, and veil without whose brow burned | a fear
 Beneath the crown, to which her secrets | That form which music follows like a

 Who learned the spell which can call up | And I look to thee, and I trust in thee,
 the dead, | As in a Northern night one looks away
 And then departed, smiling like a fiend | Unto the East for morn, and spring and Who has deceived God. If such one | joy.

And resting on some few old feelings, Distinct from theirs—that I am sad—won and fain Back by thy beauty, would'st that I Would give up all to be but where I was; essay Not high as I had been, if faithful The task, which was to me what now found—
     thou art:
 And why should I conceal one weakness But low and weak, yet full of hope, and
     sure
     Of goodness as of life—that I would lose All this gay mastery of mind, to sit Thou wilt remember one warm morn, Once more with them, trusting in truth when Winter and love, Crept aged from the earth, and Spring's And with an aim—not being what I am.
     first breath Blew soft from the moist hills—the Oh, Pauline! I am ruined! who believed blackthorn boughs, That tho' my soul had floated from its So dark in the bare wood; when glis- sphere tening Of wide dominion into the dim orb In the sunshine were white with coming Of self—that it was strong and free as buds, ever:—
 Like the bright side of a sorrow—and It has conformed itself to that dim orb, the banks Reflecting all its shades and shapes, and Had violets opening from sleep like now eyes— Must stay where it alone can be adored.
 I walked with thee, who knew not a I have felt this in dreams—in dreams in deep shame which Lurked beneath smiles and careless I seemed the fate from which I fled; I words, which sought felt To hide it—till they wandered and were A strange delight in causing my decay; mute; I was a fiend, in darkness chained for As we stood listening on a sunny mound ever To the wind murmuring in the damp Within some ocean-cave; and ages copse, rolled,
 Like heavy breathings of some hidden Till thro' the cleft rock, like a moon-thing beam, came Betrayed by sleep—until the feeling A white swan to remain with me; and rushed
 That I was low indeed, yet not so low Rolled, yet I tired not of my first joy
 As to endure the calmness of thine eyes; In gazing on the peace of its pure wings.
 And so I told thee all, while the cool And then I said, 'It is most fair to me, breast Yet its soft wings must sure have suf-I leaned on altered not its quiet beating; ferred change And long ere words, like a hurt bird's From the thick darkness—sure its eyes complaint, are dim—Bademe look up and bewhat I had been, Its silver pinions must be cramped and I felt despair could never live by thee. numbed Thou wilt remember:—thou art not With sleeping ages here; it cannot more dear leave me, Than song was once to me; and I ne'er For it would seem, in light, beside its sung kind,
 But as one entering bright halls, where all Withered—tho' here to me most beauti-Will rise and shout for him. Sure I ful.' must own
 That I am fallen—having chosen gifts And then I was a young witch, whose blue eyes,

As she stood naked by the river springs, Drew down a god—I watched his radiant form Growing less radiant—and it gladdened
     me;
 Till one morn, as he sat in the sunshine Upon my knees, singing to me of heaven,
 He turned to look at me, ere I could lose The grin with which I viewed his perishing.
 And he shrieked and departed, and sat
     long
 By his deserted throne—but sunk at
     last,
 Murmuring, as I kissed his lips and curled
 Around him, ‘I am still a god—to thee.’
 Still I can lay my soul bare in its fall, For all the wandering and all the weakness
 Will be a saddest comment on the song.
 And if, that done, I can be young again,
 I will give up all gained as willingly As one gives up a charm which shuts him out From hope, or part, or care, in human
     kind.
 As life wanes, all its cares, and strife, and toil,
 Seem strangely valueless, while the old trees Which grew by our youth’s home—the waving mass
 Of climbing plants, heavy with bloom and dew—
 The morning swallows with their songs like words,— All these seem clear and only worth our thoughts.
 So aught connected with my early
     life—
 My rude songs or my wild imaginings, How I look on them—most distinct amid The fever and the stir of after years !

 I ne’er had ventured e’en to hope for
     this,
 Had not the glow I felt at His award Assured me all was not extinct within.
 Him whom all honour—whose renown springs up Like sunlight which will visit all the
     world ;

So that e’en they who sneered at him at
     first Come out to it, as some dark spider crawls
 From his foul nets, which some lit torch invades Yet spinning still new films for his retreat.—
 Thou didst smile, poet,—but, can we forgive ?

 Sun-treader—life and light be thine for ever !
 Thou art gone from us—years go by,
     and spring Gladdens, and the young earth is beautiful,
 Yet thy songs come not—other bards arise, But none like thee ;—they stand—thy majesties,
 Like mighty works which tell some Spirit there
 Hath sat regardless of neglect and scorn, Till, its long task completed, it hath risen And left us, never to return : and all Rush in to peer and praise when all in vain.
 The air seems bright with thy past presence yet, But thou art still for me, as thou hast
     been When I have stood with thee, as on a throne
 With all thy dim creations gathered
     round
 Like mountains,—and I felt of mould like them,
 And creatures of my own were mixed with them,
 Like things half-lived, catching and giving life.
 But thou art still for me, who have
     adored,
 Tho’ single, panting but to hear thy
     name,
 Which I believed a spell to me alone, Scarce deeming thou wert as a star to
     men—
 As one should worship long a sacred
     spring Scarce worth a moth’s fitting, which long grasses cross, ,

And one small tree embowers droop-
 ingly,
 Joying to see some wandering insect won,
 To live in its few rushes—or some locust To pasture on its boughs—or some wild bird
 Stoop for its freshness from the trackless air,
 And then should find it but the fountain-
 head, Long lost, of some great river—washing towns
 And towers, and seeing old woods which will live
 But by its banks, untrod of human foot, Which, when the great sun sinks, lie quivering
 In light as some thing lieth half of life Before God's foot, waiting a wondrous
 change;
 —Then girt with rocks which seek to turn or stay
 Its course in vain, for it does ever spread Like a sea's arm as it goes rolling on, Being the pulse of some great country
 —so Wert thou to me—and art thou to the
 world.
 And I, perchance, half feel a strange regret,
 That I am not what I have been to
 thee:
 Like a girl one has loved long silently,
 In her first loveliness, in some retreat, When first emerged, all gaze and glow to view
 Her fresh eyes, and soft hair, and lips which bleed Like a mountain berry. Doubtless it is sweet
 To see her thus adored—but there have been Moments, when all the world was in his
 praise,
 Sweeter than all the pride of after hours.
 Yet, Sun-treader, all hail!—from my heart's heart
 I bid thee hail!—e'en in my wildest
 dreams
 I am proud to feel I would have thrown up all The wreaths of fame which seemed o'er-hanging me,
 To have seen thee, for a moment, as thou art.
 And if thou livest—if thou lovest, spirit!
 Remember me, who set this final seal To wandering thought—that one so pure as thou Could never die. Remember me, who flung
 All honour from my soul—yet paused and said,
 'There is one spark of love remaining yet, For I have nought in common with him —shapes
 Which followed him avoid me, and foul forms Seek me, which ne'er could fasten on his
 mind;
 And tho' I feel how low I am to him, Yet I aim not even to catch a tone
 Of all the harmonies he called up, So one gleam still remains, altho' the last.'
 Remember me—who praise thee e'en with tears,
 For never more shall I walk calm with
 thee;
 Thy sweet imaginings are as an air,
 A melody, some wond'rous singer sings, Which, though it haunt men oft in the still eve,
 They dream not to essay; yet it no less, But more is honoured. I was thine in
 shame,
 And now when all thy proud renown is
 out,
 I am a watcher, whose eyes have grown
 dim
 With looking for some star—which breaks on him, Altered, and worn, and weak, and full of tears.
 Autumn has come—like Spring returned
 to us,
 Won from her girlishness—like one returned
 A friend that was a lover—nor forgets
 The first warm love, but full of sober
 thoughts
 Of fading years; whose soft mouth quivers yet
 With the old smile—but yet so changed and still!

And here am I the scoffer, who have probed

Life's vanity, won by a word again Into my old life—for one little word Of this sweet friend, who lives in loving
me,

Lives strangely on my thoughts, and looks, and words, As fathoms down some nameless ocean
thing

Its silent course of quietness and joy.
O dearest, if, indeed, I tell the past, May'st thou forget it as a sad sick dream;
Or if it linger—my lost soul too soon Sinks to itself, and whispers, we shall be But closer linked—two creatures whom the earth

Bears singly—with strange feelings, unrevealed

But to each other; or two lonely things Created by some Power, whose reign is
done,

Having no part in God, or his bright
world,

I am to sing; whilst ebbing day dies
soft,

As a lean scholar dies, worn o'er his book,
And in the heaven stars steal out one by
one,

As hunted men steal to their mountain
watch.

I must not think—lest this new impulse
die

In which I trust. I have no confidence, So I will sing on—fast as fancies come Rudely—the verse being as the mood it paints.

I strip my mind bare—whose first elements

I shall unveil—not as they struggled
forth

In infancy, nor as they now exist, That I am grown above them, and can rule them,

But in that middle stage, when they were full,

Yet ere I had disposed them to my will;
And then I shall show how these elements

Produced my present state, and what it is.

I am made up of an intensest life,

Of a most clear idea of consciousness Of self—distinct from all its qualities, From all affections, passions, feelings, powers;

And thus far it exists, if tracked in all,
But linked in me, to self-supremacy, Existing as a centre to all things,
Most potent to create, and rule, and call Upon all things to minister to it;
And to a principle of restlessness Which would be all, have, see, know, - taste, feel all—

This is myself; and I should thus have
been,

Though gifted lower than the meanest
soul.

And of my powers, one springs up to save

From utter death a soul with such desires Confined to clay—which is the only one Which marks me—an imagination which Has been an angel to me—coming not In fitful visions, but beside me ever,
And never failing me; so tho' my mind Forgets not—not a shred of life forgets—Yet I can take a secret pride in calling The dark past up—to quell it regally.

A mind like this must dissipate itself,
But I have always had one lode-star;
now,

As I look back, I see that I have wasted, Or progressed as I looked toward that
star—

A need, a trust, a yearning after God,
A feeling I have analysed but late,
But it existed, and was reconciled
With a neglect of all I deemed his laws, Which yet, when seen in others, I abhorred.

I felt as one beloved, and so shut in From fear—and thence I date my trust in signs

And omens—for I saw God everywhere;
And I can only lay it to the fruit Of a sad after-time that I could doubt Even his being—having always felt His presence—never acting from myself, Still trusting in a hand that leads me
through

All danger; and this feeling still has fought

Against my weakest reason and resolves.

And I can love nothing—and this dull
truth
Has come the last—but sense supplies a love
Encircling me and mingling with my life.

These make myself—I have sought in vain

To trace how they were formed by circumstance,

For I still find them—turning my wild
youth

Where they alone displayed themselves, converting

All objects to their use—now see their

They came to me in my first dawn of life, Which passed alone with wisest ancient books,

All halo-girt with fancies of my own,
And I myself went with the tale—a god, Wandering after beauty—or a giant, Standing vast in the sunset—an old hunter,

Talking with gods—or a high-crested
chief,

Sailing with troops of friends to Tene-dos ;—

I tell you, nought has ever been so clear As the place, the time, the fashion of those lives.

I had not seen a work of lofty art, Nor woman's beauty, nor sweet nature's
face,

Yet, I say, never morn broke clear as those

On the dim clustered isles in the bluesea: The deep groves, and white temples, and wet caves—

And nothing ever will surprise me now—Who stood beside the naked Swift-footed,

Who bound my forehead with Proserpine's hair.

And strange it is, that I who could so
dream,

Should e'er have stooped to aim at aught beneath—

Aught low, or painful, but I never doubted ;

So as I grew, I rudely shaped my life

To my immediate wants, yet strong
beneath

Was a vague sense of powers folded up—A sense that tho' those shadowy times were past,

Their spirit dwelt in me, and I should
rule.

Then came a pause, and long restraint chained down

My soul, till it was changed. I lost
myself,

And were it not that I so loathe that
time,

I could recall how first I learned to turn My mind against itself ; and the effects, In deeds for which remorse were vain, as for

The wanderings of delirious dream ; yet thence

Came cunning, envy, falsehood, which so long

Have spotted me—at length I was restored,

Yet long the influence remained ; and nought

But the still life I led, apart from all,
Which left my soul to seek its old delights, Could e'er have brought me thus far back to peace.

As peace returned, I sought out some pursuit :

And song rose—no new impulse—but the one

With which all others best could be combined.

My life has not been that of those whose
heaven

Was lampless, save where poesy shone
out ;

But as a clime, where glittering mountain-tops,

And glancing sea, and forests steeped in
light,

Give back reflected the far-flashing sun ;
For music (which is earnest of a heaven, Seeing we know emotions strange by it,
Not else to be revealed) is as a voice,
A low voice calling Fancy, as a friend,
To the green woods in the gay summer
time.

And she fills all the way with dancing

Which have made painters pale; and In wandering o'er them, to seek out they go on some one While stars look at them, and winds call To be my own; as one should wander to them, o'er
 As they leave life's path for the twilight The White Way for a star.

 Where the dead gather. This was not at first,
 For I scarce knew what I would do. On one, whom praise of mine would not I had offend,
 No wish to paint, no yearning—but I Who was as calm as beauty—being such

 I turned to those old times and scenes, Who sent forth hopes and longings for where all their sake, That's beautiful had birth for me, and Clothed in all passion's melodies, which made first Rude verses on them all; and then I Caught me, and set me, as to a sweet paused— task,
 I had done nothing, so I sought to know To gather every breathing of his songs.
 What mind had yet achieved. No fear And woven with them there were words,

 On all things: schemes and systems My whole soul rose to meet it. Now, went and came, Pauline,
 And I was proud (being vainest of the I shall go mad, if I recall that time.
 weak),
 Oh let me look back, e'er I leave for ever The time, which was an hour, that one waits

For a fair girl, that comes a withered hag,
And I was lonely,—far from woods and fields,

And amid dullest sights, who should be loose

As a stag—yet I was full of joy, who lived

With Plato, and who had the key to life.
And I had dimly shaped my first attempt,
And many a thought did I build up on thought,

As the wild bee hangs cell to cell—in vain ;

For I must still go on : my mind rests not.

'Twas in my plan to look on real life,
Which was all new to me ; my theories Were firm, so I left them, to look upon Men, and their cares, and hopes, and fears, and joys ;

And, as I pondered on them all, I sought How best life's end might be attained—an end

Comprising every joy. I deeply mused.

And suddenly, without heart-wreck, I awoke

As from a dream—I said, 'twas beautiful, Yet but a dream ; and so adieu to it.
As some world-wanderer sees in a far meadow Strange towers, and walled gardens, thick with trees,

Where singing goes on, and delicious mirth,

And laughing fairy creatures peeping over,

And on the morrow, when he comes to live

For ever by those springs, and trees fruit-flushed,

And fairy bowers—all his search is vain.
Well I remember . . .

First went my hopes of perfecting mankind,

And faith in them—then freedom in itself,

And virtue in itself—and then my motives' ends,

And powers and loves ; and human love went last.

I felt this no decay, because new powers Rose as old feelings left—wit, mockery,

And happiness ; for I had oft been sad, Mistrusting my resolves : but now I cast

Hope joyously away—I laughed and said,

' No more of this '—I must not think ;
at length

I look'd again to see how all went on.

My powers were greater—as some temple seemed

My soul, where nought is changed, and incense rolls

Around the altar—only God is gone,
And some dark spirit sitteth in his seat !
So I passed through the temple ; and to me

Knelt troops of shadows ; and they cried, ' Hail, king !

We serve thee now, and thou shalt serve no more !

Call on us, prove us, let us worship thee !'
And I said, ' Are ye strong—let fancy bear me

Far from the past.'—And I was borne away

As Arab birds float sleeping in the wind, O'er deserts, towers, and forests, I being calm ;

And I said, ' I have nursed up energies,
They will prey on me.' And a band knelt low,

And cried, ' Lord, we are here, and we will make

A way for thee—in thine appointed life
Oh look on us ! ' And I said, ' Ye will worship

Me ; but my heart must worship too.'
They shouted, '

' Thyself—thou art our king ! ' So I stood there

Smiling . . . . .

And buoyant and rejoicing was the spirit

With which I looked out how to end my days ;

I felt once more myself—my powers were mine ;

I found that youth or health solifted me,
That, spite of all life's vanity, no grief

Came nigh me—I must ever be light-hearted ;

And that this feeling was the only veil

Betwixt me and despair: so if age came,
 I should be as a wreck linked to a soul Yet fluttering, or mind-broken, and aware
 Of my decay. So a long summer morn Found me; and e'er noon came, I had resolved
 No age should come on me, ere youth's hopes went,
 For I would wear myself out—like that morn Which wasted not a sunbeam—every joy
 I would make mine, and die. And thus I sought To chain my spirit down, which I had fed With thoughts of fame. I said: the troubled life
 Of genius, seen so bright when working
     forth
 Some trusted end, seems sad when all in vain—
 Most sad, when men have parted with all joy
 For their wild fancy's sake, which waited first
 As an obedient spirit when delight Came not with her alone; but alters
     soon, Coming darkened, seldom, hasting to depart, Leaving a heavy darkness and warm
     tears.
 But I shall never lose her; she will live Brighter for such seclusion—I but catch A hue, a glance of what I sing; so pain Is linked with pleasure, for I ne'er may tell
 The radiant sights which dazzle me;
     but now
 They shall be all my own, and let them fade
 Untold—others shall rise as fair, as fast.
 And when all's done, the few dim gleams transferred,— (For a new thought sprung up—that it were well
 To leave all shadowy hopes, and weave such lays As would encircle me with praise and
     love;

So I should not die utterly—I should bring One branch from the gold forest, like the knight
 Of old tales, witnessing I had been
     there,)—
 And when all's done, how vain seems e'en success,
 And all the influence poets have o'er
     men!
 'Tis a fine thing that one, weak as myself,
 Should sit in his lone room, knowing the
     words
 He utters in his solitude shall move Men like a swift wind—that tho' he be forgotten, Faireyes shall glisten when his beauteous
     dreams
 Of love come true in happier frames than his.
 Ay, the still night brought thoughts like these, but morn Came, and the mockery again laughed
     out
 At hollow praises, and smiles, almost sneers;
 And my soul's idol seemed to whisper me To dwell with him and his unhonoured
     name—
 And I well knew my spirit, that would
     be First in the struggle, and again would
     make
 All bow to it; and I would sink again.
 And then know that this curse will come on us,
 To see our idols perish—we may wither;
 Nor marvel—we are clay; but our low
     fate
 Should not extend them, whom trustingly
 We sent before into Time's yawning gulf,
 To face whate'er may lurk in darkness
     there—
 To see the painters' glory pass, and feel Sweet music move us not as once, or
     worst,
 To see decaying wits ere the frail body Decays. Nought makes me trust in love so really

As the delight of the contented lowness With which I gaze on souls I'd keep for ever

In beauty—I'd be sad to equal them; I'd feed their fame e'en from my heart's best blood, Withering unseen, that they might flourish still.

Pauline, my sweet friend, thou dost not forget

How this mood swayed me, when thou first wert mine,

When I had set myself to live this life, Defying all opinion. Ere thou camest
I was most happy, sweet, for old delights Had come like birds again; music, my
life,

I nourished more than ever, and old lore Loved for itself, and all it shows—the
king

Treading the purple calmly to his death, —While round him, like the clouds of eve, all dusk,

The giant shades of fate, silently fitting, Pile the dim outline of the coming doom, —And him sitting alone in blood, while
friends

Are hunting far in the sunshine; and the boy,

With his white breast and brow and clustering curls

Streaked with his mother's blood, and striving hard

To tell his story ere his reason goes.
And when I loved thee, as I've loved so
oft,

Thou lovedst me, and I wondered, and looked in

My heart to find some feeling like such
love,

Believing I was still what I had been;
And soon I found all faith had gone from
me,

And the late glow of life—changing like clouds,

'Twas not the morn-blush widening into
day,

But evening, coloured by the dying sun While darkness is quick hastening:

I will tell My state as though 'twere none of mine
—despair

Cannot come near me—thus it is with
me.

Souls alter not, and mine must progress
still;

And this I knew not when I flung away My youth's chief aims. I ne'er supposed the loss

Of what few I retained; for no resource Awaits me—now behold the change of
all.

I cannot chain my soul, it will not rest In its clay prison; this most narrow sphere—

It has strange powers, and feelings, and
desires,

Which I cannot account for, nor explain, But which I stifle not, being bound to trust

All feelings equally—to hear all sides: Yet I cannot indulge them, and they
live,

Referring to some state or life unknown . . .

My selfishness is satiated not,
It wears me like a flame; my hunger for All pleasure, howsoever minute, is pain;
I envy—how I envy him whose mind Turns with its energies to some one end!
To elevate a sect, or a pursuit,

However mean—so mystill baffled hopes Seek out abstractions; I would have but one

Delight on earth, so it were wholly mine; One rapture all my soul could fill—and
this

Wild feeling places me in dream afar, In some wide country, where the eye can
see

No end to the far hills and dales bestrewn

With shining towers and dwellings.
I grow mad

Wellnigh, to know not one abode but holds

Some pleasure—for my soul could grasp
them all,

But must remain with this vile form.
I look

With hope to age at last, which quenching much,

May let me concentrate the sparks it spares.

This restlessness of passion meets in me A craving after knowledge: the sole
proof

Of a commanding will is in that power Repressed; for I beheld it in its dawn, That sleepless harpy, with its budding
wings,
And I considered whether I should yield

All hopes and fears, to live alone with it, Finding a recompense in its wild eyes;
And when I found that I should perish
so,

I bade its wild eyes close from me for ever;—

And I am left alone with my delights,— So it lies in me a chained thing—still ready

To serve me, if I loose its slightest bond—

I cannot but be proud of my bright slave.

And thus I know this earth is not my
sphere,

For I cannot so narrow me, but that I still exceed it; in their elements My love would pass my reason—but since here

Love must receive its objects from this
earth,

While reason will be chainless, the few truths

Caught from its wanderings have sufficed to quell

All love below;—then what must be that love

Which, with the object it demands, would quell

Reason, tho' it soared with the sera-phim?

No—what I feel may pass all human
love,

Yet fall far short of what my love should
be;

And yet I seem more warped in this than aught,

For here myself stands out more hideously.

I can forget myself in friendship, fame,
Or liberty, or love of mighty souls.

But I begin to know what thing hate is—

To sicken, and to quiver, and grow
white,

And I myself have furnished its first prey.

All my sad weaknesses, this wavering
will,

This selfishness, this still decaying
frame...

But I must never grieve while I can pass Far from such thoughts—as now—Andromeda!

And she is with me—years roll, I shall
change,

But change can touch her not—so beautiful

With her dark eyes, earnest and still, and hair

Lifted and spread by the salt-sweeping breeze;

And one red-beam, all the storm leaves in heaven,

Resting upon her eyes and face and hair,
As she awaits the snake on the wet beach,

By the dark rock, and the white wave just breaking

At her feet; quite naked and alone,— a thing

You doubt not, nor fear for, secure that
God

Will come in thunder from the stars to save her.

Let it pass—I will call another change,
I will be gifted with a wond'rous soul,

Yet sunk by error to men's sympathy,
And in the wane of life; yet only so

As to call up their fears, and there shall
come

A time requiring youth's best energies;
And straight I fling age, sorrow, sickness
off,

And I rise triumphing over my decay.

And thus it is that I supply the chasm 'Twixt what I am and all that I would
be.

But then to know nothing—to hope for nothing—

To seize on life's dull joys from a strange
fear,

Lest, losing them, all 's lost, and nought
remains.

There 's some vile juggle with my reason
 here—
 I feel I but explain to my own loss These impulses—they live no less the
 same.
 Liberty! what though I despair—my
 blood Rose not at a slave's name prouder than now,
 And sympathy obscured by sophistries.
 Why have not I sought refuge in myself,
 But for the woes I saw and could not And love!—do I not love thee, my Pauline?
 . . . . .
 I cherish prejudice, lest I be left Utterly loveless—witness this belief In poets, tho' sad change has come there
 too;
 No more I leave myself to follow them:
 Unconsciously I measure me by them.
 Let me forget it; and I cherish most My love of England—how her name—a
 word
 Of her's in a strange tongue makes my heart beat!
 . . . . .
 Pauline, I could do anything—not now—
 All 's fever—but when calm shall come I am prepared—I have made life my
 own—
 I would not be content with all the
 change
 One frame should feel—but I have gone in thought Thro' all conjuncture—I have lived all
 life
 When it is most alive—where strangest
 fate
 New shapes it past surmise—the tales of
 men Bit by some curse—or in the grasps of doom
 Half-visible and still increasing round, Or crowning their wide being's general aim.
 . . . . .
 These are wild fancies, but I feel, sweet
 friend,
 As one breathing his weakness to the ear Of pitying angel—dear as a winter
 flower;
 A slight flower growing alone, and offering Its frail cup of three leaves to the cold
 sun, Yet joyous and confiding, like the triumph
 Of a child—and why am I not worthy thee?
 . . . . .
 I can live all the life of plants, and gaze Drowsily on the bees that flit and play, Or bare my breast for sunbeams which will kill,
 Or open in the night of sounds, to look For the dim stars; I can mount with the bird,
 Leaping airily his pyramid of leaves And twisted boughs of some tall mountain tree,
 Or rise cheerfully springing to the heavens,
 Or like a fish breathe in the morning air In the misty sun-warm water, or with flowers
 And trees can smile in light at the sinking sun,
 Just as the storm comes—as a girl would
 look
 On a departing lover—most serene.
 . . . . .
 Pauline, come with me—see how I could build
 A home for us, out of the world; in thought—
 I am inspired—come with me, Pauline!
 Night, and one single ridge of narrow path
 Between the sullen river and the woods Waving and muttering—for the moonless night
 Has shaped them into images of life,
 Like the upraising of the giant-ghosts, Looking on earth to know how their sons fare.
 Thou art so close by me, the roughest
 swell
 Of wind in the tree-tops hides not the panting
 Of thy soft breasts; no—we will pass to morning—

Morning—the rocks, and valleys, and old woods.
 How the sun brightens in the mist, and
 here,—
 Half in the air, like creatures of the
 place,
 Trusting the element—living on high
 boughs
 That swing in the wind—look at the golden spray, Flung from the foam-sheet of the cataract, Amid the broken rocks—shall we stay
 here
 With the wild hawks?—no, ere the hot noon come Dive we down—safe;—see this our new retreat
 Walled in with a sloped mound of matted shrubs, Dark, tangled, old and green—still sloping down
 To a small pool whose waters lie Amid the trailing boughs turned waterplants,
 And tall trees over-arch to keep us in, Breaking the sunbeams into emerald shafts,
 And in the dreamy water one small group
 Of two or three strange trees are got together,
 Wondering at all around—as strange beasts herd Together far from their own land—all wildness—
 No turf nor moss, for boughs and plants pave all,
 And tongues of bank go shelving in the waters,
 Where the pale-throated snake reclines
 his head,
 And old grey stones lie making eddies
 there;
 The wild mice cross them dry-shod—deeper in—
 Shut thy soft eyes—now look—still deeper in:
 This is the very heart of the woods—all
 round,
 Mountain-like, heaped above us; yet even here

One pond of water gleams—far off the river Sweeps like a sea, barred out from land;
 but one—
 One thin clear sheet has over-leaped and wound
 Into this silent depth, which gained, it lies Still, as but let by sufferance; the trees bend
 O'er it as wild men watch a sleeping girl, And thro' their roots long creeping plants stretch out Their twined hair, steeped and sparkling; farther on,
 Tall rushes and thick flag-knots have combined
 To narrow it; so, at length, a silver thread
 It winds, all noiselessly, thro' the deep wood,
 Till thro' a cleft way, thro' the moss and stone,
 It joins its parent-river with a shout.
 Up for the glowing day—leave the old
 woods:
 See, they part, like a ruined arch, the
 sky!
 Nothing but sky appears, so close the root
 And grass of the hill-top level with the air—
 Blue sunny air, where a great cloud floats, laden With light, like a dead whale that white birds pick,
 Floating away in the sun in some north
 sea.
 Air, air—fresh life-blood—thin and searching air—
 The clear, dear breath of God, that loveth us:
 Where small birds reel and winds take their delight.
 Water is beautiful, but not like air.
 See, where the solid azure waters lie, Made as of thickened air, and down
 below
 The fern-ranks, like a forest, spread themselves,
 As tho' each pore could feel the element;
 Where the quick glancing serpent winds
 his way—

Float with me there, Pauline, but not like air.
 Down the hill—stop—a clump of trees, see, set On a heap of rocks, which look o'er the far plains,
 And envious climbing shrubs would mount to rest, And peer from their spread boughs. There they wave, looking At the muleteers, who whistle as they go To the merry chime of their morning bells, and all The little smoking cots, and fields, and banks, And copses, bright in the sun; my spirit wanders.
 Hedgerows for me—still, living, hedgerows, where The bushes close, and clasp above, and keep Thought in—I am concentrated—I feel;—
 But my soul saddens when it looks beyond;
 I cannot be immortal, nor taste all.
 O God! where does this tend—these struggling aims! <sup>1</sup>
 What would I have? what is this 'sleep,' which seems To bound all? can there be a 'waking' point Of crowning life? The soul would never rule—

It would be first in all things—it would have Its utmost pleasure filled,—but that complete Commanding for commanding sickens it. The last point that I can trace is, rest beneath Some better essence than itself—in weakness;
 This is 'myself'—not what I think should be,
 And what is that I hunger for but God?
 My God, my God! let me for once look on thee As tho' nought else existed: we alone. And as creation crumbles, my soul's Expands till I can say, 'Even from myself
 I need thee, and I feel thee, and I love thee;
 I do not plead my rapture in thy works For love of thee—or that I feel as one Who cannot die—but there is that in me Which turns to thee, which loves, or which should love.'

Why have I girt myself with this hell-dress?
 Why have I laboured to put out my life?
 Is it not in my nature to adore,
 And e'en for all my reason do I not Feel him, and thank him, and pray to him?—Now.

même, et, par-dessus tout, la tournure d'esprit toute particulière de mon ami, rendent les changements presque impossibles. Les raisons qu'il fait valoir ailleurs, et d'autres encore plus puissantes, ont fait trouver grâce à mes yeux pour cet écrit qu'autrement je lui eusse conseillé de jeter au feu.—Je n'en crois pas moins au grand principe de toute composition—à ce principe de Shakspeare, de Raphaëlle, de Beethoven, d'où il suit que la concentration des idées est due bien plus à leur conception, qu'à leur mise en exécution... j'ai tout lieu de craindre que la première de ces qualités ne soit encore étrangère à mon ami—et je doute fort qu'un redoublement de travail lui fasse acquiescer la seconde. Le mieux serait de brûler ceci; mais que faire?

Je crois que dans ce qui suit il fait allusion à un certain examen qu'il fit autrefois de l'âme ou plutôt de son âme, pour découvrir la suite des objets auxquels il lui serait possible d'attendre, et dont chacun une fois obtenu devait former une espèce de plateau d'où l'on pouvait apercevoir d'autres buts, d'autres projets, d'autres jouissances qui, à leur tour, devaient être surmontés. Il en résultait que l'oubli et le sommeil devaient tout terminer. Cette idée que je ne saisis pas parfaitement lui est peut-être aussi intelligible qu'à moi.

Can I forgo the trust that he loves me ?
 Do I not feel a love which only ONE . . .
 O thou pale form, so dimly seen, deep-eyed,
 I have denied thee calmly—do I not Pant when I read of thy consummate
   deeds,
 And burn to see thy calm, pure truths out-flash
 The brightest gleams of earth's philosophy ?
 Do I not shake to hear aught question
   thee ? . . .
 If I am erring save me, madden me, Take from me powers, and pleasures—let me die
 Ages, so I see thee : I am knit round As with a charm, by sin and lust and
   pride,
 Yet tho' my wandering dreams have seen all shapes
 Of strange delight, oft have I stood by
   thee—
 Have I been keeping lonely watch with
   thee,
 In the damp night by weeping Olivet, Or leaning on thy bosom, proudly less—Or dying with thee on the lonely cross—Or witnessing thy bursting from the tomb !
 A mortal, sin's familiar friend doth here Avow that he will give all earth's
   reward
 But to believe and humbly teach the
   faith,
 In suffering, and poverty, and shame,
 Only believing he is not unloved . . .
 And now, my Pauline, I am thine for ever !
 I feel the spirit which has buoyed me up Deserting me : and old shades gathering
   on ;
 Yet while its last light waits, I would say
   much.
 And chiefly, I am glad that I have said That love which I have ever felt for thee, But seldom told ; our hearts so beat
   together,
 That speech is mockery, but when dark hours come ;
 And I feel sad ; and thou, sweet, deem'st it strange ;

A sorrow moves me, thou canst not remove,
 Look on this lay I dedicate to thee, Which thro' thee I began, and which I end, Collecting the last gleams to strive to
   tell
 That I am thine, and more than ever
   now—
 That I am sinking fast—yet tho' I sink, No less I feel that thou hast brought me
   bliss,
 And that I still may hope to win it back.
 Thou know'st, dear friend, I could not think all calm, For wild dreams followed me, and bore me off,
 And all was indistinct. Ere one was caught Another glanced : so dazzled by my wealth,
 Knowing not which to leave nor which to choose,
 For all my thoughts so floated, nought was fixed—
 And then thou said'st a perfect bard was one Who shadowed out the stages of all life,
 And so thou badest me tell this my first stage ;—
 'Tis done ; and even now I feel all dim the shift
 Of thought. These are my last thoughts ; I discern Faintly immortal life, and truth, and
   good.
 And why thou must be mine is, that e'en
   now,
 In the dim hush of night—that I have
   done—
 With fears and sad forebodings : I look thro'
 And say, 'E'en at the last I have her
   still,
 With her delicious eyes as clear as
   heaven,
 When rain in a quick shower has beat down mist,
 And clouds float white in the sun like broods of swans.'
 How the blood lies upon her cheek, all spread
 As thinned by kisses ; only in her lips

It wells and pulses like a living thing,
 And her neck looks, like marble misted
     o'er
 With love-breath, a dear thing to kiss and love, Standing beneath me—looking out to
     me,
 As I might kill her and be loved for it.

Love me—love me, Pauline, love nought but me ; Leave me not. All these words are wild and weak :
 Believe them not, Pauline. I stooped so low
 But to behold thee purer by my side,
 To show thou art my breath—my life—a last Resource—an extreme want: never
     believe Aught better could so look to thee, nor seek Again the world of good thoughts left
     for me.
 There were bright troops of undiscovered
     suns,
 Each equal in their radiant course.
     There were Clusters of far fair isles, which ocean kept
 For his own joy, and his waves broke on
     them Without a choice. And there was a dim crowd
 Of visions, each a part of the dim whole.
 And a star left his peers and came with peace
 Upon a storm, and all eyes pined for
     him.
 And one isle harboured a sea-beaten
     ship,
 And the crew wandered in its bowers, and plucked Its fruits, and gave up all their hopes for home.
 And one dream came to a pale poet's

And he said, ' I am singled out by God, No sin must touch me.' I am very weak, But what I would express is,—Leave
     me not,
 Still sit by me—with beating breast, and hair

Loosened—watching earnest by my
     side,
 Turning my books, or kissing me when I Look up—like summer wind. Be still
     to me
 A key to music's mystery, when mind
     fails,
 A reason, a solution, and a clue.
 You see I have thrown off my prescribed rules :
 I hope in myself—and hope, and pant,
     and love—
 You'll find me better—know me more than when You loved me as I was. Smile not ;
     I have Much yet to gladden you—to dawn on
     you.

No more of the past—I'll look within no
     more—I have too trusted to my own wild wants—
 Too trusted to myself—to intuition, Draining the wine alone in the still
     night,
 And seeing how—as gathering films arose,
 As by an inspiration life seemed bare And grinning in its vanity, and ends Hard to be dreamed of, stared at me as fixed,
 And others suddenly became all foul, As a fair witch turned an old hag at
     night.
 No more of this—we will go hand in
     hand,
 I will go with thee, even as a child, Looking no further than thy sweet commands.
 And thou hast chosen where this life shall be—
 The land which gave me thee shall be our home, Where nature lies all wild amid her lakes
 And snow-swathed mountains, and vast pines all girt With ropes of snow—where nature lies all bare,
 Suffering none to view her but a race Most stunted and deformed—like the mute dwarfs

Which wait upon a naked Indian queen.
And there (the time being when the heavens are thick With storms) I'll sit with thee while thou dost sing

Thy native songs, gay as a desert bird
Who crieth as he flies for perfect joy,
Or telling me old stories of dead knights.
Or I will read old lays to thee—how
    she,

The fair pale sister, went to her chill
    grave

With power to love, and to be loved, and
    live.

Or we will go together, like twin gods
Of the infernal world, with scented lamp Over the dead—to call and to awake—
Over the unshaped images which lie Within my mind's cave—only leaving
    all

That tells of the past doubts. So when spring comes,

And sunshine comes again like an old
    smile,

And the fresh waters, and awakened birds,

And budding woods await us—I shall be Prepared, and we will go and think
    again,

And all old loves shall come to us—but changed

As some sweet thought which harsh words veiled before ;

Feeling God loves us, and that all that errs

Is a strange dream which death will dissipate ;

And then when I am firm we'll seek
    again

My own land, and again I will approach My old designs, and calmly look on all The works of my past weakness, as one views

Some scene where danger met him long
    before.

Ah ! that such pleasant life should be but dreamed !

But whate'er come of it—and tho' it
    fade,

And tho' ere the cold morning all be

As it will be ;—tho' music wait for me,

And fair eyes and bright wine, laughing like sin,

Which steals back softly on a soul half saved ;

And I be first to deny all, and despise This verse, and these intents which seem so fair :

Still this is all my own, this moment's
    pride,

No less I make an end in perfect joy.
E'en in my brightest time, a lurking
    fear

Possessed me. I well knew my weak resolves,

I felt the witchery that makes mind
    sleep

Over its treasures—as one half afraid
To make his riches definite—but now These feelings shall not utterly be lost, I shall not know again that nameless
    care,

Lest leaving all undone in youth, some new

And undreamed end reveal itself too
    late :

For this song shall remain to tell for ever, That when I lost all hope of such a change,

Suddenly Beauty rose on me again.
No less I make an end in perfect joy,
For I, having thus again been visited, Shall doubt not many another bliss
    awaits,

And tho' this weak soul sink, and darkness come,

Some little word shall light it up again,
And I shall see all clearer and love better ;
I shall again go o'er the tracts of thought,
As one who has a right ; and I shall live With poets—calmer—purer still each
    time,

And beauteous shapes will come to me
    again,

And unknown secrets will be trusted me,
Which were not mine when wavering—
    but now

I shall be priest and lover, as of old.

Sun-treader, I believe in God, and truth, And love ; and as one just escaped from
    death

Would bind himself in bands of friends to feel

Helivesindeed—so, I would lean on thee; Thou must be ever with me—most in gloom
 When such shall come—but chiefly when I die,
 For I seem dying, as one going in the dark
 To fight a giant—and live thou for ever,
 And be to all what thou hast been to me—

All in whom this wakes pleasant thoughts of me, Know my last state is happy—free from
 doubt,
 Or touch of fear. Love me and wish me well !

PARACELSUS

INSCRIBED TO AMÉDÉE DE RIPERT-MONCLAR, BY HIS AFFECTIONATE FRIEND

March 15th, 1835.

R.B.

PERSONS.

AUREOLUS PARACELSUS, a student.

FESTUS and MICHAL, his friends.

APRILE, an Italian poet.

I. PARACELSUS ASPIRES.

SCENE, Wurzburg; a garden in the environs. 1512.

FESTUS, PARACELSUS, MICHAL.

Par. Come close to me, dear friends; still closer; thus !

Close to the heart which, though long time roll by

Ere it again beat quicker, pressed to
 yours,

As now it beats—perchance a long, long
 time—

At least henceforth your memories shall make

Quiet and fragrant as befits their home.
 Nor shall my memory want a home in
 yours—

Alas, that it requires too well such free Forgiving love as shall embalm it there !
 For if you would remember me aright,
 As I was born to be, you must forget All fitful, strange and moody wayward-
 ness

Which e'er confused my better spirit, to dwell

Only on moments such as these, dear
 friends !

—My heart no truer, but my words and
 ways

More true to it: as Michal, some months
 hence,

Will say, 'this autumn was a pleasant
 time,'

For some few sunny days; and overlook

Its bleak wind, hankering after pining
 leaves.

Autumn would fain be sunny; I would
 look

Liker my nature's truth: and both are frail,

And both beloved, for all their frailty.

Mich. Aureole !

Par. Drop by drop ! she is weeping
 like a child !

Not so ! I am content—more than content;

Nay, autumn wins you best by this its mute

Appeal to sympathy for its decay: Look up, sweet Michal, nor esteem the
 less

Your stained and drooping vines their grapes bow down, Nor blame those creaking trees bent with their fruit,
 That apple-tree with a rare after-birth Of peeping blooms sprinkled its wealth among !
 Then for the winds—what wind that ever raved Shall vex that ash which overlooks you
     both,
 So proud it wears its berries ? Ah, at
     length,
 The old smile meet for her, the lady of
     this Sequestered nest !—this kingdom, limited
 Alone by one old populous green wall Tenanted by the ever-busy flies, Grey crickets and shy lizards and quick spiders,
 Each family of the silver-threaded moss—
 Which, look through near, this way, and it appears
 A stubble-field or a cane-brake, a marsh Of bulrush whitening in the sun : laugh
     now !
 Fancy the crickets, each one in his house,
 Looking out, wondering at the world—or best,
 Yon painted snail with his gay shell of
     dew,
 Travelling to see the glossy balls high up Hung by the caterpillar, like gold lamps.
Mich. In truth we have lived carelessly and well.
Par. And shall, my perfect pair !— each, trust me, born For the other ; nay, your very hair, when mixed,
 Is of one hue. For where save in this nook Shall you two walk, when I am far
     away,
 And wish me prosperous fortune ? Stay :
     that plant Shall never wave its tangles lightly and softly,
 As a queen's languid and imperial arm Which scatters crowns among her lovers,
     but you

Shall be reminded to predict to me Some great success ! Ah, see, the sun sinks broad Behind Saint Saviour's : wholly gone,
     at last !
Fest. Now, Aureole, stay those wandering eyes awhile !
 You are ours to-night at least ; and while you spoke
 Of Michal and her tears, I thought that none
 Could willing leave what he so seemed to love :
 But that last look destroys my dream—that look
 As if, where'er you gazed, there stood a star !
 How far was Würzburg with its church and spire
 And garden-walls and all things they contain,
 From that look's far alighting ?
Par. I but spoke
 And looked alike from simple joy to see The beings I love best, shut in so well From all rude chances like to be my lot,
 That, when afar, my weary spirit,— disposed To lose awhile its care in soothing
     thoughts
 Of them, their pleasant features, looks and words,— Needs never hesitate, nor apprehend Encroaching trouble may have reached them too,
 Nor have recourse to fancy's busy aid
 And fashion even a wish in their behalf Beyond what they possess already here ;
 But, unobstructed, may at once forget Itself in them, assured how well they fare.
 Beside, this Festus knows he holds me
     one Whom quiet and its charms arrest in
     vain,
 One scarce aware of all the joys I quit, Too filled with airy hopes to make account
 Of soft delights his own heart garners
     up :
 Whereas, behold how much our sense
     of all

That's beauteous proves alike ! When Festus learns That every common pleasure of the world Affects me as himself ; that I have just As varied appetite for joy derived From common things ; a stake in life, in short,
 Like his ; a stake which rash pursuit of aims That life affords not, would as soon destroy ;—
 He may convince himself that, this in
 view,
 I shall act well advised. And last,
 because,
 Though heaven and earth and all things were at stake, Sweet Michal must not weep, our parting eve.
Fest. True: and the eve is deepening, and we sit
 As little anxious to begin our talk
 As though to-morrow I could hint of it As we paced arm-in-arm the cheerful town
 At sun-dawn ; or could whisper it by fits (Trithemius busied with his class the while)
 In that dim chamber where the noon-streaks peer Half frightened by the awful tomes
 around ;
 Or in some grassy lane unbosom all From even-blush to midnight : but, tomorrow !
 Have I full leave to tell my inmost
 mind ?
 We have been brothers, and henceforth
 the world
 Will rise between us :—all my freest
 mind ?
 'Tis the last night, dear Aureole !
Par. Oh, say on !
 Devise some test of love, some arduous feat
 To be performed for you : say on ! If
 night
 Be spent the while, the better ! Recall how oft My wondrous plans and dreams and hopes and fears

Have—never wearied you, oh, no !—as I Recall, and never vividly as now, Your true affection, born when Einsiedeln
 And its green hills were all the world to
 us ;
 And still increasing to this night which ends
 My further stay at Würzburg. Oh, one
 day
 You shall be very proud ! Say on, dear
 friends !
Fest. In truth ? 'Tis for my proper peace, indeed, Rather than yours ; for vain all projects seem To stay your course : I said my latest
 hope Is fading even now. A story tells Of some far embassy dispatched to win The favour of an eastern king, and
 how
 The gifts they offered proved but dazzling dust Shed from the ore-beds native to his clime.
 Just so, the value of repose and love,
 I meant should tempt you, better far
 than I You seem to comprehend ; and yet desist
 No whit from projects where repose nor
 love
 Have part.
Par. Once more ? Alas ! as I forebode.
Fest. A solitary briar the bank puts
 forth
 To save our swan's nest floating out to sea.
Par. Dear Festus, hear me. What is it you wish ?
 That I should lay aside my heart's pursuit,
 Abandon the sole ends for which I live, Reject God's great commission, and so
 die !
 You bid me listen for your true love's
 sake :
 Yet how has grown that love ? Even in a long
 And patient cherishing of the selfsame
 spirit

It now would quell ; as though a mother hoped
 To stay the lusty manhood of the child Once weak upon her knees. I was not born Informed and fearless from the first, but shrank From aught which marked me out apart from men :
 I would have lived their life, and died their death,
 Lost in their ranks, eluding destiny :
 But you first guided me through doubt
     and fear,
 Taught me to know mankind and know
     myself ;
 And now that I am strong and full of
     hope,
 That, from my soul, I can reject all aims Save those your earnest words made plain to me,
 Now that I touch the brink of my design,
 When I would have a triumph in their
     eyes,
 A glad cheer in their voices—Michal weeps,
 And Festus ponders gravely !
Fest.                      When you deign To hear my purpose . . .
Par.                      Hear it ? I can say Beforehand all this evening's conference !
 'Tis this way, Michal, that he uses :
     first,
 Or he declares, or I, the leading points Of our best scheme of life, what is man's
     end,
 And what God's will ; no two faiths e'er agreed
 As his with mine. Next, each of us allows Faith should be acted on as best we may ; Accordingly, I venture to submit My plan, in lack of better, for pursuing The path which God's will seems to authorize :
 Well, he discerns much good in it, avows
 This motive worthy, that hope plausible, A danger here to be avoided, there An oversight to be repaired : in fine
 Our two minds go together—all the good Approved by him, I gladly recognize,
 All he counts bad, I thankfully discard, And nought forbids my looking up at
     last
 For some stray comfort in his cautious
     brow.
 When, lo ! I learn that, spite of all,
     there lurks
 Some innate and inexplicable germ Of failure in my scheme ; so that at last It all amounts to this—the sovereign
     proof
 That we devote ourselves to God, is seen
 In living just as though no God there
     were ;
 A life which, prompted by the sad and blind
 Folly of man, Festus abhors the most ;
 But which these tenets sanctify at once, Though to less subtle wits it seems the
     same,
 Consider it how they may.
Mich.                      Is it so, Festus ?
 He speaks so calmly and kindly : is it
     so ?
Par. Reject those glorious visions of God's love
 And man's design ; laugh loud that God should send Vast longings to direct us ; say how soon Power satiates these, or lust or gold ;
     I know
 The world's cry well, and how to answer
     it !
 But this ambiguous warfare . . .
Fest.                      . . . Wearies so That you will grant no last leave to your
     friend
 To urge it ?—for his sake, not yours ? I wish
 To send my soul in good hopes after you ; Never to sorrow that uncertain words Erringly apprehended, a new creed Ill understood, begot rash trust in you,
 Had share in your undoing.
Par.                      Choose your side, Hold or renounce : but meanwhile blame me not Because I dare to act on your own views, Nor shrink when they point onward, nor espy
 A peril where they most ensure success.
Fest. Prove that to me—but that !
     Prove, you abide

Within their warrant, nor presumptuous boast God's labour laid on you ; prove, all you covet
 A mortal may expect ; and, most of all, Prove the strange course you now affect, will lead
 To its attainment—and I bid you speed, Nay, count the minutes till you venture
     forth !
 You smile ; but I had gathered from slow thought—Much musing on the fortunes of my friend—
 Matter I deemed could not be urged in
     vain ;
 But it all leaves me at my need : in shreds
 And fragments I must venture what
     remains.
Mich. Ask at once, Festus, wherefore he should scorn . . .
Fest. Stay, Michal : Aureole, I speak guardedly
 And gravely, knowing well, whate'er your error,
 This is no ill-considered choice of yours,
 No sudden fancy of an ardent boy.
 Not from your own confiding words alone Am I aware your passionate heart long
     since Gave birth to, nourished, and at length matures
 This scheme, I will not speak of Einsiedeln, Where I was born your elder by some
     years
 Only to watch you fully from the first :
 In all beside, our mutual tasks were fixed Even then—'twas mine to have you in my view
 As you had your own soul and those intentions Which filled it when, to crown your dearest wish,
 With a tumultuous heart, you left with
     me
 Our childhood's home to join the favoured few Whom, here, Trithemius condescends to teach A portion of his lore : and not one youth Of those so favoured, whom you now
     despise,
 Came earnest as you came, resolved, like
     you,
 To grasp all, and retain all, and deserve By patient toil a wide renown like
     his.
 Now, this new ardour which supplants the old,
 I watched, too ; 'twas significant and
     strange,
 In one matched to his soul's content at
     length
 With rivals in the search for wisdom's
     prize,
 To see the sudden pause, the total
     change ;
 From contest, the transition to repose—From pressing onward as his fellows pressed,
 To a blank idleness, yet most unlike The dull stagnation of a soul, content, Once foiled, to leave betimes a thriveless
     quest.
 That careless bearing, free from all pretence
 Even of contempt for what it ceased to Smiling humility, praising much, yet waiving
 What it professed to praise—though not so well Maintained but that rare outbreaks, fierce and brief,
 Revealed the hidden scorn, as quickly
     curbed.
 That ostentatious show of past defeat,
 That ready acquiescence in contempt,
 I deemed no other than the letting go His shivered sword, of one about to spring
 Upon his foe's throat ; but it was not
     thus :
 Not that way looked your brooding purpose then.
 For after-signs disclosed, what you confirmed,
 That you prepared to task to the utter-most Your strength, in furtherance of a certain aim Which—while it bore the name your rivals gave

Their own most puny efforts—was so vast In scope that it included their best flights, Combined them, and desired to gain one prize In place of many,—the secret of the world, Of man, and man's true purpose, path, and fate.
 —That you, not nursing as a mere vague dream This purpose, with the sages of the Past, Have struck upon a way to this, if all You trust be true, which following, heart and soul,
 You, if a man may, dare aspire to know:
 And that this aim shall differ from a host Of aims alike in character and kind, Mostly in this,—that in itself alone,
 Shall its reward be, not an alien end Blending therewith; no hope, nor fear, nor joy, Nor woe, to elsewhere move you, but this pure Devotion to sustain you or betray:
 Thus you aspire.
Par. You shall not state it thus:
 I should not differ from the dreamy crew You speak of. I profess no other share In the selection of my lot, than this My ready answer to the will of God Who summons me to be His organ. All Whose innate strength supports them shall succeed
 No better than your sages.
Fest. Such the aim, then, God sets before you; and 'tis doubtless need That He appoint no less the way of
 praise
 Than the desire to praise; for, though I hold
 With you, the setting forth such praise to be
 The natural end and service of a man, And hold such praise is best attained when man
 Attains the general welfare of his kind—Yet, this, the end, is not the instrument.
 Presume not to serve God apart from such

Appointed channel as He wills shall gather Imperfect tributes, for that sole obedience
 Valued, perchance. He seeks not that His altars Blaze, careless how, so that they do but blaze.
 Suppose this, then; that God selected
 you
 To know (heed well your answers, for my faith Shall meet implicitly what they affirm) I cannot think you dare annex to such Selection aught beyond a steadfast will,
 An intense hope; nor let your gifts create Scorn or neglect of ordinary means Conducive to success, make destiny Dispense with man's endeavour. Now, dare you search Your inmost heart, and candidly avow Whether you have not rather wild desire For this distinction, than security Of its existence? whether you discern The path to the fulfilment of your purpose Clear as that purpose—and again, that purpose
 Clear as your yearning to be singled out For its pursuer. Dare you answer this?
Par. [After a pause.] No, I have nought to fear! Who will may know The secret'st workings of my soul.
 What though
 It be so?—if indeed the strong desire Eclipse the aim in me?—if splendour
 break
 Upon the outset of my path alone, And duskest shade succeed? What fairer seal Shall I require to my authentic mission Than this fierce energy?—this instinct striving Because its nature is to strive?—enticed
 By the security of no broad course, Without success forever in its eyes!
 How know I else such glorious fate my
 own,
 But in the restless irresistible force That works within me? Is it for human
 will
 To institute such impulses?—still less,

To disregard their promptings ? What should I Do, kept among you all ; your loves, your cares,
 Your life—all to be mine ? Be sure that
     God Ne'er dooms to waste the strength He deigns impart !
 Ask the gier-eagle why she stoops at
     once
 Into the vast and unexplored abyss, What full-grown power informs her from the first,
 Why she not marvels, strenuously beating
 The silent boundless regions of the sky !
 Be sure they sleep not whom God needs !
     Nor fear Their holding light His charge, when every hour
 That finds that charge delayed, is a new
     death.
 This for the faith in which I trust ; and hence
 I can abjure so well the idle arts
 These pedants strive to learn and teach ;
     Black Arts, Great Works, the Secret and Sublime,
     forsooth—
 Let others prize : too intimate a tie Connects me with our God ! A sullen fiend
 To do my bidding, fallen and hateful sprites
 To help me—what are these, at best,
     beside
 God helping, God directing everywhere, So that the earth shall yield her secrets
     up,
 And every object there be charged to strike,
 Teach, gratify her master God appoints?
 And I am young, my Festus, happy and
     free !
 I can devote myself ; I have a life
 To give ; I, singled out for this, the One !
 Think, think ; the wide East, where all Wisdom sprung ;
 The bright South, where she dwelt ; the hopeful North,
 All are passed o'er—it lights on me !
     'Tis time

New hopes should animate the world, new light Should dawn from new revealings to a race Weighed down so long, forgotten so long ; thus shall
 The heaven reserved for us, at last receive Creatures whom no unwonted splendours blind,
 But ardent to confront the unclouded blaze Whose beams not seldom blessed their pilgrimage,
 Not seldom glorified their life below.
     Fest. My words have their old fate and make faint stand Against your glowing periods. Call this, truth—
 Why not pursue it in a vast retreat,
 Some one of Learning's many palaces, After approved example ? — seeking
     there Calm converse with the great dead, soul to soul,
 Who laid up treasure with the like intent
 —So lift yourself into their airy place,
 And fill out full their unfulfilled careers, Unravelling the knots their baffled skill Pronounced inextricable, true !—but left Far less confused. A fresh eye, a fresh
     hand,
 Might do much at their vigour's waning-
     point ;
 Succeeding with new-breathed and un-tired force,
 As at old games a runner snatched the torch
 From runner still : this way success
     might be.
 But you have coupled with your enterprise,
 An arbitrary self-repugnant scheme Of seeking it in strange and untried paths.
 What books are in the desert ? writes
     the sea
 The secret of her yearning in vast caves Where yours will fall the first of human
     feet ?
 Has Wisdom sat there and recorded
     aught

You press to read ? Why turn aside from her
 To visit, where her vesture never glanced,
 Now—solitudes consigned to barrenness By God's decree, which who shall dare impugn ?
 Now—ruins where she paused but would not stay,
 Old ravaged cities that, renouncing her,
 She called an endless curse on, so it
 came :
 Or, worst of all, now—men you visit, men, Ignoblest troops that never heard her
 voice,
 Or hate it, men without one gift from Rome
 Or Athens, — these shall Aureole's teachers be !
 Rejecting past example, practice, precept, Aidless 'mid these he thinks to stand
 alone :
 Thick like a glory round the Stagirite Your rivals throng, the sages : here stand you !
 Whate'er you may protest, knowledge is not Paramount in your love ; or for her sake You would collect all help from every source—Rival, assistant, friend, foe, all would merge
 In the broad class of those who showed her haunts,
 And those who showed them not.
Par. What shall I say ?
 Festus, from childhood I have been possessed
 By a fire—by a true fire, or faint or fierce,
 As from without some master, so it
 seemed,
 Repressed or urged its current : this but ill Expresses what I would convey : but rather
 I will believe an angel ruled me thus,
 Than that my soul's own workings, own high nature,
 So became manifest. I knew not then What whispered in the evening, and spoke out

At midnight. If some mortal, born too
 soon,
 Were laid away in some great trance—the ages Coming and going all the while—till dawned
 His true time's advent ; and could then record
 The words they spoke who kept watch by his bed,— Then I might tell more of the breath so
 light
 Upon my eyelids, and the fingers warm Among my hair. Youth is confused ; yet never
 So dull was I but, when that spirit I turned to him, scarce consciously, as turns
 A water-snake when fairies cross his sleep.
 And having this within me and about
 me While Einsiedeln, its mountains, lakes and woods Confined me—what oppressive joy was
 mine
 When life grew plain, and I first viewed the thronged,
 The everlasting concourse of mankind !
 Believe that ere I joined them, ere I
 knew
 The purpose of the pageant, or the place Consigned me in its ranks—while, just awake,
 Wonder was freshest and delight most pure—
 'Twas then that least supportable appeared Astation with the brightest of the crowd,
 A portion with the proudest of them all.
 And from the tumult in my breast, this only Could I collect, that I must thenceforth
 die,
 Or elevate myself far, far above The gorgeous spectacle. I seemed to long
 At once to trample on, yet save mankind,
 To make some unexampled sacrifice In their behalf, to wring some wondrous
 good

From heaven or earth for them, to perish, winning Eternal weal in the act: as who should dare Pluck out the angry thunder from its cloud,
 That, all its gathered flame discharged
 on him,
 No storm might threaten summer's azure sleep:
 Yet never to be mixed with men so
 much
 As to have part even in my own work,
 share
 In my own largess. Once the feat achieved,
 I would withdraw from their officious
 praise,
 Would gently put aside their profuse
 thanks.
 Like some knight traversing a wilder-
 ness,
 Who, on his way, may chance to free a
 tribe
 Of desert-people from their dragon-foe; When all the swartly race press round to kiss
 His feet, and choose him for their king, and yield Their poor tents, pitched among the sand-hills, for His realm: and he points, smiling, to his scarf
 Heavy with riveled gold, his burgonet Gay set with twinkling stones—and to the East,
 Where these must be displayed!
Fest. Good: let us hear No more about your nature, 'which first shrank
 From all that marked you out apart from men!'

Par. I touch on that; these words but analyse
 The first mad impulse: 'twas as brief as fond,
 For as I gazed again upon the show,
 I soon distinguished here and there a Palm-wreathed and radiant, forehead and full eye.
 Well pleased was I their state should thus at once

Interpret my own thoughts:—'Behold the clue
 To all,' I rashly said, 'and what I pine To do, these have accomplished: we are peers.
 They know, and therefore rule: I, too, will know!'

You were beside me, Festus, as you
 say;
 You saw me plunge in their pursuits whom fame
 Is lavish to attest the lords of mind; Not pausing to make sure the prize in view
 Would satiate my cravings when obtained, But since they strove I strove. Then came a slow
 And strangling failure. We aspired alike,
 Yet not the meanest plodder, Tritheim counts
 A marvel, but was all-sufficient, strong Or staggered only at his own vast wits;
 While I was restless, nothing satisfied, Distrustful, most perplexed. I would slur over That struggle; suffice it, that I loathed
 myself
 As weak compared with them, yet felt somehow A mighty power was brooding, taking shape Within me; and this lasted till one
 night
 When, as I sat revolving it and more,
 A still voice from without said—'Seest
 thou not,
 Desponding child, whence spring defeat and loss?
 Even from thy strength. Consider:
 hast thou gazed Presumptuously on Wisdom's countenance,
 No veil between; and can thy faltering
 hands Unguided by thy brain the sight absorbs
 Pursue their task as earnest blinkers do Whom radiance ne'er distracted? Live their life
 If thou wouldst share their fortune, choose their eyes

Unfed by splendour. Let each task present Its petty good to thee. Waste not thy gifts
 In profitless waiting for the gods' descent,
 But have some idol of thine own to dress With their array. Know, not for knowing's sake,
 But to become a star to men for ever.
 Know, for the gain it gets, the praise it brings,
 The wonder it inspires, the love it breeds.
 Look one step onward, and secure that
     step.
 And I smiled as one never smiles but
     once;
 Then first discovering my own aim's extent,
 Which sought to comprehend the works
     of God,
 And God himself, and all God's inter-
     course
 With the human mind; I understood,
     no less,
 My fellows' studies, whose true worth
     I saw,
 But smiled not, well aware Who stood by me.
 And softer came the voice—'There is a
     way:
 'Tis hard for flesh to tread therein, imbued
 With frailty—hopeless, if indulgence
     first Have ripened inborn germs of sin to
     strength: Wilt thou adventure for my sake and man's, Apart from all reward?' And last it breathed—
 'Be happy, my good soldier; I am by
     thee,
 Be sure, even to the end!'—I answered
     not, Knowing Him. As he spoke, I was endued
 With comprehension and a steadfast will;
 And when He ceased, my brow was sealed His own.
 If there took place no special change in
     me, How comes it all things wore a different hue Thenceforward?—pregnant with vast consequence, Teeming with grand results, loaded with
     fate?
 So that when quailing at the mighty range
 Of secret truths which yearn for birth, To contemplate undazzled some one
     truth,
 Its bearings and effects alone—at once
 What was a speck expands into a star, Asking a life to pass exploring thus,
 Till I near craze. I go to prove my soul!
 I see my way as birds their trackless way.
 I shall arrive! what time, what circuit
     first,
 I ask not: but unless God send His hail Or blinding fire-balls, sleet or stifling
     snow,
 In some time, His good time, I shall
     arrive:
 He guides me and the bird. In His good time!
Mich. Vex him no further, Festus;
     it is so!
Fest. Just thus you help me ever.
     This would hold
 Were it the trackless air, and not a path Inviting you, distinct with footprints
     yet
 Of many a mighty marcher gone that
     way.
 You may have purer views than theirs,
     perhaps,
 But they were famous in their day—the proofs Remain. At least accept the light they lend.
Par. Their light! the sum of all is briefly this;
 They laboured and grew famous, and the fruits
 Are best seen in a dark and groaning
     earth
 Given over to a blind and endless
     strife
 With evils, what of all their lore abates?
 No; I reject and spurn them utterly And all they teach. Shall I still sit
     beside

Their dry wells, with a white lip and filmed eye,
 While in the distance heaven is blue
 above Mountains where sleep the unsunned tarns ?

Fest. And yet As strong delusions have prevailed ere
 now.

Men have set out as gallantly to seek Their ruin. I have heard of such :
 yourself

Avow all hitherto have failed and fallen.

Mich. Nay, Festus, when but as the pilgrims faint Through the drear way, do you expect to see

Their city dawn amid the clouds afar ?

Par. Ay, sounds it not like some old well-known tale ?

For me, I estimate their works and them So rightly, that at times I almost dream
 I too have spent a life the sages' way,
 And tread once more familiar paths.
 Perchance

I perished in an arrogant-self-reliance Ages ago ; and in that act, a prayer For one more chance went up so earnest,
 so

Instinct with better light let in by death, That life was blotted out—not so completely

But scattered wrecks enough of it remain,

Dim memories, as now, when seems once
 more

The goal in sight again. All which,
 indeed,

Is foolish, and only means—the flesh I
 wear,

The earth I tread, are not more clear to
 me

Than my belief, explained to you or no.

Fest. And who am I, to challenge and dispute

That clear belief ? I will divest all
 fear.

Mich. Then Aureole is God's commissary ! he shall

Be great and grand—and all for us !

Par. No, Sweet !
 Not great and grand. If I can serve
 mankind

'Tis well ; but there our intercourse must end :

I never will be served by those I serve.

Fest. Look well to this ; here is a plague-spot, here,

Disguise it how you may ! 'Tis true, you utter

This scorn while by our side and loving
 us ;

'Tis but a spot as yet : but it will break Into a hideous blotch if overlooked.

How can that course be safe which from the first

Produces carelessness to human love ?
 It seems you have abjured the helps which men Who overpass their kind, as you would

do,
 Have humbly sought ; I dare not thoroughly probe

This matter, lest I learn too much. Let
 be,

That popular praise would little instigate Your efforts, nor particular approval

Reward you ; put reward aside ; alone You shall go forth upon your arduous task, None shall assist you, none partake your

toil,
 None share your triumph : still you must retain

 Some one to cast your glory on, to share

Your rapture with. Were I elect like
 you,

I would encircle me with love, and raise A rampart of my fellows ; it should seem Impossible for me to fail, so watched By gentle friends who made my cause their own.

 They should ward off fate's envy—the great gift, Extravagant when claimed by me alone,

Being so a gift to them as well as me.
 If danger daunted me or ease seduced,

How calmly their sad eyes should gaze reproach !

Mich. O Aureole, can I sing when all
 alone,

Without first calling, in my fancy, both To listen by my side—even I ! And

you ?
 Do you not feel this ? Say that you feel

this !

 And this the cause—I can no longer No slow defeat, but a complete success :

You will find all you seek, and perish so!

Par. [after a pause.] Are these the barren firstfruits of my quest?

Is love like this the natural lot of all?

How many years of pain might one such hour

O'erbalance? Dearest Michal, dearest Festus,

What shall I say, if not that I desire To justify your love; and will, dear friends,

In swerving nothing from my first resolves.

See, the great moon! and ere the mottled owls

Were wide awake, I was to go. It seems

You acquiesce at last in all save this— If I am like to compass what I seek

By the untried career I choose; and then.

If that career, making but small account Of much of life's delight, will yet retain

Sufficient to sustain my soul—for thus I understand these fond fears just expressed.

And first; the lore you praise and I neglect,

The labours and the precepts of old time, I have not lightly disesteemed. But, friends,

Truth is within ourselves; it takes no rise

From outward things, whate'er you may believe.

There is an inmost centre in us all, Where truth abides in fulness; and around

Wall upon wall, the gross flesh hems it in, This perfect, clear perception—which is truth.

A baffling and perverting carnal mesh Blinds it, and makes all error: and, 'to know'

Rather consists in opening out a way Whence the imprisoned splendour may escape,

Than in effecting entry for a light Supposed to be without. Watch narrowly

The demonstration of a truth, its birth, And you trace back the effluence to its spring

And source within us; where broods radiance vast,

To be elicited ray by ray, as chance Shall favour: chance—for hitherto, your sage Even as he knows not how those beams are born, As little knows he what unlocks their fount.

And men have oft grown old among their books

To die, case-hardened in their ignorance, Whose careless youth had promised what long years Of unremitted labour ne'er performed:

While, contrary, it has chanced some idle day

To autumn loiterers just as fancy-free As the midges in the sun, gives birth at last

To truth—produced mysteriously as cape

Of cloud grown out of the invisible air.

Hence, may not truth be lodged alike in all,

The lowest as the highest? some slight film

The interposing bar which binds a soul And makes the idiot, just as makes the sage

Some film removed, the happy outlet whence Truth issues proudly? See this soul of ours!

How it strives weakly in the child, is loosed

In manhood, clogged by sickness, back compelled

By age and waste, set free at last by death:

Why is it, flesh enthrals it or enthrones? What is this flesh we have to penetrate?

Oh, not alone when life flows still, do truth

And power emerge, but also when strange chance

Ruffles its current; in unused conjunction,

When sickness breaks the body—hunger, watching,

Excess, or languor—oftenest death's approach,

Peril, deep joy, or woe. One man shall crawl Through life, surrounded with all stirring things, Unmoved—and he goes mad; and from the wreck
 Of what he was, by his wild talk alone, You first collect how great a spirit he hid.
 Therefore, set free the soul alike in all, Discovering the true laws by which the flesh Accloys the spirit! We may not be doomed
 To cope with seraphs, but at least the
 rest Shall cope with us. Make no more giants, God,
 But elevate the race at once! We ask To put forth just our strength, our human strength,
 All starting fairly, all equipped alike, Gifted alike, all eagle-eyed, true-hearted—
 See if we cannot beat the angels yet!
 Such is my task. I go to gather this The sacred knowledge, here and there dispersed
 About the world, long lost or never
 found.
 And why should I be sad, or lorn of
 hope?
 Why ever make man's good distinct from God's?
 Or, finding they are one, why dare
 mistrust?
 Who shall succeed if not one pledged
 like me?
 Mine is no mad attempt to build a world Apart from His, like those who set themselves
 To find the nature of the spirit they bore,
 And, taught betimes that all their gorgeous dreams
 Were only born to vanish in this life, Refused to fit them to its narrow
 sphere,
 But chose to figure forth another world And other frames meet for their vast desires,—
 And all a dream! Thus was life scorned; but life

Shall yet be crowned: twine amaranth!
 I am priest!
 And all for yielding with a lively spirit
 A poor existence, parting with a youth Like theirs who squander every energy Convertible to good, on painted toys, Breath-bubbles, gilded dust! And though I spurn
 All adventitious aims, from empty
 praise
 To love's award, yet whoso deems such helps Important, and concerns himself for
 me,
 May know even these will follow with
 the rest—
 As in the steady rolling Mayne, asleep Yonder, is mixed its mass of schistous ore.
 My own affections, laid to rest awhile,
 Will waken purified, subdued alone By all I have achieved. Till then—till
 then . . .
 Ah! the time-wiling loitering of a page Through bower and over lawn, till eve shall bring
 The stately lady's presence whom he loves—
 The broken sleep of the fisher whose rough coat Enwraps the queenly pearl—these are faint types!
 See, see they look on me: I triumph
 now!
 But one thing, Festus, Michal! I have told
 All I shall e'er disclose to mortal: say—Do you believe I shall accomplish this?
Fest. I do believe!
Mich. I ever did believe!
Par. Those words shall never fade from out my brain!
 This earnest of the end shall never fade!
 Are there not, Festus, are there not,
 dear Michal,
 Two points in the adventure of the diver:
 One—when, a beggar, he prepares to plunge,
 One—when, a prince, he rises with his pearl?
 Festus, I plunge!
Fest. We wait you when you rise!

II. PARACELSUS ATTAINS.

SCENE, Constantinople; the House of a Greek conjurer. 1521.

PARACELSUS.

Over the waters in the vaporous West
The sun goes down as in a sphere of gold Behind the arm of the city, which between,

With all that length of domes and minarets,

Athwart the splendour, black and crooked runs

Like a Turk verse along a scimitar.

There lie, sullen memorial, and no more Possess my aching sight. 'Tis done at
last!

Strange—and the juggles of a fallow
cheat

Have won me to this act! 'Tis as yon
cloud

Should voyage unwreck'd o'er many a mountain-top

And break upon a molehill. I have dared

Come to a pause with knowledge; scan for once

The heights already reached, without regard

To the extent above; fairly compute All I have clearly gained; for once excluding

A brilliant future to supply and perfect All half-gains and conjectures and crude hopes—

And all, because a fortune-teller wills His credulous seekers should inscribe thus much,

Their previous life's attainment, in his roll,

Before his promised secret, as he vaunts, Make up the sum: and here, amid the scrawled

Uncouth recordings of the dupes of this Old arch-genethliac, lie my life's results!

A few blurred characters suffice to note A stranger wandered long through many lands

And reaped the fruit he coveted in a few Discoveries, as appended here and there,

The fragmentary produce of much toil,
In a dim heap, fact and surmise together

Confusedly massed as when acquired;
he was

Intent on gain to come too much to stay And scrutinize the little gained: the whole

Slit in the blank space 'twixt an idiot's gibber

And a mad lover's ditty—there it lies.

And yet those blottings chronicle a life—A whole life,—and my life! Nothing to
do,

No problem for the fancy, but a life Spent and decided, wasted past retrieve Or worthy beyond peer. Stay, what does this

Remembrancer set down concerning
'life'?

"Time fleets, youth fades, life is an empty dream."

It is the echo of time; and he whose
heart

Beat first beneath a human heart, whose
speech

Was copied from a human tongue, can never

Recall when he was living yet knew not
this.

Nevertheless long seasons pass o'er him Till some one hour's experience shows what nothing,

It seemed, could clearer show; and ever after,

An altered brow and eye and gait and
speech

Attest that now he knows the adage
true

"Time fleets, youth fades, life is an empty dream."

Ay, my brave chronicler, and this same hour

As well as any: now, let my time be!

Now! I can go no farther; well or ill,
'Tis done. I must desist and take my chance.

I cannot keep on the stretch; 'tis no back-shrinking—

For let but some assurance beam, some close

To my toil grow visible, and I proceed At any price, though closing it, I die.

Else, here I pause. The old Greek's prophecy
 Is like to turn out true: 'I shall not quit
 His chamber till I know what I desire!'
 Was it the light wind sang it o'er the sea?
 An end, a rest! strange how the notion,
 once Encountered, gathers strength by moments! Rest!
 Where has it kept so long? this throbbing brow
 To cease, this beating heart to cease, all cruel And gnawing thoughts to cease! To dare let down My strung, so high-strung brain, to dare unnerve
 My harassed o'ertasked frame, to know my place!
 My portion, my reward, even my failure, Assigned, made sure for ever! To lose
 myself
 Among the common creatures of the
 world,
 To draw some gain from having been
 a man,
 Neither to hope nor fear, to live at
 length!
 Even in failure, rest! But rest in truth And power and recompense . . . I hoped that once!

What, sunk insensibly so deep? Has all Been undergone for this? This the request
 My labour qualified me to present With no fear of refusal? Had I gone Slighting through my task, and so judged fit
 To moderate my hopes; nay, were it
 now
 My sole concern to exculpate myself, End things or mend them,—why, I could not choose A humbler mood to wait for the event!
 No, no, there needs not this; no, after
 all,
 At worst I have performed my share of the task;
 The rest is God's concern; mine, merely this,
 To know that I have obstinately held

By my own work. The mortal whose brave foot Has trod, unscathed, the temple-courts so far That he deserves at length the shrine of shrines,
 Must let no sneering of the demons' eyes, Whom he could pass unquailing, fasten
 now Upon him, fairly past their power; no,
 no—
 He must not stagger, faint, fall down at
 last,
 Having a charm to baffle them; behold, He bares his front: a mortal ventures
 thus Serene amid the echoes, beams and glooms!
 If he be priest henceforth, if he wake up The god of the place to ban and blast him there, Both well! What's failure or success to
 me?
 I have subdued my life to the one purpose Whereto I ordained it; there alone I spy,
 No doubt, that way I may be satisfied.
 Yes, we'll have I subdued my life!
 beyond
 The obligation of my strictest vows,
 The contemplation of my wildest bond, Which gave my nature freely up, in
 truth,
 But in its actual state, consenting fully All passionate impulses its soil was formed
 To rear, should wither; but foreseeing
 not
 The tract, doomed to perpetual barren-
 ness,
 Would seem one day, remembered as it
 was,
 Beside the parched sand-waste which now it is,
 Already strewn with faint blooms, view-less then.
 I ne'er engaged to root up loves so frail
 I felt them not; yet now, 'tis very plain Some soft spots had their birth in me at
 first,
 If not love, say, like love: there was a time

When yet this wolfish hunger after knowledge
Set not remorselessly love's claims aside.
This heart was human once, or why recall Einsiedeln, now, and Würzburg, which the Mayne Forsakes her course to fold as with an arm ?

And Festus—my poor Festus, with his
praise
And counsel and grave fears—where is he now
With the sweet maiden, long ago his bride ?
I surely loved them—that last night, at
least,
When we . . . gone ! gone ! the better.
I am saved
The sad review of an ambitious youth Choked by vile lusts, unnoticed in their birth,
But let grow up and wind around a will Till action was destroyed. No, I have
gone
Purging my path successively of aught Wearing the distant likeness of such lusts.
I have made life consist of one idea : Ere that was master, up till that was
born,
I bear a memory of a pleasant life Whose small events I treasure ; till one morn
I ran o'er the seven little grassy fields, Startling the flocks of nameless birds, to
tell
Poor Festus, leaping all the while for joy,
To leave all trouble for my future plans, Since I had just determined to become The greatest and most glorious man on
earth.
And since that morn all life has been forgotten ;
All is one day, one only step between The outset and the end : one tyrant all-Absorbing aim fills up the interspace, One vast unbroken chain of thought, kept up Through a career apparently adverse To its existence : life, death, light and shadow,

The shows of the world, were bare receptacles
Or indices of truth to be wrung thence,
Not ministers of sorrow or delight : A wondrous natural robe in which she went.
For some one truth would dimly beacon
me From mountains rough with pines, and flit and wink O'er dazzling wastes of frozen snow, and tremble
Into assured light in some branching
mine Where ripens, swathed in fire, the liquid
gold—
And all the beauty, all the wonder fell On either side the truth, as its mere robe
I see the robe now—then I saw the form
So far, then, I have voyaged with success, So much is good, then, in this working
sea
Which parts me from that happy strip of land :
But o'er that happy strip a sun shone,
too !
And fainter gleams it as the waves grow rough,
And still more faint as the sea widens ;
last
I sicken on a dead gulf streaked with light
From its own putrefying depths alone.
Then, God was pledged to take me by the hand ;
Now, any miserable juggle can bid My pride depart. All is alike at length : God may take pleasure in confounding
pride
By hiding secrets with the scorned and base—
I am here, in short : so little have I paused Throughout. I never glanced behind to
know
If I had kept my primal light from wane,
And thus insensibly am—what I am !
Oh, bitter ; very bitter !
And more bitter,
To fear a deeper curse, an inner ruin, Plague beneath plague, the last turning
the first

To light beside its darkness. Let me weep My youth and its brave hopes, all dead and gone, In tears which burn ! Would I were sure to win Some startling secret in their stead, a tincture Of force to flush old age with youth, or breed Gold, or imprison moonbeams till they change To opal shafts !—only that, hurling it Indignant back, I might convince myself My aims remained supreme and pure as ever !
 Even now, why not desire, for mankind's sake,
 That if I fail, some fault may be the cause,
 That, though I sink, another may succeed ?
 O God, the despicable heart of us !
 Shut out this hideous mockery from my heart !
 'Twas politic in you, Aureole, to reject Single rewards, and ask them in the lump ;
 At all events, once launched, to hold straight on :
 For now 'tis all or nothing. Mighty profit Your gains will bring if they stop short of such Full consummation ! As a man, you had A certain share of strength ; and that is gone Already in the getting these you boast.
 Do not they seem to laugh, as who should say—
 ' Great master, we are here indeed, dragged forth To light ; this hast thou done : be glad !
 Now, seek
 The strength to use which thou hast spent in getting !'
 And yet 'tis much, surely 'tis very much,
 Thus to have emptied youth of all its gifts,
 To feed a fire meant to hold out till morn Arrived with inexhaustible light ; and lo,

I have heaped up my last, and day dawns not !
 And I am left with grey hair, faded hands,
 And furrowed brow. Ha, have I, after all, Mistaken the wild nursling of my breast ?
 Knowledge it seemed, and Power, and Recompense !
 Was she who glided through my room of nights,
 Who laid my head on her soft knees and smoothed
 The damp locks,—whose sly soothings just began When my sick spirit craved repose awhile—God ! was I fighting Sleep off for Death's sake ?
 God ! Thou art Mind ! Unto the Master-Mind Mind should be precious. Spare my mind alone !
 All else I will endure ; if, as I stand Here, with my gains, Thy thunder smite me down, I bow me ; 'tis Thy will, Thy righteous will ;
 I o'erpass life's restrictions, and I die ;
 And if no trace of my career remain Save a thin corpse at pleasure of the wind
 In these bright chambers level with the air, See Thou to it ! But if my spirit fail, My once proud spirit forsake me at the last, Hast Thou done well by me ? So do not Thou !
 Crush not my mind, dear God, though I be crushed !
 Hold me before the frequency of Thy seraphs And say—'I crushed him, lest he should disturb My law. Men must not know their strength : behold, Weak and alone, how he had raised himself !'
 But if delusions trouble me, and Thou, Not seldom felt with rapture in Thy help

Throughout my toils and wanderings, dost intend

To work man's welfare through my weak endeavour,

To crown my mortal forehead with a beam From Thine own blinding crown, to smile, and guide

This puny hand, and let the work so wrought

Be styled my work,—hear me ! I covet
not

An influx of new power, an angel's soul : It were no marvel then—but I have reached

Thus far, a man ; let me conclude, a
man !

Give but one hour of my first energy,
Of that invincible faith, but only one !
That I may cover with an eagle-glance The truths I have, and spy some certain
way

To mould them, and completing them, possess !

Yet God is good : I started sure of that,
And why dispute it now ? I'll not believe

But some undoubted warning long ere
this

Had reached me : a fire-labourum was not deemed

Too much for the old founder of these walls.

Then, if my life has not been natural,
It has been monstrous : yet, till late,
my course

So ardently engrossed me, that delight,
A pausing and reflecting joy, 'tis plain, Could find no place in it. True, I am
worn ;

But who clothes summer, who is Life
itself ?

God, that created all things, can renew !
And then, though after-life to please me
now

Must have no likeness to the past, what hinders

Reward from springing out of toil, as changed

As bursts the flower from earth and root and stalk ?

What use were punishment, unless some
sin

Be first detected ? let me know that
first !

No man could ever offend as I have
done . . .

[A voice from within.]

I hear a voice, perchance I heard

Long ago, but all too low,

So that scarce a care it stirred

If the voice was real or no :

I heard it in my youth when first

The waters of my life outburst :

But now their stream ebbs faint, I hear

That voice, still low but fatal-clear—

As if all Poets, God ever meant Should save the world, and therefore lent

Great gifts to, but who, proud, refused To do His work, or lightly used Those gifts, or failed through weak
endeavour,

So, mourn cast off by Him for ever,—

As if these leaned in airy ring

To take me ; this the song they sing.

' Lost, lost ! yet come,

With our wan troop make thy home.

Come, come ! for we Will not breathe, so much as breathe Reproach to thee !

Knowing what thou sink'st beneath.

So sank we in those old years,

We who bid thee, come ! thou last

Who, living yet, hast life o'erpast,

And altogether we, thy peers,

Will pardon ask for thee, the last

Whose trial is done, whose lot is cast

With those who watch but work no
more,

Who gaze on life but live no more.

Yet we trusted thou shouldst speak

The message which our lips, too weak ;

Refused to utter,—shouldst redeem

Our fault : such trust, and all a dream !

Yet we chose thee a birthplace

Where the richness ran to flowers ;

Couldst not sing one song for grace ?

Not make one blossom man's and ours ?

Must one more recreant to his race

Die with unexerted powers,

And join us, leaving as he found

The world, he was to loosen, bound ?

Anguish ! ever and for ever ;

Still beginning, ending never !

Yet, lost and last one, come !
 How couldst understand, alas,
 What our pale ghosts strove to say,
 As their shades did glance and pass Before thee, night and day ?
 Thou wast blind as we were dumb :
 Once more, therefore, come, O come !
 How shall we clothe, how arm the spirit Who next shall thy post of life inherit—How guard him from thy speedy ruin ?
 Tell us of thy sad undoing Here, where we sit, ever pursuing Our weary task, ever renewing Sharp sorrow, far from God who gave Our powers, and man they could not save !'

APRILE enters.

Ha, ha ! our king that wouldst be, here
 at last ?

Art thou the Poet who shall save the
 world ?

Thy hand to mine. Stay, fix thine eyes on mine.

Thou wouldst be king ? Still fix thine eyes on mine !

Par. Ha, ha ! why crouchest not ?
 Am I not king ?

So torture is not wholly unavailing !
 Have my fierce spasms compelled thee from thy lair ?

Art thou the sage I only seemed to be, Myself of after-time, my very self

With sight a little clearer, strength more firm,

Who robes him in my robe and grasps my crown

For just a fault, a weakness, a neglect ?
 I scarcely trusted God with the surmise

That such might come, and thou didst hear the while !

Apr. Thine eyes are lustreless to mine;
 my hair

Is soft, nay silken soft : to talk with thee Flushes my cheek, and thou art ashypale.

Truly, thou hast laboured, hast withstood her lips,

The siren's ! Yes, 'tis like thou hast attained !

Tell me, dear master, wherefore now thou comest ?

I thought thy solemn songs would have their meed

In after-time ; that I should hear the
 earth

Exult in thee, and echo with thy praise, While I was laid forgotten in my grave.

Par. Ah, fiend, I know thee, I am not thy dupe !

Thou art ordained to follow in my track, Reaping my sowing, as I scorned to reap

The harvest sown by sages passed away.
 Thou art the sober searcher, cautious striver,

 As if, except through me, thou hadst searched or striven !

Ay, tell the world ! Degrade me, after
 all,

To an aspirant after fame, not truth—
 To all but envy of thy fate, be sure !

Apr. Nay, sing them to me ; I shall envy not :

Thou shalt be king ! Sing thou, and I will sit

Beside, and call deep silence for thy songs,

And worship thee, as I had ne'er been
 meant

To fill thy throne : but none shall ever
 know !

Sing to me ; for already thy wild eyes Unlock my heart-springs, as some crystal-shaft

Reveals by some chance blaze its parent fount

After long time : so thou reveal'st my
 soul.

All will flash forth at last, with thee to
 hear !

Par. (His secret ! I shall get his secret—fool !)

I am he that aspired to know : and thou ?

Apr. I would LOVE infinitely, and be loved !

Par. Poor slave ! I am thy king
 indeed.

Apr. Thou deem'st That—born a spirit, dowered even as thou,

Born for thy fate—because I could not curb

My yearnings to possess at once the full Enjoyment, but neglected all the means

Of realizing even the frailest joy, Gathering no fragments to appease my want,
 Yet nursing up that want till thus I die—Thou deem'st I cannot trace thy safe, sure march O'er perils that o'erwhelm me, triumph-
     ing, Neglecting nought below for aught
     above,
 Despising nothing and ensuring all—Nor that I could (my time to come again) Lead thus my spirit securely as thine
     own.
 Listen, and thou shalt see I know thee
     well.
 I would love infinitely . . . Ah, lost! lost!
     O ye who armed me at such cost,
     How shall I look on all of ye With your gifts even yet on me?
Par. (Ah, 'tis some moonstruck creature after all!
 Such fond fools as are like to haunt this den: They spread contagion, doubtless: yet he seemed To echo one foreboding of my heart So truly, that . . . no matter! How he stands
 With eve's last sunbeam staying on his hair
 Which turns to it, as if they were akin:
 And those clear smiling eyes of saddest
     blue Nearly set free, so far they rise above
 The painful fruitless striving of the brow And enforced knowledge of the lips, firm-
     set
 In slow despondency's eternal sigh!
 Has he, too, missed life's end, and learned the cause?)
 I charge thee, by thy fealty, be calm!
 Tell me what thou wouldst be, and what I am.
Apr. I would love infinitely, and be loved.
 First: I would carve in stone, or cast in brass,
 The forms of earth. No ancient hunter lifted
 Up to the gods by his renown, no nymph Supposed the sweet soul of a woodland
     tree

Or sapphirine spirit of a twilight star, Should be too hard for me; no shepherd-
     king
 Regal for his white locks; no youth who stands
 Silent and very calm amid the throng,
 His right hand ever hid beneath his robe Until the tyrant pass; no lawgiver, No swan-soft woman rubbed with lucid oils,
 Given by a god for love of her—too hard!
 Every passion sprung from man, conceived by man, Would I express and clothe it in its right
     form,
 Or blend with others struggling in one
     form,
 Or show expressed by an ungainly form.
 Oh, if you marvelled at some mighty spirit
 With a fit frame to execute its will—Even unconsciously to work its will—You should be moved no less beside some strong,
 Rare spirit, fettered to a stubborn body, Endeavouring to subdue it and inform
     it
 With its own splendour! All this I would
     do:
 And I would say, this done, 'His sprites created, God grants to each a sphere to be its
     world,
 Appointed with the various objects needed
 To satisfy its own peculiar wants;
 So, I create a world for these my shapes Fit to sustain their beauty and their
     strength!'
 And, at the word, I would contrive and paint
 Woods, valleys, rocks and plains, dells, sands and wastes, Lakes which, when morn breaks on their quivering bed, Blaze like a wyvern flying round the sun,
 And ocean-isles so small, the dog-fish tracking
 A dead whale, who should find them, would swim thrice Around them, and fare onward—all to hold

The offspring of my brain. Nor these
alone :

Bronze labyrinth, palace, pyramid and crypt,

Baths, galleries, courts, temples and terraces,

Marts, theatres and wharfs—all filled with men !

Men everywhere ! And this performed in turn,

When those who looked on, pined to hear the hopes

And fears and hates and loves which moved the crowd,

I would throw down the pencil as the chisel,

And I would speak ; no thought which ever stirred

A human breast should be untold ; all passions,

All soft emotions, from the turbulent stir

Within a heart fed with desires like mine,
To the last comfort shutting the tired lids

Of him who sleeps the sultry noon away Beneath the tent-tree by the wayside
well :

And this in language as the need should
be,

Now poured at once forth in a burning flow,

Now piled up in a grand array of words.
This done, to perfect and consummate
all,

Even as a luminous haze links star to
star,

I would supply all chasms with music, breathing

Mysterious motions of the soul, no way To be defined save in strange melodies.

Last, having thus revealed all I could
love,

Having received all love bestowed on it,
I would die : preserving so throughout my course

God full on me, as I was full on men :
He would approve my prayer, ' I have gone through

The loveliness of life ; create for me
If not for men, or take me to Thyself, Eternal, infinite Love !'

If thou hast ne'er

Conceived this mighty aim, this full desire,

Thou hast not passed my trial, and thou art

No king of mine.

Par. Ah me !

Apr. But thou art here !

Thou didst not gaze like me upon that
end

Till thine own powers for compassing the bliss

Were blind with glory ; nor grow mad to grasp

At once the prize long patient toil should
claim,

Nor spurn all granted short of that.
And I

Would do as thou, a second time : nay, listen !

Knowing ourselves, our world, our task so great,

Our time so brief, 'tis clear if we refuse

The means so limited, the tools so rude

To execute our purpose, life will fleet,
And we shall fade, and leave our task undone.

We will be wise in time : what though our work

Be fashioned in despite of their ill-
service,

Be crippled every way ? 'Twere little
praise

Did full resources wait on our goodwill At every turn. Let all be as it is.

Some say the earth is even so contrived

That tree and flower, a vesture gay, conceal

A bare and skeleton framework. Had we means

Answering to our mind ! But now I seem Wrecked on a savage isle : how rear thereon

My palace ? Branching palms the props shall be,

Fruit glossy mingling ; gems are for the East ;

Who heeds them ? I can pass them.
Serpents' scales,

And painted birds' down, furs and fishes' skins

Must help me ; and a little here and there

Is all I can aspire to : still my art Shall show its birth was in a gentler clime.

' Had I green jars of malachite, this way I'd range them : where those sea-shells glisten above,

Cressets should hang, by right : this way we set

The purple carpets, as these mats are laid,

Woven of fern and rush and blossoming flag.'

Or if, by fortune, some completer grace Be spared to me, some fragment, some slight sample.

Of the prouder workmanship my own home boasts,

Some trifle little headed there, but here
The place's one perfection—with what joy

Would I enshrine the relic, cheerfully Foregoing all the marvels out of reach !

Could I retain one strain of all the psalm Of the angels, one word of the fiat of
God,

To let my followers know what such things are !

I would adventure nobly for their sakes : When nights were still, and still, the moaning sea,

And far away I could descry the land Whence I departed, whither I return,

I would dispart the waves, and stand
once more

At home, and load my bark, and hasten
back,

And fling my gains to them, worthless or true—

' Friends,' I would say, ' I went far, far for them,

Past the high rocks the haunt of doves, the mounds

Of red earth from whose sides strange trees grow out,

Past tracts of milk-white minute blinding sand,

Till, by a mighty moon, I tremblingly Gathered these magic herbs, berry and bud,

In haste, not pausing to reject the weeds,
But happy plucking them at any price.

To me, who have seen them bloom in their own soil,

They are scarce lovely : plait and wear them, you !

And guess, from what they are, the springs that fed them,

The stars that sparkled o'er them, night by night,

The snakes that travelled far to sip their dew !'

Thus for my higher loves ; and thus even weakness

Would win me honour. But not these
alone

Should claim my care ; for common life, its wants

And ways, would I set forth in beauteous hues :

The lowest hind should not possess a
hope,

A fear, but I'd be by him, saying better Than he his own heart's language.

I would live
For ever in the thoughts I thus explored,

As a discoverer's memory is attached To all he finds ; they should be mine
henceforth,

Imbued with me, though free to all
before :

For clay, once cast into my soul's rich
mine

Should come up crusted o'er with gems.
Nor this

Would need a meaner spirit, than the
first ;

Nay, 'twould be but the selfsame spirit, clothed

In humbler guise, but still the selfsame
spirit :

As one spring wind unbinds the mountain snow

And comforts violets in their hermitage.
But, master, poet, who hast done all
this,

How didst thou 'scape the ruin whelming
me ?

Didst thou, when nerving thee to this attempt,

Ne'er range thy mind's extent, as some wide hall,

Dazzled by shapes that filled its length with light,

Shapes clustered there to rule thee, not obey,
 That will not wait thy summons, will not rise Singly, nor when thy practised eye and
     hand
 Can well transfer their loveliness, but crowd
 By thee for ever, bright to thy despair ?
 Didst thou ne'er gaze on each by turns, and ne'er Resolve to single out one, though the
     rest
 Should vanish, and to give that one, entire
 In beauty, to the world ; forgetting, so, Its peers, whose number baffles mortal
     power ?
 And, this determined, wast thou ne'er seduced
 By memories and regrets and passionate
     love,
 To glance once more farewell ? and did their eyes
 Fasten thee, brighter and more bright, until Thou couldst but stagger back unto their
     feet,
 And laugh that man's applause or welfare ever Could tempt thee to forsake them ? Or when years Had passed and still their love possessed thee wholly,
 When from without some murmur startled thee
 Of darkling mortals famished for one ray Of thy so-hoarded luxury of light, Didst thou ne'er strive even yet to break those spells And prove thou couldst recover and fulfil Thy early mission, long ago renounced, And, to that end, select some shape
     once more ?
 And did not mist-like influences, thick films, Faint memories of the rest that charmed
     so long Thine eyes, float fast, confuse thee, bear thee off,
 As whirling snow-drifts blind a man who treads

A mountain ridge, with guiding spear, through storm ?

Say, though I fell, I had excuse to fall ;
 Say, I was tempted sorely : say but this,
 Dear lord, Aprile's lord !

Par. Clasp me not thus, Aprile ! That the truth should reach me
     thus !

We are weak dust. Nay, clasp not or I faint !

Apr. My king ! and envious thoughts could outrage thee !

Lo, I forget my ruin, and rejoice In thy success, as thou ! Let our God's
     praise

Go bravely through the world at last !
     What care

Through me or thee ? I feel thy breath.
     Why, tears ?

Tears in the darkness, and from thee to
     me ?

Par. Love me henceforth, Aprile, while I learn

To love ; and, merciful God, forgive us
     both !

We wake at length from weary dreams ;
     but both

Have slept in fairy-land : though dark and drear

Appears the world before us, we no less Wake with our wrists and ankles jewelled still.

I, too, have sought to know as thou to
     LOVE—

Excluding love as thou refusedst knowledge.

Still thou hast beauty and I, power.
     We wake :

What penance canst devise for both of
     us ?

Apr. I hear thee faintly. The thick darkness ! Even

Thine eyes are hid. 'Tis as I knew : I
     speak,

And now I die. But I have seen thy
     face !

O, poet, think of me, and sing of me !
 But to have seen thee and to die so
     soon !

Par. Die not, Aprile ! We must never part.

Are we not halves of one dissevered
     world,

Whom this strange chance unites once more ? Part never !
Till thou, the lover, know ; and I, the knower,
Love—until both are saved. Aprile,
hear !

We will accept our gains, and use them
—now !

God, he will die upon my breast !
Aprile !

Apr. To speak but once, and die ! yet by his side.

Hush ! hush !

Ha ! go you ever girt about With phantoms, powers ? I have created such,
But these seem real as I ?

Par. Whom can you see Through the accursed darkness ?

Apr. Stay ; I know, I know them : who should know them —well as I ?

White brows, lit up with glory ; poets
all !

Par. Let him but live, and I have my reward !

Apr. Yes ; I see now. God is the PERFECT POET,
Who in His person acts His own creations.
Had you but told me this at first ! Hush !
hush !

Par. Live ! for my sake, because of my great sin,
To help my brain, oppressed by these wild words
And their deep import. Live ! 'tis not too late.

I have a quiet home for us, and friends.
Michal shall smile on you. Hear you ?

Lean thus,
And breathe my breath. I shall not lose one word

Of all your speech, one little word, Aprile !

Apr. No, no. Crown me ? I am not one of you !

'Tis he, the king, you seek. I am not
one.

Par. Thy spirit, at least, Aprile ! Let me love !

I have attained, and now I may depart.

III. PARACELSUS.

SCENE, Basil ; a chamber in the house of Paracelsus. 1526.

PARACELSUS, FESTUS.

Par. Heap logs, and let the blaze laugh out !

Fest. True, true.
'Tis very fit all, time and chance and
change

Have wrought since last we sat thus, face to face

And soul to soul—all cares, far-looking fears,

Vague apprehensions, all vain fancies bred

By your long absence, should be cast
away,

Forgotten in this glad unhop'd renewal Of our affections.

Par. Oh, omit not aught Which witnesses your own and Michal's
own

Affection : spare not that ! Only forget The honours and the glories and what
not,

It pleases you to tell profusely out.

Fest. Nay, even your honours, in a sense, I waive :

The wondrous Paracelsus, Life's dispenser,

Fate's commissary, idol of the schools And courts, shall be no more than Aureole still,

Still Aureole and my friend, as when we parted

Some twenty years ago, and I restrained As best I could the promptings of my spirit

Which secretly advanced you, from the
first,

To the pre-eminent rank which, since, your own

Adventurous ardour, nobly triumphing, Has won for you.

Par. Yes, yes. And Michal's face Still wears that quiet and peculiar light

Like the dim circle floating round a pearl ?

Fest. Just so.

Par. And yet her calm sweet countenance,

Though saintly, was not sad ; for she would sing

Alone. Does she still sing alone, bird-like,

Not dreaming you are near ? Her carols dropt

In flakes through that old leafy bower built under

The sunny wall at Würzburg, from her lattice

Among the trees above, while I, un-
seen,

Sat conning some rare scroll from Tritheim's shelves,

Much wondering notes so simple could divert

My mind from study. Those were happy days.

Respect all such as sing when all alone !

Fest. Scarcely alone : her children, you may guess,

Are wild beside her.

Par. Ah, those children quite Unsettle the pure picture in my mind :

A girl, she was so perfect, so distinct.
No change, no change ! Not but this added grace May blend and harmonize with its compeers,

And Michal may become her motherhood ;

But 'tis a change, and I detest all change,

And most a change in aught I loved long
since.

So, Michal—you have said she thinks of
me ?

Fest. O very proud will Michal be of
you !

Imagine how we sat, long winter-nights, Scheming and wondering, shaping your

presumed Adventure, or devising its reward ;

Shutting out fear with all the strength of hope.

For it was strange how, even when most secure

In our domestic peace, a certain dim And flitting shade could sadden all ; it

seemed
A restlessness of heart, a silent yearning,

A sense of something wanting, incomplete—

Not to be put in words, perhaps avoided

By mute consent—but, said or unsaid,
felt

To point to one so loved and so long lost.
And then the hopes rose and shut out the fears—

How you would laugh should I recount them now !

I still predicted your return at last,
With gifts beyond the greatest of them

all,
All Tritheim's wondrous troop ; did one of which Attain renown by any chance, I smiled,

As well aware of who would prove his peer.

Michal was sure some woman, long ere
this,

As beautiful as you were sage, had loved . . .

Par. Far-seeing, truly, to discern so
much

In the fantastic projects and day-dreams Of a raw, restless boy !

Fest. Oh, no : the sunrise Well warranted our faith in this full noon !

Can I forget the anxious voice which

said,
'Festus, have thoughts like these e'er shaped themselves In other brains than mine ? have their possessors Existed in like circumstance ? were they

weak
As I, or ever constant from the first,

Despising youth's allurements and rejecting

As spider-films the shackles I endure ?
Is there hope for me ?—and I answered gravely

As an acknowledged elder, calmer, wiser,

More gifted mortal. O you must remember,

For all your glorious . . .
Par. Glorious ? ay, this hair,

These hands—nay, touch them, they are mine ! Recall

With all the said recallings, times when
thus

To lay them by your own ne'er turned you pale

As now. Most glorious, are they not ?
Fest. Why—why—

Something must be subtracted from
 success
 So wide, no doubt. He would be scrupulous, truly, Who should object such drawbacks.
 Still, still, Aureole,
 You are changed, very changed ! 'Twere losing nothing To look well to it : you must not be stolen From the enjoyment of your well-won
 meed.

Par. My friend ! you seek my pleasure, past a doubt :
 You will best gain your point, by talking,
 not

Of me, but of yourself.

Fest. Have I not said
 All touching Michal and my children ?

Sure
 You know, by this, full well how Aennchen looks Gravely, while one disparts her thick brown hair ;

And Aureole's glee when some stray gannet builds Amid the birch-trees by the lake. Small
 hope

Have I that he will honour (the wild imp)

His namesake ! Sigh not ! 'tis too much to ask

That all we love should reach the same proud fate.

But you are very kind to humour me
 By showing interest in my quiet life ; You, who of old could never tame your-
 self

To tranquil pleasures, must at heart
 despise . . .

Par. Festus, strange secrets are let out by Death,

Who blabs so oft the follies of this world :
 And I am Death's familiar, as you know.
 I helped a man to die, some few weeks
 since,

Warped even from his go-cart to one
 end—

The living on princes' smiles, reflected from

A mighty herd of favourites. No mean trick

He left untried, and truly well-nigh wormed

All traces of God's finger out of him : Then died, grown old. And just an hour
 before,

Having lain long with blank and soulless
 eyes,

He sat up suddenly, and with natural voice

Said that in spite of thick air and closed doors

God told him it was June ; and he knew
 well,

Without such telling, harebells grew in June ;

And all that kings could ever give or
 take

Would not be precious as those blooms
 to him.

Just so, allowing I am passing sage,
 It seems to me much worthier argument Why pansies<sup>1</sup>, eyes that laugh, bear beauty's prize

From violets, eyes that dream—(your Michal's choice)—

Than all fools find to wonder at in me,
 Or in my fortunes. And be very sure

I say this from no prurient restlessness, No self-complacency, itching to turn,

Vary, and view its pleasure from all points,

And, in this instance, willing other men Should be at pains, demonstrate to itself

The realness of the very joy it tastes.
 What should delight me like the news of

friends
 Whose memories were a solace to me
 oft,

As mountain-baths to wild fowls in their flight ?

Often than you had wasted thought on
 me

Had you been wise, and rightly valued
 bliss !

But there's no taming nor repressing
 hearts :

God knows I need such !—So, you heard me speak ?

Fest. Speak ? when ?

Par. When but this morning at my class ?

<sup>1</sup> Citrinula (flammula) herba Paracelso multum familiaris. DORN.

There was noise and crowd enough.
I saw you not.

Surely you know I am engaged to fill The chair here?—that 'tis part of my proud fate

To lecture to as many thick-skulled youths

As please, each day, to throng the theatre,

To my great reputation, and no small Danger of Basil's benches, long unused To crack beneath such honour?

Fest. I was there;
I mingled with the throng: shall I avow Small care was mine to listen?—too intent

On gathering from the murmurs of the crowd

A full corroboration of my hopes!
What can I learn about your powers?
but they Know, care for nought beyond your actual state,

Your actual value; yet they worship you, Those various natures whom you sway as one!

But ere I go, be sure I shall attend . . .

Par. Stop, o' God's name: the thing 's by no means yet

Past remedy! Shall I read this morning's labour

—At least in substance? Nought so worth the gaining

As an apt scholar! Thus then, with all due

Precision and emphasis—you, besides, are clearly

Guiltless of understanding more, a whit, The subject than your stool—allowed
to be

A notable advantage.

Fest. Surely, Aureole,
You laugh at me!

Par. I laugh? Ha, ha!
thank heaven,

I charge you, if 't be so! for I forget Much, and what laughter should be like!

No less,
However, I forego that luxury

Since it alarms the friend who brings it
back.

True. laughter like my own must echo strangely

To thinking men; a smile were better
far;

So, make me smile! If the exulting look You wore but now be smiling, 'tis so long

Since I have smiled! Alas, such smiles are born

Alone of hearts like yours, or herds-men's souls

Of ancient time, whose eyes, calm as their flocks,

Saw in the stars mere garnishry of
heaven,

In earth a stage for altars, nothing more.
Never change, Festus: I say, never
change!

Fest. My God, if he be wretched after
all!

Par. When last we parted, Festus, you declared,

—Or Michal, yes, her soft lips whispered
words

I have preserved. She told me she believed

I should succeed (meaning, that in the search

I then engaged in, I should meet success), And yet be wretched: now, she augured
false.

Fest. Thank Heaven! but you spoke strangely: could I venture

To think bare apprehension lest your
friend,

Dazzled by your resplendent course, might find

Henceforth less sweetness in his own, awakes

Such earnest mood in you? Fear not,
dear friend,

That I shall leave you, inwardly repining Your lot was not my own!

Par. And this, for ever!
For ever! gull who may, they will be gulled!

They will not look nor think; 'tis nothing new

In them: but surely he is not of them!
My Festus, do you know, I reckoned,

you—

Though all beside were sand-blind—you, my friend,

Would look at me, once close, with piercing eye

Untroubled by the false glare that con-founds
 A weaker vision ; would remain serene, Though singular, amid a gaping throng.
 I feared you, or I had come, sure, long ere this,
 To Einsiedeln. Well, error has no end,
 And Rhasis is a sage, and Basil boasts A tribe of wits, and I am wise and blest Past all dispute ! 'Tis vain to fret at it.
 I have vowed long ago my worshippers Shall owe to their own deep sagacity All further information, good or bad.
 Small risk indeed my reputation runs, Unless perchance the glance now searching me Be fixed much longer ; for it seems to spell
 Dimly the characters a simpler man Might read distinct enough. Old eastern books Say, the fallen prince of morning some short space Remained unchanged in semblance ;
 nay, his brow
 Was hued with triumph : every spirit
 then Praising, his heart on flame the while :— a tale !
 Well, Festus, what discover you, I pray ?
Fest. Some foul deed sullies then a life which else
 Were raised supreme ?
Par. Good : I do well, most well !
 Why strive to make men hear, feel, fret themselves
 With what 'tis past their power to comprehend ?
 I should not strive now : only, having nursed
 The faint surmise that one yet walked
 the earth,
 One, at least, not the utter fool of show,
 Not absolutely formed to be the dupe Of shallow plausibilities alone ; One who, in youth found wise enough to choose
 The happiness his riper years approve,
 Was yet so anxious for another's sake, That, ere his friend could rush upon a mad
 And ruinous course, the converse of his His gentle spirit essayed, prejudged for
 him
 The perilous path, foresaw its destiny, And warned the weak one in such tender
 words,
 Such accents—his whole heart in every tone—
 That oft their memory comforted that
 friend
 When it by right should have increased
 despair :
 —Having believed, I say, that this one
 man Could never lose the light thus from the first
 His portion—how should I refuse to grieve
 At even my gain if it disturb our old Relation, if it make me out more wise ?
 Therefore, once more reminding him how well
 He prophesied, I note the single flaw That spoils his prophet's title. In plain words,
 You were deceived, and thus were you deceived—
 I have not been successful, and yet am Most miserable ; 'tis said at last ; nor
 you Give credit, lest you force me to concede That common sense yet lives upon the
 world.
Fest. You surely do not mean to banter me ?
Par. You know, or—if you have been wise enough To cleanse your memory of such matters
 —knew,
 As far as words of mine could make it
 clear,
 That 'twas my purpose to find joy or grief
 Solely in the fulfilment of my plan Or plot or whatsoe'er it was ; rejoicing Alone as it proceeded prosperously, Sorrowing then only when mischance retarded Its progress. That was in those Würzburg days !
 Not to prolong a theme I thoroughly
 hate,
 I have pursued this plan with all my
 strength ;

And having failed therein most signally, Cannot object to ruin utter and drear
 As all-excelling would have been the prize Had fortune favoured me. I scarce have right To vex your frank good spirit, late so glad

In my supposed prosperity, I know,
 And, were I lucky in a glut of friends,
 Would well agree to let your error live,
 Nay, strengthen it with fables of success.
 But mine is no condition to refuse
 The transient solace of so rare a godsend, My solitary luxury, my one friend :
 Accordingly I venture to put off The wearisome vest of falsehood galling
 me,

Secure when he is by. I lay me bare,
 Prone at his mercy—but he is my friend!
 Not that he needs retain his aspect
 grave ;

That answers not my purpose ; for 'tis
 like,
 Some sunny morning—Basil being drained

Of its wise population, every corner Of the amphitheatre crammed with learned clerks,

Here Oecolampadius, looking worlds of
 wit,

Here Castellanus, as profound as he, Munsterus here, Frobenius there, all squeezed,

And staring,—that the zany of the show, Even Paracelsus, shall put off before
 them

His trappings with a grace but seldom judged

Expedient in such cases :—the grim
 smile

That will go round ! Is it not therefore
 best

To venture a rehearsal like the present In a small way ? Where are the signs
 I seek,

The first-fruits and fair sample of the
 scorn

Due to all quacks ? Why, this will never do !

Fest. These are foul vapours, Aureole ; nought beside !

The effect of watching, study, weariness.

Were there a spark of truth in the confusion

Of these wild words, you would not outrage thus

Your youth's companion. I shall ne'er
 -----

These wanderings, bred of faintness and much study.

'Tis not thus you would trust a trouble
 to me,

To Michal's friend.

Par. I have said it, dearest Festus !
 For the manner, 'tis ungracious, probably ;

You may have it told in broken sobs,
 one day,

And scalding tears, ere long : but I thought best

To keep that off as long as possible.

Do you wonder still ?

Fest. No ; it must oft fall out That one whose labour perfects any
 work,

Shall rise from it with eye so worn, that
 he

Of all men least can measure the extent Of what he has accomplished. He alone, Who, nothing tasked, is nothing weary
 too,

May clearly scan the little he effects :
 But we, the bystanders, untouched by toil,

Estimate each aright.

Par. This worthy Festus Is one of them, at last ! 'Tis so with all !
 First, they set down all progress as a
 dream ;

And next, when he, whose quick discomfiture

Was counted on, accomplishes some few And doubtful steps in his career,— behold,

They look for every inch of ground to vanish

Beneath his tread, so sure they spy
 success !

Fest. Few doubtful steps ? when death retires before

Your presence—when the noblest of
 mankind,

Broken in body or subdued in soul, May through your skill renew their vigour, raise

The shattered frame to pristine stateliness ?

When men in racking pain may purchase dreams

Of what delights them most, swooning at once

Into a sea of bliss, or rapt along

As in a flying sphere of turbulent light ?

When we may look to you as one ordained

To free the flesh from fell disease, as frees

Our Luther's burning tongue the fettered soul ?

When . . .

Par. When and where, the devil, did you get

This notable news ?

Fest. Even from the common voice ;
From those whose envy, daring not dispute

The wonders it decries, attributes them To magic and such folly.

Par. Folly ? Why not To magic, pray ? You find a comfort doubtless

In holding, God ne'er troubles Him about Us or our doings : once we were judged worth

The devil's tempting . . . I offend : forgive me,

And rest content. Your prophecy on the whole

Was fair enough as prophesyings go ;

At fault a little in detail, but quite Precise enough in the main ; and hereupon

I pay due homage : you guessed long ago (The prophet !) I should fail—and I have failed.

Fest. You mean to tell me, then, the hopes which fed

Your youth have not been realized as yet ?

Some obstacle has barred them hitherto ?
Or that their innate . . .

Par. As I said but now,
You have a very decent prophet's fame,
So you but shun details here. Little matter

Whether those hopes were mad,—the aims they sought,

Safe and secure from all ambitious fools ;
Or whether my weak wits are overcome By what a better spirit would scorn :
I fail.

And now methinks 'twere best to change a theme,

I am a sad fool to have stumbled on.

I say confusedly what comes uppermost ;

But there are times when patience proves at fault,

As now : this morning's strange encounter—you

Beside me once again ! you, whom I guessed

Alive, since hitherto (with Luther's leave)

No friend have I among the saints at peace,

To judge by any good their prayers effect—

I knew you would have helped me !—
Why not He,

My strange competitor in enterprise,
Bound for the same end by another path,
Arrived, or ill or well, before the time,
At our disastrous journey's doubtful close ?

How goes it with Aprile ? Ah, they miss Your lone, sad, sunny idleness of

Heaven,
Our martyrs for the world's sake ;
Heaven shuts fast :

The poor mad poet is howling by this time !

Since you are my sole friend then, here or there,

I could not quite repress the varied feelings

This meeting wakens ; they have had their vent,

And now forget them. Do the rear-mice still Hang like a fret-work on the gate (or what

In my time was a gate) fronting the road

From Einsiedeln to Lachen ?

Fest. Trifle not : Answer me, for my sake alone. You smiled

Just now, when I supposed some deed, unworthy

Yourself, might blot the else so bright result ;
 Yetif your motives have continued pure, Your will unflinching, and in spite of
     this,
 You have experienced a defeat, why,
     then
 I say not, you would cheerfully withdraw From contest—mortal hearts are not so fashioned—
 But surely you would, ne'ertheless, withdraw.
 You sought not fame, nor gain, nor even
     love ;
 No end distinct from knowledge,—I repeat
 Your very words : once satisfied that knowledge
 Is a mere dream, you would announce as much,
 Yourself the first. But how is the event ?
 You are defeated—and I find you here !
     Par. As though ' here ' did not signify defeat !
 I spoke not of my little labours here, But of the break-down of my general
     aims :
 For you, aware of their extent and scope,
 To look on these sage lecturings, approved By beardless boys, and bearded dotards
     worse,
 As a fit consummation of such aims,
 Is worthy notice ! A professorship At Basil ! Since you see so much in it, And think my life was reasonably drained
 Of life's delights to render me a match For duties arduous as such post demands,— Far be it from me to deny my power To fill the petty circle lotted out Of infinite space, or justify the host Of honours thence accruing. So, take notice,
 This jewel dangling from my neck preserves
 The features of a prince, my skill restored To plague his people some few years to
     come :
 And all through a pure whim.<sup>1</sup> He had eased the earth

For me, but that the droll despair which seized
 The vermin of his household, tickled me.
 I came to see. Here, drivelled the physician, Whose most infallible nostrum was at fault ;
 There quaked the astrologer, whose horoscope
 Had promised him interminable years ; Here a monk fumbled at the sick man's
     mouth
 With some undoubted relic—a sudary Of the Virgin ; while another piebald
     knave
 Of the same brotherhood (he loved them
     ever)
 Was actively preparing 'neath his nose Such a suffumigation as, once fired, Had stunk the patient dead ere he could groan.
 I cursed the doctor, and upset the brother ;
 Brushed past the conjurer ; vowed that the first gust
 Of stench from the ingredients just alight Would raise a cross-grained devil in my sword,
 Not easily laid : and ere an hour, the prince Slept as he never slept since prince he
     was.
 A day—and I was posting for my life, Placarded through the town as one whose spite Had near availed to stop the blessed effects Of the doctor's nostrum, which, well seconded
 By the sudary, and most by the costly
     smoke—
 Not leaving out the strenuous prayers sent up Hard by, in the abbey—raised the prince
     to life ;
 To the great reputation of the seer Who, confident, expected all along The glad event—the doctor's recompense—
 Much largess from his highness to the monks—
 And the vast solace of his loving people,

Whose general satisfaction to increase,
The prince was pleased no longer to defer

The burning of some dozen heretics, Remanded till God's mercy should be shown

Touching his sickness : last of all were joined

Ample directions to all loyal folk To swell the complement, by seizing me Who—doubtless some rank sorcerer—had endeavoured

To thwart these pious offices, obstruct The prince's cure, and frustrate Heaven by help

Of certain devils dwelling in his sword.
By luck, the prince in his first fit of thanks

Had forced this bauble on me as an earnest

Of further favours. This one case may serve

To give sufficient taste of many such, So let them pass. Those shelves support a pile

Of patents, licences, diplomas, titles, From Germany, France, Spain, and Italy ;

They authorize some honour ; ne'ertheless,

I set more store by this Erasmus sent ;
He trusts me ; our Frobenius is his
friend,

And him ' I raised ' (nay, read it) ' from the dead.'

I weary you, I see. I merely sought To show, there's no great wonder after
all

That while I fill the class-room, and attract

A crowd to Basil, I get leave to stay ;
And therefore need not scruple to accept The utmost they can offer—if I please :

For 'tis but right the world should be prepared

To treat with favoure'en fantastic wants Of one like me, used up in serving her.
Just as the mortal, whom the gods in Devoured, received in place of his lost limb

Some virtue or other—cured disease,
I think ;

You mind the fables we have read together.

Fest. You do not think I comprehend
a word.

The time was, Aureole, you were apt
enough

To clothe the airiest thoughts in specious
breath ;

But surely you must feel how vague and strange

These speeches sound.
Par. Well, then : you know my hopes ;

I am assured, at length, those hopes were vain ;

That truth is just as far from me as
ever ;

That I have thrown my life away ; that sorrow

On that account is idle, and further effort

To mend and patch what's marred beyond repairing,

As useless : and all this was taught to
me

By the convincing, good old-fashioned method

Of force—by sheer compulsion. Is that plain ?

Fest. Dear Aureole ! can it be my fears were just ?

God wills not . . .

Par. Now, 'tis this I most admire—The constant talk men of your stamp keep up

Of God's will, as they style it ; one would swear

Man had but merely to uplift his eye,
And see the will in question characterized

On the heaven's vault. 'Tis hardly wise to moot

Such topics : doubts are many and faith is weak.

I know as much of any will of God's,
As knows some dumb and tortured brute what Man,

His stern lord, wills from the perplexing blows

That plague him every way ; but there
of course,

Where least he suffers, longest he remains—

My case ; and for such reasons I plod on Subdued, but not convinced. I know as little Why I deserve to fail, as why I hoped Better things in my youth. I simply

 know
 I am no master here, but trained and beaten
 Into the path I tread; and here I stay, Until some further intimation reach me, Like an obedient drudge. Though I prefer To view the whole thing as a task imposed,
 Which, whether dull or pleasant, must be done—
 Yet, I deny not, there is made provision Of joys which tastes less jaded might affect;
 Nay, some which please me too, for all my pride—Pleasures that once were pains: the iron ring Festering about a slave's neck grows at
 length
 Into the flesh it eats. I hate no longer A host of petty, vile delights, undreamed of Or spurned before; such now supply
 the place
 Of my dead aims: as in the autumn
 woods
 Where tall trees used to flourish, from their roots Springs up a fungous brood, sickly and
 pale,
 Chill mushrooms, coloured like a corpse's
 cheek.

Fest. If I interpret well your words, I own
 It troubles me but little that your aims, Vast in their dawning, and most likely
 grown Extravagantly since, have baffled you.
 Perchance I am glad; you merit greater
 praise;
 Because they are too glorious to be gained,
 You do not blindly cling to them and
 die;
 You fell, but have not sullenly refused To rise, because an angel worsted you In wrestling, though the world holds not your peer;

And though too harsh and sudden is the
 change
 To yield content as yet, still you pursue The ungracious path as though 'twere rosy strewn.
 'Tis well: and your reward, or soon or
 late,
 Will come from Him whom no man serves in vain.

Par. Ah, very fine! For my part,
 I conceive
 The very pausing from all further toil, Which you find heinous, would be as a seal
 To the sincerity of all my deeds.
 To be consistent I should die at once;
 I calculated on no after-life; Yet (how crept in, how fostered, I know
 not)
 Here am I with as passionate regret For youth and health and love so vainly lavished,
 As if their preservation had been first And foremost in my thoughts; and this strange fact Humbled me wondrously, and had due
 force
 In rendering me the less averse to follow A certain counsel, a mysterious warning—
 You will not understand—but 'twas a
 man
 With aims not mine and yet pursued like mine,
 With the same fervour and no more
 success,
 Perishing in my sight; who summoned
 me
 As I would shun the ghastly fate I saw,
 To serve my race at once; to wait no longer
 That God should interfere in my behalf,
 But to distrust myself, put pride away,
 And give my gains, imperfect as they
 were,
 To men. I have not leisure to explain How since, a singular series of events Has raised me to the station you behold, Wherein I seem to turn to most account The mere wreck of the Past,—perhaps receive
 Some feeble glimmering token that God

And may approve my penance : therefore here
You find me, doing most good or least harm.
And if folks wonder much and profit little
'Tis not my fault ; only, I shall rejoice When my part in the farce is shuffled
through,
And the curtain falls : I must hold out till then.

Fest. Till when, dear Aureole ?

Par. Till I'm fairly thrust From my proud eminence. Fortune is fickle
And even professors fall : should that arrive,

I see no sin in ceding to my bent.

You little fancy what rude shocks apprise us

We sin : God's intimations rather fail In clearness than in energy : 'twere well Did they but indicate the course to take Like that to be forsaken. I would fain Be spared a further sample ! Here I
stand,

And here I stay, be sure, till forced to flit.

Fest. Be you but firm on that head ; long ere then

All I expect will come to pass, I trust :

The cloud that wraps you will have disappeared.

Meantime, I see small chance of such event :

They praise you here as one whose lore,
already

Divulged, eclipses all the Past can show, But whose achievements, marvellous as they be,

Are faint anticipations of a glory

About to be revealed. When Basil's crowds

Dismiss their teacher, I shall be content That he depart.

Par. This favour at their hands
I look for earlier than your view of things Would warrant. Of the crowd you saw to-day,

Remove the full half sheer amazement draws,

Mere novelty, nought else ; and next,
the tribe

Whose innate blockish dulness just perceives

That unless miracles (as seem my works) Be wrought in their behalf, their chance is slight

To puzzle the devil ; next, the numerous
set

Who bitterly hate established schools, and help

The teacher that oppugns them, till he
once

Have planted his own doctrine, when the teacher

May reckon on their rancour in his turn ; Take, too, the sprinkling of sagacious
knaves

Whose cunning runs not counter to the vogue,

But seeks, by flattery and crafty nursing To force my system to a premature Short-lived development. Why swell the list ?

Each has his end to serve, and his best
way

Of serving it : remove all these, remains A scantling, a poor dozen at the best, Worthy to look for sympathy and service,

And likely to draw profit from my pains.
Fest. 'Tis no encouraging picture :

still these few Redeem their fellows. Once the germ implanted,

Its growth, if slow, is sure.

Par. God grant it so !
I would make some amends : but if I
fail,

The luckless rogues have this excuse to urge,

That much is in my method and my manner,

My uncouth habits, my impatient spirit,
Which hinders of reception and result

My doctrine : much to say, small skill to speak !

Those old aims suffered not a looking-off, Though for an instant ; therefore, only
when

I thus renounced them and resolved to reap

Some present fruit—to teach mankind some truth

So dearly purchased—only then I found

Such teaching was an art requiring cares
 And qualities peculiar to itself;
 That to possess was one thing—to display, Another. Had renown been in my thoughts,
 Or popular praise, I had soon discovered it!
 One grows but little apt to learn these things.

Fest. If it be so, which nowise I believe,
 There needs no waiting fuller dispensation
 To leave a labour to so little use.
 Why not throw up the irksome charge at once?

Par. A task, a task!
 But wherefore hide the whole Extent of degradation, once engaged In the confessing vein? Despite of all My fine talk of obedience, and repugnance, Docility, and what not, 'tis yet to learn
 If when the task shall really be performed, My inclinations free to choose once more,
 I shall do aught but slightly modify
 The nature of the hated task I quit.
 In plain words, I am spoiled: my life still tends As first it tended. I am broken and trained
 To my old habits; they are part of me.
 I know, and none so well, my darling
 ends
 Are proved impossible: no less, no less, Even now what humours me, fond fool, as when Their faint ghosts sit with me, and flatter me,
 And send me back content to my dull
 round?
 How can I change this soul?—this apparatus Constructed solely for their purposes
 So well adapted to their every want, To search out and discover, prove and
 perfect;
 This intricate machine whose most minute
 And meanest motions have their charm
 to me

Though to none else—an aptitude I seize,
 An object I perceive, a use, a meaning,
 A property, a fitness, I explain, And I alone:—how can I change my
 soul?

And this wronged body, worthless save when tasked Under that soul's dominion—used to
 care
 For its bright master's cares, and quite subdued
 Its proper cravings—not to ail nor pine,
 So he but prosper—whither drag this poor,

Tried, patient body? God! how I
 To live like that mad poet, for a while,
 To love alone! and how I felt too warped And twisted and deformed! What should I do, Even tho' released from drudgery, but
 return
 Faint, as you see, and halting, blind and sore,

To my old life—and die as I began!
 I cannot feed on beauty, for the sake Of beauty only; nor can drink in balm From lovely objects for their loveliness;
 My nature cannot lose her first imprint;
 I still must hoard and heap and class all truths

With one ulterior purpose: I must
 know!
 Would God translate me to His throne,
 believe
 That I should only listen to His words To further my own aims! For other
 men,
 Beauty is prodigally strewn around,
 And I were happy could I quench as
 they

This mad and thriveless longing, and content me
 With beauty for itself alone: alas!
 I have addressed a frock of heavy mail, Yet may not join the troop of sacred
 knights;
 And now the forest-creatures fly from
 me,
 The grass-banks cool, the sunbeams warm no more.

Best follow, dreaming that ere night
arrive,
I shall o'ertake the company, and ride Glittering as they!

Fest. I think I apprehend What you would say: if you, in truth, design

To enter once more on the life thus left, Seek not to hide that all this conscious-
ness

Of failure is assumed.

Par. My friend, my friend, I tell, you listen; I explain, perhaps You understand: there our communion
ends.

Have you learnt nothing from to-day's discourse?

When we would thoroughly know the sick man's state

We feel awhile the fluttering pulse, press
soft

The hot brow, look upon the languid eye, And thence divine the rest. Must I lay bare

My heart, hideous and beating, or tear
up

My vitals for your gaze, ere you will deem

Enough made known? You! who are you, forsooth?

That is the crowning operation claimed By the arch-demonstrator—heaven the hall,

And earth the audience. Let Aprile
and you

Secure good places: 'twill be worth the
while.

Fest. Are you mad, Aureole? What can I have said

To call for this? I judged from your own words.

Par. Oh, doubtless! A sick wretch describes the ape

That mocks him from the bed-foot, and all gravely

You thither turn at once: or he recounts

The perilous journey he has late performed,

And you are puzzled much how that could be!

You find me here, half stupid and half mad;

It makes no part of my delight to search Into these things, much less to undergo Another's scrutiny; but so it chances That I am led to trust my state to
you:

And the event is, you combine, contrast,

And ponder on my foolish words, as though

They thoroughly conveyed all hidden
here—

Here, loathsome with despair, and hate, and rage!

Is there no fear, no shrinking or no
shame?

Will you guess nothing? will you spare me nothing?

Must I go deeper? Ay or no?

Fest. Dear friend...

Par. True: I am brutal—'tis a part
of it;

The plague's sign—you are not a lazarhaunter,

How should you know? Well then, you think it strange

I should profess to have failed utterly,
And yet propose an ultimate return

To courses void of hope: and this,
because

You know not what temptation is, nor
how

'Tis like to ply men in the sickliest part.
You are to understand, that we who

make Sport for the gods, are hunted to the
end:

There is not one sharp volley shot at us,
Which 'scaped with life, though hurt,

we slacken pace
And gather by the wayside herbs and roots

To stanch our wounds, secure from further harm:

We are assailed to life's extremest verge.
It will be well indeed if I return,

A harmless busy fool, to my old ways!
I would forget hints of another fate,

Significant enough, which silent hours Have lately scared me with.

Fest. Another! and what?

Par. After all, Festus, you say well:
I am

A man yet: I need never humble me.

I would have been—something, I know not what;
 But though I cannot soar, I do not crawl.
 There are worse portions than this one of mine.
 You say well!
Fest. Ah!
Par. And deeper degradation!
 If the mean stimulants of vulgar praise,
 And vanity, should become the chosen food
 Of a sunk mind; should stifle even the wish
 To find its early aspirations true; Should teach it to breathe falsehood like life-breath—
 An atmosphere of craft and trick and
 lies;
 Should make it proud to emulate or surpass Base natures in the practices which woke
 Its most indignant loathing once . . .
 No, no!
 Utter damnation is reserved for Hell!
 I had immortal feelings: such shall never
 Be wholly quenched: no, no!
 My friend, you wear A melancholy face, and, certain 'tis There's little cheer in all this dismal
 work.
 But 'twas not my desire to set abroad Such memories and forebodings: I foresaw Where they would drive. 'Twere better to discuss News of Lucerne or Zurich; or to tell Of Egypt's flaring sky or Spain's cork-groves.
Fest. I have thought: trust me, this mood will pass away.
 I know you, and the lofty spirit you bear,
 And easily ravel out a clue to all.
 These are the trials meet for such as you, Nor must you hope exemption: to be mortal
 Is to be plied with trials manifold.
 Look round! The obstacles which kept
 the rest
 From your ambition, have been spurned by you;

Their fears, their doubts, the chains that bind them all, Were flax before your resolute soul, which nought
 Avails to awe, save these delusions bred From its own strength, its selfsame strength disguised—Mocking itself. Be brave, dear Aureole!
 Since
 The rabbit has his shade to frighten him, The fawn a rustling bough, mortals their cares,
 And higher natures yet would slight and laugh
 At these entangling fantasies, as you At trammels of a weaker intellect,— Measure your mind's height by the shade it casts!
 I know you.
Par. And I know you, dearest Festus!
 And how you love unworthily; and how All admiration renders blind.
Fest. You hold That admiration blinds?
Par. Ay and alas!
Fest. Nought blinds you less than admiration will.
 Whether it be that all love renders wise In its degree; from love which blends with love—Heart answering heart—to love which spends itself
 In silent mad idolatry of some Pre-eminent mortal, some great soul of souls,
 Which ne'er will know how well it is adored.
 I say, such love is never blind; but rather Alive to every the minutest spot Which mars its object, and which hate (supposed So vigilant and searching) dreams not of.
 Love broods on such: what then?
 When first perceived;
 Is there no sweet strife to forget, to
 change,
 To overflush those blemishes with all The glow of general goodness they disturb?
 —To make those very defects an endless source

Of new affection grown from hopes and fears ?
 And, when all fails, is there no gallant stand Made even for much proved weak ? no shrinking-back Lest, since all love assimilates the soul To what it loves, it should at length become Almost a rival of its idol ? 'Trust me,
 If there be fiends who seek to work our hurt,
 To ruin and drag down earth's mightiest spirits Even at God's foot, 'twill be from such as love, Their zeal will gather most to serve their cause ;
 And least from those who hate, who most essay
 By contumely and scorn to blot the light Which forces entrance even to their hearts :
 For thence will our defender tear the veil
 And show within each heart, as in a shrine,
 The giant image of Perfection, grown In hate's despite, whose calumnies were spawned In the untroubled presence of its eyes !
 True admiration blinds not ; nor am I So blind. 'I call your sin exceptional ;
 It springs from one whose life has passed the bounds Prescribed to life. Compound that fault with God !
 I speak of men ; to common men like me
 The weakness you confess endears you more, Like the far traces of decay in suns.
 I bid you have good cheer !
Par. Praeclarè ! Optimè !
 Think of a quiet mountain-cloistered priest Instructing Paracelsus ! yet, 'tis so.
 Come, I will show you where my merit lies.
 'Tis in the advance of individual minds That the slow crowd should ground their expectation

Eventually to follow ; as the sea Waits ages in its bed, 'till some one wave Out of the multitudinous mass, extends The empire of the whole, some feet perhaps,
 Over the strip of sand which could confine Its fellows so long time : thenceforth the rest, Even to the meanest, hurry in at once,
 And so much is clear gained. I shall be glad If all my labours, failing of aught else, Suffice to make such inroad and procure A wider range for thought : nay, they do this ;
 For, whatsoever my notions of true knowledge And a legitimate success, may be,
 I am not blind to my undoubted rank
 When classed with others : I precede my age :
 And whoso wills, is very free to mount These labours as a platform, whence their own May have a prosperous outset. But, alas !
 My followers—they are noisy as you heard,
 But for intelligence—the best of them So clumsily wield the weapons I supply And they extol, that I begin to doubt Whether their own rude clubs and pebble-stones Would not do better service than my arms Thus viely swayed—if error will not fall Sooner before the old awkward batterings Than my more subtle warfare, not half learned.
Fest. I would supply that art, then, and withhold Its arms until you have taught their mystery.
Par. Content you, 'tis my wish ;
 I have recourse
 To the simplest training. Day by day
 I seek
 To wake the mood, the spirit which alone
 Can make those arms of any use to men.
 Of course, they are for swaggering forth at once

Graced with Ulysses' bow, Achilles' shield—Flash on us, all in armour, thou Achilles !
Make our hearts dance to thy resounding step !
A proper sight to scare the crows away !
Fest. Pity you choose not, then, some other method Of coming at your point. The marvellous art At length established in the world bids fair To remedy all hindrances like these :
Trust to Frobenius' press the precious lore Obscured by uncouth manner, or unfit For raw beginners ; let his types secure A deathless monument to after-times ;
Meanwhile wait confidently and enjoy The ultimate effect : sooner or later, You shall be all-revealed.
Par. The old dull question In a new form ; no more. Thus : I Two sorts of knowledge ; one,—vast, Hints of the unbounded aim I once pursued :
The other consists of many secrets, caught While bent on nobler prize,—perhaps a few Prime principles which may conduct to much :
These last I offer to my followers here.
Now bid me chronicle the first of these,
My ancient study, and in effect you bid me Revert to the wild courses just abjured :
I must go find them scattered through the world.
Then, for the principles, they are so simple (Being chiefly of the overturning sort),
That one time is as proper to propound them
As any other—to-morrow at my class, Or half a century hence embalmed in print.
For if mankind intend to learn at all,
They must begin by giving faith to them,
And acting on them ; and I do not see

But that my lectures serve indifferent well :
No doubt these dogmas fall not to the earth,
For all their novelty and rugged setting.
I think my class will not forget the day I let them know the gods of Israel, Aetius, Oribasius, Galen, Rhasis, Serapion, Avicenna, Averroës,— Were blocks !
Fest. And that reminds me, I heard something About your waywardness : you burned their books, It seems, instead of answering those sages.
Par. And who said that ?
Fest. Some I met yesternight With Ecolampadius. As you know, the purpose Of this short stay at Basil was to learn His pleasure touching certain missives sent For our Zuinglius and himself. 'Twas he Apprised me that the famous teacher here Was my old friend.
Par. Ah, I forgot : you went . . .
Fest. From Zurich with advices for the ear Of Luther, now at Wittemburg—(you know, I make no doubt, the differences of late With Carolostadius)—and returning sought Basil and . . .
Par. I remember. Here's a case, now, Will teach you why I answer not, but burn
The books you mention : pray, does Luther dream His arguments convince by their own force
The crowds that own his doctrine ?
No, indeed :
His plain denial of established points Ages had sanctified and men supposed Could never be oppugned while earth was under And heaven above them—points which chance or time

Affected not—did more than the array Of argument which followed. Boldly deny!

There is much breath-stopping, hair-stiffening Awhile; then, amazed glances, mute awaiting The thunderbolt which does not come;
and next,
Reproachful wonder and inquiry: those Who else had never stirred, are able
now

To find the rest out for themselves—
perhaps
To outstrip him who set the whole at
work,
—As never will my wise class its instructor.

And you saw Luther?
Fest. 'Tis a wondrous soul!

Par. True: the so-heavy chain which galled mankind
Is shattered, and the noblest of us all Must bow to the deliverer—nay, the worker

Of our own project—we who long
before

Had burst our trammels, but forgot the
crowd,

We should have taught, still groaned beneath the load:

This he has done and nobly. Speed that may!

Whatever be my chance or my mis-
chance,

What benefits mankind must glad me
too:

And men seem made, though not as I believed,

For something better than the times produce.

Witness these gangs of peasants your new lights

From Suabia have possessed, whom Münzer leads,

And whom the duke, the landgrave, and the elector

Will calm in blood! Well, well—'tis not my world!

Fest. Hark!

Par. 'Tis the melancholy wind astir Within the trees; the embers too are grey:

Morn must be near.

Fest. Best ope the casement: see,
The night, late strewn with clouds and flying stars,

Is blank and motionless: how peaceful
sleep

The tree-tops all together! Like an asp,

The wind slips whispering from bough to bough.

Par. Ay; you would gaze on a wind-shaken tree

By the hour, nor count time lost.

Fest. So you shall gaze: Those happy times will come again.

Par. Gone, gone, Those pleasant times! Does not the moaning wind

Seem to bewail that we have gained such gains

And bartered sleep for them?
Fest. It is our trust

That there is yet another world to mend
All error and mischance.

Par. Another world!
And why this world, this common world,

to be A make-shift, a mere foil, how fair so-
ever,

To some fine life to come? Man must be fed

With angel's food, forsooth; and some few traces

Of a diviner nature which look out Through his corporeal baseness, warrant
him

In a supreme contempt of all provision For his inferior tastes—some straggling marks

Which constitute his essence, just as truly

As here and there a gem would constitute

The rock, their barren bed, one diamond.
But were it so—were man all mind—he gains

A station little enviable. From God Down to the lowest spirit ministrant,

Intelligence exists which casts our mind Into immeasurable shade. No, no:

Love, hope, fear, faith—these make humanity;

These are its sign and note and character,

And these I have lost !—gone, shut from me for ever,
Like a dead friend, safe from unkindness
more !
See, morn at length. The heavy darkness seems Diluted ; grey and clear without the stars ;
The shrubs bestir and rouse themselves, as if Some snake, that weighed them down all night, let go His hold ; and from the East, fuller and fuller Day, like a mighty river, is flowing in ;
But clouded, wintry, desolate and cold.
Yet see how that broad prickly star-shaped plant, Half down in the crevice, spreads its woolly leaves,
All thick and glistening with diamond
dew.
And you depart for Einsiedeln this
day :
And we have spent all night in talk like
this !
If you would have me better for your
love,
Revert no more to these sad themes.
Fest. One favour,
And I have done. I leave you, deeply moved ;
Unwilling to have fared so well, the
while My friend has changed so sorely. If this mood
Shall pass away, if light once more arise Where all is darkness now, if you see fit
To hope, and trust again, and strive
again,
You will remember—not our love
alone—
But that my faith in God's desire that
man Should trust on His support, (as I must
think You trusted,) is obscured and dim through you ;
For you are thus, and this is no reward.
Will you not call me to your side, dear Aureole ?

IV. PARACELSUS ASPIRES.

SCENE, Colmar in Alsatia ; an Inn.
1528.

PARACELSUS, FESTUS.

Par. [To JOHANNES OFORINUS, his secretary.] Sic itur ad astra ! Dear Von Visenburg Is scandalized, and poor Torinus paralysed,
And every honest soul that Basil holds Aghast ; and yet we live, as one may
say,
Just as though Liechtenfels had never
set
So true a value on his sorry carcass, And learned Pütter had not frowned us
dumb.
We live ; and shall as surely start tomorrow
For Nuremberg, as we drink speedy scathe
To Basil in this mantling wine, suffused
A delicate blush, no fainter tinge is born I' th' shut heart of a bud. Pledge me, good John—
' Basil ; a hot plague ravage it, and Pütter Oppose the plague ! ' Even so ? Do you too share Their panic, the reptiles ? Ha, ha ; faint through them, Desist for them ! They manage matters so At Basil 'tis like : but others may find
means
To bring the stoutest braggart of the tribe
Once more to crouch in silence—means to breed
A stupid wonder in each fool again, Now big with admiration at the skill Which stript a vain pretender of his plumes ;
And, that done,—means to brand each slavish brow
So deeply, surely, ineffaceably, That thenceforth flattery shall not pucker it Out of the furrow ; there that stamp shall stay
To show the next they fawn on, what they are,

This Basil with its magnates,—fill my cup,—

Whom I curse soul and limb. And now dispatch,

Dispatch, my trusty John; and what remains

To do, whate'er arrangements for our trip

Are yet to be completed, see you hasten This night; we'll weather the storm at least: to-morrow

For Nuremburg! Now leave us; this grave clerk

Has divers weighty matters for my ear: [OPORINUS goes out.

And spare my lungs. At last, my gallant Festus,

I am rid of this arch-knave that dogs my heels

As a gaunt crow a gasping sheep; at last May give a loose to my delight. How kind,

How very kind, my first, best, only friend!

Why, this looks like fidelity. Embrace me!

Not a hair silvered yet? Right! you shall live

Till I am worth your love; you shall be proud,

And I—but let time show. Did you not wonder?

I sent to you because our compact weighed Upon my conscience—(you recall the night

At Basil, which the gods confound!)—because

Once more I aspire. I call you to my side;

You come. You thought my message strange?

Fest. So strange That I must hope, indeed, your messenger

Has mingled his own fancies with the words

Purporting to be yours. Par. He said no more,

'Tis probable, than the precious folks I leave

Said fiftyfold more roughly. Well-a-

day,

'Tis true! poor Paracelsus is exposed At last; a most egregious quack he proves:

And those he overreached must spit their hate

On one who, utterly beneath contempt, Could yet deceive their topping wits.

You heard Bare truth; and at my bidding you come here

To speed me on my enterprise, as once Your lavish wishes sped me, my own friend!

Fest. What is your purpose, Aureole?

Par. Oh, for purpose, There is no lack of precedents in a case

Like mine; at least, if not precisely mine,

The case of men cast off by those they sought

To benefit. Fest. They really cast you off?

I only heard a vague tale of some priest, Cured by your skill, who wrangled at your claim, Knowing his life's worth best; and how the judge The matter was referred to, saw no cause To interfere, nor you to hide your full Contempt of him; nor he, again, to smother

His wrath thereat, which raised so fierce a flame

That Basil soon was made no place for you.

Par. The affair of Liechtenfels? the shallowest fable,

The last and silliest outrage—mere pretence!

I knew it, I foretold it from the first, How soon the stupid wonder you mistook For genuine loyalty—a cheering* promise Of better things to come—would pall and pass; And every word comes true. Saul is among The prophets! Just so long as I was pleased To play off the mere antics of my art,

Fantastic gambols leading to no end.

I got huge praise : but one can ne'er keep down Our foolish nature's weakness. There they flocked, Poor devils, jostling, swearing and perspiring, Till the walls rang again ; and all for me !
 I had a kindness for them, which was right ;
 But then I stopped not till I tacked to that A trust in them and a respect—a sort Of sympathy for them : I must needs begin To teach them, not amaze them, 'to impart
 The spirit which should instigate the search Of truth,' just what you bade me ! I spoke out.
 Forthwith a mighty squadron, in disgust, Filed off—the sifted chaff of the sack,' I said, Redoubling my endeavours to secure The rest. When lo ! one man had tarried so long Only to ascertain if I supported This tenet of his, or that ; another loved To hear impartially before he judged,
 And having heard, now judged ; this bland disciple Passed for my dupe, but all along, it seems, Spied error where his neighbours marvelled most ;
 That fiery doctor who had hailed me friend, Did it because my by-paths, once proved wrong
 And beacons properly, would commend again
 The good old ways our sires jogged safely o'er, Though not their squeamish sons ; the other worthy Discovered divers verses of St. John,
 Which, read successively, refreshed the soul,
 But, muttered backwards, cured the gout, the stone,
 The colic, and what not. Quid multa ?
 The end
 Was a clear class-room, and a quiet leer
 From grave folk, and a sour reproachful glance
 From those in chief who, cap in hand, installed
 The new professor scarce a year before ;
 And a vast flourish about patient merit Obscured awhile by flashy tricks, but sure Sooner or later to emerge in splendour—
 Of which the example was some luckless wight Whom my arrival had discomfited,
 But now, it seems, the general voice recalled
 To fill my chair and so efface the stain Basil had long incurred. I sought no better, Only a quiet dismissal from my post.
 And from my heart I wished them better suited And better served. Good night to Basil, then !
 But fast as I proposed to rid the tribe Of my obnoxious back, I could not spare them
 The pleasure of a parting kick.
Fest. You smile :
Par. Despise them as they merit !
 If I smile,
 'Tis with as very contempt as ever turned Flesh into stone. This courteous recompense !
 This grateful . . . Festus, were your nature fit To be defiled, your eyes the eyes to ache
 At gangrene-blotches, eating poison-blains,
 The ulcerous barky scurf of leprosy Which finds—a man, and leaves—a hideous thing That cannot but be mended by hell fire,
 —I would lay bare to you the human heart Which God cursed long ago, and devils make since Their pet nest and their never-tiring home.
 O, sages have discovered we are born

For various ends—to love, to know: But I,—now Festus shall divine!— has ever but I One stumbled, in his search, on any Am merely setting out once more, embracing signs Of a nature in us formed to hate? To My earliest aims again! What thinks hate? he now?
 If that be our true object which evokes Fest. Your aims? the aims?—to Our powers in fullest strength, be sure Know? and where is found
 'tis hate! The early trust . . .
 Yet men have doubted if the best and Par. Nay, not so fast; I say, bravest The aims—not the old means. You Of spirits can nourish him with hate know they made me alone. A laughing-stock; I was a fool; you I had not the monopoly of fools, know It seems at Basil. The when and the how: hardly those Fest. But your plans, your plans! means again!
 I have yet to learn your purpose, Not but they had their beauty; who Aureole! should know ponderous shame, still To shrink up like a crushed snail, under- They were dreams, so let them vanish, go yet in beauty,

 In silence and desist from further toil If that may be. Stay: thus they pass
 And so subside into a monument in song! [He sings.]

 That fitting dignity might be preserved;

No little proud was I; though the list of drugs Smacks of my old vocation, and the verse
 Halts like the best of Luther's psalms.
Fest. But, Aureole, Talk not thus wildly and madly. I am
 here—
 Did you know all! I have travelled far,
 indeed,
 To learn your wishes. Be yourself
 again!
 For in this mood I recognize you less Than in the horrible despondency I witnessed last. You may account this, joy;
 But rather let me gaze on that despair Than hear these incoherent words and
 see
 This flushed cheek and intensely-sparkling eye.
Par. Why, man, I was light-hearted in my prime,
 I am light-hearted now; what would you have?
 Aprile was a poet, I make songs—
 'Tis the very augury of success I want!
 Why should I not be joyous now as
 then?
Fest. Joyous! and how? and what remains for joy?
 You have declared the ends (which I am sick
 Of naming) are impracticable.
Par. Ay, Pursued as I pursued them—the arch-
 fool!
 Listen: my plan will please you not, 'tis
 like,
 But you are little versed in the world's
 ways.
 This is my plan—(first drinking its good luck)—
 I will accept all helps; all I despised So rashly at the outset, equally With early impulses, late years have quenched:
 I have tried each way singly: now for
 both!
 All helps! no one sort shall exclude the
 rest.
 I seek to know and to enjoy at once,
 Not one without the other as before.

Suppose my labour should seem God's own cause
 Once more, as first I dreamed,—it shall not baulk me
 Of the meanest, earthliest, sensualet
 delight
 That may be snatched; for every joy is
 gain,
 And gain is gain, however small. My
 soul
 Can die then, nor be taunted—'what was gained?'
 Nor, on the other hand, should pleasure
 follow
 As though I had not spurned her hitherto, Shall she o'ercloud my spirit's rapt communion
 With the tumultuous Past, the teeming Future,
 Glorious with visions of a full success!
Fest. Success!
Par. And wherefore not?
 Why not prefer Results obtained in my best state of being,
 To those derived alone from seasons
 dark
 As the thoughts they bred? When I was best, my youth Unwasted, seemed success not surest
 too?
 It is the nature of darkness to obscure.
 I am a wanderer: I remember well One journey, how I feared the track was missed,
 So long the city I desired to reach Lay hid; when suddenly its spires afar Flashed through the circling clouds; you may conceive My transport. Soon the vapours closed
 again,
 But I had seen the city, and one such
 glance
 No darkness could obscure: nor shall the Present—
 A few dull hours, a passing shame or two,
 Destroy the vivid memories of the Past.
 I will fight the battle out!—a little
 spent
 Perhaps, but still an able combatant.
 You look at my grey hair and furrowed
 brow?
 But I can turn even weakness to account:

Of many tricks I know, 'tis not the least To push the ruins of my frame, whereon
The fire of vigour trembles scarce alive, Into a heap, and send the flame aloft !
What should I do with age ? So, sickness lends

An aid ; it being, I fear, the source of all We boast of : mind is nothing but disease

And natural health is ignorance.

Fest. I see
But one good symptom in this notable
scheme.

I feared your sudden journey had in view
To wreak immediate vengeance on your foes ;

'Tis not so : I am glad.

Par. And if I please To spit on them, to trample them, what
then ?

'Tis sorry warfare truly, but the fools Provoke it. I would spare their selfconceit,

But if they must provoke me, cannot suffer

Forbearance on my part, if I may keep No quality in the shade, must needs put
forth

Power to match power, my strength against their strength,

And teach them their own game with their own arms—

Why, be it so and let them take their chance !

I am above them like a God, there's no Hiding the fact : what idle scruples,
then,

Were those that ever bade me soften it, Communicate it gently to the world,
Instead of proving my supremacy, Taking my natural station o'er their heads,

Then owning all the glory was a man's !
—And in my elevation man's would be.
But live and learn, though life's short, learning, hard !

And therefore, though the wreck of my past self,

I fear, dear Pütter, that your lecture-
room :

Must wait awhile for its best ornament,
The penitent empiric, who set up

For somebody, but soon was taught his
place ;

Now, but too happy to be let confess His error, snuff the candles, and illustrate

(Fiat experientia corpore vili)

Your medicine's soundness in his person.
Wait,

Good Pütter !

Fest. He who sneers thus, is a
God !

Par. Ay, ay, laugh at me ! I am very glad

You are not gulled by all this swaggering ; you

Can see the root of the matter !—how I strive

To put a good face on the overthrow
I have experienced, and to bury and hide

My degradation in its length and breadth ;

How the mean motives I would make you think

Just mingle as is due with nobler aims, The appetites I modestly allow

May influence me as being mortal still—Do goad me, drive me on, and fast supplant

My youth's desires. You are no stupid dupe :

You find me out ! Yes, I had sent for
you

To palm these childish lies upon you,
Festus !

Laugh—you shall laugh at me !

Fest. The Past, then, Aureole, Proves nothing ? Is our interchange of
love

Yet to begin ? Have I to swear I mean No flattery in this speech or that ? For
you,

Whatever you say, there is no degradation ;

These low thoughts are no inmates of
your mind,

Or wherefore this disorder ? You are vexed

As much by the intrusion of base views, Familiar to your adversaries, as they Were troubled should your qualities alight

Amid their murky souls : not otherwise.
A stray wolf which the winter forces down

From our bleak hills, suffices to affright
A village in the vales—while foresters Sleep calm though all night long the famished troops

Snuff round and scratch against their crazy huts.

These evil thoughts are monsters, and will flee.

Par. May you be happy, Festus, my own friend!

Fest. Nay, further; the delights you fain would think

The superseders of your nobler aims, Though ordinary and harmless stimulants,

Will ne'er content you . . .

Par. Hush! I once despised them, But that soon passes. We are high at
first

In our demands, nor will abate a jot Of toil's strict value; but time passes
o'er,

And humbler spirits accept what we refuse:

In short, when some such comfort is doled out

As these delights, we cannot long retain The bitter contempt which urges us at
first

To hurl it back, but hug it to our breast And thankfully retire. This life of mine Must be lived out and a grave thoroughly
earned:

I am just fit for that and nought beside.
I told you once, I cannot now enjoy,

Unless I deem my knowledge gains through joy;

Nor can I know, but straight warm tears reveal

My need of linking also joy to knowledge:

So, on I drive, enjoying all I can,
And knowing all I can. I speak, of
course,

Confusedly; this will better explain—feel here!

Quick beating, is it not?—a fire of the
heart

To work off some way, this as well as any.
So, Festus sees me fairly launched; his calm

Compassionate look might have disturbed me once,

But now, far from rejecting, I invite What bids me press the closer, lay myself

Open before him, and be soothed with pity;

hope, if he command hope; and
believe

As he directs me—satiating myself With his enduring love. And Festus quits me

To give place to some credulous disciple Who holds that God is wise, but Paracelsus

Has his peculiar merits: I suck in That homage, chuckle o'er that admiration,

And then dismiss the fool; for night is
come.

And I betake myself to study again, Till patient searchings after hidden lore Half wring some bright truth from its prison; my frame Trembles, my forehead's veins swell out,

my hair

Tingles for triumph! Slow and sure the morn

Shall break on my pent room and dwindling lamp

And furnace dead, and scattered earths and ores;

When, with a failing heart and throbbing brow,

I must review my captured truth, sum
up

Its value, trace what ends to what begins, Its present power with its eventual bearings,

Latent affinities, the views it opens,
And its full length in perfecting my scheme.

I view it sternly circumscribed, cast
down

From the high place my fond hopes yielded it,

Proved worthless—which, in getting,
yet had cost

Another wrench to this fast-falling frame.

Then, quick, the cup to quaff, that chases sorrow!

I lapse back into youth, and take again My fluttering pulse, for evidence that
God

Means good to me, will make my cause
His own.

See! I have cast off this remorseless
care

Which clogged a spirit born to soar so free,

And mydimchamber has become a tent,
Festus is sitting by me, and his Michal . .

Why do you start? I say, she listening
here,

(For yonder's Wurzburg through the orchard-boughs)

Motions as though such ardent words should find

No echo in a maiden's quiet soul, But her pure bosom heaves, her eyes fill
fast

With tears, her sweet lips tremble all the while!

Ha, ha!

Fest. It seems, then, you expect to reap

No unreal joy from this your present
course,

But rather . . .

Par. Death! To die! I owe that much

To what, at least, I was. I should be sad

To live contented after such a fall,
To thrive and fatten after such reverse!

The whole plan is a makeshift, but will last

My time.

Fest. And you have never mused
and said,

'I had a noble purpose, and the strength To compass it; but I have stopped half-

way,

And wrongly given the firstfruits of my toll

To objects little worthy of the gift.
Why linger round them still? why clench my fault?

Why seek for consolation in defeat,
In vain endeavours to derive a beauty From ugliness? why seek to make the most

Of what no power can change, nor strive instead

With mighty effort to redeem the Past And, gathering up the treasures thus cast down,

To hold a steadfast course till I arrive At their fit destination and my own?

You have never pondered thus?

Par. Have I, you ask?
Often at midnight, when most fancies
come,

Would some such airy project visit me:
But ever at the end . . . or will you hear

The same thing in a tale, a parable?
You and I, wandering over the world wide,

Chance to set foot upon a desert coast.
Just as we cry, 'No human voice before Broke the inveterate silence of these rocks!'

—Their querulous echo startles us; we
turn:

What ravaged structure still looks o'er
the sea?

Some characters remain, too! While we read,

The sharp salt wind, impatient for the last

Of even this record, wistfully comes and

Or sings what we recover, mocking it.

This is the record; and my voice, the wind's.

[He sings.

Over the sea our galleys went,
With cleaving prows in order brave,

To a speeding wind and a bounding wave,

A gallant armament:

Each bark built out of a forest-tree,
Left leafy and rough as first it grew,

And nailed all over the gaping sides, Within and without, with black bull-hides, Seethed in fat and suppled in flame,

To bear the playful billows' game:

So, each good ship was rude to see,
Rude and bare to the outward view,

But each upbore a stately tent Where cedar-pales in scented row

Kept out the flakes of the dancing brine,
And an awning drooped the mast below,

In fold on fold of the purple fine,
That neither noontide nor star-shine Nor moonlight cold which maketh mad,

Might pierce the regal tenement.

When the sun dawned, oh, gay and glad We set the sail and plied the oar;

But when the night-wind blew like
breath,
For joy of one day's voyage more,
We sang together on the wide sea,
Like men at peace on a peaceful shore ;
Each sail was loosed to the wind so free, Each helm made sure by the twilight
star,

And in a sleep as calm as death,
We, the voyagers from afar, Lay stretched along, each weary crew
In a circle round its wondrous tent Whence gleamed soft light and curled rich scent,
And with light and perfume, music
too :

So the stars wheeled round, and the darkness past,
And at morn we started beside the mast,
And still each ship was sailing fast !

Now, one morn, land appeared !—a Dim trembling betwixt sea and sky :

' Avoid it,' cried our pilot, ' check The shout, restrain the eager eye !'
But the heaving sea was black behind
For many a night and many a day,
And land, though but a rock, drew nigh ;
So, we broke the cedar pales away,
Let the purple awning flap in the wind, And a statue bright was on every deck !

We shouted, every man of us,
And steered right into the harbour thus,
With pomp and paean glorious.

A hundred shapes of lucid stone !
All day we built its shrine for each,
A shrine of rock for every one,
Nor paused we till in the westering sun
We sat together on the beach
To sing because our task was done.
When lo ! what shouts and merry songs !
What laughter all the distance stirs !
A loaded raft with happy throngs Of gentle islanders !

' Our isles are just at hand,' they cried,
' Like cloudlets faint in even sleeping ; Our temple-gates are opened wide,
' Our olive-groves thick shade are keeping

For these majestic forms'—they cried.
Oh, then we awoke with sudden start

From our deep dream, and knew, too
late,
How bare the rock, how desolate,
Which had received our precious freight:
Yet we called out—' Depart !
Our gifts, once given, must here abide.
Our work is done ; we have no heart
To mar our work,'—we cried.

Fest. In truth ?

Par. Nay, wait : all this in tracings faint

May still be read on that deserted rock, On rugged stones strewn here and there, but piled

In order once : then follows—mark what follows :

' The sad rhyme of the men who proudly clung
To their first fault, and withered in their pride !'

Fest. Come back, then, Aureole ; as you fear God, come !

This is foul sin ; come back. Renounce the Past,

Forswear the Future ; look for joy no
more

But wait death's summons amid holy

And trust me for the event—peace, if not joy.

Return with me to Einsiedeln, dear Aureole !

Par. No way, no way ! it would not turn to good.

A spotless child sleeps on the flowering moss—

'Tis well for him ; but when a sinful
man,

Envyng such slumber, may desire to put

His guilt away, shall he return at once To rest by lying there ? Our sires knew
well

(Spite of the grave discoveries of their sons)

The fitting course for such ; dark cells, dim lamps,

A stone floor one may writhe on like a worm :

No mossy pillow blue with violets !

Fest. I see no symptom of these absolute

And tyrannous passions. You are calmer now.
 This verse-making can purge you well enough Without the terrible penance you describe.
 You love me still: the lusts you fear, will never Outrage your friend. To Einsiedeln, once more!
Par. But the word!
Par. No, no; those lusts forbid:
 They crouch, I know, cowering with half-shut eye Beside you; 'tis their nature. Thrust yourself Between them and their prey; let some fool style me Or king or quack, it matters not, and try Your wisdom, urge them to forego their treat!
 No, no; learn better and look deeper, Festus!
 If you knew how a devil sneers within me While you are talking now of this, now that,
 As though we differed scarcely save in trifles!
Fest. Do we so differ? True, change must proceed, Whether for good or ill; keep from me, which!
 Do not confide all secrets: I was born to hope, and you...
Par. To trust: you know the fruits!
Fest. Listen: I do believe, what you call trust Was self-delusion at the best: for, see! So long as God would kindly pioneer A path for you, and screen you from the world, Procure you full exemption from man's lot, Man's common hopes and fears, on the mere pretext Of your engagement in His service—yield you A limitless licence, make you God, in fact,
 And turn your slave—you were content to say Most courtly praises! What is it, at last, But selfishness without example? None Could trace God's will so plain as you, while yours Remained implied in it; but now you fail,
 And we, who prate about that will, are fools!
 In short, God's service is established here
 As He determines fit, and not your way, And this you cannot brook. Such discontent Is weak. Renounce all creatureship at once!
 Affirm an absolute right to have and use Your energies; as though the rivers should say—
 'We rush to the ocean; what have we to do With feeding streamlets, lingering in the vales, Sleeping in lazy pools?' Set up that plea,
 That will be bold at least!
Par. 'Tis like enough! The serviceable spirits are those, no doubt,
 The East produces: lo, the master nods,
 And they raise terraces and garden-grounds In one night's space; and, this done, straight begin Another century's sleep, to the great praise Of him that framed them wise and beautiful, Till a lamp's rubbing, or some chance akin, Wake them again. I am of different mould.
 I would have soothed my lord, and slaved for him,
 And done him service past my narrow bond,
 And thus I get rewarded for my pains! Beside, 'tis vain to talk of forwarding God's glory otherwise; this is alone The sphere of its increase, as far as men Increase it; why, then, look beyond this sphere?
 We are His glory; and if we be glorious,

Is not the thing achieved ?

Fest. Shall one like me Judge hearts like yours ? Though years have changed you much,
And you have left your first love, and retain Its empty shade to veil your crooked
ways,
Yet I still hold that you have honoured
God.
And who shall call your course without reward ?

For, wherefore this repining at defeat, Had triumph ne'er inured you to high hopes ?

I urge you to forsake the life you curse,
And what success attends me ?—simply talk

Of passion, weakness and remorse ; in
short,
Anything but the naked truth—you
choose

This so-despised career, and cheaply
hold

My happiness, or rather other men's.
Once more, return !

Par. And quickly. Oporinus Has pilfered half my secrets by this
time :

And we depart by daybreak, I am weary,

I know not how ; not even the wine-cup soothes

My brain to-night . . .

Do you not thoroughly despise me,
Festus ?

No flattery ! One like you needs not be told

We live and breathe deceiving and deceived.

Do you not scorn me from your heart of hearts,

Me and my cant, my petty subterfuges, My rhymes and all this frothy shower of words,

My glozing self-deceit, my outward crust

Of lies which wrap, as tetter, morpew, furfair

Wrap the sound flesh ?—so, see you flatter not !

Even God flatters ! but my friend, at
least,

Is true. I would depart, secure hence-
forth

Against all further insult, hate and
wrong

From puny foes ; my one friend's scorn shall brand me :

No fear of sinking deeper !

Fest. No, dear Aureole !

No, no ; I came to counsel faithfully.
There are old rules, made long ere we were born,

By which I judge you. I, so fallible,

So infinitely low beside your mighty, Majestic spirit !—even I can see

You own some higher law than ours which calls

Sin, what is no sin—weakness, what is
strength.

But I have only these, such as they are,
To guide me ; and I blame you where they bid,

Only so long as blaming promises

To win peace for your soul : the more, that sorrow

Has fallen on me of late, and they have helped me

So that I faint not under my distress.
But wherefore should I scruple to avow

In spite of all, as brother judging brother, Your fate to me is most inexplicable ?

And should you perish without recompense

And satisfaction yet—too hastily I have relied on love : you may have sinned, But you have loved. As a mere human matter—

As I would have God deal with fragile

men
In the end—I say that you will triumph

yet !
Par. Have you felt sorrow, Festus ?—

'tis because You love me. Sorrow, and sweet Michal yours !

Well thought on ; never let her know this last Dull winding-up of all : these miscreants dared

Insult me—me she loved : so, grieve her not.

Fest. Your ill success can little grieve her now.

Par. Michal is dead ! pray Christ we do not craze !

Fest. Aureole, dear Aureole, look not on me thus !

Fool, fool ! this is the heart grown sorrow-proof—

I cannot bear those eyes.

Par. Nay, really dead ?

Fest. 'Tis scarce a month.

Par. Stone dead !

—then you have laid her

Among the flowers ere this. Now, do you know,

I can reveal a secret which shall comfort Even you. I have no julep, as men
think,

To cheat the grave ; but a far better secret.

Know, then, you did not ill to trust your love

To the cold earth : I have thought much of it :

For I believe we do not wholly die.

Fest. Aureole !

Par. Nay, do not laugh ;
there is a reason

For what I say : I think the soul can never

Taste death. I am, just now, as you may see,

Very unfit to put so strange a thought In an intelligible dress of words ;

But take it as my trust, she is not dead.

Fest. But not on this account alone ?
you surely,

—Aureole, you have believed this all along ?

Par. And Michal sleeps among the roots and dews,

While I am moved at Basil, and full of schemes

For Nuremberg, and hoping and despairing,

As though it mattered how the farce plays out,

So it be quickly played. Away, away !
Have your will, rabble ! while we fight
the prize,

Troop you in safety to the snug back-
seats,

And leave a clear arena for the brave About to perish for your sport !—Behold !

V. PARACELSUS ATTAINS.

SCENE, Salzburg ; a cell in the Hospital of St. Sebastian, 1541.

FESTUS, PARACELSUS.

Fest. No change ! The weary night is wellhigh spent,

The lamp burns low, and through the casement-bars

Grey morning glimmers feebly : yet no
change !

Another night, and still no sigh has stirred

That fallen discoloured mouth, no pang relit

Those fixed eyes, quenched by the decaying body,

Like torch-flame choked in dust. While all beside

Was breaking, to the last they held out bright,

As a stronghold where life intrenched
itself ;

But they are dead now—very blind and
dead :

He will drowse into death without a groan !

My Aureole—my forgotten, ruined Aureole !

The days are gone, are gone ! How grand thou wast !

And now not one of those who struck thee down—

Poor, glorious spirit—concerns him even to stay

And satisfy himself his little hand Could turn God's image to a livid thing.

Another night, and yet no change !
'Tis much

That I should sit by him, and bathe his
brow,

And chafe his hands ; 'tis much : but he will sure

Know me, and look on me, and speak to
me

Once more—but only once ! His hollow
cheek

Looked all night long as though a creeping laugh

At his own state were just about to break From the dying man : my brain swam, my throat swelled,

And yet I could not turn away. In truth, They told me how, when first brought here, he seemed Resolved to live, to lose no faculty ;
 Thus striving to keep up his shattered strength, Until they bore him to this stifling cell :
 When straight his features fell, an hour made white
 The flushed face and relaxed the quivering limb, Only the eye remained intense awhile
 As though it recognized the tomb-like place,
 And then he lay as here he lies.

Ay, here !

Here is earth's noblest, nobly garlanded—
 Her bravest champion with his well-won meed—
 Her best achievement, her sublime amends For countless generations fleeting fast And followed by no trace ;—the creature god
 She instances when angels would dispute
 The title of her brood to rank with them.
 Angels, this is our angel ! Those bright forms We clothe with purple, crown and call to thrones, Are human ; but not his : those are but men Whom other men press round and kneel before ;
 Those palaces are dwelt in by mankind ; Higher provision is for him you seek Amid our pomps and glories : see it here !
 Behold earth's paragon ! Now, raise thee, clay !
 God ! Thou art Love ! I build my faith on that !
 Even as I watch beside Thy tortured child Unconscious whose hot tears fall fast by him, So doth Thy right hand guide us through the world Wherein we stumble. God ! what shall we say ?

How has he sinned ? How else should he have done ?
 Surely he sought Thy praise—Thy praise, for all He might be busied by the task so much As to forget awhile its proper end.
 Dost Thou well, Lord ? Thou canst not but prefer That I should range myself upon his side—How could he stop at every step to set Thy glory forth ? Hadst Thou but granted him Success, Thy honour would have crowned success, A halo round a star. Or, say he erred,— Save him, dear God ; it will be like Thee : bathe him In light and life ! Thou art not made like us ;
 We should be wroth in such a case ; but Thou Forgiest—so, forgive these passionate thoughts Which come unsought and will not pass away !
 I know Thee, who hast kept my path, and made Light for me in the darkness, tempering sorrow
 So that it reached me like a solemn joy ;
 It were too strange that I should doubt Thy love.
 But what am I ? Thou madest him and knowest How he was fashioned. I could never err That way : the quiet place beside Thy feet, Reserved for me, was ever in my thoughts :
 But he—Thou shouldst have favoured him as well !
 Ah ! he wakes ! Aureole, I am here ! 'tis Festus !
 I cast away all wishes save one wish—Let him but know me, only speak to me !
 He mutters ; louder and louder ; any other Than I, with brain less laden, could collect What he pours forth. Dear Aureole, do but look !

Is it talking or singing thus he utters
 fast ?
 Misery, that he should fix me with his
 eye, Quick talking to some other all the
 while !
 If he would husband this wild vehemence
 Which frustrates its intent !—I heard,
 I know
 I heard my name amid those rapid
 words.
 Oh, he will know me yet ! Could I divert
 This current, lead it somehow gently
 back Into the channels of the Past !—His eye, Brighter than ever ! It must recognize
 me !

Let me speak to him in another's name.
 I am Erasmus : I am here to pray That Paracelsus use his skill for me.
 The schools of Paris and of Padua send These questions for your learning to resolve.
 We are your students, noble master :
 leave This wretched cell, what business have
 you here ?
 Our class awaits you ; come to us once
 more !
 (O agony ! the utmost I can do Touches him not ; how else arrest his ear ?)
 I am commissioned . . . I shall craze like
 him !
 Better be mute and see what God shall send.

Par. Stay, stay with me !
Fest. I will ; I am come here To stay with you—Festus, you loved of
 old ;
 Festus, you know, you must know !
Par. Festus ! Where 's Aprile, then ? Has he not chanted softly The melodies I heard all night ? I could not Get to him for a cold hand on my breast,
 But I made out his music well enough, O, well enough ! If they have filled him full
 With magical music, as they freight a star

With light, and have remitted all his
 sin,
 They will forgive me too, I too shall
 know !
Fest. Festus, your Festus !
Par. Ask him if Aprile Knows as he Loves—if I shall Love and
 Know ?
 I try ; but that cold hand, like lead—so cold !
Fest. My hand, see !
Par. Ah, the curse, Aprile, Aprile !
 We get so near—so very, very near !
 'Tis an old tale : Jove strikes the Titans
 down
 Not when they set about their mountain-piling,
 But when another rock would crown their work !
 And Phaeton—doubtless his first radian plunge Astonished mortals ; though the gods were calm,
 And Jove prepared his thunder : all old tales !
Fest. And what are these to you ?
Par. Ay, fiends must laugh So cruelly, so well ; most like I never Could tread a single pleasure under-
 foot,
 But they were grinning by my side, were chuckling
 To see me toil and drop away by flakes !
 Hell-spawn ! I am glad, most glad, that thus I fail !
 Your cunning has o'ershot its aim. One
 year,
 One month, perhaps, and I had served your turn !
 You should have curbed your spite awhile. But now,
 Who will believe 'twas you that held me
 back ?
 Listen : there 's shame, and hissing, and contempt,
 And none but laughs who names me, none but spits Measureless scorn upon me, me alone, The quack, the cheat, the liar,—all on
 me !
 And thus your famous plan to sink
 mankind
 In silence and despair, by teaching them

One of their race had probed the inmost truth, Had done all man could do, yet failed no less—Your wise plan proves abortive. Men despair?
 Ha, ha! why, they are hooting the empiric,
 The ignorant and incapable fool who rushed Madly upon a work beyond his wits;
 Nor doubt they but the simplest of themselves Could bring the matter to triumphant issue.
 So pick and choose, among them all, accursed!
 Try now, persuade some other to slave for you,
 To ruin body and soul to work your ends!
 No, no; I am the first and last, I think.
Fest. Dear friend, who are accursed? who has done . . .
Par. What have I done? Fiends dare ask that? or you, Brave men? Oh, you can chime in boldly, backed By the others! What had you to do, sage peers?
 Here stand my rivals; Latin, Arab, Jew, Greek, join dead hands against me: all I ask Is, that the world enrol my name with theirs,
 And even this poor privilege, it seems, They range themselves, prepared to disallow.
 Only observe: why, fiends may learn from them!
 How they talk calmly of my throes, my fierce Aspirings, terrible watchings, each one claiming Its price of blood and brain; how they dissect And sneeringly disparage the few truths Got at a life's cost; they too hanging the while About my neck, their lies misleading me And their dead names browbeating me! Grey crew, Yet steeped in fresh malevolence from hell,
 Is there a reason for your hate? My truths Have shaken a little the palm about each prince?
 Just think, Aprile, all these leering dotards Were bent on nothing less than to be crowned As we! That yellow blear-eyed wretch in chief To whom the rest cringe low with feigned respect, Galen of Pergamos and hell—nay speak
 The tale, old man! We met there face to face:
 I said the crown should fall from thee. Once more We meet as in that ghastly vestibule: Look to my brow! Have I redeemed my pledge?
Fest. Peace, peace; ah, see!
Par. Oh, emptiness of fame! Oh Persic Zoroaster, lord of stars!
 —Who said these old renowns, dead long ago, Could make me overlook the living world
 To gaze through gloom at where they stood, indeed, But stand no longer? What a warm light life After the shade! In truth, my delicate witch, My serpent-queen, you did but well to hide
 The juggles I had else detected. Fire May well run harmless o'er a breast like yours!
 The cave was not so darkened by the smoke
 But that your white limbs dazzled me: oh, white,
 And panting as they twinkled, wildly dancing!
 I cared not for your passionate gestures then,
 But now I have forgotten the charm of charms,
 The foolish knowledge which I came to seek,
 While I remember that quaint dance; and thus

I am come back, not for those mummeries,

But to love you, and to kiss your little feet

Soft as an ermine's winter coat !

Fest. A light

Will struggle through these thronging words at last,

As in the angry and tumultuous West

A soft star trembles through the drifting clouds.

These are the strivings of a spirit which hates

So sad a vault should coop it, and calls
up

The Past to stand between it and its
fate.

Were he at Einsiedeln—or Michal here !

Par. Cruel ! I seek her now—I kneel
—I shriek—

I clasp her vesture—but she fades, still fades ;

And she is gone ; sweet human love is
gone !

'Tis only when they spring to heaven that angels

Reveal themselves to you ; they sit all
day

Beside you, and lie down at night by you Who care not for their presence, muse or sleep,

And all at once they leave you and you know them !

We are so fooled, so cheated ! Why, even now

I am not too secure against foul play :
The shadows deepen and the walls contract—

No doubt some treachery is going on !
'Tis very dusk. Where are we put,

Aprile ?

Have they left us in the lurch ? This murky, loathsome

Death-trap, this slaughter-house, is not the hall

In the golden city ! Keep by me, Aprile !
There is a hand groping amid the black-

ness

To catch us. Have the spider-fingers got you,

Poet ? Hold on me for your life ! if once They pull you !—Hold !

'Tis but a dream—no more !

I have you still ; the sun comes out
again ;

Let us be happy : all will yet go well !

Let us confer : is it not like, Aprile,

That spite of trouble, this ordeal passed,

The value of my labours ascertained,

Just as some stream foams long among the rocks

But after glideth glassy to the sea,

So, full content shall henceforth be my lot ?

What think you, poet ? Louder ! Your clear voice

Vibrates too like a harp-string. Do you ask

How could I still remain on earth, should God

Grant me the great approval which I

I, you, and God can comprehend each other,

But men would murmur, and with cause enough ;

For when they saw me, stainless of all
sin,

Preserved and sanctified by inward light,
They would complain that comfort, shut from them,

I drank thus unespied ; that they live
on,

Nor taste the quiet of a constant joy,
For ache and care and doubt and weariness,

While I am calm ; help being vouchsafed to me,

And hid from them !—'Twere best consider that !

You reason well, Aprile ; but at least Let me know this, and die ! Is this too

much ?

I will learn this, if God so please, and
die !

If Thou shalt please, dear God, if Thou shalt please !

We are so weak, we know our motives
least

In their confused beginning. If at first I sought . . . but wherefore bear my heart to Thee ?

I know Thy mercy ; and already
thoughts

Flock fast about my soul to comfort it

And intimate I cannot wholly fail, For love and praise would clasp me willingly Could I resolve to seek them. Thou art good,
 And I should be content. Yet—yet first show
 I have done wrong in daring ! Rather give
 The supernatural consciousness of
     strength
 That fed my youth ! One only hour of
     that
 With Thee to help—O what should bar
     me then !
 Lost, lost ! Thus things are ordered here ! God's creatures, And yet He takes no pride in us !—none,
     none !
 Truly there needs another life to come !
 If this be all—(I must tell Festus that)
 And other life await us not—for one,
 I say 'tis a poor cheat, a stupid bungle,
 A wretched failure. I, for one, protest Against it, and I hurl it back with scorn !
 Well, onward though alone : small time
     remains,
 And much to do : I must have fruit, must reap Some profit from my toils. I doubt my body Will hardly serve me through ; while I have laboured
 It has decayed ; and now that I demand Its best assistance, it will crumble fast :
 A sad thought, a sad fate ! How very full Of wormwood 'tis, that just at altar-
     service,
 The rapt hymn rising with the rolling
     smoke,
 Whenglorydawnsand all is atthe best—
 The sacred fire may flicker and grow
     faint
 And die for want of a wood-piler's help !
 Thus fades the flagging body, and the
     soul
 Is pulled down in the overthrow. Well,
     well—
 Let men catch every word, let them lose nought
 Of what I say ; something may yet be
     done.

They are ruins ! Trust me who am one of you !
 All ruins, glorious once, but lonely now.
 It makes my heart sick to behold you crouch
 Beside your desolate fane : the arches
     dim,
 The crumbling columns grand against the moon—
 Could I but rear them up once more—but that May never be, so leave them ! Trust me,
     friends,
 Why should you linger here when I have built
 A far resplendent temple, all your own ?
 Trust me, they are but ruins ! See,
     Aprile,
 Men will not heed ! Yet were I not prepared With better refuge for them, tongue of
     mine Should ne'er reveal how blank their dwelling is :
 I would sit down in silence with the rest.
 Ha, what ? you spit at me, you grin and shriek
 Contempt into my ear—my ear which drank
 God's accents once ? you curse me ?
     Why men, men,
 I am not formed for it ! Those hideous
     eyes
 Will be before me sleeping, waking, praying,
 They will not let me even die. Spare, spare me,
 Sinning or no, forget that, only spare me That horrible scorn ! You thought I could support it, But now you see what silly fragile creature Cowers thus. I am not good nor bad
     enough,
 Not Christ nor Cain, yet even Cain was saved
 From hate like this. Let me but totter
     back !
 Perhaps I shall elude those jeers which creep Into my very brain, and shut these scorched

Eyelids, and keep those mocking faces
 out.
 Listen, Aprile ! I am very calm :
 Be not deceived, there is no passion here Where the blood leaps like an imprisoned
 thing :
 I am calm : I will exterminate the race !
 Enough of that : 'tis said and it shall
 be.
 And now be merry : safe and sound
 am I Who broke through their best ranks to get at you.
 And such a havoc, such a rout, Aprile !
Fest. Have you no thought, no memory for me, Aureole ? I am so wretched—my pure Michal
 Is gone, and you alone are left to me, And even you forget me. Take my
 hand—
 Lean on me, thus. Do you not know me, Aureole ?
Par. Festus, my own friend, you are come at last ?
 As you say, 'tis an awful enterprise ;
 But you believe I shall go through with
 it :
 'Tis like you, and I thank you. Thank him for me,
 Dear Michal ! See how bright St.
 Saviour's spire Flames in the sunset ; all its figures quaint Gay in the glancing light : you might conceive them
 A troop of yellow-vested white-haired Jews
 Bound for their own land where redemption dawns !
Fest. Not that blest time—not our youth's time, dear God !
Par. Ha—stay ! true, I forget—all is done since !
 And he is come to judge me. How he speaks,
 How calm, how well ! yes, it is true, all
 true ;
 All quackery ; all deceit ! myself can laugh
 The first at it, if you desire : but still You know the obstacles which taught me tricks

So foreign to my nature—envy and
 hate,
 Blind opposition, brutal prejudice, Bald ignorance—what wonder if I sunk To humour men the way they most approved ?
 My cheats were never palmed on such as
 you,
 Dear Festus ! I will kneel if you require
 me,
 Impart the meagre knowledge I possess, Explain its bounded nature, and avow My insufficiency—whate'er you will :
 I give the fight up ! let there be an
 end,
 A privacy, an obscure nook for me.
 I want to be forgotten even by God !
 But if that cannot be, dear Festus, lay
 me,
 When I shall die, within some narrow
 grave,
 Not by itself—for that would be too proud—
 But where such graves are thickest ; let it look Nowise distinguished from the hillocks
 round,
 So that the peasant at his brother's bed May tread upon my own and know it
 not ;
 And we shall all be equal at the last,
 Or classed according to life's natural
 ranks,
 Fathers, sons, brothers, friends—not rich, nor wise, Nor gifted : lay me thus, then say, ' He lived
 Too much advanced before his brother
 men ;
 They kept him still in front : 'twas for their good.
 But yet a dangerous station. It were strange
 That he should tell God he had never ranked With men : so, here at least he is a
 man !'
Fest. That God shall take thee to His breast, dear spirit, Unto His breast, be sure ! and here on
 earth
 Shall splendour sit upon thy name for ever !

Sun! all the heaven is glad for thee: I shall dream else. Speak on! ay, what care leaning so!
 If lower mountains light their snowy Fest. Thus the Mayne glideth phares Where my Love abideth.
 At thine effulgence, yet acknowledge Sleep's no softer: it proceeds not On through lawns, on through meads, The source of day? Their theft shall be On and on, whate'er befall, their bale: Meandering and musical,
 For after-ages shall retrack thy beams, Though the niggard pasturage
 And put aside the crowd of busy ones Bears not on its shaven ledge And worship thee alone—the master- Aught but weeds and waving grasses mind, To view the river as it passes, The thinker, the explorer, the creator! Save here and there a scanty patch Then, who should sneer at the convul- Of primroses, too faint to catch sive throes A weary bee.
 With which thy deeds were born, would scorn as well Par. More, more; say on!
 The winding sheet of subterraneous fire Fest. And scarce it pushes Which, pent and writhing, sends no less Its gentle way through strangling rushes, at last Where the glossy kingfisher Huge islands up amid the simmering Flutters when noon-heats are near, sea! Glad the shelving banks to shun, Behold thy might in me! thou hast Red and steaming in the sun, infused Where the shrew-mouse with pale Thy soul in mine; and I am grand as throat thou, Burrows, and the speckled stoat; Seeing I comprehend thee—I so simple, Where the quick sandpipers flit Thou so august! I recognize thee first; In and out the marl and grit I saw thee rise, I watched thee early and That seems to breed them, brown as late, they:
 And though no glance reveal thou dost Nought disturbs its quiet way, accept Save some lazy stork that springs, My homage—thus no less I proffer it, Trailing it with legs and wings,
 And bid thee enter gloriously thy rest! Whom the shy fox from the hill Par. Festus! Rouses, creep he ne'er so still.
Fest. I am for noble Aureole, God! Par. My heart! they loose my heart, I am upon his side, come weal or woe! those simple words;
 His portion shall be mine! He has done Its darkness passes, which nought else well! could touch:
 I would have sinned, had I been strong Like some dark snake that force may enough, not expel,
 As he has sinned! Reward him or I Which glideth out to music sweet and waive low.
 Reward! If Thou canst find no place for What were you doing when your voice him, broke through
 He shall be king elsewhere, and I will be A chaos of ugly images? You, indeed!
 His slave for ever! There are two of us! Are you alone here?
Par. Dear Festus! Fest. All alone: you know me?
Fest. Here, dear Aureole! This cell? ever by you! Par. An unexceptionable vault: Par. Nay, speak on, or I dream again. Good brick and stone: the bats kept Speak on! out, the rats Some story, anything—only your voice. Kept in: a snug nook: how should I mistake it?

Fest. But wherefore am I here ?
Par. Ah, well remembered !
 Why, for a purpose—for a purpose,
Festus !
 'Tis like me : here I trifle while time And this occasion, lost, will ne'er
 return !
 You are here to be instructed. I will tell God's message ; but I have so much to
 say,
 I fear to leave half out. All is confused No doubt ; but doubtless you will learn in time.
 He would not else have brought you here : no doubt
 I shall see clearer soon.
Fest. Tell me but this—
 You are not in despair ?
Par. I ? and for what ?
Fest. Alas, alas ! he knows not, as I feared !
Par. What is it you would ask me with that earnest,
 Dear, searching face ?
Fest. How feel you, Aureole ?
Par. Well !
 Well : 'tis a strange thing. I am dying,
Festus,
 And now that fast the storm of life sub-
 sides,
 I first perceive how great the whirl has
 been.
 I was calm then, who am so dizzy now—Calm in the thick of the tempest, but no
 less
 A partner of its motion and mixed up With its career. The hurricane is spent,
 And the good boat speeds through the brightening weather ;
 But is it earth or sea that heaves below
 The gulf rolls like a meadow-swell, o'er-strewn
 With ravaged boughs and remnants of the shore ;
 And now some islet, loosened from the
 land, Swims past with all its trees, sailing to ocean ;
 And now the air is full of upturned canes.
 Light strippings from the fan-trees.
 tamarisks

Unrooted, with their birds still clinging to them, All high in the wind. Even so my varied life Drifts by me ; I am young, old, happy,
 sad,
 Hoping, desponding, acting, taking rest,
 And all at once : that is, those past conditions Float back at once on me. If I select Some special epoch from the crowd, 'tis but
 To will, and straight the rest dissolve
 away
 And only that particular state is present With all its long-forgotten circumstance Distinct and vivid as at first—myself A careless looker-on and nothing more !
 Indifferent and amused but nothing
 more !
 And this is death : I understand it all.
 New being waits me ; new perceptions must
 Be born in me before I plunge therein ; Which last is Death's affair ; and while
 I speak,
 Minute by minute he is filling me With power ; and while my foot is on the threshold Of boundless life—the doors unopened
 yet,
 All preparations not complete within—
 I turn new knowledge upon old events,
 And the effect is . . . but I must not tell ; It is not lawful. Your own turn will
 come
 One day. Wait, Festus ! You will die
 like me !
Fest. 'Tis of that past life that I burn
 to hear !
Par. You wonder it engages me just
 now ?
 In truth, I wonder too. What's life to
 me ?
 Where'er I look is fire, where'er I listen Music, and where I tend bliss evermore.
 Yet how can I refrain ? 'Tis a refined Delight to view those chances,—one last view.
 I am so near the perils I escape, That I must play with them and turn them over,
 To feel how fully they are past and gone.

Still it is like some further cause exists For this peculiar mood—some hidden
purpose ;

Did I not tell you something of it,
Festus ?

I had it fast, but it has somehow slipped Away from me ; it will return anon.

Fest. (Indeed his cheek seems young again, his voice

Complete with its old tones : that little laugh

Concluding every phrase, with upturned
eye,

As though one stooped above his head
to whom

He looked for confirmation and approval,

Where was it gone so long, so well preserved ?

Then, the fore-finger pointing as he speaks,

Like one who traces in an open book The matter he declares ; 'tis many a year Since I remarked it last : and this in

him,

But now a ghastly wreck !)

And can it be,
Dear Aureole, you have then found out
at last

That worldly things are utter vanity ?
That man is made for weakness, and should wait

In patient ignorance till God appoint . . .

Par. Ha, the purpose, the true purpose : that is it

How could I fail to apprehend ! You
here,

I thus ! But no more trifling ; I see all,
I know all : my last mission shall be done

If strength suffice. No trifling ! Stay ; this posture

Hardly befits one thus about to speak :
I will arise.

Fest. Nay, Aureole, are you wild ?
You cannot leave your couch.

Par. No help ; no help ; Not even your hand. So ! there, I stand once more !

Speak from a couch ? I never lectured
thus.

My gown—the scarlet lined with fur ;
now put

The chain about my neck ; my signet-ring

Is still upon my hand, I think—even so ;
Last, my good sword ; ha, trusty Azoth, leapest Beneath thy master's grasp for the last

time ?

This couch shall be my throne : I bid these walls

Be consecrate, this wretched cell become

A shrine, for here God speaks to men through me !

Now, Festus, I am ready to begin.
Fest. I am dumb with wonder.

Par. Listen, therefore, Festus !
There will be time enough, but none to spare.

I must content myself with telling only The most important points. You doubtless feel

That I am happy, Festus ; very happy.
Fest. 'Tis no delusion which uplifts him thus !

Then you are pardoned, Aureole, all your sin ?

Par. Ay, pardoned ! yet why pardoned ?

Fest. 'Tis God's praise That man is bound to seek, and you . . .

Par. Have lived !
We have to live alone to set forth well God's praise. 'Tis true, I sinned much, as I thought,

And in effect need mercy, for I strove To do that very thing ; but, do your
best

Or worst, praise rises, and will rise for ever.

Pardon from Him, because of praise denied—

Who calls me to Himself to exalt Himself ?

He might laugh as I laugh !
Fest. But all comes

To the same thing. 'Tis fruitless for mankind

To fret themselves with what concerns them not ;

They are no use that way : they should lie down

Content as God has made them, nor go mad

In thriveless cares to better what is ill.

Par. No, no; mistake me not; let me not work

More harm than I have done! This is my case:

If I go joyous back to God, yet bring No offering, if I render up my soul Without the fruits it was ordained to bear,

If I appear the better to love God For sin, as one who has no claim on Him,—

Be not deceived! It may be surely thus With me, while higher prizes still await The mortal persevering to the end.

Beside I am not all so valueless:

I have been something, though too soon
I left

Following the instincts of that happy time!

Fest. What happy time? For God's sake, for man's sake,
What time was happy? All I hope to know

That answer will decide. What happy time?

Par. When but the time I vowed myself to man?

Fest. Great God, Thy judgments are inscrutable!

Par. Yes, it was in me; I was born for it—

I, Paracelsus: it was mine by right.

Doubtless a searching and impetuous soul

Might learn from its own motions that some task

Like this awaited it about the world;

Might seek somewhere in this blank life of ours

For fit delights to stay its longings vast;
And, grappling Nature, so prevail on her

To fill the creature full she dared to frame

Hungry for joy; and, bravely tyrannous,

Grow in demand, still craving more and more,

And make each joy conceded prove a

Of other joy to follow—bating nought
Of its desires, still seizing fresh pretence

To turn the knowledge and the rapture
wrong

As an extreme, last boon, from destiny, Into occasion for new covetings,

New strifes, new triumphs:—doubtless a strong soul

Alone, unaided might attain to this,
So glorious is our nature, so august Man's inborn uninstructed impulses, His naked spirit so majestic!

But this was born in me; I was made
so;

Thus much time saved: the feverish appetites,

The tumult of unproved desire, the unaimed

Uncertain yearnings, aspirations blind, Distrust, mistake, and all that ends in tears

Were saved me; thus I entered on my

course!
You may be sure I was not all exempt

From human trouble; just so much of
doubt

As bade me plant a surer foot upon
The sun-road, kept my eye unruined

'mid
The fierce and flashing splendour, set

my heart Trembling so much as warned me I stood there On sufferance—not to idly gaze, but cast

Light on a darkling race; save for that

doubt,
I stood at first where all aspire at last

To stand: the secret of the world was
mine.

I knew, I felt, (perception unexpressed, Uncomprehended by our narrow thought,

But somehow felt and known in every shift

And change in the spirit,—nay, in every pore

Of the body, even,)—what God is, what we are,

What life is—how God tastes an infinite joy

In infinite ways—one everlasting bliss, From whom all being emanates, all

power
Proceeds; in whom is life for ever-

more,

Yet whom existence in its lowest form Includes ; where dwells enjoyment there is He !

With still a flying point of bliss remote,
A happiness in store afar, a sphere Of distant glory in fullview ; thus climbs Pleasure its heights for ever and forever !
The centre-fire heaves underneath the
earth,

And the earth changes like a human
face ;

The molten ore bursts up among the rocks,

Winds into the stone's heart, out-branches bright

In hidden mines, spots barren river-beds, Crumbles into fine sand where sunbeams bask—

God joys therein ! The wroth sea's waves are edged

With foam, white as the bitten lip of
hate,

When, in the solitary waste, strange groups

Of young volcanos come up, cyclops-
like,

Staring together with their eyes on
flame—

God tastes a pleasure in their uncouth
pride !

Then all is still ; earth is a wintry clod :
But spring-wind, like a dancing psaltress,

Over its breast to waken it, rare verdure Buds tenderly upon rough banks, between

The withered tree-roots and the cracks of frost,

Like a smile striving with a wrinkled
face ;

The grass grows bright, the boughs are sworn with blooms

Like chrysalids impatient for the air,
The shining dorrs are busy, beetles run

Along the furrows, ants make their ado ;
Above, birds fly in merry flocks, the lark

Soars up and up, shivering for every joy ; Afar the ocean sleeps ; white fishinggulls

Flit where the strand is purple with its tribe

Of nested limpets ; savage creatures seek

Their loves in wood and plain—and God renews

His ancient rapture ! Thus He dwells in
all,

From life's minute beginnings, up at last To man—the consummation of this scheme

Of being, the completion of this sphere Of life : whose attributes had here and
there

Been scattered o'er the visible world
before,

Asking to be combined, dim fragments
meant

To be united in some wondrous whole, Imperfect qualities throughout creation, Suggesting some one creature yet to
make,

Some point where all those scattered rays should meet

Convergent in the faculties of man.
Power—neither put forth blindly, nor controlled

Calmly by perfect knowledge ; to be used

At risk, inspired or checked by hope and
fear :

Knowledge—not intuition, but the slow Uncertain fruit of an enhancing toil, Strengthened by love : love—not serenely pure,

But strong from weakness, like a chance-sown plant

Which, cast on stubborn soil, puts forth changed buds

And softer stains, unknown in happier
climes ;

Love which endures and doubts and is oppressed

And cherished, suffering much and much sustained,

A blind, oft-failing, yet believing love,
A half-enlightened, often-chequered
trust :—

Hints and previsions of which faculties, Are strewn confusedly everywhere about The inferior natures, and all lead up higher,

All shape out dimly the superior race,
The heir of hopes too fair to turn out
false,

And man appears at last. So far the seal

Is put on life ; one stage of being complete, One scheme wound up : and from the grand result A supplementary reflux of light, Illustrates all the inferior grades, explains Each back step in the circle. Not alone For their possessor dawn those qualities,
 But the new glory mixes with the heaven
 And earth ; man, once descried, imprints for ever His presence on all lifeless things : the winds Are henceforth voices, in a wail or shout,
 A querulous mutter, or a quick gay laugh, Never a senseless gust now man is born !
 The herded pines commune and have deep thoughts, A secret they assemble to discuss
 When the sun drops behind their trunks which glare Like grates of hell : the peerless cup afloat
 Of the lake-lily is an urn, some nymph Swims bearing high above her head : no bird Whistles unseen, but through the gaps above That let light in upon the gloomy woods, Ashape peeps from the breezy forest-top,
 Arch with small puckered mouth and mocking eye :
 The morn has enterprise, deep quiet droops With evening, triumph takes the sunset hour, Voluptuous transport ripens with the corn Beneath a warm moon like a happy face :
 —And this to fill us with regard for man,
 With apprehension of his passing worth, Desire to work his proper nature out,
 And ascertain his rank and final place, For these things tend still upward, progress is The law of life, man's self is not yet Man !
 Nor shall I deem his object served, his end Attained, his genuine strength put fairly forth,

While only here and there a star dispels
 The darkness, here and there a towering mind O'erlooks its prostrate fellows : when the host Is out at once to the despair of night,
 When all mankind alike is perfected,
 Equal in full-blown powers—then, not till then,
 I say, begins man's general infancy !
 For wherefore make account of feverish starts
 Of restless members of a dormant whole, Impatient nerves which quiver while the body Slumbers as in a grave ? O, long ago
 The brow was twitched, the tremulous lids astir,
 The peaceful mouth disturbed ; half-uttered speech Ruffled the lip, and then the teeth were set,
 The breath drawn sharp, the strong right-hand clenched stronger,
 As it would pluck a lion by the jaw ;
 The glorious creature laughed out even in sleep !
 But when full roused, each giant-limb awake,
 Each sinew strung, the great heart pulsing fast,
 He shall start up and stand on his own earth, Thence shall his long triumphant march begin,
 Thence shall his being date,—thus wholly roused,
 What he achieves shall be set down to him !
 When all the race is perfected alike
 As Man, that is ; all tended to mankind,
 And, man produced, all has its end thus far :
 But in completed man begins anew A tendency to God. Prognostics told Man's near approach ; so in man's self arise August anticipations, symbols, types Of a dim splendour ever on before In that eternal circle run by life.
 For men begin to pass their nature's bound,

And find new hopes and cares which fast supplant Their proper joys and griefs ; they outgrow all
 The narrow creeds of right and wrong, which fade
 Before the unmeasured thirst for good :
     while peace
 Rises within them ever more and more.
 Such men are even now upon the earth, Serene amid the half-formed creatures
     round
 Who should be saved by them and joined with them.
 Such was my task, and I was born to it—Free, as I said but now, from much that chains Spirits, high-dowered but limited and vexed
 By a divided and delusive aim,
 A shadow mocking a reality Whose truth avails not wholly to disperse
 The flitting mimic called up by itself, And so remains perplexed and nigh put
     out
 By its fantastic fellow's wavering gleam.
 I, from the first, was never cheated
     thus ;
 I never fashioned out a fancied good Distinct from man's ; a service to be
     done,
 A glory to be ministered unto,
 With powers put forth at man's expense, withdrawn
 From labouring in his behalf ; a strength Denied that might avail him. I cared
     not Lest his success ran counter to success Elsewhere : for God is glorified in man, And to man's glory, vowed I soul and limb.
 Yet, constituted thus, and thus endowed,
 I failed : I gazed on power till I grew
     blind.
 On power ; I could not take my eyes from that :
 That only, I thought, should be preserved, increased At any risk, displayed, struck out at
     once—
 The sign and note and character of man.

I saw no use in the Past : only a scene Of degradation, imbecility,
 The record of disgraces best forgotten,
 A sullen page in human chronicles Fit to erase. I saw no cause why man Should not be all-sufficient even now ; Or why his annals should be forced to
     tell
 That once the tide of light, about to break
 Upon the world, was sealed within its
     spring :
 I would have had one day, one moment's space,
 Change man's condition, push each slumbering claim
 Of mastery o'er the elemental world
 At once to full maturity, then roll Oblivion o'er the tools, and hide from
     man What night had ushered morn. Not so,
     dear child
 Of after-days, wilt thou reject the Past, Big with deep warnings of the proper tenure
 By which thou hast the earth : the Present for thee Shall have distinct and trembling beauty, seen Beside that Past's own shade whence, in relief,
 Its brightness shall stand out : nor on thee yet Shall burst the Future, as successive zones
 Of several wonder open on some spirit Flying secure and glad from heaven to
     heaven :
 But thou shalt painfully attain to joy, While hope and fear and love shall keep thee man !
 All this was hid from me : as one by one My dreams grew dim, my wide aims circumscribed, As actual good within my reach decreased, While obstacles sprung up this way and
     that
 To keep me from effecting half the sum, Small as it proved ; as objects, mean within
 The primal aggregate, seemed, even the
     least,

Itself a match for my concentrated strength—
 What wonder if I saw no way to shun Despair? The power I sought for man, seemed God's.
 In this conjuncture, as I prayed to die,
 A strange adventure made me know, one sin
 Had spotted my career from its uprise;
 I saw Aprile—my Aprile there!
 And as the poor melodious wretch dis-burthened
 His heart, and moaned his weakness in my ear,
 I learned my own deep error; love's undoing Taught me the worth of love in man's estate,
 And what proportion love should hold with power
 In his right constitution; love preceding Power, and with much power, always much more love;
 Love still too straitened in its present
 means,
 And earnest for new power to set it free.
 I learned this, and supposed the whole was learned:
 And thus, when men received with stupid wonder My first revealings, would have worshipped me,
 And I despised and loathed their proferred praise—
 When, with awakened eyes, they took revenge
 For past credulity in casting shame On my real knowledge, and I hated
 them—
 It was not strange I saw no good in
 man,
 To overbalance all the wear and waste Of faculties, displayed in vain, but born To prosper in some better sphere: and
 why?
 In my own heart love had not been made wise To trace love's faint beginnings in man
 kind,
 To know even hate is but a mask o
 love's,
 To see a good in evil, and a hope In ill-success; to sympathize, be proud Of their half-reasons, faint aspirings, dim Struggles for truth, their poorest fallacies,
 Their prejudice and fears and cares and doubts;
 Which all touch upon nobleness, despite Their error, all tend upwardly though weak,
 Like plants in mines which never saw
 the sun,
 But dream of him, and guess where he may be,
 And do their best to climb and get to him.
 All this I knew not, and I failed. Let
 men
 Regard me, and the poet dead long ago Who loved too rashly; and shape forth a third
 And better-tempered spirit, warned by
 both:
 As from the over-radiant star too mad To drink the light-springs, beamless thence itself—
 And the dark orb which borders the Ingulfed in icy night,—might have its
 course
 A temperate and equidistant world.
 Meanwhile, I have done well, though not all well.
 As yet men cannot do without contempt;
 'Tis for their good, and therefore fit awhile
 That they reject the weak, and scorn the
 false,
 Rather than praise the strong and true,
 in me:
 But after, they will know me. If I stoop Into a dark tremendous sea of cloud,
 It is but for a time; I press God's lamp Close to my breast; its splendour, soon or late,
 Will pierce the gloom: I shall emerge
 one day.
 You understand me? I have said
 enough?
Fest. Now die, dear Aureole!
Par. Festus, let my hand—This hand, lie in your own, my own true
 friend!
 Aprile! Hand in hand with you, Aprile Fest. And this was Paracelsus!

CHRISTMAS-EVE AND EASTER-DAY

FLORENCE, 1850

CHRISTMAS-EVE

I.

Out of the little chapel I flung,
 Into the fresh night-air again.
 Five minutes I waited, held my tongue
 In the doorway, to escape the rain That drove in gusts down the common's centre,

At the edge of which the chapel stands, Before I plucked up heart to enter.
 Heaven knows how many sorts of hands Reached past me, groping for the latch
 Of the inner door that hung on catch,
 More obstinate the more they fumbled, Till, giving way at last with a scold Of the crazy hinge, in squeezed or tum-bled

One sheep more to the rest in fold,
 And left me irresolute, standing sentry
 In the sheepfold's lath-and-plaster entry, Four feet long by two feet wide, Partitioned off from the vast inside—
 I blocked up half of it at least.
 No remedy; the rain kept driving.
 They eyed me much as some wild beast,
 That congregation, still arriving,
 Some of them by the main road, white
 A long way past me into the night, Skirting the common, then diverging;
 Not a few suddenly emerging From the common's self thro' the paling——They house in the gravel-pits perhaps, Where the road stops short with its safeguard border

 Of lamps, as tired of such disorder;— But the town's bad blood once more abruptly
 From a certain squalid knot of alleys, Where the town's bad blood once slept corruptly,
 Which now the little chapel rallies And leads into day again,—its priestli-
 ness
 Lending itself to hide their beastliness

So cleverly (thanks in part to the mason), And putting so cheery a whitewashed face on

Those neophytes too much in lack of it.
 That, where you cross the common as I did,

And meet the party thus presided,
 'Mount Zion,' with Love-lane at the back of it,

They front you as little disconcerted
 As, bound for the hills, her fate averted, And her wicked people made to mind
 him,
 Lot might have marched with Gomorrah behind him.

II.

Well, from the road, the lanes or the common,
 In came the flock: the fat weary
 woman,

Panting and bewildered, down-clapping
 Her umbrella with a mighty report, Grounded it by me, wry and flapping, A wreck of whalebones; then, with a snort,

Like a startled horse, at the interloper (Who humbly knew himself improper.
 But could not shrink up small enough) —Round to the door, and in,—the gruff

Hinge's invariable scold Making my very blood run cold.
 Prompt in the wake of her, up-pattered On broken clogs, the many-tattered Little old-faced, peaking, sister-turned-mother

Of the sickly babe she tried to smother Somehow up, with its spotted face, From the cold, on her breast, the one warm place;

She too must stop, wring the poor ends dry

Of a dragged shawl, and add thereby Her tribute to the door-mat, sopping Already from my own clothes' dropping,

Which yet she seemed to grudge I should stand on ;
 Then, stooping down to take off her pattens,
 She bore them defiantly, in each hand
 one,
 Planted together before her breast
 And its babe, as good as a lance in rest.
 Close on her heels, the dingy satins
 Of a female something, past me flitted, With lips as much too white, as a streak Lay far too red on each hollow cheek ;
 And it seemed the very door-hinge pitied
 All that was left of a woman once, Holding at least its tongue for the nonce.
 Then a tall yellow man, like the Penitent Thief,
 With his jaw bound up in a handkerchief,
 And eyelids screwed together tight,
 Led himself in by some inner light.
 And, except from him, from each that entered,
 I got the same interrogation—
 'What, you, the alien, you have ventured To take with us, the elect, your station ?
 A carer for none of it, a Galileo ?'— Thus, plain as print, I read the glance At a common prey, in each countenance As of huntsman giving his hounds the tallyho.
 And, when the door's cry drowned their wonder,
 The draught, it always sent in shutting,
 Made the flame of the single tallow candle
 In the cracked square lantern I stood under,
 Shoot its blue lip at me, rebutting,
 As it were, the luckless cause of scandal :
 I verily fancied the zealous light (In the chapel's secret, too !) for spite Would shudder itself clean off the wick, 'With the airs of a Saint John's Candlestick.
 There was no standing it much longer.
 'Good folks,' thought I, as resolve grew stronger,
 'This way you perform the Grand-Inquisitor,
 When the weather sends you a chance visitor ?

You are the men, and wisdom shall die
 with you,
 And none of the old Seven Churches vie
 with you !
 But still, despite the pretty perfection To which you carry your trick of exclusiveness,
 And, taking God's word under wise protection,
 Correct its tendency to diffusiveness, And bid one reach it over hot plough-
 ————
 Still, as I say, though you've found salvation,
 If I should choose to cry, as now,
 "Shares !"—
 See if the best of you bars me my ration !
 I prefer, if you please, for my expounder Of the laws of the feast, the feast's own Founder ;
 Mine's the same right with your poorest and sickliest, Supposing I don the marriage-vesti-
 ment :
 So, shut your mouth and open your Testament,
 And carve me my portion at your quickest !'
 Accordingly, as a shoemaker's lad
 With wizened face in want of soap, And wet apron wound round his waist like a rope, (After stopping outside, for his cough was bad,
 To get the fit over, poor gentle creature, And so avoid disturbing the preacher) —Passed in, I sent my elbow spike-
 wise
 At the shutting door, and entered likewise,
 Received the hinge's accustomed greet-
 ing,
 And crossed the threshold's magic pentacle,
 And found myself in full conventicle,
 —To wit, in Zion Chapel Meeting, On the Christmas-Eve of 'Forty-nine, Which, calling its flock to their special clover,
 Found all assembled and one sheep
 over,
 Whose lot, as the weather pleased, was mine.

III.

I very soon had enough of it.
 The hot smell and the human noises,
 And my neighbour's coat, the greasy cuff of it,
 Were a pebble-stone that a child's hand poises, Compared with the pig-of-lead-like pressure
 Of the preaching-man's immense stupidity,
 As he poured his doctrine forth, full
     measure,
 To meet his audience's avidity.
 You needed not the wit of the Sibyl
 To guess the cause of it all, in a twinkling:
 No sooner got our friend an inkling Of treasure hid in the Holy Bible, (Whene'er 'twas that the thought first struck him,
 How death, at unawares, might duck him Deeper than the grave, and quench The gin-shop's light in Hell's grim drench)
 Than he handled it so, in fine irreverence,
 As to hug the book of books to pieces:
 And, a patchwork of chapters and texts in severance,
 Not improved by the private dog's-ears and creases, Having clothed his own soul with, he'd fain see equipt yours,— So, tossed you again your Holy Scriptures.
 And you picked them up, in a sense, no
     doubt:
 Nay, had but a single face of my neighbours Appeared to suspect that the preacher's labours Were help which the world could be saved without,
 'Tis odds but I might have borne in quiet
 A qualm or two at my spiritual diet, Or (who can tell?) perchance even mustered Somewhat to urge in behalf of the sermon:
 But the flock sat on, divinely flustered, Sniffing, methought, its dew of Hermon With such content in every snuffle,
 As the devil inside us loves to ruffle.

My old fat woman purred with pleasure, And thumb round thumb went twirling faster, While she, to his periods keeping
     measure,
 Maternally devoured the pastor.
 The man with the handkerchief, untied it, Showed us a horrible wen inside it, Gave his eyelids yet another screwing, And rocked himself as the woman was doing.
 The shoemaker's lad, discreetly choking, Kept down his cough. 'Twas too provoking!
 My gorge rose at the nonsense and stuff
     of it,
 So, saying, like Eve when she plucked the apple,
 'I wanted a taste, and now there's enough of it,'
 I flung out of the little chapel.

There was a lull in the rain, a lull
 In the wind too; the moon was risen, And would have shone out pure and full,
 But for the ramparted cloud-prison,
 Block on block built up in the West,
 For what purpose the wind knows best,
 Who changes his mind continually.
 And the empty other half of the sky Seemed in its silence as if it knew What, any moment, might look through A chance-gap in that fortress massy:— Through its fissures you got hints
 Of the flying moon, by the shifting tints, Now, a dull lion-colour, now, brassy Burning to yellow, and whitest yellow, Like furnace-smoke just ere the flames bellow,
 All a-simmer with intense strain
 To let her through,—then blank again,
 At the hope of her appearance failing.
 Just by the chapel, a break in the railing Shows a narrow path directly across;
 'Tis ever dry walking there, on the moss—
 Besides, you go gently all the way uphill.
 I stooped under and soon felt better;
 My head grew light, my limbs more supple,

As I walked on, glad to have slept the fetter.

My mind was full of the scene I had left,
That placid flock, that pastor veciferant,

—How this outside was pure and different !

The sermon, now—what a mingled weft
Of good and ill ! were either less,
Its fellow had coloured the whole distinctly ;

But alas for the excellent earnestness,
And the truths, quite true if stated succinctly,

But as surely false, in their quaint presentment,

However to pastor and flock's contentment !

Say rather, such truths looked false to
your eyes,

With his provings and parallels twisted and twined,

Till how could you know them, grown double their size

In the natural fog of the good man's
mind,

Like yonder spots of our roadside lamps

Haloed about with the common's damps ?

Truth remains true, the fault's in the prover ;

The zeal was good, and the aspiration ;
And yet, and yet, yet, fifty times over,

Pharaoh received no demonstration By his Baker's dream of Baskets Three,

Of the doctrine of the Trinity,— Although, as our preacher thus embellished it,

Apparently his hearers relished it With so unfeigned a gust—who knows if

They did not prefer our friend to Joseph ?
But so it is everywhere, one way with all of them !

These people have really felt, no doubt,
A something, the motion they style the Call of them ;

And this is their method of bringing
about,

By a mechanism of words and tones, (So many texts in so many groans)

A sort of reviving or reproducing, More or less perfectly, (who can tell ?—)

Of the mood itself, that strengthens by using ;

And how it happens, I understand well.
A tune was born in my head last week,

Out of the thump-thump and shriekshriek

Of the train, as I came by it, up from Manchester ;

And when, next week, I take it back
again,

My head will sing to the engine's clack
again,

While it only makes my neighbour's haunches stir,

—Finding no dormant musical sprout In him, as in me, to be jolted out.

'Tis the taught already that profits by teaching ;

He gets no more from the railway's preaching

Than, from this preacher who does the rail's office, I ;

Whom therefore the flock cast a jealous eye on.

Still, why paint over their door ' Mount Zion,'

To which all flesh shall come, saith the prophecy ?

v.

But wherefore be harsh on a single case ?
After how many modes, this Christmas-
Eve,

Does the selfsame weary thing take
place ?

The same endeavour to make you
believe,

And with much the same effect, no
more :

Each method abundantly convincing,
As I say, to those convinced before,

But scarce to be swallowed without wincing,

By the not-as-yet-convinced. For me, I have my own church equally :

And in this church my faith sprang first !
(I said, as I reached the rising ground,

And the wind began again, with a burst Of rain in my face, and a glad rebound

From the heart beneath, as if, God speeding me,

I entered His church-door, Nature leading me)

—In youth I looked to these very skies,
And probing their immensities,
I found God there, His visible power ;
Yet felt in my heart, amid all its sense Of that power, an equal evidence That His love, there too, was the nobler dower.

For the loving worm within its clod,
Were diviner than a loveless god.
Amid his worlds, I will dare to say.
You know what I mean : God's all, man's nought :

But also, God, whose pleasure brought Man into being, stands away As it were, a handbreadth off, to give Room for the newly-made to live,
And look at Him from a place apart,
And use His gifts of brain and heart,
Given, indeed, but to keep for ever.
Who speaks of man, then, must not sever

Man's very elements from man, Saying, ' But all is God's '—whose plan Was to create man and then leave him Able, His own word saith, to grieve Him, But able to glorify Him too, '
As a mere machine could never do,
That prayed or praised, all unaware Of its fitness for aught but praise and prayer,

Made perfect as a thing of course.
Man, therefore, stands on his own stock Of love and power as a pin-point rock, And, looking to God who ordained divorce

Of the rock from His boundless continent,
Sees, in His power made evident,
Only excess by a million-fold O'er the power God gave man in the mould.

For, note : man's hand, first formed to carry
A few pounds' weight, when taught to marry
Its strength with an engine's, lifts a mountain,

—Advancing in power by one degree ;
And why count steps through eternity ?
But love is the ever-springing fountain :
Man may enlarge or narrow his bed For the water's play, but the water-
head—

How can he multiply or reduce it ?
As easy create it, as cause it to cease ;
He may profit by it, or abuse it,
But 'tis not a thing to bear increase As power does : be love less or more In the heart of man, he keeps it shut Or opens it wide, as he pleases, but Love's sum remains what it was before.
So, gazing up, in my youth, at love
As seen through power, ever above All modes which make it manifest, My soul brought all to a single test—
That He, the Eternal First and Last,
Who, in His power, had so surpassed All man conceives of what is might,— Whose wisdom, too, showed infinite, —Would prove as infinitely good ;
Would never, (my soul understood,) With power to work all love desires, Bestow e'en less than man requires :
That He who endlessly was teaching, Above my spirit's utmost reaching,
What love can do in the leaf or stone, (So that to master this alone,
This done in the stone or leaf for me,
I must go on learning endlessly)
Would never need that I, in turn, Should point him out a defect unheeded,
And show that God had yet to learn What the meanest human creature needed,—

—Not life, to wit, for a few short years, Tracking His way through doubts and
fears,

While the stupid earth on which I stay Suffers no change, but passive adds Its myriad years to myriads, Though I, He gave it to, decay, Seeing death come and choose about me,
And my dearest ones depart without me.
No ! love which, on earth, amid all the shows of it,

Has ever been seen the sole good of life in it,
The love, ever growing there, spite of the strife in it, Shall arise, made perfect, from death's repose of it !

And I shall behold Thee, face to face, O God, and in Thy light retrace How in all I loved here, still wast Thou !
Whom pressing to, then, as I fain would
now,

I shall find as able to satiate
 The love, Thy gift, as my spirit's wonder Thou art able to quicken and sublimate, With this sky of Thine, that I now walk
     under,
 And glory in Thee for, as I gaze Thus, thus ! oh, let men keep their ways Of seeking Thee in a narrow shrine—Be this my way ! And this is mine !

For lo, what think you ? suddenly The rain and the wind ceased, and the sky

Received at once the full fruition
 Of the moon's consummate apparition.
 The black cloud-barricade was riven, Ruined beneath her feet, and driven Deep in the West ; while, bare and breathless,

North and South and East lay ready For a glorious Thing, that, dauntless,

Sprang across them, and stood steady.
 'Twas a moon-rainbow, vast and perfect, From heaven to heaven extending,
     perfect

As the mother-moon's self, full in face.
 It rose, distinctly at the base
 With its seven proper colours chorded, Which still, in the rising, were com-

Until at last they coalesced, And supreme the spectral creature lorded

In a triumph of whitest white,— Above which intervened the night.
 But above night too, like only the next,
 The second of a wondrous sequence, Reaching in rare and rarer frequency, Till the heaven of heavens were circumflect,

Another rainbow rose, a mightier, Fainter, flushier, and flightier,— Rapture dying along its verge !
 Oh, whose foot shall I see emerge, Whose, from the straining topmost dark,
 On to the keystone of that arc ?

VII.

This sight was shown me, there and
     then,—
 Me, one out of a world of men,

Singled forth, as the chance might hap
 To another, if in a thunderclap Where I heard noise, and you saw flame, Someone man knew God called his name.
 For me, I think I said, ' Appear !
 Good were it to be ever here.
 If Thou wilt, let me build to Thee Service tabernacles Three, Where, forever in Thy presence,
 In ecstatic acquiescence, Far alike from thriftless learning And ignorance's undiscerning,
 I may worship and remain !'
 Thus, at the show above me, gazing With upturned eyes, I felt my brain Glutted with the glory, blazing Throughout its whole mass, over and under,

Until at length it burst asunder,
 And out of it bodily there streamed
 The too-much glory, as it seemed, Passing from out me to the ground, Then palely serpentine round Into the dark with mazy error.

All at once I looked up with terror.
 He was there.
 He Himself with His human air,
 On the narrow pathway, just before.
 I saw the back of Him, no more—
 He had left the chapel, then, as I.
 I forgot all about the sky.
 No face : only the sight Of a sweepy garment, vast and white,
 With a hem that I could recognize.
 I felt terror, no surprise :
 My mind filled with the cataract,
 At one bound, of the mighty fact.
 I remembered, He did say Doubtless, that, to this world's end, Where two or three should meet and
     pray,

He would be in their midst, their friend :
 Certainly He was there with them.
 And my pulses leaped for joy
 Of the golden thought without alloy,
 That I saw His very vesture's hem.
 Then rushed the blood back, cold and
     clear

With a fresh enhancing shiver of fear,
 And I hastened, cried out while I pressed To the salvation of the vest,

'But not so, Lord! It cannot be That Thou, indeed, art leaving me—Me, that have despised Thy friends.
Did my heart make no amends?
Thou art the love of God—above His power, didst hear me place His
love,

And that was leaving the world for Thee.
Therefore Thou must not turn from me
As if I had chosen the other part.
Folly and pride o'ercame my heart.
Our best is bad, nor bears Thy test;
Still, it should be our very best.
I thought it best that Thou, the Spirit,
Be worshipped in spirit and in truth,
And in beauty, as even we require it—
Not in the forms burlesque, uncouth,
I left but now, as scarcely fitted For Thee: I knew not what I pitied.
But, all I felt there, right or wrong,
What is it to Thee, who curest sinning?
Am I not weak as Thou art strong?
I have looked to Thee from the beginning, Straight up to Thee through all the
world

Which, like an idle scroll, lay furled
To nothingness on either side:
And since the time Thou wast descried, Spite of the weak heart, so have I Lived ever, and so fain would die, Living and dying, Thee before!
But if Thou leavest me—'

IX.

Less or more,

I suppose that I spoke thus.
When,—have mercy, Lord, on us!
The whole Face turned upon me full.
And I spread myself beneath it, As when the bleacher spreads, to seethe
it
In the cleansing sun, his wool,— Steeps in the flood of noontide whiteness Some defiled, discoloured web—
So lay I, saturate with brightness.
And when the flood appeared to ebb, Lo, I was walking, light and swift, With my senses settling fast and steadying,
But my body caught up in the whirl and
drift
Of the vesture's amplitude, still eddying
On, just before me, still to be followed,

As it carried me after with its motion:
What shall I say?—as a path were hollowed

And a man went weltering through the ocean,

Sucked along in the flying wake
Of the luminous water-snake.
Darkness and cold were cloven, as
through

I passed, upborne yet walking too
And I turned to myself at intervals,— 'So He said, and so it befalls.
God who registers the cup Of mere cold water, for His sake
To a disciple rendered up, Disdains not His own thirst to slake
At the poorest love was ever offered:
And because it was my heart I proffered.
With true love trembling at the brim,
He suffers me to follow Him For ever, my own way,—dispensed From seeking to be influenced By all the less immediate ways That earth, in worships manifold, Adopts to reach, by prayer and praise,
The garment's hem, which, lo, I hold!'

And so we crossed the world and stopped.

For where am I, in city or plain,
Since I am 'ware of the world again?
And what is this that rises propped With pillars of prodigious girth?
Is it really on the earth, This miraculous Dome of God?
Has the angel's measuring-rod Which numbered cubits, gem from gem,
'Twixt the gates of the New Jerusalem, Meted it out,—and what he meted,
Have the sons of men completed?
—Binding, ever as he bade, Columns in this colonnade With arms wide open to embrace The entry of the human race To the breast of . . . what is it, yon building, Ablaze in front, all paint and gilding,
With marble for brick, and stones of price For garniture of the edifice?
Now I see; it is no dream;
It stands there and it does not seem:

For ever, in pictures, thus it looks,
 And thus I have read of it in books Often in England, leagues away,
 And wondered how these fountains play, Growing up eternally Each to a musical water-tree,
 Whose blossoms drop, a glittering boon,
 Before my eyes, in the light of the moon,
 To the granite lavers underneath.
 Liar and dreamer in your teeth !
 I, the sinner that speak to you,
 Was in Rome this night, and stood, and
 knew

Both this and more. For see, for see,
 The dark is rent, mine eye is free To pierce the crust of the outer wall,
 And I view inside, and all there, all,
 As the swarming hollow of a hive,
 The whole Basilica alive !
 Men in the chancel, body, and nave,
 Men on the pillars' architrave, Men on the statues, men on the tombs With popes and kings in their porphyry wombs,

All famishing in expectation
 Of the main-altar's consummation.
 For see, for see, the rapturous moment Approaches, and earth's best endowment Blends with Heaven's; the taper-fires Pant up, the winding brazen spires Heave loftier yet the baldachin ;
 The incense-gasps, long kept in, Suspire in clouds ; the organ blatant Holds his breath and grovels latent,
 As if God's hushing finger grazed him, (Like Behemoth when He praised him)
 At the silver bell's shrill tinkling, Quick cold drops of terror sprinkling On the sudden pavement strewed With faces of the multitude.
 Earth breaks up, time drops away,
 In flows Heaven, with its new day Of endless life, when He who trod, Very Man and very God,
 This earth in weakness, shame and pain, Dying the death whose signs remain Up yonder on the accursed tree,— Shall come again, no more to be Of captivity the thrall, But the one God, All in all,
 King of kings, Lord of lords,
 As His servant John received the words,
 ' I died, and live for evermore ! '

Yet I was left outside the door.
 Why sat I there on the threshold-stone, Left till He return, alone
 Save for the garment's extreme fold Abandoned still to bless my hold ?—
 My reason, to my doubt, replied,
 As if a book were opened wide,
 And at a certain page I traced Every record undefaced, Added by successive years,—
 The harvestings of truth's stray ears Singly gleaned, and in one sheaf Bound together for belief.

Yes, I said—that He will go And sit with these in turn, I know.
 Their faith's heart beats, though her head swims

Too giddily to guide her limbs, Disabled by their palsy-stroke From propping me. Though Rome's gross yoke

Drops off, no more to be endured, Her teaching is not so obscured
 By errors and perversities, That no truth shines athwart the lies :
 And He, whose eye detects a spark Even where, to man's, the whole seems
 dark,

May well see flame where each beholder Acknowledges the embers smoulder.
 But I, a mere man, fear to quit
 The clue God gave me as most fit To guide my footsteps through life's maze, Because Himself discerns all ways Open to reach Him : I, a man Able to mark where faith began To swerve aside, till from its summit Judgment drops her damning plummet, Pronouncing such a fatal space Departed from the Founder's base :
 He will not bid me enter too,
 But rather sit, as now I do, Awaiting His return outside.

—'Twas thus my reason straight replied,
 And joyously I turned, and pressed The garment's skirt upon my breast, Until, afresh its light suffusing me, My heart cried,—what has been abusing
 me

That I should wait here lonely and coldly,
 Instead of rising, entering boldly,

Baring truth's face, and letting drift Her veils of lies as they choose to shift ?

Do these men praise Him ? I will raise My voice up to their point of praise !
I see the error ; but above
The scope of error, see the love.— Oh, love of those first Christian days !
—Fanned so soon into a blaze, From the spark preserved by the trampled sect,

That the antique sovereign Intellect Which then sat ruling in the world, Like a change in dreams, was hurled From the throne he reigned upon :
—You looked up, and he was gone !
Gone, his glory of the pen !
—Love, with Greece and Rome in ken, Bade her scribes abhor the trick
Of poetry and rhetoric,
And exult, with hearts set free,
In blessed imbecility Scrawled, perchance, on some torn sheet,

Leaving Sallust incomplete.
Gone, his pride of sculptor, painter !
—Love, while able to acquaint her With the thousand statues yet Fresh from chisel, pictures wet From brush, she saw on every side, Chose rather with an infant's pride To frame those portents which impart Such unction to true Christian Art.
Gone, music too ! The air was stirred By happy wings : Terpander's bird (That, when the cold came, fled away)
Would tarry not the wintry day,— As more-enduring sculpture must,
Till a filthy saint rebuked the gust With which he chanced to get a sight Of some dear naked Aphrodite—He glanced a thought above the toes of,
By breaking zealously her nose off.
Love, surely, from that music's lingering,

Might have filched her organ-fingering, Nor chosen rather to set prayings To hog-grunts, praises to horse-neighings.

Love was the startling thing, the new ;
Love was the all-sufficient too ;
And seeing that, you see the rest :
As a babe can find its mother's breast

As well in darkness as in light, Love shut our eyes, and all seemed
right.

True, the world's eyes are open now :
—Less need for me to disallow Some few that keep Love's zone unbuckled,

Peevish as ever to be suckled, Lulled by the same old baby-prattle With intermixture of the rattle, When she would have them creep, stand steady

Upon their feet, or walk already,
Not to speak of trying to climb.
I will be wise another time,
And not desire a wall between us, When next I see a church-roof cover
So many species of one genus, All with foreheads bearing Lover Written above the earnest eyes of them ;
All with breasts that beat for beauty, Whether sublimed, to the surprise of
them,

In noble daring, steadfast duty,
The heroic in passion, or in action,—
Or, lowered for the senses' satisfaction,
To the mere outside of human creatures, Mere perfect form and faultless features What ? with all Rome here, whence to levy

Such contributions to their appetite, With women and men in a gorgeous bevy, They take, as it were, a padlock, and it tight

On their southern eyes, restrained from feeding

On the glories of their ancient reading,
On the beauties of their modern singing,
On the wonders of the builder's bringing.
On the majesties of Art around them,— And, all these loves, late struggling incessant,

When faith has at last united and bound them,

They offer up to God for a present ?
Why, I will, on the whole, be rather proud of it,—

And, only taking the act in reference To the other recipients who might have allowed of it,

I will rejoice that God had the preference.

XII.

So I summed up my new resolves :
 Too much love there can never be.
 And where the intellect devolves Its function on love exclusively,
 I, a man who possesses both,
 Will accept the provision, nothing loth, —Will feast my love, then depart elsewhere,
 That my intellect may find its share.
 And ponder, O soul, the while thou departest,
 And see thou applaud the great heart of the artist,
 Who, examining the capabilities
 Of the block of marble he has to fashion
 Into a type of thought or passion,— Not always, using obvious facilities, Shapes it, as any artist can,
 Into a perfect symmetrical man, Complete from head to foot of the life-
   size,
 Such as old Adam stood in his wife's
   eyes,—

But, now and then, bravely aspires to consummate
 A Colossus by no means so easy to come
   at,
 And uses the whole of his block for the bust,
 Leaving the minds of the public to finish
   it,
 Since cut it ruefully short he must :
 On the face alone he expends his devotion,
 He rather would mar than resolve to diminish it, —Saying, 'Applaud me for this grand notion Of what a face may be ! As for completing it
 In breast and body and limbs, do that,
   you !'
 All hail ! I fancy how, happily meeting
   it,
 A trunk and legs would perfect the statue,
 Could man carve so as to answer volition.
 And how much nobler than petty cavils,
 Were a hope to find, in my spirit-travels,
 Some artist of another ambition,
 Who having a block to carve, no bigger,

Has spent his power on the opposite
   quest,
 And believed to begin at the feet was
   best—
 For so may I see, ere I die, the whole figure !

No sooner said than out in the night !
 My heart beat lighter and more light :
 And still, as before, I was walking swift,
 With my senses settling fast and
   steadying,
 But my body caught up in the whirl and
   drift
 Of the vesture's amplitude, still eddying
 On just before me, still to be followed,
 As it carried me after with its motion,
 —What shall I say ?—as a path were
   hollowed,
 And a man went weltering through the
   ocean,
 Sucked along in the flying wake
 Of the luminous water-snake.

XIV.

Alone ! I am left alone once more—(Save for the garment's extreme fold Abandoned still to bless my hold)
 Alone, beside the entrance-door Of a sort of temple,—perhaps a college, —Like nothing I ever saw before
 At home in England, to my knowledge.
 The tall, old, quaint, irregular town !
 It may be . . . though which, I can't affirm . . . any Of the famous middle-age towns of Germany ;
 And this flight of stairs where I sit down,
 Is it Halle, Weimar, Cassel, or Frankfort, Or Göttingen, that I have to thank for 't ?
 It may be Göttingen,—most likely.
 Through the open door I catch obliquely Glimpses of a lecture-hall ;
 And not a bad assembly neither—Ranged decent and symmetrical On benches, waiting what's to see there ; Which, holding still by the vesture's
   hem,
 I also resolve to see with them, Cautious this time how I suffer to slip
 The chance of joining in fellowship

With any that call themselves His
friends,

As these folks do, I have a notion.
But hist—a buzzing and emotion !
All settle themselves, the while ascends By the creaking rail to the lecture-desk,

Step by step, deliberate
Because of his cranium's over-freight, Three parts sublime to one grotesque,
If I have proved an accurate guesser, The hawk-nosed, high-cheek-boned Professor.

I felt at once as if there ran A shoot of love from my heart to the
man—

That fallow, virgin-minded, studious Martyr to mild enthusiasm,
As he uttered a kind of cough-preludious That woke my sympathetic spasm, (Beside some spitting that made me sorry)

And stood, surveying his auditory With a wan pure look, wellnigh celestial,—

Those blue eyes had survived so much !
While, under the foot they could not smutch,

Lay all the fleshly and the bestial.
Over he bowed, and arranged his notes,
Till the auditory's clearing of throats Was done with, died into a silence ;
And, when each glance was upward sent,
Each bearded mouth composed intent, And a pin might be heard drop half a mile hence,—

He pushed back higher his spectacles, Let the eyes stream out like lamps from cells,

And giving his head of hair—a hake Of undressed tow, for colour and quantity—

One rapid and impatient shake, (As our own young England adjusts — a jaunty tie

When about to impart, on mature digestion,

Some thrilling view of the surplicequestion)

—The Professor's grave voice, sweet though hoarse,

Broke into his Christmas-Eve's dis-

xv.

And he began it by observing How reason dictated that men Should rectify the natural swerving, By a reversion, now and then,
To the well-heads of knowledge, few And far away, whence rolling grew
The life-stream wide whereat we drink, Commingled, as we needs must think,
With waters alien to the source ;
To do which, aimed this eve's discourse :
Since, where could be a fitter time For tracing backward to its prime,
This Christianity, this lake,
This reservoir, whereat we slake,
From one or other bank, our thirst ?
So, he proposed inquiring first Into the various sources whence This Myth of Christ is derivable ; Demanding from the evidence, (Since plainly no such life was liveable)
How these phenomena should class ?
Whether 'twere best opine Christ was,
Or never was at all, or whether He was and was not, both together—
It matters little for the name,
So the Idea be left the same.
Only, for practical purpose' sake,
'Twas obviously as well to take The popular story,—understanding How the ineptitude of the time,
And the penman's prejudice, expanding Fact into fable fit for the clime, Had, by slow and sure degrees, translated it

Into this myth, this Individuum,— Which, when reason had strained and abated it

Of foreign matter, gave, for residuum, A Man !—a right true man, however, Whose work was worthy a man's endeavour :

Work, that gave warrant almost sufficient

To his disciples, for rather believing
He was just omnipotent and omniscient, As it gives to us, for as frankly receiving His word, their tradition,—which, though it meant

Something entirely different From all that those who only heard it, In their simplicity thought and averred
it,

Had yet a meaning quite as respectable :
 For, among other doctrines delectable, Was he not surely the first to insist on The natural sovereignty of our race ?— Herethelecturer came to a pausing-place.
 And while his cough, like a drouthy piston, Tried to dislodge the husk that grew to
     him,
 I seized the occasion of bidding adieu
     to him,
 The vesture still within my hand.

I could interpret its command.
 This time He would not bid me enter The exhausted air-bell of the Critic.
 Truth's atmosphere may grow mephitic When Papist struggles with Dissenter, Impregnating its pristine clarity,
 —One, by his daily fare's vulgarity, Its gust of broken meat and garlic ;
 —One, by his soul's too-much presuming To turn the frankincense's fuming And vapours of the candle starlike Into the cloud her wings she buoys on.
 Each, that thus sets the pure air seething,
 May poison it for healthy breathing—
 But the Critic leaves no air to poison ; Pumps out by a ruthless ingenuity Atom by atom, and leaves you—vacuity.
 Thus much of Christ, does he reject ?
 And what retain ? His intellect ?
 What is it I must reverence duly ?
 Poor intellect for worship, truly, Which tells me simply what was told (If mere morality, bereft Of the God in Christ, be all that's left) Elsewhere by voices manifold ;
 With this advantage, that the stater Made nowise the important stumble Of adding, he, the sage and humble, Was also one with the Creator.
 You urge Christ's followers' simplicity :
 But how does shifting blame, evade it ?
 Have wisdom's words no more felicity ?
 The stumbling-block, His speech—who laid it ?
 How comes it that for one found able To sift the truth of it from fable, Millions believe it to the letter ?
 Christ's goodness, then—does that fare better ?

Strange goodness, which upon the score
 Of being goodness, the mere due
 Of man to fellow-man, much more To God,—should take another view Of its possessor's privilege, And bid him rule his race ! You pledge Your fealty to such rule ? What, all—From Heavenly John and Attic Paul,
 And that brave weather-battered Peter Whose stout faith only stood completer For buffets, sinning to be pardoned, As the more his hands hauled nets, they hardened,— All, down to you, the man of men, Professing here at Göttingen, Compose Christ's flock ! They, you and I,
 Are sheep of a good man ! and why ?
 The goodness,—how did he acquire it ?
 Was it self-gained, did God inspire it ?
 Choose which ; then tell me, on what ground
 Should its possessor dare propound His claim to rise o'er us an inch ?
 Were goodness all some man's invention,
 Who arbitrarily made mention What we should follow, and where finch,—
 What qualities might take the style Of right and wrong,—and had such guessing Met with as general acquiescing As graced the Alphabet erewhile, When A got leave an Ox to be,
 No Camel (quoth the Jews) like G,— For thus inventing thing and title Worship were that man's fit requital.
 But if the common conscience must Be ultimately judge, adjust Its apt name to each quality Already known,—I would decree Worship for such mere demonstration And simple work of nomenclature, Only the day I praised, not Nature,
 But Harvey, for the circulation.
 I would praise such a Christ, with pride And joy, that he, as none beside,
 Had taught us how to keep the mind God gave him, as God gave his kind, Freer than they from fleshly taint :
 I would call such a Christ our Saint,
 As I declare our Poet, him Whose insight makes all others dim :

A thousand poets pried at life,
And only one amid the strife Rose to be Shakespeare: each
take

His crown, I'd say, for the world's sake—Though some objected—'Had we seen
The heart and head of each, what screen Was broken there to give them light, While in ourselves it shuts the sight,
We should no more admire, perchance,
That these found truth out at a glance,
Than marvel how the bat discerns Some pitch-dark cavern's fifty turns, Led by a finer tact, a gift
He boasts, which other birds must shift Without, and grope as best they can.'
No, freely I would praise the man,— Nor one whit more, if he contended That gift of his, from God, descended.
Ah, friend, what gift of man's does not?
No nearer Something, by a jot, Rise an infinity of Nothings Than one: take Euclid for your teacher: Distinguish kinds: do crownings, clothings,

Make that Creator which was creature?
Multiply gifts upon his head, And what, when all's done, shall be
said

But—the more gifted he, I ween!
That one's made Christ, this other,
Pilate,

And This might be all That has been,— So what is there to frown or smile at?
What is left for us, save, in growth Of soul, to rise up, far past both,
From the gift looking to the Giver,
And from the cistern to the River,
And from the finite to Infinity,
And from man's dust to God's divinity?

XVII.

Take all in a word: the truth in God's
breast

Lies trace for trace upon ours impressed:
Though He is so bright and we so dim,
We are made in His image to witness
Him;

And were no eye in us to tell,
Instructed by no inner sense,
The light of Heaven from the dark of Hell,

That light would want its evidence,—

Though Justice, Good and Truth were
still

Divine, if, by some demon's will, Hatred and wrong had been proclaimed Law through the worlds, and Right misnamed.

No mere exposition of morality Made or in part or in totality, Should win you to give it worship,
therefore:

And, if no better proof you will care for, Whom do you count the worst man upon earth?

Be sure, he knows, in his conscience,
more

Of what Right is, than arrives at birth

In the best man's acts that we bow
before:

This last knows better—true, but my fact is,

'Tis one thing to know, and another to practise.

And thence I conclude that the real God-function

Is to furnish a motive and injunction For practising what we know already,
And such an injunction and such a motive

As the God in Christ, do you waive, and 'heady,

High-minded, hang your tablet-votive Outside the fane on a finger-post?

Morality to the uttermost, Supreme in Christ as we all confess,
Why need we prove would avail no jot To make Him God, if God He were
not?

What is the point where Himself lays stress?

Does the precept run 'Believe in Good,
In Justice, Truth, now understood For the first time?'—or, 'Believe in
Me,

Who lived and died, yet essentially Am Lord of Life?' Whoever can
take

The same to his heart and for mere love's sake

Conceive of the love,—that man obtains A new truth; no conviction gains
Of an old one only, made intense
By a fresh appeal to his faded sense.

Can it be that He stays inside ?
Is the vesture left me to commune with ?
Could my soul find aught to sing in tune
with

Even at this lecture, if she tried ?
Oh, let me at lowest sympathize With the lurking drop of blood that lies In the desiccated brain's white roots Without a throb for Christ's attributes,
As the Lecturer makes his special boast !
If love 's dead there, it has left a ghost.
Admire we, how from heart to brain (Though to say so strike the doctors dumb)

One instinct rises and falls again, Restoring the equilibrium.
And how when the Critic had done his
best,

And the Pearl of Price, at reason's test, Lay dust and ashes levigable
On the Professor's lecture-table ; When we looked for the inference and monition

That our faith, reduced to such a condition,
Be swept forthwith to its natural dust-hole,—

He bids us, when we least expect it, Take back our faith,—if it be not just
whole,

Yet a pearl indeed, as his tests affect it,
Which fact pays the damage done rewardingly,

So, prize we our dust and ashes accordingly !

' Go home and venerate the Myth I thus have experimented with—This Man, continue to adore him Rather than all who went before him, And all who ever followed after ! '— Surely for this I may praise you, my brother !

Will you take the praise in tears or laughter ?

That 's one point gained : can I compass another ?

Unlearned love was safe from spurning—
Can't we respect your loveless learning ?
Let us at least give Learning honour !
What laurels had we showered upon
her,

Girding her loins up to perturb
Our theory of the Middle Verb ; Or Turk-like brandishing a scimitar O'er anapaests in comic-trimeter ;
Or curing the halt and maimed Iketides, While we lounged on at our indebted
ease :

Instead of which, a tricky demon Sets her at Titus or Philemon !
When Ignorance wags his ears of leather And hates God's word, 'tis altogether ;
Nor leaves he his congenial thistles To go and browse on Paul's Epistles.
—And you, the audience, who might ravage

The world wide, enviably savage, Nor heed the cry of the retriever, More than Herr Heine (before his fever),—

I do not tell a lie so arrant
As say my passion's wings are furled up, And, without the plainest Heavenly
warrant,

I were ready and glad to give this world up—But still, when you rub the brow meticulous,

And ponder the profit of turning holy If not for God's, for your own sake solely, —God forbid I should find you ridiculous !

Deduce from this lecture all that eases
you,
Nay, call yourselves, if the calling pleases
you,

' Christians,' — abhor the Deist's pravity,—

Go on, you shall no more move my gravity,

Than, when I see boys ride a-cockhorse
I find it in my heart to embarrass them
By hinting that their stick's a mockhorse, And they really carry what they say carries them.

XIX.

So sat I talking with my mind.
I did not long to leave the door
And find new church, as before,
But rather was quiet and inclined To prolong and enjoy the gentle resting From further tracking and trying and testing.

This tolerance is a genial mood !
 (Said I, and a little pause ensued).
 One trims the bark 'twixt shoal and shelf,
 And sees, each side, the good effects of it,
 A value for religion's self,
 A carelessness about the sects of it.
 Let me enjoy my own conviction, Not watch my neighbour's faith with fretfulness,
 Still spying there some dereliction Of truth, perversity, forgetfulness !
 Better a mild indifference, Teaching that all our faiths (though duller
 His shine through a dull spirit's prism) Originally had one colour—Sending me on a pilgrimage Through ancient and through modern times
 To many peoples, various climes, Where I may see Saint, Savage, Sage Fuse their respective creeds in one Before the general Father's throne !

xx.

—'Twas the horrible storm began afresh !
 The black night caught me in his mesh Whirled me up, and flung me prone.
 I was left on the college-step alone.
 I looked, and far there, ever fleeting Far, far away, the receding gesture, And looming of the lessening vesture !— Swept forward from my stupid hand, While I watched my foolish heart expand
 In the lazy glow of benevolence, O'er the various modes of man's belief.
 I sprang up with fear's vehemence.
 —Needs must there be one way, our
     chief
 Best way of worship : let me strive To find it, and when found, contrive My fellows also take their share !
 This constitutes my earthly care :
 God's is above it and distinct.
 For I, a man, with men am linked,
 And not a brute with brutes ; no
     gain
 That I experience, must remain Unshared : but should my best endeavour
 To share it, fail—subsisteth ever

God's care above, and I exult That God, by God's own ways occult, May—doth, I will believe—bring back All wanderers to a single track.
 Meantime, I can but testify God's care for me—no more, can I—It is but for myself I know ;
 The world rolls witnessing around me
 Only to leave me as it found me ;
 Men cry there, but my ear is slow :
 Their races flourish or decay —What boots it, while yon lucid way Loaded with stars, divides the vault ?
 But soon my soul repairs its fault
 When, sharpening sense's hebetude,
 She turns on my own life ! So viewed, No mere mote's-breadth but seems immense
 With witnessings of Providence :
 And woe to me if when I look Upon that record, the sole book Unsealed to me, I take no heed Of any warning that I read !
 Have I been sure, this Christmas-Eve, God's own hand did the rainbow weave, Whereby the truth from heaven slid Into my soul ?—I cannot bid
 The world admit He stooped to heal My soul, as if in a thunder-peal Where one heard noise, and one saw
     flame,
 I only knew He named my name :
 But what is the world to me, for sorrow Or joy in its censure, when to-morrow It drops the remark, with just-turned
     head
 Then, on again—that man is dead ?
 Yes, but for me—my name called,— drawn
 As a conscript's lot from the lap's black yawn,
 He has dipt into on a battle-dawn :
 Bid out of life by a nod, a glance,— Stumbling, mute-mazed, at nature's
     chance,
 With a rapid finger circled round, Fixed to the first poor inch of ground To fight from, where his foot was
     found ;
 Whose ear but a minute since lay
     free
 To the wide camp's buzz and gossipry—Summoned, a solitary man,

To end his life where his life began,
From the safe glad rear, to the dreadful van !
Soul of mine, hadst thou caught and held By the hem of the vesture !—

XXI.

And I caught
At the flying robe, and unrepelled Was lapped again in its folds full-fraught
With warmth and wonder and delight, God's mercy being infinite.
For scarce had the words escaped my
tongue,
When, at a passionate bound, I sprung
Out of the wandering world of rain,
Into the little chapel again.

XXII.

How else was I found there, bolt up-
right
On my bench, as if I had never left it ?
—Never flung out on the common at
night
Nor met the storm and wedge-like cleft it,
Seen the raree-show of Peter's successor,
Or the laboratory of the Professor !
For the Vision, that was true, I wist, True as that heaven and earth exist.
There sat my friend, the yellow and tall, With his neck and its wen in the self-same place ;
Yet my nearest neighbour's cheek showed gall,
She had slid away a contemptuous space :
And the old fat woman, late so placable, Eyed me with symptoms, hardly mis-takable,
Of her milk of kindness turning rancid.
In short, a spectator might have fancied That I had nodded betrayed by slumber, Yet kept my seat, a warning ghastly, Through the heads of the sermon, nine in number,
And woke up now at the tenth and lastly.
But again, could such a disgrace have happened ?
Each friend at my elbow had surely nudged it ;

And, as for the sermon, where did my nap end ?
Unless I heard it, could I have judged
it ?
Could I report as I do at the close, First, the preacher speaks through his nose :
Second, his gesture is too emphatic :
Thirdly, to waive what's pedagogic,
The subject-matter itself lacks logic :
Fourthly, the English is ungrammatical.
Great news ! the preacher is found no Pascal, Whom, if I pleased, I might to the task
call
Of making square to a finite eye
The circle of infinity,
And find so all-but-just-succeeding !
Great news ! the sermon proves no
reading
Where bee-like in the flowers I may bury me, Like Taylor's, the immortal Jeremy !
And now that I know the very worst of
him,
What was it I thought to obtain at first of him ?
Ha ! Is God mocked, as He asks ?
Shall I take on me to change His tasks,
And dare, dispatched to a river-head
For a simple draught of the element, Neglect the thing for which He sent,
And return with another thing instead ?— Saying, ' Because the water found Welling up from underground, Is mingled with the taints of earth, While Thou, I know, dost laugh at dearth,
And couldest, at a word, convulse
The world with the leap of its river-pulse,— Therefore I turned from the oozeings muddy,
And bring thee a chalice I found,
instead :
See the brave veins in the breccia ruddy !
One would suppose that the marble bled.
What matters the water ? A hope I have nursed,
That the waterless cup will quench my thirst.'
—Better have knelt at the poorest stream

That trickles in pain from the straitest rift !

For the less or the more is all God's gift, Who blocks up or breaks wide the granite-seam.

And here, is there water or not, to drink?
I, then, in ignorance and weakness, Taking God's help, have attained to
think

My heart does best to receive in meekness That mode of worship, as most to His
mind,

Where earthly aids being cast behind,
His All in All appears serene With the thinnest human veil between, Letting the mystic Lamps, the Seven,
The many motions of His spirit, Pass, as they list, to earth from Heaven.
For the preacher's merit or demerit, It were to be wished the flaws were fewer In the earthen vessel, holding treasure, Which lies as safe in a golden ewer ;
But the main thing is, does it hold good measure ?

Heaven soon sets right all other matters !—

Ask, else, these ruins of humanity,
This flesh worn out to rags and tatters,
This soul at struggle with insanity,
Who thence take comfort, can I doubt, Which an empire gained, were a loss without.

May it be mine ! And let us hope That no worse blessing befall the Pope, Turn'd sick at last of the day's buffoonery,
Of its posturings and its petticoatings, Beside his Bourbon bully's gloatings In the bloody orgies of drunk poltroonery !
Nor may the Professor forego its peace
At Göttingen, presently, when, in the dusk Of his life, if his cough, as I fear, should increase,

Prophesied of by that horrible husk ;
When, thicker and thicker, the darkness fills

The world through his misty spectacles, And he gropes for something more substantial

Than a fable, myth, or personification,— May Christ do for him, what no mere man shall,

And stand confessed as the God of salvation !

Meantime, in the still recurring fear Lest myself, at unawares, be found, While attacking the choice of my neighbours round,

Without my own made—I choose here !
The giving out of the hymn reclaims
me ;

I have done !—And if any blames me, Thinking that merely to touch in brevity
The topics I dwell on, were unlawful,— Or, worse, that I trench, with undue levity,

On the bounds of the holy and the awful,—

I praise the heart, and pity the head of
him,

And refer myself to THEE, instead of
him,

Who head and heart alike discernest, Looking below light speech we utter When the frothy spume and frequent
sputter

Prove that the soul's depths boil in earnest !

May the truth shine out, stand ever before us !

I put up pencil and join chorus To Hepzibah Tune, without further apology,

The last five verses of the third section Of the seventeenth hymn in Whitfield's Collection,

To conclude with the doxology.

EASTER-DAY

I.

How very hard it is to be A Christian ! Hard for you and me, —Not the mere task of making real That duty up to its ideal, Effecting thus, complete and whole,
A purpose of the human soul—
For that is always hard to do ; But hard, I mean, for me and you
To realize it, more or less,
With even the moderate success Which commonly repays our strife To carry out the aims of life.

'This aim is greater,' you will say,
'And so more arduous every way.'
—But the importance of their fruits Still proves to man, in all pursuits,

Proportional encouragement.
 'Then, what if it be God's intent That labour to this one result Should seem unduly difficult ?'
 Ah, that's a question in the dark—
 And the sole thing that I remark Upon the difficulty, this ;
 We do not see it where it is,
 At the beginning of the race :
 As we proceed, it shifts its place,
 And where we looked for crowns to fall,
 We find the tug's to come,—that's all.

At first you say, 'The whole, or chief Of difficulties, is Belief.
 Could I believe once thoroughly,
 The rest were simple. What ? Am I An idiot, do you think,—a beast ?
 Prove to me, only that the least Command of God is God's indeed,
 And what injunction shall I need To pay obedience ? Death so nigh, When time must end, eternity Begin,—and cannot I compute, Weigh loss and gain together, suit
 My actions to the balance drawn,
 And give my body to be sawn Asunder, hacked in pieces, tied To horses, stoned, burned, crucified, Like any martyr of the list ?
 How gladly !—if I made acquit, Through the brief minute's fierce annoy,
 Of God's eternity of joy.'

III.

—And certainly you name the point Whereon all turns : for could you joint This flexible finite life once tight Into the fixed and infinite,
 You, safe inside, would spurn what's out,
 With carelessness enough, no doubt—Would spurn mere life : but when time brings
 To their next stage your reasonings, Your eyes, late wide, begin to wink Nor see the path so well, I think.

You say, 'Faith may be, one agrees,
 A touchstone for God's purposes,
 Even as ourselves conceive of them.
 Could He acquit us or condemn

For holding what no hand can loose, Rejecting when we can't but choose ?
 As well award the victor's wreath To whosoever should take breath Duly each minute while he lived—Grant Heaven, because a man contrived To see its sunlight every day He walked forth on the public way.
 You must mix some uncertainty With faith, if you would have faith be.
 Why, what but faith, do we abhor And idolize each other for—Faith in our evil, or our good,
 Which is or is not understood Aright by those we love or those We hate, thence called our friends or foes ?

Your mistress saw your spirit's grace,
 When, turning from the ugly face,
 I found belief in it too hard ;
 And she and I have our reward.
 —Yet here a doubt peeps : well for us Weak beings, to go using thus A touchstone for our little ends, Trying with faith the foes and friends ;
 —But God, bethink you ! I would fain Conceive of the Creator's reign
 As based upon exacter laws Than creatures build by with applause.
 In all God's acts—(as Plato cries He doth)—He should geometrize.
 Whence, I desiderate . . .'

I see !

You would grow as a natural tree,
 Stand as a rock, soar up like fire.
 The world's so perfect and entire,
 Quite above faith, so right and fit !
 Go there, walk up and down in it !
 No. The creation travails, groans—Contrive your music from its moans, Without or let or hindrance, friend !
 That's an old story, and its end
 As old—you come back (be sincere) With every question you put here (Here where there once was, and is
 still,

We think, a living oracle, Whose answers you stand carping at) This time flung back unanswered flat,— Besides, perhaps, as many more As those that drove you out before,

Now added, where was little need !
 Questions impossible, indeed,
 To us who sat still, all and each Persuaded that our earth had speech Of God's, writ down, no matter if In cursive type or hieroglyph,— Which one fact freed us from the yoke Of guessing why He never spoke.
 You come back in no better plight Than when you left us,—am I right ?

So, the old process, I conclude,
 Goes on, the reasoning's pursued Further. You own, " 'Tis well averred, A scientific faith's absurd, —Frustrates the very end 'twas meant To serve. So, I would rest content With a mere probability,
 But, probable ; the chance must lie Clear on one side,—lie all in rough,
 So long as there be just enough To pin my faith to, though it hap Only at points : from gap to gap
 One hangs up a huge curtain so, Grandly, nor seeks to have it go Foldless and flat along the wall.
 —What care I if some interval Of life less plainly may depend On God ? I'd hang there to the end ;
 And thus I should not find it hard To be a Christian and debarred From trailing on the earth, till furled Away by death.—Renounce the world !
 Were that a mighty hardship ? Plan
 A pleasant life, and straight some man Beside you, with, if he thought fit, Abundant means to compass it, Shall turn deliberate aside To try and live as, if you tried You clearly might, yet most despise.
 One friend of mine wears out his
 eyes,

Slighting the stupid joys of sense,
 In patient hope that, ten years hence,
 "Somewhat completer," he may say,
 "My list of coleoptera !"
 While just the other who most laughs At him, above all epitaphs Aspires to have his tomb describe Himself as Sole among the tribe Of snuffbox-fanciers, who possessed A Grignon with the Regent's crest.

So that, subduing, as you want,
 Whatever stands predominant Among my earthly appetites For tastes, and smells, and sounds, and sights,
 I shall be doing that alone,
 To gain a palm-branch and a throne,
 Which fifty people undertake To do, and gladly, for the sake Of giving a Semitic guess, Or playing pawns at blindfold chess."

VII.

Good ! and the next thing is,—look
 round

For evidence enough. 'Tis found,
 No doubt : as is your sort of mind,
 So is your sort of search—you'll find What you desire, and that's to be A Christian. What says history ?
 How comforting a point it were To find some mummy-scrap declare There lived a Moses ! Better still, Prove Jonah's whale translatable Into some quicksand of the seas, Isle, cavern, rock, or what you please,
 That faith might clap her wings and crow From such an eminence ! Or, no—
 The human heart's best ; you prefer Making that prove the minister To truth ; you probe its wants and needs, And hopes and fears, then try what creeds

Meet these most aptly,—resolute That faith plucks such substantial fruit Wherever these two correspond She little needs to look beyond,
 And puzzle out who Orpheus was,
 Or Dionysius Zagrias.
 You'll find sufficient, as I say,
 To satisfy you either way ;
 You wanted to believe ; your pains Are crowned—you do : and what remains ?

'Renounce the world !'—Ah, were it
 done

By merely cutting one by one Your limbs off, with your wise head last,
 How easy were it !—how soon past,
 If once in the believing mood !
 'Such is man's usual gratitude, Such thanks to God do we return,
 For not exacting that we spurn

A single gift of life, forego One real gain,—only taste them so With gravity and temperance, That those mild virtues may enhance Such pleasures, rather than abstract—Last spice of which, will be the fact Of love discerned in every gift ;
 While, when the scene of life shall shift,
 And the gay heart be taught to ache, As sorrows and privations take The place of joy,—the thing that seems Mere misery, under human schemes, Becomes, regarded by the light Of love, as very near, or quite As good a gift as joy before.
 So plain is it that, all the more God's dispensation's merciful, More pettishly we try and cull Briars, thistles, from our private plot, To mar God's ground where thorns are not !

VIII.

Do you say this, or I ?—Oh, you !
 Then, what, my friend,—(thus I pursue Our parley)—you indeed opine That the Eternal and Divine Did, eighteen centuries ago, In very truth . . . Enough ! you know The all-stupendous tale,—that Birth, That Life, that Death ! And all, the earth Shuddered at,—all, the heavens grew black
 Rather than see ; all, Nature's rack
 And thro' at dissolution's brink Attested,—all took place, you think,
 Only to give our joys a zest,
 And prove our sorrows for the best ?
 We differ, then ! Were I, still pale And heartstruck at the dreadful tale, Waiting to hear God's voice declare What horror followed for my share,
 As implicated in the deed, Apart from other sins,—concede That if He blacked out in a plot My brief life's pleasantness, 'twere not So very disproportionate !
 Or there might be another fate—
 I certainly could understand (If fancies were the thing in hand)
 How God might save, at that Day's price,
 The impure in their impurities,

Give formal licence and complete
 To choose the fair and pick the sweet.
 But there be certain words, broad,
 plain,
 Uttered again and yet again,
 Hard to mistake, or overgloss—Announcing this world's gain for loss,
 And bidding us reject the same :
 The whole world lieth (they proclaim) In wickedness,—come out of it !
 Turn a deaf ear, if you think fit,
 But I who thrill through every nerve At thought of what deaf ears deserve,— How do you counsel in the case ?

IX.

'I'd take, by all means, in your place,
 The safe side, since it so appears :
 Deny myself, a few brief years,
 The natural pleasure, leave the fruit Or cut the plant up by the root.
 Remember what a martyr said On the rude tablet overhead !
 "I was born sickly, poor and mean,
 A slave : no misery could screen
 The holders of the pearl of price From Caesar's envy ; therefore twice I fought with beasts, and three times saw
 My children suffer by his law ;
 At last my own release was earned :
 I was some time in being burned,
 But at the close a Hand came through The fire above my head, and drew My soul to Christ, whom now I see.
 Sergius, a brother, writes for me This testimony on the wall—
 For me, I have forgot it all."
 You say right ; this were not so hard !
 And since one nowise is debarred From this, why not escape some sins By such a method ?

X.

Then begins
 To the old point, revulsion new—(For 'tis just this, I bring you to)
 If after all we should mistake,
 And so renounce life for the sake Of death and nothing else ? You hear Our friends we jeered at, send the jeer Back to ourselves with good effect—
 'There were my beetles to collect !'

'My box—a trifle, I confess, But here I hold it, ne'ertheless !' Poor idiots, (let us pluck up heart And answer) we, the better part Have chosen, though 'twere only
hope,—

Nor envy moles like you that grope Amid your veritable muck, More than the grasshoppers would truck,

For yours, their passionate life away,
That spends itself in leaps all day
To reach the sun, you want the eyes
To see, as they the wings to rise And match the noble hearts of them !
Thus the contemner we contemn,— And, when doubt strikes us, thus we ward

Its stroke off, caught upon our guard, —Not struck enough to overturn Our faith, but shake it—make us learn

What I began with, and, I wis, End, having proved,—how hard it is To be a Christian !

XI.

'Proved, or not,
Howe'er you wis, small thanks, I wot,
You get of mine, for taking pains To make it hard to me. Who gains By that, I wonder ? Here I live In trusting ease ; and here you drive At causing me to lose what most Yourself would mourn for had you
lost !'

But, do you see, my friend, that thus You leave St. Paul for Aeschylus ?
—Who made his Titan's arch-device
The giving men blind hopes to spice
The meal of life with, else devoured In bitter haste, while lo ! death loured Before them at the platter's edge !
If faith should be, as I allege,
Quite other than a condiment To heighten flavours with, or meant (Like that brave curry of his Grace)
To take at need the victuals' place ?
If, having dined, you would digest Besides, and turning to your rest Should find instead . . .

XIII.

Now, you shall see
And judge if a mere foppery Pricks on my speaking ! I resolve To utter . . . yes, it shall devolve On you to hear as solemn, strange And dread a thing as in the range Of facts,—or fancies, if God will—E'er happened to our kind ! I still Stand in the cloud, and while it wraps My face, ought not to speak, perhaps ;
Seeing that if I carry through My purpose, if my words in you Find a live actual listener, My story, reason must aver False after all—the happy chance !
While, if each human countenance
I meet in London day by day,
Be what I fear,—my warnings fray
No one, and no one they convert,
And no one helps me to assert How hard it is to really be A Christian, and in vacancy
I pour this story !

XIV.

I commence
By trying to inform you, whence It comes that every Easter-night
As now, I sit up, watch, till light, Upon those chimney-stacks and roofs, Give, through my window-pane, grey proofs
That Easter-day is breaking slow.
On such a night, three years ago,
It chanced that I had cause to cross The common, where the chapel was,
Our friend spoke of, the other day—You've not forgotten, I dare say.
I fell to musing of the time So close, the blessed matin-prime All hearts leap up at, in some guise—
One could not well do otherwise.
Insensibly my thoughts were bent Toward the main point ; I overwent Much the same ground of reasoning As you and I just now. One thing Remained, however—one that tasked My soul to answer ; and I asked, Fairly and frankly, what might be That History, that Faith, to me —Me there—not me in some domain Built up and peopled by my brain,

Weighing its merits as one weighs Mere theories for blame or praise,
 —The kingcraft of the Lucumons, Or Fourier's scheme, its pros and cons,—

But my faith there, or none at all.
 'How were my case, now, did I fall Dead here, this minute—should I lie Faithful or faithless?'—Note that I Inclined thus ever!—little prone For instance, when I lay alone In childhood, to go calm to sleep And leave a closet where might keep His watch perdue some murderer Waiting till twelve o'clock to stir, As good, authentic legends tell:
 'He might: but how improbable!
 How little likely to deserve
 The pains and trial to the nerve Of thrusting head into the dark!'— Urged my old nurse, and bade me mark Beside, that, should the dreadful scout Really lie hid there, and leap out At first turn of the rusty key, Mine were small gain that she could see,
 Killed not in bed but on the floor,
 And losing one night's sleep the more.
 I tell you, I would always burst
 The door ope, know my fate at first.
 This time, indeed, the closet penned No such assassin: but a friend Rather, peeped out to guard me, fit For counsel, Common Sense, to wit, Who said a good deal that might pass,— Heartening, impartial too, it was, Judge else: 'For, soberly now,—who Should be a Christian if not you?' (Hear how he smoothed me down.)

'One takes
 A whole life, sees what course it makes Mainly, and not by fits and starts—In spite of stoppage which imparts Fresh value to the general speed.
 A life, with none, would fly indeed:
 Your progressing is slower—right!
 We deal with progress and not flight.
 Through baffling senses passionate, Fancies as restless,—with a freight Of knowledge cumbersome enough To sink your ship when waves grow
 rough,
 Though meant for ballast in the hold,—
 I find, 'mid dangers manifold,

The good bark answers to the helm Where faith sits, easier to o'erwhelm Than some stout peasant's heavenly guide,

Whose hard head could not, if it tried,
 Conceive a doubt, nor understand How senses hornier than his hand Should 'tice the Christian off his guard.
 More happy! But shall we award Less honour to the hull which, dogged By storms, a mere wreck, waterlogged, Masts by the board, her bulwarks gone,
 And stanchions going, yet bears on,— Than to mere life-boats, built to save,
 And triumph o'er the breaking wave?
 Make perfect your good ship as these,
 And what were her performances!
 I added—'Would the ship reach home!
 I wish indeed "God's kingdom come—"
 The day when I shall see appear His bidding, as my duty, clear From doubt! And it shall dawn, that
 day,

Some future season; Easter may Prove, not impossibly, the time—Yes, that were striking—fates would chime

So aptly! Easter-morn, to bring The Judgment!—deeper in the Spring Than now, however, when there's snow Capping the hills; for earth must show
 All signs of meaning to pursue Her tasks as she was wont to do —The skylark, taken by surprise As we ourselves, shall recognize Sudden the end. For suddenly It comes; the dreadfulness must be In that; all warrants the belief—
 "At night it cometh like a thief." I fancy why the trumpet blows; —Plainly, to wake one. From repose
 We shall start up, at last awake From life, that insane dream we take For waking now, because it seems.
 And as, when now we wake from dreams,
 We laugh, while we recall them, "Fool,
 To let the chance slip, linger cool When such adventure offered! Just A bridge to cross, a dwarf to thrust Aside, a wicked mage to stab—And, lo ye, I had kissed Queen Mab!"— So shall we marvel why we grudged Our labour here, and idly judged

Of Heaven, we might have gained, but lose !

Lose ? Talk of loss, and I refuse To plead at all ! You speak no worse Nor better than my ancient nurse
When she would tell me in my youth I well deserved that shapes uncouth Frighted and teased me in my sleep—Why could I not in memory keep Her precept for the evil's cure ?
"Pinch your own arm, boy, and be sure You'll wake forthwith !"

XV.

And as I said
This nonsense, throwing back my head With light complacent laugh, I found Suddenly all the midnight round One fire. The dome of heaven had stood

As made up of a multitude Of handbreadth cloudlets, one vast rack Of ripples infinite and black, From sky to sky. Sudden there went,
Like horror and astonishment,
A fierce vindictive scribble of red Quick flame across, as if one said (The angry scribe of Judgment)
'There—

Burn it !' And straight I was aware That the whole ribwork round, minute Cloud touching cloud beyond compute, Was tinted, each with its own spot Of burning at the core, till clot Jammed against clot, and spilt its fire Over all heaven, which 'gan suspire As fanned to measure equable,— As when great conflagrations kill Night overheard, and rise and sink, Reflected. Now the fire would shrink And wither off the blasted face Of heaven, and I distinct might trace The sharp black ridgy outlines left Unburned like network—then, each
cleft

The fire had been sucked back into, Regorged, and out it surging flew Furiously, and night withered inflamed, Till, tolerating to be tamed
No longer, certain rays world-wide Shot downwardly. On every side Caught past escape, the earth was lit ;
As if a dragon's nostril split

And all his famished ire o'erflowed ;
Then, as he winced at his lord's goad, Back he inhaled : whereat I found The clouds into vast pillars bound,
Based on the corners of the earth, Propping the skies at top : a dearth Of fire i' the violet intervals, Leaving exposed the utmost walls Of time, about to tumble in And end the world.

XVI.

I felt begin
The Judgment-Day : to retrocede Was too late now. 'In very deed,' (I uttered to myself) 'that Day !'
The intuition burned away
All darkness from my spirit too :
There, stood I, found and fixed, I knew,
Choosing the world. The choice was
made ;

And naked and disguiseless stayed,
And unevadable, the fact.
My brain held ne'ertheless compact Its senses, nor my heart declined Its office ; rather, both combined To help me in this juncture. I Lost not a second,—agony Gave boldness : since my life had end And my choice with it—best defend, Applaud both ! I resolved to say,
'So was I framed by Thee, such way I put to use Thy senses here !
It was so beautiful, so near, Thy world,—what could I then but
choose

My part there ? Nor did I refuse To look above the transient boon Of time ; but it was hard so soon As in a short life, to give up Such beauty : I could put the cup Undrained of half its fullness, by ;
But, to renounce it utterly, —That was too hard ! Nor did the cry Which bade renounce it, touch my brain

Authentically deep and plain Enough to make my lips let go.
But Thou, who knowest all, dost know Whether I was not, life's brief while, Endeavouring to reconcile Those lips (too tardily, alas !)
To letting the dear remnant pass,

One day,—some drops of earthly good Untasted ! Is it for this mood, That Thou, whose earth delights so well, Hast made its complement a hell ? ’

XVII.

A final belch of fire like blood, Overbroke all heaven in one flood Of doom. Then fire was sky, and sky Fire, and both, one brief ecstasy, Then ashes. But I heard no noise (Whatever was) because a Voice Beside me spoke thus, ‘ Life is done, Time ends, Eternity ’s begun,
And thou art judged for evermore.’

XVIII.

I looked up ; all seemed as before ;
Of that cloud-Tophet overhead,
No trace was left : I saw instead The common round me, and the sky Above, stretched drear and emptily
Of life. ’Twas the last watch of night, Except what brings the morning quite ;
When the armed angel, conscience-clear,
His task nigh done, leans o’er his spear
And gazes on the earth he guards, Safe one night more through all its wards,

Till God relieve him at his post.
‘ A dream—a waking dream at most ! ’
(I spoke out quick, that I might shake The horrid nightmare off, and wake.) ‘ The world gone, yet the world is here ?
Are not all things as they appear ?
Is Judgment past for me alone ?
—And where had place the great white throne ?

The rising of the quick and dead ?
Where stood they, small and great ?
Who read
The sentence from the opened book ? ’
So, by degrees, the blood forsook My heart, and let it beat afresh ;
I knew I should break through the mesh Of horror, and breathe presently :
When, lo, again, the Voice by me !

XIX.

I saw . . . Oh, brother, ’mid far sands
The palm-tree-cinctured city stands, Bright-white beneath, as heaven, bright-
blue,
Leans o’er it, while the years pursue

Their course, unable to abate Its paradisaal laugh at fate !
One morn,—the Arab staggers blind O’er a new tract of death, calcined To ashes, silence, nothingness,— And strives, with dizzy wits, to guess Whence fell the blow. What if, ’twixt skies

And prostrate earth, he should surprise
The imaged vapour, head to foot, Surveying, motionless and mute,
Its work, ere, in a whirlwind rapt,
It vanish up again ? So hapt My chance. He stood there. Like the smoke

Pillared o’er Sodom, when day broke,— I saw Him. One magnific pall Mantled in massive fold and fall His dread, and coiled in snaky swathes About His feet : night’s black that bathes

All else, broke, grizzled with despair, Against the soul of blackness there.
A gesture told the mood within—That wrapped right hand which based the chin,

That intense meditation fixed On His procedure,—pity mixed With the fulfilment of decree.
Motionless, thus, He spoke to me,
Who fell before His feet, a mass, No man now.

XX.

‘ All is come to pass.

Such shows are over for each soul
They had respect to. In the roll Of Judgment which convinced mankind Of sin, stood many, bold and blind, Terror must burn the truth into :
Their fate for them !—thou hadst to do With absolute omnipotence, Able its judgments to dispense To the whole race, as every one Were its sole object. Judgment done, God is, thou art,—the rest is hurled To nothingness for thee. This world, This finite life, thou hast preferred,
In disbelief of God’s own word,
To Heaven and to Infinity.
Here the probation was for thee,
To show thy soul the earthly mixed With heavenly, it must choose betwixt.

The earthly joys lay palpable,— A taint, in each, distinct as well;
The heavenly flitted, faint and rare, Above them, but as truly were Taintless, so, in their nature, best.
Thy choice was earth: thou didst attest
'Twas fitter spirit should subserve
The flesh, than flesh refine to nerve Beneath the spirit's play. Advance No claim to their inheritance Who chose the spirit's fugitive Brief gleams, and yearned, "This were to live

Indeed, if rays, completely pure From flesh that dulls them, could endure,—

Not shoot in meteor-light athwart Our earth, to show how cold and swart
It lies beneath their fire, but stand As stars do, destined to expand, Prove veritable worlds, our home!" Thou saidst,—“Let spirit star the dome Of sky, that flesh may miss no peak, No nook of earth,—I shall not seek Its service further!” Thou art shut Out of the heaven of spirit; glut Thy sense upon the world: 'tis thine For ever—take it!”

XXI.

“How? Is mine, The world?” (I cried, while my soul
broke Out in a transport,) “Hast Thou spoke Plainly in that? Earth's exquisite Treasures of wonder and delight,
For me?”

XXII.

The austere Voice returned,— “So soon made happy? Hadst thou learned
What God accounteth happiness, Thou wouldst not find it hard to guess What hell may be His punishment For those who doubt if God invent Better than they. Let such men rest Content with what they judged the
best.
Let the unjust usurp at will:
The filthy shall be filthy still:
Miser, there waits the gold for thee!
Hater, indulge thine enmity!”

And thou, whose heaven self-ordained Was, to enjoy earth unrestrained, Do it! Take all the ancient show!
The woods shall wave, the rivers flow,
And men apparently pursue Their works, as they were wont to do, While living in probation yet.
I promise not thou shalt forget
The Past, now gone to its account;
But leave thee with the old amount Of faculties, nor less nor more, Unvisited, as heretofore,
By God's free spirit, that makes an end.
So, once more, take thy world! expend Eternity upon its shows,— Flung thee as freely as one rose Out of a summer's opulence, Over the Eden-barrier whence Thou art excluded. Knock in vain!”

XXIII.

I sat up. All was still again.
I breathed free: to my heart, back fled The warmth. “But, all the world!”
(I said)

I stooped and picked a leaf of fern,
And recollected I might learn From books, how many myriad sorts Of fern exist, to trust reports, Each as distinct and beautiful As this, the very first I cull.
Think, from the first leaf to the last!
Conceive, then, earth's resources! Vast Exhaustless beauty, endless change Of wonder! and this foot shall range Alps, Andes,—and this eye devour
The bee-bird and the aloe-flower?

XXIV.

Then the Voice, “Welcome so to rate
The arras-folds that variegate
The earth, God's antechamber, well!
The wise, who waited there, could tell By these, what royalties in store Lay one step past the entrance-door.
For whom, was reckoned, not too much,
This life's munificence? For such As thou,—a race, whereof scarce one Was able, in a million,
To feel that any marvel lay In objects round his feet all day; Scarce one, in many millions more, Willing, if able, to explore

The secreter, minuter charm !
 —Brave souls, a fern-leaf could disarm Of power to cope with God's intent,— Or scared if the south firmament With north-fire did its wings reflexed !
 All partial beauty was a pledge Of beauty in its plenitude :
 But since the pledge sufficed thy mood, Retain it ! plenitude be theirs Who looked above !

XXV.

Though sharp despairs Shot through me, I held up, bore on.
 'What matter though my trust were
 gone
 From natural things ? Henceforth my part
 Be less with Nature than with Art !
 For Art supplants, gives mainly worth To Nature ; 'tis Man stamps the earth—And I will seek his impress, seek The statuary of the Greek, Italy's painting—there my choice Shall fix !

XXVI.

'Obtain it !' said the Voice.
 —'The one form with its single act,
 Which sculptors laboured to abstract,
 The one face, painters tried to draw,
 With its one look, from throngs they saw.
 And that perfection in their soul,
 These only hinted at ? The whole,
 They were but parts of ? What each laid His claim to glory on ?—afraid His fellow-men should give him rank
 By the poor tentatives he shrank Smitten at heart from, all the more,
 That gazers pressed in to adore !
 "Shall I be judged by only these ?"
 If such his soul's capacities, Even while he trod the earth,—think,
 now
 What pomp in Buonarroti's brow,
 With its new palace-brain where dwells Superb the soul, unvexed by cells That crumbled with the transient clay !
 What visions will his right hand's sway Still turn to form, as still they burst Upon him ? How will he quench thirst, Titanically infantine, Laid at the breast of the Divine ?

Does it confound thee,—this first page Emblazoning man's heritage ?—
 Can this alone absorb thy sight, As pages were not infinite,— Like the omnipotence which tasks Itself, to furnish all that asks
 The soul it means to satiate ?
 What was the world, the starry state Of the broad skies,—what, all displays Of power and beauty intermixed, Which now thy soul is chained betwixt,— What else than needful furniture For life's first stage ? God's work, be sure,
 No more spreads wasted, than falls scant :
 He filled, did not exceed, Man's want Of beauty in this life. But through Life pierce,—and what has earth to do, Its utmost beauty's appanage,
 With the requirement of next stage ?
 Did God pronounce earth "very good" ?
 Needs must it be, while understood For man's preparatory state ;
 Nothing to heighten nor abate :
 Transfer the same completeness here,
 To serve a new state's use,—and dread Deficiency gapes every side !
 The good, tried once, were bad, retired,
 See the enwrapping rocky niche, Sufficient for the sleep, in which The lizard breathes for ages safe :
 Split the mould—and as this would chafe
 The creature's new world-widened sense, One minute after day dispense The thousand sounds and sights that broke
 In, on him, at the chisel's stroke,— So, in God's eye, the earth's first stuff Was, neither more nor less, enough To house man's soul, man's need fulfil.
 Man reckoned it immeasurable ?
 So thinks the lizard of his vault !
 Could God be taken in default, Short of contrivances, by you,— Or reached, ere ready to pursue His progress through eternity ?
 That chambered rock, the lizard's world,
 Your easy mallet's blow has hurled To nothingness for ever ; so,
 Has God abolished at a blow This world, wherein his saints were pent,—
 Who, though found grateful and content,

With the provision there, as thou, Yet knew He would not disallow Their spirit's hunger, felt as well,— Unsated,—not unsatable, As Paradise gives proof. Deride Their choice now, thou who sit'st outside !'

XXVII.

I cried in anguish, ' Mind, the mind,
So miserably cast behind,
To gain what had been wisely lost !
Oh, let me strive to make the most Of the poor stunted soul, I nipped Of budding wings, else now equipt For voyage from summer isle to isle !
And though she needs must reconcile Ambition to the life on ground, Still, I can profit by late found But precious knowledge. Mind is best—I will seize mind, forego the rest,
And try how far my tethered strength May crawl in this poor breadth and
length.

Let me, since I can fly no more,
At least spin dervish-like about (Till giddy rapture almost doubt I fly) through circling sciences, Philosophies and histories !
Should the whirl slacken there, then
verse,

Fining to music, shall asperse Fresh and fresh fire-dew, till I strain Intoxicate, half-break my chain !
Not joyless, though more favoured feet Stand calm, where I want wings to beat The floor. At least earth's bond is broke !'

XXVIII.

Then, (sickening even while I spoke)
' Let me alone ! No answer, pray, To this ! I know what Thou wilt say !
All still is earth's,—to Know, as much As Feel its truths, which if we touch With sense, or apprehend in soul, What matter ? I have reached the goal—

" Where to does Knowledge serve !" will burn

My eyes, too sure, at every turn !
I cannot look back now, nor stake Bliss on the race, for running's sake.

The goal 's a ruin like the rest ! '—
—' And so much worse thy latter quest, (Added the Voice) ' that even on earth—Whenever, in man's soul, had birth Those intuitions, grasps of guess, That pull the more into the less,
Making the finite comprehend Infinity,—the bard would spend Such praise alone, upon his craft,
As, when wind-lyres obey the waft, Goes to the craftsman who arranged The seven strings, changed them and rechanged—

Knowing it was the South that harped.
He felt his song, in singing, warped ; Distinguished his and God's part :
whence

A world of spirit as of sense
Was plain to him, yet not too plain,
Which he could traverse, not remain A guest in :—else were permanent Heaven on earth, which its gleams were meant

To sting with hunger for full light,— Made visible in verse, despite The veiling weakness,—truth by means Of fable, showing while it screens,— Since highest truth, man e'er supplied, Was ever fable on outside.
Such gleams made bright the earth an age ;
Now, the whole sun 's his heritage !
Take up thy world, it is allowed, Thou who hast entered in the cloud !'

XXIX.

Then I—' Behold, my spirit bleeds, Catches no more at broken reeds,— But lilies flower those reeds above :
I let the world go, and take love !
Love survives in me, albeit those I love be henceforth masks and shows, Not loving men and women : still I mind how love repaired all ill, Cured wrong, soothed grief, made earth amends
With parents, brothers, children,
friends !

Some semblance of a woman yet
With eyes to help me to forget, Shall live with me ; and I will match Departed love with love, attach Its fragments to my whole, nor scorn
The poorest of the grains of corn

I save from shipwreck on this isle, Trusting its barrenness may smile
With happy foodful green one day, More precious for the pains. I pray, For love, then, only !

xxx.

At the word,
The Form, I looked to have been stirred With pity and approval, rose O'er me, as when the headsman throws Axe over shoulder to make end—I fell prone, letting Him expend His wrath, while, thus, the inflicting Voice Smote me. 'Is this thy final choice ?
Love is the best ? 'Tis somewhat late !
And all thou dost enumerate Of power and beauty in the world, The mightiness of love was curled Inextricably round about.
Love lay within it and without,
To clasp thee,—but in vain ! Thy soul Still shrunk from Him who made the
whole,

Still set deliberate aside His love !—Now take love ! Well betide Thy tardy conscience ! Haste to take The show of love for the name's sake, Remembering every moment Who Beside creating thee unto These ends, and these for thee, was said To undergo death in thy stead In flesh like thine : so ran the tale.
What doubt in thee could countervail Belief in it ? Upon the ground "That in the story had been found Too much love ! How could God love so ?" He who in all His works below Adapted to the needs of man, Made love the basis of the plan,— Did love, as was demonstrated :
While man, who was so fit instead To hate, as every day gave proof,— Man thought man, for his kind's behoof, Both could and did invent that scheme Of perfect love—'twould well besem Cain's nature thou wast wont to praise, Not tally with God's usual ways !

xxxi.

And I cowered deprecatingly—
'Thou Love of God ! Or let me die, Or grant what shall seem Heaven almost !
Let me not know that all is lost,

Though lost it be—leave me not tied To this despair, this corpse-like bride !
Let that old life seem mine—no more—
With limitation as before,
With darkness, hunger, toil, distress :
Be all the earth a wilderness !
Only let me go on, go on,
Still hoping ever and anon To reach one eve the Better Land !

xxxii.

Then did the Form expand, expand—
I knew Him through the dread disguise, As the whole God within his eyes Embraced me.

xxxiii.

When I lived again,
The day was breaking,—the grey plain
I rose from, silvered thick with dew.
Was this a vision ? False or true ?
Since then, three varied years are spent,
And commonly my mind is bent To think it was a dream—be sure A mere dream and distemperature—
The last day's watching : then the night,—
The shock of that strange Northern
Light

Set my head swimming, bred in me A dream. And so I live, you see,
Go through the world, try, prove, reject, Prefer, still struggling to effect My warfare ; happy that I can Be crossed and thwarted as a man,
Not left in God's contempt apart,
With ghastly smooth life, dead at heart, Tame in earth's paddock as her prize.
Thank God, she still each method tries To catch me, who may yet escape,
She knows, the fiend in angel's shape !
Thank God, no paradise stands barred To entry, and I find it hard To be a Christian, as I said !
Still every now and then my head Raised glad, sinks mournful—all grows dear Spite of the sunshine, while I fear And think, 'How dreadful to be grudging
No ease henceforth, as one that's judged, Condemned to earth for ever, shut From Heaven !'

But Easter-Day breaks ! But Christ rises ! Mercy every way Is infinite,—and who can say ?

SORDELLO

1840

TO J. MILSAND, OF DIJON.

Dear Friend,—Let the next poem be introduced by your name, and so repay all trouble it ever cost me. I wrote it twenty-five years ago for only a few, counting even in these on somewhat more care about its subject than they really had. My own faults of expression were many; but with care for a man or book such would be surmounted, and without it what avails the faultlessness of either? I blame nobody, least of all myself, who did my best then and since; for I lately gave time and pains to turn my work into what the many might,—instead of what the few must,—like: but after all, I imagined another thing at first, and therefore leave as I find it. The historical decoration was purposely of no more importance than a background requires; and my stress lay on the incidents in the development of a soul: little else is worth study. I, at least, always thought so—you, with many known and unknown to me, think so—others may one day think so: and whether my attempt remain for them or not, I trust, though away and past it, to continue ever yours, R. B.

LONDON, June 9, 1863.

BOOK THE FIRST

Who will, may hear Sordello's story
told:

His story? Who believes meshall behold The man, pursue his fortunes to the
end,

Like me: for as the friendless-people's
friend

Spied from his hill-top once, despite the din

And dust of multitudes, Pentapolin Named o' the Naked Arm, I single out Sordello, compassed murkily about With ravage of six long sad hundred
years.

Only believe me. Ye believe?

Appears

Verona . . . Never, I should warn you
first,

Of my own choice had this, if not the worst

Yet not the best expedient, served to tell

A story I could body forth so well

By making speak, myself kept out of
view,

The very man as he was wont to do,

And leaving you to say the rest for him.
Since, though I might be proud to see the dim

Abysmal Past divide its hateful surge, Letting of all men this one man emerge Because it pleased me, yet, that moment
past,

I should delight in watching first to last His progress as you watch it, not a whit More in the secret than yourselves who sit

Fresh-chapleted to listen. But it seems Your settlers-forth of unexampled
themes,

Makers of quite new men, producing
them,

Would best chalk broadly on each vesture's hem,

The wearer's quality; or take their
stand,

Motley on back and pointing-pole in hand, Beside him. So, for once I face ye,
friends,

Summoned together from the world's four ends,

Dropped down from heaven or cast up from hell,

To hear the story I propose to tell.

Confess now, poets know the dragnet's
 trick,
 Catching the dead, if fate denies the quick,
 And shaming her; 'tis not for fate to choose Silence or song because she can refuse Real eyes to glisten more, real hearts to ache Less oft, real brows turn smoother for our sake:
 I have experienced something of her spite;
 But there's a realm wherein she has no
 right
 And I have many lovers. Say, but few Friends fate accords me? Here they are:
 now view
 The host I muster! Many a lighted face Foul with no vestige of the grave's disgrace;
 What else should tempt them back to taste our air
 Except to see how their successors fare?
 My audience! and they sit, each ghostly
 man
 Striving to look as living as he can, Brother by breathing brother; thou art
 set,
 Clear-witted critic, by . . . but I'll not fret
 A wondrous soul of them, nor move death's spleen
 Who loves not to unlock them. Friends!
 I mean
 The living in good earnest—ye elect Chiefly for love—suppose not I reject Judicious praise, who contrary shall peep,
 Some fit occasion, forth, for fear ye To glean your bland approvals. Then,
 appear,
 Verona! stay—thou, spirit, come not near Now—not this time desert thy cloudy
 place
 To scare me, thus employed, with that pure face!
 I need not fear this audience, I make
 free
 With them, but then this is no place for
 thee!

The thunder-phrase of the Athenian,
 grown
 Up out of memories of Marathon, Would echo like his own sword's griding screech Braying a Persian shield,—the silver
 speech
 Of Sidney's self, the starry paladin, Turn intense as a trumpet sounding in The knights to tilt,—wert thou to hear!
 What heart Have I to play my puppets, bear my part
 Before these worthies?
 Lo, the Past is hurled In twain: up-thrust, out-staggering on
 the world,
 Subsiding into shape, a darkness rears Its outline, kindles at the core, appears Verona. 'Tis six hundred years and
 more Since an event. The Second Friedrich wore
 The purple, and the Third Honorius filled The holy chair. That autumn eve was stilled:
 A last remains of sunset dimly burned O'er the far forests, like a torch-flame turned
 By the wind back upon its bearer's hand
 In one long flare of crimson; as a brand, The woods beneath lay black. A single
 eye
 From all Verona cared for the soft sky.
 But, gathering in its ancient market-
 place,
 Talked group with restless group; and not a face
 But wrath made livid, for among them
 were Death's staunch purveyors, such as have in care To feast him. Fear had long since taken root In every breast, and now these crushed its fruit,
 The ripe hate, like a wine: to note the
 way
 It worked while each grew drunk! men grave and grey Stood, with shut eyelids, rocking to and fro,
 Letting the silent luxury trickle slow

About the hollows where a heart should
 be;
 But the young gulped with a delirious glee
 Some foretaste of their first debauch in blood
 At the fierce news: for, be it understood,
 Envoys apprised Verona that her prince Count Richard of Saint Boniface, joined
 since
 A year with Azzo, Este's Lord, to thrust Taurello Salinguerra, prime in trust With Ecelin Romano, from his seat Ferrara,—over zealous in the feat And stumbling on a peril unaware, Was captive, trammelled in his proper
 snare,
 They phrase it, taken by his own intrigue.
 Immediate succour from the Lombard League
 Of fifteen cities that affect the Pope, For Azzo, therefore, and his fellow-hope Of the Guef cause, a glory overcast!
 Men's faces, late agape, are now aghast.
 'Prone is the purple pavis; Este makes Mirth for the devil when he undertakes To play the Ecelin; as if it cost Merely your pushing-by to gain a post Like his! The patron tells ye, once for
 all,
 There be sound reasons that preferment
 fall
 On our beloved' . . .
 'Duke o' the Rood, why not?'
 Shouted an Estian, 'grudge ye such a lot?
 The hill-cat boasts some cunning of her
 own,
 Some stealthy trick to better beasts unknown,
 That quick with prey enough her hunger blunts,
 And feeds her fat while gaunt the lion hunts.'
 'Taurello,' quoth an envoy, 'as in wane
 Dwelt at Ferrara. Like an osprey fain To fly but forced the earth his couch to
 make Far inland, till his friend the tempest wake,
 Waits he the Kaiser's coming; and as
 yet
 That fastfriend sleeps, and hetoo sleeps:
 but let
 Only the billow freshen, and he snuffs
 The aroused hurricane ere it enrougs The sea it means to cross because of
 him.
 Sinketh the breeze? His hope-sick eye grows dim;
 Creep closer on the creature! Every day Strengthens the Pontiff; Ecelin, they
 say,
 Dozes now at Oliero, with dry lips Telling upon his perished finger-tips
 How many ancestors are to depose Ere he be Satan's Viceroy when the doze Deposits him in hell. So, Guefs rebuilt Their houses; not a drop of blood was spilt
 When Cino Bocchimpane chanced to meet Buccio Virtù—God's wafer, and the street
 Is narrow! Tutti Santi, think, a-swarm With Ghibellins, and yet he took no harm!
 This could not last. Off Salinguerra
 went
 To Padua, Podestà, "with pure intent," Said he, "my presence, judged the single bar
 To permanent tranquillity, may jar No longer"—so! his back is fairly turned?
 The pair of goodly palaces are burned,
 The gardens ravaged, and our Guefs laugh, drunk
 A week with joy. The next, their laughter sunk
 In sobs of blood, for they found, some strange way,
 Old Salinguerra back again—I say, Old Salinguerra in the town once more Uprooting, overturning, flame before, Blood fetlock-high beneath him. Azzo
 fled;
 Who scaped the carnage followed; then
 the dead
 Were pushed aside from Salinguerra's
 throne,
 He ruled once more Ferrara, all alone.

Till Azzo, stunned awhile, revived, would pounce Coupled with Boniface, like lynx and ounce, On the gorged bird. The burghers ground their teeth
 To see troop after troop encamp beneath I' the standing corn thick o'er the scanty patch It took so many patient months to snatch Out of the marsh; while just within their walls Men fed on men. At length Taurello calls
 A parley: "let the Count wind up the
     war!"
 Richard, light-hearted as a plunging star, Agrees to enter for the kindest ends Ferrara, flanked with fifty chosen
     friends,
 No horse-boy more, for fear your timid sort
 Should fly Ferrara at the bare report.
 Quietly through the town they rode,
     jog-jog;
 "Ten, twenty, thirty,—curse the catalogue Of burnt Guelf houses! Strange, Taurello shows
 Not the least sign of life!"—whereat arose
 A general growl: "How? With his victors by?
 I and my Veronese? My troops and I?
 Receive us, was your word?" So jogged they on,
 Nor laughed their host too openly: once
     gone
 Into the trap!—"Six hundred years ago!
 Such the time's aspect and peculiar woe Yourselves may spell it yet in chronicles, Albeit the worm, our busy brother, drills
 His sprawling path through letters anciently
 Made fine and large to suit some abbot's
     eye)
 When the new Hohenstauffen dropped the mask, Flung John of Brienne's favour from his casque,

Forswore crusading, had no mind to
     leave Saint Peter's proxy leisure to retrieve Losses to Otho and to Barbaross, Or make the Alps less easy to recross; And, thus confirming Pope Honorius'
     fear,
 Was excommunicate that very year.
 'The triple-bearded Teuton come to
     life!' .
 Groaned the Great League; and,
     arming for the strife, Wide Lombardy, on tiptoe to begin,
 Took up, as it was Guelf or Ghibellin, Its cry; what cry?
     'The Emperor to come!'
 His crowd of feudatories, all and some,
 That leapt down with a crash of swords, spears, shields,
 One fighter on his fellow, to our fields, Scattered anon, took station here and
     there,
 And carried it, till now, with little care—Cannot but cry for him; how else rebut Us longer? Cliffs, an earthquake suffered jut
 In the mid-sea, each domineering crest, Nothing save such another throe can wrest
 From out (conceive) a certain chokeweed grown Since o'er the waters, twine and tangle thrown
 Too thick, too fast accumulating round, Too sure to over-riot and confound Ere long each brilliant islet with itself Unless a second shock save shoal and shelf,
 Whirling the sea-drift wide: alas, the bruised And sullen wreck! Sunlight to be diffused For that! Sunlight, 'neath which, a scum at first,
 The million fibres of our chokeweed nurst Dispread themselves, mantling the troubled main,
 And, shattered by those rocks, took hold again,
 So kindly blazed it—that same blaze to brood
 O'er every cluster of the multitude

Still hazarding new clasps, ties, filaments,

An emulous exchange of pulses, vents
Of nature into nature ; till some growth Unfancied yet, exuberantly clothe A surface solid now, continuous, one :
'The Pope, for us the People, who begun

The People, carries on the People thus,
To keep that Kaiser off and dwell with us !'

See you ?

Or say, Two Principles that live Each fitly by its Representative.

'Hill-cat'—who called him so ?—the gracefullest

Adventurer, the ambiguous strangerguest

Of Lombardy (sleek but that ruffling fur, Those talons to their sheath !) whose velvet purr

Soothes jealous neighbours when a Saxon scout

—Arpo or Yoland, is it ? —one without A country or a name, presumes to couch

Beside their noblest ; until men avouch
That, of all Houses in the Trevisan, Conrad descries no fitter, rear or van, Than Ecelo ! They laughed as they enrolled

That name at Milan on the page of gold, Godego's lord,—Ramon, Marostica, Cartiglion, Bassano, Loria, And every sheep-cote on the Suabian's fief !

No laughter when his son, 'the Lombard Chief'

Forsooth, as Barbarossa's path was bent To Italy along the Vale of Trent, Welcomed him at Roncaglia ! Sadness
now—

The hamlets nested on the Tyrol's brow, The Asolan and Euganean hills, The Rhetian and the Julian, sadness fills

Them all, for Ecelin vouchsafes to stay Among and care about them ; day by
day

Choosing this pinnacle, the other spot,
A castle building to defend a cot, A cot built for a castle to defend,
Nothing but castles, castles, nor an end

To boasts how mountain ridge may join with ridge

By sunken gallery and soaring bridge.
He takes, in brief, a figure that besseems The griesliest nightmare of the Church's
dreams,

—A Signory firm-rooted, unestranged From its old interests, and nowise
changed

By its new neighbourhood ; perchance the vaunt

Of Otho, 'my own Este shall supplant Your Este,' come to pass. The sire led in

A son as cruel ; and this Ecelin Had sons, in turn, and daughters sly and tall,

And curling and compliant ; but for all Romano (so they styled him) throve, that neck

Of his so pinched and white, that hungry
cheek

Proved 'twas some fiend, not him, the man's-flesh went

To feed : whereas Romano's instrument,

Famous Taurello Salinguerra, sole I' the world, a tree whose boughs were slipt the bole

Successively, why should not he shed
blood

To further a design ? Men understood Living was pleasant to him as he wore His careless surcoat, glanced somemissive o'er,

Propped on his truncheon in the public
way,

While his lord lifted writhen hands to pray,

Lost at Oliero's convent.

Hill-cats, face With Azzo, our Guelf Lion !—nor disgrace

A worthiness conspicuous near and far (Atii at Rome while free and consular, Este at Padua who repulsed the Hun)

By trumpeting the Church's princely son Styled Patron of Rovigo's Polesine, Ancona's March, Ferrara's . . . ask, in

fine,

Our chronicles, commenced when some old monk

Found it intolerable to be sunk

(Vexed to the quick by his revolting cell) Quite out of summer while alive and well :
Ended when by his mat the Prior stood,
'Mid busy promptings of the brotherhood,

Striving to coax from his decrepit brains
The reason Father Porphyry took pains To blot those ten lines out which used to stand

First on their charter drawn by Hildebrand.

The same night wears. Verona's rule of yore

Was vested in a certain Twenty-four ;
And while within his palace these debate Concerning Richard and Ferrara's fate, Glide we by clapping doors, with sudden

Of cressets vented on the dark, nor care For aught that's seen or heard until we
shut

The smother in, the lights, all noises but The carroch's booming : safe at last !

Why strange

Such a recess should lurk behind a range Of banquet-rooms ? Your finger—thus —you push

A spring, and the wall opens, would you rush

Upon the banqueters, select your prey, Waiting, the slaughter-weapons in the
way

Strewing this very bench, with sharpened ear

A preconcerted signal to appear ;
Or if you simply crouch with beating
heart,

Bearing in some voluptuous pageant part To starile them. Nor mutes nor masquers now ;

Nor any . . . does that one man sleep whose brow

The dying lamp-flame sinks and rises
o'er ?

What woman stood beside him ? not the more

Is he unfastened from the earnest eyes Because that arras fell between ! Her wise

And lulling words are yet about the room,

Her presence wholly poured upon the gloom

Down even to her vesture's creeping stir.
And so reclines he, saturate with her,
Until an outcry from the square beneath Pierces the charm : he springs up, glad to breathe

Above the cunning element, and shakes
The stupor off as (look you) morning breaks

On the gay dress, and, near concealed by it,

The lean frame like a half-burnt taper, lit Erst at some marriage-feast, then laid
away

Till the Armenian bridegroom's dying-
day,

In his wool wedding-robe. For he—for he,

Gate-vein of this hearts' blood of Lombardy,

(If I should falter now)—for he is Thine !
Sordello, thy forerunner, Florentine !

A herald-star I know thou didst absorb Relentless into the consummate orb

That scared it from its right to roll along A sempiternal path with dance and song

Fulfilling its allotted period, Serenest of the progeny of God !

Who yet resigns it not ; His darling stoops

With no quenched lights, desponds with no blank troops

Of disenfranchised brilliances, for, blent Utterly with thee, its shy element

Like thine upburneth prosperous and clear.

Still, what if I approach the august
sphere

Named now with only one name, disen-twine

That under-current soft and argentine From its fierce mate in the majestic mass

Leavened as the sea whose fire was mixt with glass

In John's transcendent vision,—launch
once more

That lustre ? Dante, pacer of the shore Where glutted hell disgorgeth filthiest
gloom,

Unbitten by its whirling sulphurspume—

Or whence the grieved and obscure waters slope

Into a darkness quieted by hope ;

Plucker of amaranths grown beneath God's eye
 In gracious twilight where His chosen
     lie,
 I would do this ! if I should falter now !
     In Mantua-territory half is slough, Half pine-tree forest ; maples, scarlet-oaks Breed o'er the river-beds ; even Mincio chokes
 With sand the summer through ; but
     'tis morass
 In winter up to Mantua walls. There
     was,
 Some thirty years before this evening's coil,
 One spot reclaimed from the surrounding spoil,
 Goito ; just a castle built amid A few low mountains ; firs and larches hid
 Their main defiles, and rings of vineyard
     bound
 The rest. Some captured creature in a pound,
 Whose artless wonder quite precludes distress, Secure beside in its own loveliness,
 So peered with airy head, below, above,
 The castle at its toils, the lapwings
     love
 To glean among at grape-time. Pass within.
 A maze of corridors contrived for sin, Dusk winding-stairs, dim galleries got

 You gain the inmost chambers, gain at
     last
 A maple-panelled room : that haze which seems Floating about the panel, if there gleams A sunbeam over it, will turn to gold And in light-graven characters unfold The Arab's wisdom everywhere ; what shade Marred them a moment, those slim pillars made,
 Cut like a company of palms to prop
 The roof, each kissing top entwined with top,
 Leaning together ; in the carver's mind Some knot of bacchanals, flushed cheek
     combined

With straining forehead, shoulders purpled, hair Diffused between, who in a goat-skin
     bear
 A vintage ; graceful sister-palms ! But quick
 To the main wonder, now. A vault, see ; thick Black shade about the ceiling, though fine slits
 Across the buttress suffer light by fits Upon a marvel in the midst. Nay, stoop—
 A dullish grey-streaked cumbrous font, a group
 Round it, each side of it, where'er one sees,
 Upholds it—shrinking Caryatides Of just-tinged marble like Eve's liliated flesh Beneath her Maker's finger when the fresh
 First pulse of life shot brightening the snow.
 The font's edge burthens every shoulder,
     so They muse upon the ground, eyelids half closed ;
 Some, with meek arms behind their backs disposed,
 Some, crossed above their bosoms, some,
     to veil
 Their eyes, some, propping chin and cheek so pale,
 Some, hanging slack an utter helpless
     length
 Dead as a buried vestal whose whole
     strength
 Goes when the grate above shuts heavily.
 So dwell these noiseless girls, patient to
     see,
 Like priestesses because of sin impure Penanced for ever, who resigned endure, Having that once drunk sweetness to the dregs.
 And every eve, Sordello's visit begs Pardon for them : constant as eve he came
 To sit beside each in her turn, the
     same
 As one of them, a certain space : and ave
 Made a great indistinctness till he saw

Sunset slant cheerful through the buttress-chinks, Gold seven times globed; surely our maiden shrinks
 And a smile stirs her as if one faint grain Her load were lightened, one shade less the stain Obscured her forehead, yet one more bead slept
 From off the rosary whereby the crypt Keeps count of the contritions of its charge?
 Then with a step more light, a heart more large,
 He may depart, leave her and every one To linger out the penance in mute stone.
 Ah, but Sordello? 'Tis the tale I mean To tell you. In this castle may be seen, On the hill tops, or underneath the vines, Or eastward by the mound of firs and pines
 That shuts out Mantua, still in loneliness, A slender boy in a loose page's dress, Sordello: do but look on him awhile Watching ('tis autumn) with an earnest
     smile
 The noisy flock of thievish birds at work Among the yellowing vineyards; see him lurk ('Tis winter with its sullenest of storms) Beside that arras-length of brodered
     forms,
 On tiptoe, lifting in both hands a light Which makes yon warrior's visage flutter bright
 —Ecelo, dismal father of the brood,
 And Ecelin, close to the girl he wooed, Auria, and their Child, with all his wives From Agnes to the Tuscan that survives, Lady of the castle, Adelaide. His face —Look, now he turns away! Yourselves shall trace (The delicate nostril swerving wide and
     fine,
 A sharp and restless lip, so well combine With that calm brow) a soul fit to receive Delight at every sense; you can believe Sordello foremost in the regal class Nature has broadly severed from her mass Of men, and framed for pleasure, as she frames
 Some happy lands, that have luxurious
     names,
 For loose fertility; a footfall there Suffices to upturn to the warm air Half-germinating spices; mere decay Produces richer life; and day by day
 New pollen on the lily-petal grows, And still more labyrinthine buds the
     rose.
 You recognize at once the finer dress Of flesh that amply lets in loveliness At eye and ear, while round the rest is furled
 As though she would not trust them with her world)
 A veil that shows a sky not near so blue, And lets but half the sun look fervid
     through.
 How can such love?—like souls on each full-fraught Discovery brooding, blind at first to aught
 Beyond its beauty, till exceeding love Becomes an aching weight; and, to remove
 A curse that haunts such natures—to preclude Their finding out themselves can work no good
 To what they love nor make it very blest
 By their endeavour,—they are fain to invest The lifeless thing with life from their own soul,
 Availing it to purpose, to control,
 To dwell distinct and have peculiar joy And separate interests that may employ That beauty fitly, for its proper sake.
 Nor rest they here; fresh births of beauty wake Fresh homage, every grade of love is past, With every mode of loveliness: then cast
 Inferior idols off their borrowed crown Before a coming glory. Up and down Runs arrowy-fire, while earthly forms
     combine
 To throb the secret forth; a touch
     divine—
 And the scaled eyeball owns the mystic rod:
 Visibly through His garden walketh God.
 So fare they. Now revert. One character Denotes them through the progress and the stir,—

A need to blend with each external charm,
 Bury themselves, the whole heart wide and warm, In something not themselves; they would belong
 To what they worship—stronger and more strong Thus prodigally fed—which gathers shape
 And feature, soon imprisons past escape
 The votary framed to love and to submit Nor ask, as passionately he kneels to it, Whence grew the idol's empery. So runs
 A legend; light had birth ere moons and
     suns, Flowing through space a river and
     alone,
 Till chaos burst and blank the spheres were strown Hither and thither, foundering and
     blind,
 When into each of them rushed light—to find Itself no place, foiled of its radiant
     chance.
 Let such forego their just inheritance!
 For there's a class that eagerly looks,
     too,
 On beauty, but, unlike the gentler crew, Proclaims each new revelation born a twin
 With a distinctest consciousness within Referring still the quality, now first Revealed, to their own soul—its instinct nursed
 In silence, now remembered better, shown
 More thoroughly, but not the less their
     own;
 A dream come true; the special exercise Of any special function that implies The being fair, or good, or wise, or
     strong,
 Dormant within their nature all along—Whose fault? So, homage, other souls direct Without, turns inward; 'How should this defect Thee, soul?' they murmur; 'wherefore strength be quelled Because, its trivial accidents withheld, Organs are missed that clog the world, inert,
 Wanting a will, to quicken and exert,
 Like thine—existence cannot satiate, Cannot surprise? laugh thou at envious
     fate,
 Who, from earth's simplest combination stamp
 With individuality—uncrampt
 By living its faint elemental life, Dost soar to heaven's completest essence, rife
 With grandeurs, unaffronted to the last,
 Equal to being all!'

In truth? Thou hast

Life, then—wilt challenge life for us:
     our race
 Is vindicated so, obtains its place In thy ascent, the first of us; whom we May follow, to the meanest, finally,
 With our more bounded wills?

Ah, but to find

A certain mood enervate such a mind, Counsel it slumber in the solitude Thus reached nor, stooping, task for mankind's good Its nature just as life and time accord
 '—Too narrow an arena to reward Emprize—the world's occasion worthless since
 Not absolutely fitted to evince Its mastery!' Or if yet worse befall, And a desire possess it to put all That nature forth, forcing our straitened
     sphere
 Contain it,—to display completely here
 The mastery another life should learn, Thrusting in time eternity's concern,— So that Sordello . . . Fool, who spied the mark
 Of leprosy upon him, violet-dark Already as he loiters? Born just now, With the new century, beside the glow
 And efflorescence out of barbarism; Witness a Greek or two from the abyss That stray through Florence-town with studious air,
 Calming the chisel of that Pisan pair:
 If Nicolo should carve a Christus yet!
 While at Siena is Guidone set, Forehead on hand; a painful birth
     must be Matured ere Saint Eufemia's sacristy

Or transept gather fruits of one great gaze
 At the moon: look you! The same orange haze,—
 The same blue stripe round that—and, i' the midst,
 Thy spectral whiteness, Mother-maid, who didst Pursue the dizzy painter!
     Woe, then, worth Any officious babble letting forth
 The leprosy confirmed and ruinous To spirit lodged in a contracted house!
 Go back to the beginning, rather; blend It gently with Sordello's life; the end Is piteous, you may see, but much between Pleasant enough. Meantime, some pyx to screen
 The full-grown pest, some lid to shut
     upon
 The goblin! So they found at Babylon, (Colleagues, mad Lucius and sage (Antonine)
 Sacking the city, by Apollo's shrine,
 In rummaging among the rarities,
 A certain coffer; he who made the prize Opened it greedily; and out there curled Just such another plague, for half the
     world Was stung. Crawl in then, hag, and couch asquat, Keeping that blotchy bosom thick in spot Until your time is ripe! The coffer-lid Is fastened, and the coffer safely hid Under the Loxian's choicest gifts of gold.
 Who will may hear Sordello's story
     told,
 And how he never could remember when He dwelt not at Goito. Calmly, then,
 About this secret lodge of Adelaide's Glided his youth away; beyond the glades
 On the fir-forest's border, and the rim Of the low range of mountain, was for
     him
 No other world: but this appeared his
     own
 To wander through at pleasure and
     alone.

The castle too seemed empty; far and wide Might he disport; only the northern
     side
 Lay under a mysterious interdict—Slight, just enough remembered to restrict
 His roaming to the corridors, the vault Where those font-bearers expiate their fault,
 The maple-chamber, and the little nooks And nests, and breezy parapet that looks Over the woods to Mantua: there he strolled.
 Some foreign women-servants, very old, Tended and crept about him—all his clue
 To the world's business and embroiled ado Distant a dozen hill-tops at the most.
 And first a simple sense of life en-

Sordello in his drowsy Paradise;
 The day's adventures for the days suffice—Its constant tribute of perceptions
     strange,
 With sleep and stir in healthy inter-
     change, Suffice, and leave him for the next at ease
 Like the great palmer-worm that strips the trees,
 Eats the life out of every luscious plant,
 And, when September finds them sere or scant, Puts forth two wondrous winglets, alters quite,
 And hies him after unforeseen delight.
 So fed Sordello, not a shard disheathed; As ever, round each new discovery, wreathed Luxuriantly the fancies infantine His admiration, bent on making fine Its novel friend at any risk, would fling In gay profusion forth: a ficklest king, Confessed those minions! Eager to dispense
 So much from his own stock of thought and sense
 As might enable each to stand alone And serve him for a fellow; with his
     own,

Joining the qualities that just before Had graced some older favourite. Thus they wore

A fluctuating halo, yesterday Set flicker and to-morrow filched
away,—

Those upland objects each of separate
name,

Each with an aspect never twice the
same,

Waxing and waning as the new-born host

Of fancies, like a single night's hoar-frost,

Gave to familiar things a face grotesque;
Only, preserving through the mad burlesque

A grave regard. Conceive! the orpine-patch

Blossoming earliest on the log-house-thatch

The day those archers wound along the vines—

Related to the Chief that left their lines To climb with clinking step the northern stair

Up to the solitary chambers where Sordello never came. Thus thrall reached thrall;

He o'er-festooning every interval,
As the adventurous spider, making light Of distance, shoots her threads from depth to height,

From barbican to battlement; so flung Fantasies forth and in their centre
swung

Our architect,—the breezy morning
fresh

Above, and merry,—all his waving mesh Laughing with lucid dew-drops rainbow-edged.

This world of ours by tacit pact is pledged

To laying such a spangled fabric low Whether by gradual brush or gallant blow.

But its abundant will was baulked here:
doubt

Rose tardily in one so fenced about From most that nurtures judgment, care and pain:

Judgment, that dull expedient we are

Most we forego. Suppose Sordello hence Selfish enough, without a moral sense However feeble; what informed the boy Others desired a portion in his joy?

Or say a ruthless chance broke woof and warp—

A Heron's nest beat down by March winds sharp,

A fawn breathless beneath the precipice, A bird with unsoiled breast and filmless
eyes

Warm in the brake—could these undo the trance

 Part-sigh, part-smile with which Sordello, late No foolish woodland-sights could satiate, Betakes himself to study hungrily Just what the puppets his crude fantasy Supposes notablest, popes, kings, priests,
     knights,
 May please to promulgate for appetites;
 Accepting all their artificial joys Not as he views them, but as he employs Each shape to estimate the other's stock Of attributes, that on a marshalled flock Of authorized enjoyments he may spend Himself, be men, now, as he used to blend
 With tree and flower—nay more entirely, else
 'Twere mockery: for instance, 'how excels
 My life that chieftain's?' (who apprised the youth Ecelin, here, becomes this month, in
     truth,
 Imperial Vicar?) 'Turns he in his tent Remissly? Be it so—my head is bent Deliciously amid my girls to sleep.
 What if he stalks the Trentine-pass?
     Yon steep
 I climbed an hour ago with little toil—
 We are alike there. But can I, too, foil The Gueifs' paid stabber, carelessly afford Saint Mark's a spectacle, the sleight o' the sword Baffling their project in a moment?'
     Here
 No rescue! Poppy he is none, but peer To Ecelin, assuredly: his hand, Fashioned no otherwise, should wield a brand With Ecelin's success—try, now! He soon
 Was satisfied, returned as to the moon From earth; left each abortive boy's-attempt
 For feats, from failure happily exempt, In fancy at his beck. 'One day I will Accomplish it! Are they not older still —Not grown up men and women?' 'Tis
     beside
 Only a dream; and though I must abide With dreams now, I may find a thorough vent
 For all myself, acquire an instrument For acting what these people act; my
     soul
 Hunting a body out, may gain its whole Desire some day! How else express chagrin
 And resignation, show the hope steal in With which he let sink from an aching wrist
 The rough-hewn ash bow? straight, a gold shaft hissed Into the Syrian air, struck Malek down Superbly! 'Crosses to the breach!
     God's Town
 Is gained Him back! Why bend rough ash-bows more?
 Thus lives he: if not careless as
     before,

Comforted : for one may anticipate, Rehearse the Future, be prepared when
fate

Shall have prepared in turn real men whose names

Startle, real places of enormous fames, Este abroad and Ecelin at home

To worship him,—Mantua, Verona,
Rome

To witness it. Who grudges time so
spent ?

Rather test qualities to heart's content—Summon them, thrice selected, near and far—

Compress the starriest into one star,
And grasp the whole at once !

The pageant thinned Accordingly ; from rank to rank, like wind

His spirit passed to winnow and divide ; Back fell the simpler phantasms ;
every side

The strong clave to the wise ; with either classed

The beauteous ; so, till two or three amassed

Mankind's beseeemingnesses, and reduced

Themselves eventually, graces loosed, And lavished strengths, to heighten up One Shape

Whose potency no creature should escape.

Can it be Friedrich of the bowmen's talk ?
Surely that grape-juice, bubbling at the stalk,

Is some grey scorching Saracenic wine
The Kaiser quaffs with the Miramoline—Those swarthy hazel-clusters, seamed and chapped,

Or filberts russet-sheathed and velvet-capped,

Are dates plucked from the bough John Brienne sent,

To keep in mind his sluggish armament Of Canaan.—Friedrich's, all the pomp and fierce

Demeanour ! But harsh sounds and sights transpierce

So rarely the serene cloud where he dwells,

Whose looks enjoin, whose lightest words are spells

On the obdurate ! That right arm
indeed

Has thunder for its slave ; but where 's the need

Of thunder if the stricken multitude Hearkens, arrested in its angriest mood, While songs go up exulting, then dis-
spread,

Dispart, disperse, lingering overhead
Like an escape of angels ? 'Tis the tune, Nor much unlike the words the women croon

Smilingly, colourless and faint-designed Each, as a worn-out queen's face some remind

Of her extreme youth's love-tales.
'Eglamor

Made that !' Half minstrel and half emperor,

What but ill objects vexed him ? Such he slew.

The kinder sort were easy to subdue By those ambrosial glances, dulcet tones ;

And these a gracious hand advanced to thrones

Beneath him. Wherefore twist and torture this,

Striving to name afresh the antique bliss, Instead of saying, neither less nor more,
He had discovered, as our world before, Apollo ? That shall be the name ; nor bid

Me rag by rag expose how patchwork hid The youth—what thefts of every clime
and day

Contributed to purdle the array He climbed with (June at deep) some close ravine

'Mid clatter of its million pebbles sheen, Over which, singing soft, the runnel
slipt

Elate with rains : into whose streamlet dipt

He foot, yet trod, you thought, with unwet sock—

Though really on the stubs of living rock Ages ago it crenneled ; vines for roof, Lindens for wall ; before him, aye aloof, Flittered in the cool some azure damsel-
fly,

Born of the simmering quiet, there to
die.

Emerging whence, Apollo still, he spied Mighty descents of forest; multiplied Tuft on tuft, here, the frolic myrtle-trees, There gendered the grave maple-stocks
at ease.

And, proud of its observer, strait the wood

Tried old surprises on him; black it stood

A sudden barrier ('twas a cloud passed o'er)

So dead and dense, the tiniest brute no
more

Must pass; yet presently (the cloud dispatched)

Each clump, behold, was glistening detached

A shrub, oak-boles shrunk into ilex-stems!

Yet could not he denounce the stratagems

He saw thro', till, hours thence, aloft would hang

White summer-lightnings; as it sank and sprang

To measure, that whole palpitating
breast

Of heaven, 'twas Apollo, nature prest At eve to worship.

Time stole: by degrees
The Pythons perish off; his votaries

Sink to respectful distance; songs redeem

Their pains, but briefer; their dismissals seem

Emphatic; only girls are very slow To disappear—his Delians! Some that glow

O' the instant, more with earlier loves to wrench

Away, reserves to quell, disdains to quench;

Alike in one material circumstance—
All soon or late adore Apollo! Glance

The bevy through, divine Apollo's
choice,

His Daphne! 'We secure Count Richard's voice

In Este's counsels, good for Este's ends
As our Taurello,' say his faded friends,

'By granting him our Palma!'—The sole child,

They mean, of Agnes Este who beguiled

Ecelin, years before this Adelaide Wedded and turned him wicked: 'but the maid

Rejects his suit,' those sleepy women boast.

She, scorning all beside, deserves the most

Sordello: so, conspicuous in his world Of dreams sat Palma. How the tresses

curled
Into a sumptuous swell of gold and wound

About her like a glory! even the ground

Was bright as with spilt sunbeams;

breathe not, breathe Not!—poised, see, one leg doubled underneath,

Its small foot buried in the dimpling

snow,
Rests, but the other, listlessly below,

O'er the couch-side swings feeling for cool air,

The vein-streaks swoln a richer violet
where

The languid blood lies heavily; yet
calm

On her slight prop, each flat and out-spread palm,

As but suspended in the act to rise By consciousness of beauty, whence her

eyes
Turn with so frank a triumph, for she meets Apollo's gaze in the pine-glooms.

Time fleets:
That's worst! Because the pre-appointed age Approaches. Fate is tardy with the

And crowd she promised. Lean he grows and pale,

Though restlessly at rest. Hardly avail Fancies to soothe him. Time steals, yet

alone
He tarries here! The earnest smile is

gone.
How long this might continue, matters

not;
—For ever, possibly; since to the spot

None come: our lingering Taurello quits

Mantua at last, and light our lady flits

Back to her place disburthened of a care.
Strange—to be constant here if he is
there!

Is it distrust? Oh, never! for they both Goad Ecelin alike—Romano's growth
So daily manifest, that Azzo's dumb And Richard wavers: let but Friedrich
come!

—Find matter for the minstrelsy's report,
Lured from the Isle and its young Kaiser's court

To sing us a Messina morning up,
And, double rillet of a drinking cup, Sparkle along to ease the land of drouth, Northward to Provence that, and thus far south

The other. What a method to apprise Neighbours of births, espousals, obse-quies!

Which in their very tongue the Troubadour Records; and his performance makes a tour,

For Trouveres bear the miracle about,
Explain its cunning to the vulgar rout, Until the Formidable House is famed Over the country—as Taurello aimed, Who introduced, although the rest adopt,

The novelty. Such games, her absence
stopped,

Begin afresh now Adelaide, recluse
No longer, in the light of day pursues Her plans at Mantua: whence an accident

Which, breaking on Sordello's mixed
content,

Opened, like any flash that cures the blind,

The veritable business of mankind.

BOOK THE SECOND

THE woods were long austere with snow: at last Pink leaflets budded on the beech, and
fast

Larches, scattered through pine-tree solitudes,

Brightened, 'as in the slumbrous heart o' the woods

Our buried year, a witch, grew young
again

To placid incantations, and that stain About were from her cauldron, green smoke blent

With those black pines'—so Eglamor gave vent

To a chance fancy. Whence a just rebuke

From his companion; brother Naddo shook

The solemnest of brows; 'Beware,' he
said,

'Of setting up conceits in nature's
stead!'

Forth wandered our Sordello. Nought
so sure

As that to-day's adventure will secure Palma, the visioned lady—only pass O'er yon damp mound and its exhausted grass,

Under that brake where sundawn feeds the stalks

Of withered fern with gold, into those walks

Of pine, and take her! Buoyantly he went.

Again his stooping forehead was be-sprung

With dew-drops from the skirting ferns.
Then wide

Opened the great morass, shot every side ith flashing water through and through; a-shine,

Thick-steaming, all alive. Whose shape
divine

Quivered i' the farthest rainbow-vapour, glanced

Athwart the flying herons? He advanced,

But warily; though Mincio leaped no
more,

Each foot-fall burst up in the marishfloor

Adiamond jet: and if he stopped to pick Rose-lichen, or molest the leeches quick,
And circling blood-worms, minnow, newt or loach,

A sudden pond would silently encroach
This way and that. On Palma passed.

The verge Of a new wood was gained. She will emerge

Flushed, now, and panting,—crowds to see,—will own She loves him—Boniface to hear, to groan,
 To leave his suit! One screen of pine-trees still Opposes: but—the startling spectacle Mantua, this time! Under the walls—a crowd Indeed, real men and women, gay and loud

Round a pavilion. How he stood!

In truth No prophecy had come to pass: his youth

In its prime now—and where was homage poured

Upon Sordello?—born to be adored, And suddenly discovered weak, scarce
 made

To cope with any, cast into the shade By this and this. Yet something seemed to prick

And tingle in his blood; a sleight—a trick—

And much would be explained. It went for nought—

The best of their endowments were ill bought

With his identity: nay, the conceit, That this day's roving led to Palma's
 feet

Was not so vain—list! The word,
 'Palma!' Steal

Aside, and die, Sordello; this is real,
 And this—abjure!

What next? The curtains, see, Dividing! She is there; and presently He will be there—the proper You, at
 length—

In your own cherished dress of grace and
 strength:

Most like, the very Boniface!

Not so.

It was a showy man advanced; but though

A glad cry welcomed him, then every sound

Sank and the crowd disposed themselves
 around,

—'This is not he,' Sordello felt; while,
 'Place

For the best Troubadour of Boniface!'

Hollaed the Jongleurs,—'Eglamor, whose lay

Concludes his patron's Court of Love
 to-day!

Obsequious Naddo strung the master's lute

With the new lute-string, 'Elys,' named to suit

The song: he stealthily at watch, the
 while,

Biting his lip to keep down a great smile Of pride: then up he struck. Sordello's

brain
 Swam; for he knew a sometime deed
 again;

So, could supply each foolish gap and chasm

The minstrel left in his enthusiasm, Mistaking its true version—was the tale

Not of Apollo? Only, what avail Luring her down, that Elys an he

If the man dared no further? Has he ceased?

And, lo, the people's frank applause half
 done,

Sordello was beside him, had begun (Spite of indignant twitchings from his

friend

The Trouvere) the true lay with the true
 end,

Taking the other's names and time and
 place

For his. On flew the song, a giddy race, After the flying story; word made leap

Out word, rhyme—rhyme; the lay could barely keep

Face with the action visibly rushing
 past:

Both ended. Back fell Naddo more aghast

Than some Egyptian from the harassed bull

That wheeled abrupt and, bellowing, fronted full

His plague, who spied a scarab 'neath his
 tongue,

And found 'twas Apis' flank his hasty prong

Insulted. But the people—but the cries,

The crowding round, and proffering the prize!

(For he had gained some prize)—He seemed to shrink
 Into a sleepy cloud, just at whose brink
 One sight withheld him. There sat Adelaide, Silent; but at her knees the very maid Of the North Chamber, her red lips as rich,
 The same pure fleecy hair; one weft of
 which,
 Golden and great, quite touched his cheek as o'er She leant, speaking some six words and
 no more.
 He answered something, anything; and
 she Unbound a scarf and laid it heavily Upon him, her neck's warmth and all.
 Again
 Moved the arrested magic; in his brain Noises grew, and a light that turned to glare,
 And greater glare, until the intense flare Engulfed him, shut the whole scene from his sense.
 And when he woke 'twas many a furlong
 thence,
 At home; the sun shining his ruddy
 wont;
 The customary birds' chirp; but his front
 Was crowned—was crowned! Her scented scarf around His neck! Whose gorgeous vesture heaps the ground?
 A prize? He turned, and peeringly on
 him Brooded the women-faces, kind and
 dim,
 Ready to talk.—'The Jongleurs in a troop
 Had brought him back, Naddo and Squarcialupe
 And Tagliafer; how strange! a childhood spent
 In taking, well for him, so brave a bent!
 Since Eglamor,' they heard, 'was dead with spite,
 And Palma chose him for her minstrel.'
 Light
 Sordello rose—to think, now; hitherto He had perceived. Sure, a discovery
 grew Out of it all! Best live from first to last The transport o'er again. A week he Sucking the sweet out of each circumstance,
 From the hard's outbreak to the luscious trance Bounding his own achievement. Strange!
 A man
 Recounted an adventure, but began Imperfectly; his own task was to fill The frame-work up, sing well what he sang ill,
 Supply the necessary points, set loose
 As many incidents of little use —More imbecile the other, not to see Their relative importance clear as he!
 But, for a special pleasure in the act Of singing—had he ever turned, in fact,
 From Elys, to sing Elys?—from each fit
 Of rapture, to contrive a song of it?
 True, this snatch or the other seemed to wind
 Into a treasure, helped himself to find A beauty in himself; for, see, he soared By means of that mere snatch to many a hoard
 Of fancies; as some falling cone bears soft
 The eye, along the fir-tree-spire, aloft To a dove's nest. Then, how divine the cause
 Such a performance might exact applause
 From men, if they had fancies too?
 Could fate Decree they found a beauty separate In the poor snatch itself?—'Take Elys,
 there,
 —Her head that's sharp and perfect like a pear,
 So close and smooth are laid the few fine locks Coloured like honey oozed from topmost rocks
 Sun-blanch'd the livelong summer'—if they heard Just those two rhymes, assented at my
 word,
 And loved them as I love them who have run
 These fingers through those pale locks, let the sun

Into the white cool skin—who first could clutch, Then praise—I needs must be a God to
 such.
 Or if some few, above themselves, and
 yet Beneath me, like their Eglamor, have
 set An impress on our gift? So, men believe And worship what they know not, nor receive Delight from. Have they fancies—slow, perchance,
 Not at their beck, which indistinctly
 glance
 Until, by song, each floating part be linked
 To each, and all grow palpable, distinct?'
 He pondered this.
 Meanwhile, sounds low and drear Stole on him, and a noise of footsteps,
 near
 And nearer, and the underwood was pushed Aside, the larches grazed, the dead leaves crushed At the approach of men. The wind seemed laid;
 Only, the trees shrunk slightly and a shade
 Came o'er the sky although 'twas midday yet:
 You saw each half-shut downcast floweret Flutter—'a Roman bride, when they'd dispart
 Her unbound tresses with the Sabine dart, Holding that famous rape in memory
 still,
 Felt creep into her curls the iron chill,
 And looked thus, Eglamor would say—
 indeed
 'Tis Eglamor, no other, these precede Home hither in the woods. 'Twere surely sweet Far from the scene of one's forlorn defeat
 To sleep!' judged Naddo, who in person led Jongleurs and Trouveres, chanting at their head,

A scanty company; for, sooth to
 say,
 Our beaten Troubadour had seen his
 day.
 Old worshippers were something shamed, old friends
 Nigh weary; still the death proposed amends.
 'Let us but get them safely through my song
 And home again!' quoth Naddo.
 All along,
 This man (they rest the bier upon the sand)
 —This calm corpse with the loose flowers in his hand, Eglamor, lived Sordello's opposite.
 For him indeed was Naddo's notion
 right,
 And verse a temple-worship vague and vast,
 A ceremony that withdrew the last Opposing bolt, looped back the lingering veil
 Which hid the holy place—should one so frail Stand there without such effort? or repine
 That much was blank, uncertain at the shrine
 He knelt before, till, soothed by many a rite,
 The Power responded, and some sound or sight
 Grew up, his own forever, to be fixed In rhyme, the beautiful, forever! mixed With his own life, unloosed when he should please,
 Having it safe at hand, ready to ease All pain, remove all trouble; every
 time
 He loosed that fancy from its bonds of
 rhyme,
 Like Perseus when he loosed his naked
 love,
 Faltering; so distinct and far above Himself, these fancies! He, no genius rare, Transfiguring in fire or wave or air At will, but a poor gnome that, cloistered
 up
 In some rock-chamber with his agate
 cup,

His topaz rod, his seed-pearl, in these few
 And their arrangement finds enough to
     do For his best art. Then, how he loved that art !
 The calling marking him a man apart From men—one not to care, take counsel for Cold hearts, comfortless faces—(Eglamor Was neediest of his tribe)—since verse, the gift,
 Was his, and men, the whole of them, must shift Without it, e'en content themselves with wealth
 And pomp and power, snatching a life by stealth.
 So, Eglamor was not without his pride !
 The sorriest bat which cowers through noontide While other birds are jocund, has one
     time
 When moon and stars are blinded, and the prime Of earth is his to claim, nor find a peer ;
 And Eglamor was noblest poet here He knew that, 'mid the April woods, he cast
 Conceits upon in plenty as he past, That Naddo might suppose him not to
     think Entirely on the coming triumph : wink At the one weakness ! 'Twas a fervid
     child,
 That song of his—no brother of the guild Had e'er conceived its like. The rest
     you know,
 The exaltation and the overthrow :
 Our poet lost his purpose, lost his rank, His life—to that it came. Yet envy sank Within him, as he heard Sordello out,
 And, for the first time, shouted—tried to shout
 Like others, not from any zeal to show Pleasure that way : the common sort did so,
 And what was Eglamor ? who, bending
     down
 The same, placed his beneath Sordello's
     crown,

Printed a kiss on his successor's hand, Left one great tear on it, then joined his band
 —In time ; for some were watching at the door :
 Who knows what envy may effect ?
     ' Give o'er,
 Nor charm his lips, nor craze him !' (here one spied And disengaged the withered crown)—
     ' Beside
 His crown ! How prompt and clear those verses rung
 To answer yours ! nay, sing them !'
     And he sung Them calmly. Home he went ; friends used to wait His coming, zealous to congratulate,
 But, to a man, so quickly runs report, Could do no less than leave him, and escort His rival. That eve, then, bred many a thought :
 What must his future life be ? was he brought
 So low, who was so lofty this Spring
     morn ?
 At length he said, ' Best sleep now with my scorn,
 And by to-morrow I devise some plain Expedient !' So, he slept, nor woke
     again.
 They found as much, those friends, when they returned O'erflowing with the marvels they had learned
 About Sordello's paradise, his roves Among the hills and valleys, plains and groves,
 Wherein, no doubt, this lay was roughly cast, Polished by slow degrees, completed last
 To Eglamor's discomfiture and death.
 Such form the chanters now, and, out of breath,
 They lay the beaten man in his abode, Naddo reciting that same luckless ode, Doleful to hear. Sordello could explore By means of it, however, one step more In joy ; and, mastering the round at
     length,
 Learnt how to live in weakness as in
     strength,

When from his covert forth he stood,
addressed

Eglamor, bade the tender ferns invest, Primaeval pines o'er canopy his couch, And, most of all, his fame—(shall I
avouch

Eglamor heard it, dead though he might
look,

And laughed as from his brow Sordello took

The crown, and laid it on his breast, and
said

It was a crown, now, fit for poet's head ?) —Continue. Nor the prayer quite fruitless fell.

A plant they have yielding a threeleaved bell

Which whitens at the heart ere noon, and ails

Till evening; evening gives it to her

To clear away with such forgotten things As are an eyesore to the morn: this brings

Him to their mind, and bears his very name.

So much for Eglamor. My own month came;

'Twas a sunrise of blossoming and May.
Beneath a flowering laurel thicket lay Sordello; each new sprinkle of white stars

That smell fainter of wine than Massic jars

Dug up at Baiae, when the south wind shed

The ripest, made him happier; filleted And robed the same, only a lute beside Lay on the turf. Before him far and wide

The country stretched: Goito slept behind

—The castle and its covert, which confined

Him with his hopes and fears; so fain of old

To leave the story of his birth untold.
At intervals, 'spite the fantastic glow
Of his Apollo-life, a certain low And wretched whisper, winding through the bliss,

Admonished, no such fortune could be
his,

All was quite false and sure to fade one
day:

The closer drew he round him his array

Of brilliance to expel the truth. But when

A reason for his difference from men Surprised him at the grave, he took no
rest

While aught of that old life, superbly drest

Down to its meanest incident, remained A mystery—alas, they soon explained Away Apollo! and the tale amounts To this: when at Vicenza both her

Counts
Banished the Vivaresi kith and kin, Those Maltraversi hung on Ecelin,

Reveled him as he followed; he for spite Must fire their quarter, though that self-same night

Among the flames young Ecelin was born

Of Adelaide, there too, and barely torn From the roused populace hard on the rear,

By a poor archer when his chieftain's fear Grew high; into the thick Elcorte leapt, Saved her, and died; no creature left except

His child to thank. And when the full escape

Was known—how men impaled from chine to nape

Unlucky Prata, all to pieces spurned Bishop Pistore's concubines, and burned Taurello's entire household, flesh and fell,

Missing the sweeter prey—such courage
well

Might claim reward. The orphan, ever
since,

Sordello, had been nurtured by his prince

Within a blind retreat where Adelaide—(For, once this notable discovery made, The Past at every point was understood) —Might harbour easily when times were rude,

When Azzo schemed for Palma, to retrieve

That pledge of Agnes Este—loath to
leave

Mantua unguarded with a vigilant
     eye,
 Taurello biding there ambiguously—He who could have no motive now to moil
 For his own fortunes since their utter spoil—
 As it were worth while yet (went the report)
 To disengage himself from her. In short,
 Apollo vanished; a mean youth, just named His lady's minstrel, was to be proclaimed —How shall I phrase it? —Monarch of
     the World!
 For, on the morning that array was furled
 For ever, and in place of one a slave To longings, wild indeed, but longings
     save In dreams as wild, suppressed—one daring not Assume the mastery such dreams allot, Until a magical equipment, strength Grace, wisdom, decked him too,—he chose at length, Content with unproved wits and failing
     frame,
 In virtue of his simple will, to claim That mastery, no less—to do his best With means so limited, and let the
     rest
 Go by,—the seal was set: never again Sordello could in his own sight remain One of the many, one with hopes and cares
 And interests nowisedistinct from theirs, Only peculiar in a thriveless store Of fancies, which were fancies and no
     more;
 Never again for him and for the crowd A common law was challenged and allowed
 If calmly reasoned of, how'er denied By a mad impulse nothing justified Short of Apollo's presence. The divorce Is clear: why needs Sordello square his
     course
 By any known example? Men no more Compete with him than tree and flower
     before;
 Himself, inactive, yet is greater far Than such as act, each stooping to his
     star, Acquiring thence his function; he has gained
 The same result with meaner mortals trained To strength or beauty, moulded to express
 Each the idea that rules him; since no
     less
 He comprehends that function, but can
     still Embrace the others, take of might his fill With Richard as of grace with Palma, mix
 Their qualities, or for a moment fix On one; abiding free meantime, un-cramped
 By any partial organ, never stamped Strong, and to strength turning all energies—
 Wise, and restricted to becoming wise—
 That is, he loves not, nor possesses One Idea that, star-like over, lures him on To its exclusive purpose. 'Fortunate!
 This flesh of mine ne'er strove to emulate
 A soul so various—took no casual mould
 Of the first fancy and, contracted, cold, Lay clogged forever thence, averse to
     change
 As that: whereas it left her free to range, Remains itself a blank, cast into shade, Encumbers little, if it cannot aid.
 So, range, my soul!—who, by self-consciousness,
 The last drop of all beauty dost express—
 The grace of seeing grace, a quintessence For thee: but for the world, that can dispense Wonder on men who, themselves, wonder—make A shift to love at second-hand, and take Those for its idols who but idolize, Themselves,—world that loves souls as strong or wise,
 Who, themselves, love strength, wisdom,
     —it shall bow
 Surely in unexampl'd worship now, Discerning me!—
     (Dear monarch, I beseech, Notice how lamentably wide a breach

Is here ! discovering this, discover too
What our poor world has possibly to do With it ! As pigmy natures as you
please—

So much the better for you ; take your
ease ;

Look on, and laugh ; style yourself God
alone ;

Strangle some day with a cross olive-
stone :

All that is right enough : but why want
us

To know that you yourself know thus and thus ?)

' The world shall bow to me conceiving
all

Man's life, who see its blisses, great and small,

Afar—not tasting any ; no machine
To exercise my utmost will is mine :

Be mine mere consciousness ! Let them perceive

What I could do, a mastery believe, Asserted and established to the throng

By their selected evidence of song Which now shall prove, whate'er they are, or seek To be, I am—who take no pains to

speak,
Change no old standards of perfection, vex

With no strange forms created to perplex,

But will perform their bidding and no
more,

At their own satiating-point give o'er, While each shall love in me the love that His soul to its perfection.' Song, not deeds,

(For we get tired) was chosen. Fate would brook

Mankind no other organ ; he would look For not another channel to dispense

His own volition, and receive their sense

Of its existing ; but would be content, Obstructed else, with merely verse for vent.

Nor should, for instance, strength an outlet seek

And, striving, be admired, nor grace peak

peak

Wonder, displayed in gracious attitudes ; Nor wisdom, poured forth, change unseemly moods :

But he would give and take on song's one
point.

Like some huge throbbing-stone that, poised a-joint,

Sounds, to affect on its basaltic bed, Must sue in just one accent ; tempests shed Thunder, and raves the landstorm : only let

That key by any little noise be set—
The far benighted hunter's halloo pitch

On that, the hungry curlew chance to scrutch

Or serpent hiss it, rustling through the rift,

However loud, however low—all lift The groaning monster, stricken to the

heart.
Lo ye, the world's concernment, for its part,

And this, for his, will hardly interfere !
Its businesses in blood and blaze this year

But while the hour away—a pastime slight

Till he shall step upon the platform :
right !

And, now thus much is settled, cast in rough,

Proved feasible, be counselled ! thought
enough,—

Slumber, Sordello ! any day will serve :
Were it a less digested plan ! how swerve To-morrow ? Meanwhile eat these sun-dried grapes,

And watch the soaring hawk there !
Life escapes

Merrily thus.
He thoroughly read o'er His truchman Naddo's missive six times

more,
Praying him visit Mantua and supply A famished world.

The evening star was high When he reached Mantua, but his fame

arrived Before him : friends applauded, foes connived,

And Naddo looked an angel, and the rest Angels, and all these angels would be blest

Supremely by a song — the thricerenowned

Goito manufacture. Then he found (Casting about to satisfy the crowd) That happy vehicle, so late allowed, A sore annoyance; 'twas the song's effect

He cared for, scarce the song itself:
reflect!

In the past life, what might be singing's use?

Just to delight his Delians, whose profuse

Praise, not the toilsome process which procured

That praise, enticed Apollo: dreams abjured,

No over-leaping means for ends—take
both

For granted or take neither! I am loth
To say the hymes at last were Eglamor's; But Naddo, chuckling, bade competitors

Go pine; 'the master certes meant to waste

No effort, cautiously had probed the taste

He'd please anon: true bard, in short,
disturb

His title if they could; nor spur nor curb,

Fancy nor reason, wanting in him;
whence

The staple of his verses, common sense:
He built on man's broad nature—gift of gifts,

That power to build! The world contented shifts

With counterfeits enough, a dreary sort Of warriors, statesmen, ere it can extort Its poet-soul—that 's, after all, a freak (The having eyes to see and tongue to speak)

With our herd's stupid sterling happiness

So plainly incompatible that—yes—Yes—should a son of his improve the breed

And turn out poet, he were cursed
indeed!

'Well, there's Goito and its woods anon, If the worst happen; best go stoutly on Now!' thought Sordello.

Ay, and goes on yet!
You pother with your glossaries to get A notion of the Troubadour's intent In rondel, tenzon, virlai or sirvent—Much as you study arras how to twirl His angelot, plaything of page and girl, Once; but you surely reach, at last,—
or, no!

Never quite reach what struck the people
so,

As from the welter of their time he drew
Its elements successively to view, Followed all actions backward on their
course,

And catching up, unmingled at the source, Such a strength, such a weakness, added
then

A touch or two, and turned them into
men.

Virtue took form, nor vice refused a

Here heaven opened, there was hell agape,

As Saint this simpered past in sanctity, Sinner the other flared portentous by A greedy people. Then why stop,
surprised

At his success? The scheme was realized Too suddenly in one respect: a crowd Praising, eyes quick to see, and lips as loud

To speak, delicious homage to receive, The woman's breath to feel upon his sleeve,

Who said, 'But Anafest—why asks he
less

Than Lucio, in your verses? how con-

It seemed too much but yestereve!'—
the youth,

Who bade him earnestly, 'Avow the
truth!

You love Bianca, surely, from your
song;

I knew I was unworthy!'—soft or
strong,

In poured such tributes ere he had arranged

Ethereal ways to take them, sorted,
changed,

Digested. Courted thus at unawares,
In spite of his pretensions and his cares,
He caught himself shamefully hankering After the obvious petty joys that spring From real life, fain relinquish pedestal And condescend with pleasures—one
and all

To be renounced, no doubt; for, thus to chain

Himself to single joys and so refrain From tasting their quintessence, frustrated, sure,

His prime design; each joy must he abjure

Even for love of it.

He laughed: what sage
But perishes if from his magic page
He look because, at the first line, a proof
'Twas heard salutes him from the cavern-roof?

'On! Give yourself, excluding aught
beside,

To the day's task; compel your slave provide

Its utmost at the soonest; turn the leaf Thoroughly conned. These lays of yours, in brief—

Cannot men bear, now, something better?—fly

A pitch beyond this unreal pageantry Of essences? the period sure has ceased For such: present us with ourselves, at least,

Not portions of ourselves, mere loves and hates

Made flesh: wait not!

While the poet waits
However. The first trial was enough:
He left imagining, to try the stuff That held the imaged thing, and, let it writhe

Never so fiercely, scarce allowed a tithe To reach the light—his Language.

How he sought
The cause, conceived a cure, and slow re-wrought

That Language,—welding words into the crude

Mass from the new speech round him, till a rude

Armour was hammered out, in time to
be

Approved beyond the Roman panoply

Melted to make it,—boots not. This obtained

With some ado, no obstacle remained To using it; accordingly he took An action with its actors, quite forsook Himself to live in each, returned anon With the result—a creature, and, by one And one, proceeded leisurely to equip Its limbs in harness of his workmanship.
'Accomplished! Listen, Mantuans!'

Fond essay!
Piece after piece that armour broke away, Because perceptions whole, like that he sought

To clothe, reject so pure a work of thought

As language: thought may take perception's place

But hardly co-exist in any case, Being its mere presentment—of the whole

By parts, the simultaneous and the sole
By the successive and the many. Lacks The crowd perception? painfully it tacks

Thought to thought, which Sordello, needing such,

Has rent perception into: it's to clutch
And reconstruct—his office to diffuse, Destroy: as hard, then, to obtain a Muse

As to become Apollo. 'For the rest, E'en if some wondrous vehicle exprest The whole dream, what impertinence in
me

So to express it, who myself can be The dream! nor, on the other hand, are those

I sing to, over-likely to suppose A higher than the highest I present Now, which they praise already: be content

Both parties, rather—they with the old
verse,

And I with the old praise—far go, fare
worse!

A few adhering rivets loosed, up-springs

The angel, sparkles off his mail, and rings

Whirled from each delicatest limb it warps,

As might Apollo from the sudden corps

Of Hyacinth have cast his luckless quoits.
 He set to celebrating the exploits Of Montfort o'er the Mountaineers.
 Then came
 The world's revenge: their pleasure, now his aim Merely,—what was it? 'Not to play the fool
 So much as learn our lesson in your school!' Replied the world. He found that, every time
 He gained applause by any ballad-
 rhyme,
 His auditory recognized no jot
 As he intended, and, mistaking not Him for his meanest hero, ne'er was dunce Sufficent to believe him—all, at once.
 His will . . . conceive it caring for his
 will!
 —Mantuan, the main of them, admiring still
 How a mere singer, ugly, stunted, weak, Had Montfort at completely (so to His fingers' ends; while past the praise-tide swept To Montfort, either's share distinctly kept:
 The true meed for true merit!—his abates
 Into a sort he most repudiates, And on them angrily he turns. Who were
 The Mantuans, after all, that he should care
 About their recognition, ay or no?
 In spite of the convention months ago, (Why blink the truth?) was not he forced to help
 This same ungrateful audience, every whelp
 Of Naddo's litter, make them pass for peers
 With the bright band of old Goito years,
 As erst he toiled for flower or tree?
 Why, there
 Sat Palma! Adelaide's funereal hair Ennobled the next corner. Ay, he strewed
 A fairy dust upon that multitude, Although he feigned to take them by themselves;
 His giants dignified those puny elves, Sublimed their faint applause. In short, he found Himself still footing a delusive round, Remote as ever from the self-display He meant to compass, hampered every
 way
 By what he hoped assistance. Wherefore then Continue, make believe to find in men A use he found not?
 Weeks, months, years went by;
 And, lo, Sordello vanished utterly, Sundered in twain; each spectral part
 at strife
 With each; one jarred against another
 life;
 The Poet thwarting hopelessly the Man Who, fooled no longer, free in fancy ran Here, there; let slip no opportunities As pitiful, forsooth, beside the prize To drop on him some no-time and acquit His constant faith (the Poet-half's to wit—
 That waiving any compromise between No joy and all joy kept the hunger keen Beyond most methods)—of incurring scoff
 From the Man-portion not to be put off With self-reflectings by the Poet's
 scheme,
 Though ne'er so bright; that sauntered forth in dream, Drest any how, nor waited mystic frames,
 Immeasurable gifts, astounding claims,
 But just his sorry self—who yet might be Sorrier for aught he in reality Achieved, so opinioned That the Poet-part, Fondling, in turn of fancy, verse; the Art Developing his soul a thousand ways—Potent, by its assistance, to amaze
 The multitude with majesties, convince Each sort of nature, that same nature's prince Accosted it. Language, the makeshift, grew
 Into a bravest of expedients, too; Apollo, seemed it now, perverse had thrown Quiver and bow away, the lyre alone

Sufficed. While, out of dream, his day's work went To tune a crazy tenzon or sirvent—So hampered him the Man-part, thrust to judge Between the bard and the bard's audience, grudge
 A minute's toil that missed its due
     reward!
 But the complete Sordello, Man and Bard, John's cloud-girt angel, this foot on the
     land,
 That on the sea, with open in his hand
 A bitter-sweetling of a book—was gone.
 And if internal struggles to be one That frittered him incessantly piecemeal, Referred, ne'er so obliquely, to the real Mantuans! intruding ever with some
     call
 To action while he pondered, once for
     all,
 Which looked the easier effort—to pursue
 This course, still leap o'er paltry joys, yearn through
 The present ill-appreciated stage Of self-revelment, and compel the age Know him; or else, forswearing hard-craft, wake
 From out his lethargy and nobly shake Off timid habits of denial, mix With men, enjoy like men. Ere he could fix On aught, in rushed the Mantuans; much they cared
 For his perplexity! Thus unprepared, The obvious if not only shelter lay In deeds, the dull conventions of his day Prescribed the like of him: why not be glad
 'Tis settled Palma's minstrel, good or bad, Submits to this and that established
     rule?
 Let Vidal change, or any other fool,
 His murrey-coloured robe for philamot, And crop his hair; too skin-deep, is it
     not,
 Such vigour? Then, a sorrow to the
     heart,
 His talk! Whatever topics they might start,
 Had to be groped for in his consciousness Straight, and as straight delivered them by guess.
 Only obliged to ask himself, 'What was,'
 A speedy answer followed; but, alas, One of God's large ones, tardy to condense Itself into a period; answers whence A tangle of conclusions must be stripped At any risk ere, trim to pattern clipped, They matched rare specimens the Mantuan flock Regaled him with, each talker from his stock
 Of sorted-o'er opinions, every stage, Juicy in youth or desiccate with age, Fruits like the fig-tree's, rather-ripe, rotten-rich,
 Sweet-sour, all tastes to take: a practice which He too had not impossibly attained, Once either of those fancy-flights restrained;
 For, at conjecture how might words
     appear
 To others, playing there what happened
     here,
 And occupied abroad by what he spurned
 At home, 'twas slept, the occasion he returned
 To seize: he'd strike that lyre adroitly
     —speech,
 Would but a twenty-cubit plectro
     reach;
 A clever hand, consummate instrument, Were both brought close; each excellency went For nothing else. The question Naddo asked,
 Had just a lifetime moderately tasked To answer, Naddo's fashion. More disgust
 And more! why move his soul, since move it must
 At a minute's notice or as good it failed To move at all? The end was, he retailed Some ready-made opinion, put to use This quip, that maxim, ventured reproduce Gestures and tones—at any folly caught Serving to finish with, nor too much sought

If false or true 'twas spoken ; praise and blame
 Of what he said grew pretty well the same —Meantime awards to meantime acts : his soul, Unequal to the compassing a whole, Saw, in a tenth part, less and less to strive About. And as for men in turn . . . contrive Who could to take eternal interest In them, so hate the worst, so love the best !
 Though, in pursuance of his passive plan,
 He hailed, decried the proper way.
 As Man
 So figured he ; and how as Poet ? Verse Came only not to a stand-still. The worse, That his poor piece of daily work to do Was, not sink under any rivals ; who Loudly and long enough, without these qualms, Tuned, from Bocafoli's stark-naked psalms, To Plara's sonnets spoilt by toying with,
 'As knops that stud some almsgiving to the pith Pricked for gum, wry thence, and crinkled worse Than pursed eyelids of a river-horse Sunning himself o' the slime when whirrs the breeze'— Gad-fly, that is. He might compete with these !
 But—but—
 'Observe a pompion-twined afloat ; Pluck me one cup from off the castle-moat !
 Along with cup you raise leaf, stalk and root,
 The entire surface of the pool to boot.
 So could I pluck a cup, put in one song
 A single sight, did not my hand, too strong, Twitch in the least the root-strings of the whole.
 How should externals satisfy my soul ?
 'Why that's precise the error Squarcialupe' (Hazarded Naddo) 'finds ; "the man can't stoop To sing us out," quoth he, "a mere romance ; He'd fain do better than the best, enhance The subjects' rarity, work problems out Therewith : " now, you're a bard, a bard past doubt,
 And no philosopher ; why introduce Crotchets like these ? fine, surely, but no use In poetry—which still must be, to strike, Based upon common sense ; there's nothing like Appealing to our nature ! what beside Was your first poetry ? No tricks were tried In that, no hollow thrills, affected throes !
 "The man," said we, "tells his own joys and woes—We'll trust him." Would you have your songs endure ?
 Build on the human heart !—Why, to be sure Yours is one sort of heart—but I mean theirs, Ours, every one's, the healthy heart one cares
 To build on ! Central peace, mother of strength, That's father of . . . nay, go yourself that length, Ask those calm-hearted doers what they do When they have got their calm ! And is it true, Fire rankles at the heart of every globe ?
 Perhaps ! But these are matters one may probe Too deeply for poetic purposes :
 Rather select a theory that . . . yes, Laugh ! what does that prove ?—stations you midway
 And saves some little o'er-refining. Nay, That's rank injustice done me ! I restrict The poet ? Don't I hold the poet picked Out of a host of warriors, statesmen . . . did I tell you ? Very like ! As well you hid That sense of power, you have ! True bards believe All able to achieve what they achieve—

That is, just nothing—in one point abide Profounder simpletons than all beside.
 Oh, ay! The knowledge that you are a bard Must constitute your prime, nay sole,
     reward!’
 So prattled Naddo, busiest of the tribe Of genius-haunters—how shall I describe What grubs or nips, or rubs, or rips—your louse
 For love, your flea for hate, magnanimous, Malignant, Pappacoda, Tagliafer, Picking a sustenance from wear and tear
 By implements it sedulous employs To undertake, lay down, mete out, o’er-toise Sordello? Fifty creepers to elude At once! They settled stanchly; shame ensued:
 Behold the monarch of mankind succumb To the last fool who turned him round his thumb,
 As Naddo styled it! ’Twas not worth oppose The matter of a moment, gainsay those He aimed at getting rid of; better
     think
 Their thoughts and speak their speech, secure to slink Back expeditiously to his safe place, And chew the cud—what he and what his race Were really, each *of them. Yet even
     this Conformity was partial. He would miss
 Some point, brought into contact with them ere Assured in what small segment of the sphere
 Of his existence they attended him; Whence blunders—falsehoods rectify—a grim List—slur it over! How? If dreams were tried,
 His will swayed sickly from side to
     side,
 Nor merely neutralized his waking act
 But tended e’en in fancy to distract

The intermediate will, the choice of
     means.
 He lost the art of dreaming: Mantuan scenes Supplied a baron, say, he sung before, Handsomely reckless, full to running o’er Of gallantries; ‘abjure the soul, content With body, therefore!’ Scarcely had he bent Himself in dream thus low, when matter
     fast
 Cried out, he found, for spirit to contrast And task it duly; by advances slight,
 The simple stuff becoming composite,
 Count Lori grew Apollo—best recall His fancy! Then would some rough peasant-Paul,
 Like those old Ecelin confers with,
     glance
 His gay apparel o’er; that countenance Gathered his shattered fancy into one,
 And, body clean abolished, soul alone Sufficed the grey Paulcian: by and by,
 To balance the ethereality, Passions were needed; foiled he sunk
     again.
 Meanwhile the world rejoiced (’tis time explain)
 Because a sudden sickness set it free From Adelaide. Missing the mother-
     bee,
 Her mountain-hive Romano swarmed;
     at once
 A rustle-forth of daughters and of sons Blackened the valley. ‘I am sick too,
     old,
 Half crazed I think; what good’s the Kaiser’s gold To such an one? God help me! for I catch My children’s greedy sparkling eyes at
     watch—
 He bears that double breastplate on,
     they say,
 So many minutes less than yesterday!
 Beside, Monk Hilary is on his knees Now, sworn to kneel and pray till God shall please Exact a punishment for many things You know, and some you never knew;
     which brings

To memory, Azzo's sister Beatrix
And Richard's Giglia are my Alberic's And Ecelin's betrothed; the Count
himself

Must get my Palma: Ghibellin and Guelph

Mean to embrace each other.' So began Romano's missive to his fighting-man Taurello—on the Tuscan's death, away With Friedrich sworn to sail from Naples' bay

Next month for Syria. Never thunder-clap

Out of Vesuvius' throat, like this mishap Startled him. 'That accursed Vicenza! I Absent, and she selects this time to die!
Ho, fellows, for Vicenza!' Half a score Of horses ridden dead, he stood before Romano in his reeking spurs: too late—'Boniface urged me, Este could not wait.'

The chieftain stammered; 'let me die in peace—

Forget me! Was it I e'er craved increase Of rule? Do you and Friedrich plot your worst

Against the Father: as you found me
first

So leave me now. Forgive me! Palma,
sure,

Is at Goito still. Retain that lure—Only be pacified!

The country rung With such a piece of news: on every
tongue,

How Ecelin's great servant, congeed off, Had done a long day's service, so, might doff

The green and yellow, and recover
breath

At Mantua, whither,—since Retrude's
death,

(The girlish slip of a Sicilian bride From Otho's House, he carried to reside At Mantua till the Ferrarese should pile
A structure worthy her imperial style, The gardens raise, the statues there enshrine,

She never lived to see)—although his line

Was ancient in her archives and she took

A pride in him, that city, nor forsook

Her child when he forsook himself and
spent

A prowess on Romano surely meant For his own growth—whither he ne'er resorts

If wholly satisfied (to trust reports)
With Ecelin. So, forward in a trice Were shows to greet him. 'Take a friend's advice,'

Quoth Naddo to Sordello, 'nor be rash

Because your rivals (nothing can abash Some folks) demur that we pronounced you best

To sound the great man's welcome; 'tis a test,

Remember! Strojavacca looks asquint, The rough fat sloven; and there's plenty hint

Your pinions have received of late a shock—

Out-soar them, cobsman of the silver flock!

Sing well!' A signal wonder, song's no whit

Facilitated.

Fast the minutes flit;
Another day, Sordello finds, will bring The soldier, and he cannot choose but sing;

So, a last shift, quits Mantua—slow,
alone:

Out of that aching brain, a very stone, Song must be struck. What occupies that front?

Just how he was more awkward than his wont

The night before, when Naddo, who had
seen

Taurello on his progress, praised the mien

For dignity no crosses could affect—Such was a joy, and might not he detect A satisfaction if established joys

Were proved imposture? Poetry annoys Its utmost: wherefore fret? Verses may come

Or keep away! And thus he wandered, dumb

Till evening, when he paused, thoroughly
spent,

On a blind hill-top: down the gorge he
went,

Yielding himself up as to an embrace.
The moon came out; like features of a
face

A querulous fraternity of pines, Sad blackthorn clumps, leafless and grovelling vines

Also came out, made gradually up
The picture; 'twas Goito's mountain-cup And castle. He had dropped through one defile

He never dared explore, the Chief ere-
while

Had passed by. Back rushed the dream, enwrapped

Him wholly. 'Twas Apollo now they lapped,

Those mountains, not a pettish minstrel
meant

To wear his soul away in discontent, Brooding on fortune's malice. Heart and brain

Swelled; he expanded to himself again, As some thin seedling spice-tree starved and frail,

Pushing between cat's head and ibis' tail Crusted into the porphyry pavement smooth,

—Suffered remain just as it sprang, to soothe

The Soldan's pining daughter, never yet Well in her chilly green-glazed minaret,— When rooted up, the sunny day she died, And flung into the common court beside Its parent tree. Come home, Sordello!

Soon
Was he low muttering, beneath the moon,

Of sorrow saved, of quiet evermore,— Since from the purpose, he maintained
before,

Only resulted wailing and hot tears.
Ah, the slim castle! dwindled of late
years,

But more mysterious; gone to ruin—trails

Of vine through every loop-hole.
Nought avails

The night as, torch in hand, he must explore

The maple chamber—did I say, its floor
Was made of intersecting cedar beams?
Worn now with gaps so large, there blew cold streams

Of air quite from the dungeon; lay your ear

Close and 'tis like, one after one, you hear In the blind darkness water drop. The nests

And nooks retained their long ranged vesture-chests

Empty and smelling of the iris-root
The Tuscan grated o'er them to recruit Her wasted wits. Palma was gone that
day,

Said the remaining women. Last, he lay Beside the Carian group preserved and still.

The Body, the Machine for Acting
Will,

Had been at the commencement proved unfit;

That for Reflecting, Demonstrating it, Mankind—no fitter: was the Will Itself In fault?

His forehead pressed the moonlit shelf

Beside the youngest marble maid awhile; Then, raising it, he thought, with a long
smile,

'I shall be king again!' as he withdrew

The envied scarf; into the font he threw His crown.

Next day, no poet! 'Wherefore?' asked

Taurello, when the dance of Jongleurs, masked

As devils, ended; 'don't a song come next?'

The master of the pageant looked perplex

Till Naddo's whisper came to his relief.
'His Highness knew what poets were:
in brief,

Had not the tetchy race prescriptive right
To peevishness, caprice? or, call it spite, One must receive their nature in its
length

And breadth, expect the weakness with the strength!'

—So phrasing, till, his stock of phrases
spent,

The easy-natured soldier smiled assent, Settled his portly person, smoothed his chin,

And nodded that the bull-bait might begin.

BOOK THE THIRD

AND the font took them : let our laurels
lie !
Braid moonfern now with mystic trifoly Because oncemore Goito gets, oncemore, Sordello to itself ! A dream is o'er,
And the suspended life begins anew ; Quiet those throbbing temples, then, subdue That cheek's distortion ! Nature's strict embrace,
Putting aside the Past, shall soon efface Its print as well—factitious humours
grown Over the true—loves, hatreds not his
own—
And turn him pure as some forgotten vest
Woven of painted byssus, silkiest Tufting the Tyrrhene whelk's pearl-sheeted lip,
Left welter where a trireme let it slip I' the sea, and vexed a satrap ; so the stain O' the world forsakes Sordello, with its pain,
Its pleasure : how the tinct loosening
escapes, Cloud after cloud ! Mantua's familiar Die, fair and foul die, fading as they flit, Men, women, and the pathos and the
wit,
Wise speech and foolish, deeds to smile or sigh
For, good, bad, seemly or ignoble, die.
The last face glances through the eglantines,
The last voice murmurs 'twixt the blossomed vines
Of Men, of that machine supplied by
thought
To compass self-perception with, he sought
By forcing half himself—an insane pulse Of a god's blood, on clay it could convulse, Never transmute—on human sights and sounds,
To watch the other half with ; irksome
bounds

It ebbs from to its source, a fountain

Forever. Better sure be unrevealed Than part-revealed : Sordello well or ill Is finished : then what further use of
Will,
A point in the prime idea not realized,
An oversight ? inordinately prized, No less, and pampered with enough of
each Delight to prove the whole above its
reach.
' To need become all natures, yet retain The law of my own nature—to remain Myself, yet yearn . . . as if that chestnut,
think,
Should yearn for this first larch-bloom crisp and pink,
Or those pale fragrant tears where zephyrs stanch March wounds along the fretted pine-tree branch !
Will and the means to show will, great and small,
Material, spiritual,—abjure them all Save any so distinct, they may be left To amuse, not tempt become ! and, thus bereft,
Just as I first was fashioned would I be !
Nor, Moon, is it Apollo now, but me Thou visitest to comfort and befriend !
Swim thou into my heart, and there an
end,
Since I possess thee !—nay, thus shut mine eyes
And know, quite know, by this heart's fall and rise, When thou dost bury thee in clouds, and
when Out-standest : wherefore practise upon
men
To make that plainer to myself ?'
Slide here
Over a sweet and solitary year Wasted : or simply notice change in
him—
How eyes, bright with exploring once,
grew dim
And satiate with receiving. Some distress
Was caused, too, by a sort of consciousness

Under the imbecility,—nought kept That down ; he slept, but was aware he slept,
 So, frustrated : as who brainsick made pact
 Erst with the overhanging cataract To deafen him, yet still distinguished slow
 His own blood's measured clicking at his brow.
 To finish. One declining Autumn
     day—
 Few birds about the heaven chill and
     grey,
 No wind that cared trouble the tacit woods—
 He sauntered home complacently, their moods According, his and Nature's. Every spark
 Of Mantua life was trodden out ; so
     dark
 The embers, that the Troubadour, who sung
 Hundreds of songs, forgot, its trick his
     tongue,
 Its craft his brain, how either brought to pass Singing at all ; that faculty might class
 With any of Apollo's now. The year Began to find its early promise sere As well. Thus beauty vanishes ; thus stone Outlingers flesh : Nature's and his youth
     gone,
 They left the world to you, and wished you joy.
 When, stopping his benevolent employ,
 A presage shuddered through the welkin ; harsh
 The earth's remonstrance followed.
     'Twas the marsh Gone of a sudden. Mincio, in its place, Laughed, a broad water, in next morning's face,
 And, where the mists broke up immense and white
 I' the steady wind, burned like a spilth of light
 Out of the crashing of a myriad stars.
 And here was Nature, bound by the same bars

Of fate with him !
     ' No ! youth once gone is gone :
 Deeds let escape are never to be done.
 Leaf-fall and grass-spring for the year ;
     for us—
 Oh forfeit I unalterably thus My chance ? nor two lives wait me, this to spend Learning save that ? Nature has time to mend Mistake, she knows occasion will recur—Landslip or seabreach, how affects it her With her magnificent resources ?—I Must perish once and perish utterly !
 Not any strollings now at even-close Down the field-path, Sordello ! by thorn-rows Alive with lamp-flies, swimming spots of fire
 And dew, outlining the black cypress'
     spire
 She waits you at, Elys, who heard you
     first Woo her, the snow-month through, but ere she durst Answer 'twas April ! Linden-flower-time-long Her eyes were on the ground ; 'tis July,
     strong
 Now ; and because white dust-clouds overwhelm
 The woodside, here or by the village elm That holds the moon, she meets you, somewhat pale,
 But letting you lift up her coarse flax
     veil
 And whisper (the damp little hand in yours)
 Of love, heart's love, your heart's love that endures Till death. Tush ! No mad mixing with the rout
 Of haggard ribalds wandering about The hot torchlit wine-scented island-
     house Where Friedrich holds his wickedest carouse, Parading,—to the gay Palermitans, Soft Messinese, dusk Saracenic clans Nuocera holds,—those tall grave dazzling Norse, High-cheeked, lank-haired, toothed whiter than the morse,

Queens of the caves of jet stalactites, He sent his barks to fetch through icy seas,
 The blind night seas without a saving
     star,
 And here in snowy birdskin robes they
     are,
 Sordello !—here, mollitious alcoves gilt Superb as Byzant domes that devils built !

—Ah, Byzant, there again ! no chance to go

Ever like august pleasant Dandolo, Worshipping hearts about him for a
     wall,

Conducted, blind eyes, hundred years
     and all,

Through vanquished Byzant where friends note for him

What pillar, marble massive, sardius slim,

'Twere fittest he transport to Venice'
     Square—

Flattered and promised life to touch them there

Soon, by his fervid sons of senators !
 No more lives, deaths, loves, hatreds, peaces, wars—

Ah, fragments of a whole ordained to be !
 Points in the life I waited ! what are ye But roundels of a ladder which appeared Awhile the very platform it was reared To lift me on ?—that happiness I find Proofs of my faith in, even in the blind Instinct which bade forego you all unless Ye led me past yourselves. Ay, happiness

Awaited me ; the way life should be used

Was to acquire, and deeds like you conduced

To teach it by a self-revelment, deemed The very use, so long ! Whatever seemed Progress to that, was pleasure ; aught that stayed

My reaching it—no pleasure." I have laid

The ladder down ; I climb not ; still, aloft

The platform stretches ! Bliss strong and soft,

I dared not entertain, elude me ; yet Never of what they promised could I get A glimpse till now ! The common sort, the crowd

Exist, perceive ; with Being are endowed,

However slight, distinct from what they
     See,

However bounded : Happiness must be,
 To feed the first by gleanings from the
     last,

Attain its qualities, and slow or fast Become what they behold ; such peace-in-strife

By transmutation, is the Use of Life,
 The Alien turning Native to the soul Or body—which instructs me ; I am
     whole

There and demand a Palma ; had the
     world

Been from my soul to a like distance hurled,

'Twere Happiness to make it one with
     me—

Whereas I must, ere I begin to Be,
 Include a world, in flesh, I comprehend In spirit now ; and this done, what 's to blend

With ? Nought is Alien in the world—my Will

Owens all already ; yet can turn it still Less Native, since my Means to correspond

With Will are so unworthy, 'twas my bond

To tread the very joys that tantalize
 Most now, into a grave, never to rise.
 I die then ! Will the rest agree to die ?
 Next Age or no ? Shall its Sordello try Clue after clue, and catch at last the clue

I miss ?—that 's underneath my finger
     too,

Twice, thrice a day, perhaps,—some yearning traced

Deeper, some petty consequence embraced

Closer ! Why fled I Mantua, then ?— complained

So much my Will was fettered, yet remained

Content within a tether half the range
 I could assign it ?—able to exchange My ignorance (I felt) for knowledge, and Idle because I could thus understand—

Could e'en have penetrated to its core Our mortal mystery, and yet forbore, Preferred elaborating in the dark My casual stuff, by any wretched spark Born of my predecessors, though one stroke

Of mine had brought the flame forth!
Mantua's yoke,

My minstrel's-trade, was to behold
mankind,—

My own concernment—just to bring my
mind

Behold, just extricate, for my acquit, Each object suffered stifle in the mist Which hazard, use and blindness could impose

In their relation to myself.'

He rose.

The level wind carried above the firs Clouds, the irrevocable travellers, Onward.

'Pushed thus into a drowsy copse, Arms twine about my neck, each eyelid
drops

Under a humid finger; while there Outside the screen, a pageant time repeats

Never again! To be deposed—immured Clandestinely—still petted, still assured To govern were fatiguing work—the Sight

Fleeting meanwhile! 'Tis noontide: wreak ere night

Somehow my will upon it, rather!
Slake

This thirst somehow, the poorest impress take

That serves! A blasted bud displays you, torn,

Faint rudiments of the full flower unborn;

But who divines what glory coats o'er-clasp

Of the bulb dormant in the mummy's grasp

Taurello sent' . . .

'Taurello? Palma sent Your Trouvere,' (Naddo interposing leant

Over the lost bard's shoulder)—'and,
believe,

You cannot more reluctantly receive

Than I pronounce her message: we depart

Together. What avail a poet's heart Verona's pomps and gauds? five blades of grass

Suffice him. News? Why, where your marish was,

On its mud-banks smoke fast rises after smoke

I' the valley, like a spout of hell new-
broke.

Oh, the world's tidings! small your thanks, I guess,

For them. The father of our Patroness, Has played Taurello an astounding
trick,

Parts between Ecelin and Alberic His wealth and goes into a convent:

both Wed Guelfs: the Count and Palma plighted troth

A week since at Verona: and they want

You doubtless to contrive the marriagechant

Ere Richard storms Ferrara.' Here was told

The tale from the beginning—how, made bold

By Salinguerra's absence, Guelfs had burned

And pillaged till he unawares returned To take revenge: how Azzo and his friend

Were doing their endeavour, how the
end

Of the siege was nigh, and how the Count, released

From further care, would with his marriage-feast

Inaugurate a new and better rule, Absorbing thus Romano.

'Shall I school
My master,' added Naddo, 'and suggest How you may clothe in a poetic vest These doings, at Verona? Your response

To Palma! Wherefore jest? "Depart
at once?"

A good resolve! In truth, I hardly hoped

So prompt an acquiescence. Have you groped

Out wisdom in the wilds here?— Thoughts may be Over-poetical for poetry.
 Pearl-white, you poets liken Palma's
 neck;
 And yet what spoils an orient like some speck
 Of genuine white, turning its own white grey?
 You take me? Curse the cicale!'

One more day.

One eve—appears Verona! Many a group, (You mind) instructed of the osprey's swoop

On lynx and ounce, was gathering—Christendom

Sure to receive, whate'er the end was,
 from

The evening's purpose cheer or detriment,

Since Friedrich only waited some event Like this, of Ghibellins establishing Themselves within Ferrara, ere, as King Of Lombardy, he'd glad descend there,

Old warfare with the Pontiff, disengage His barons from the burghers, and restore

The rule of Charlemagne, broken of yore
 By Hildebrand.

In the palace, each by each,
 Sordello sat and Palma: little speech At first in that dim closet, face with face (Despite the tumult in the marketplace)

Exchanging quick low laughter: now would rush

Word upon word to meet a sudden flush,
 A look left off, a shifting lips' surmise—
 But for the most part their two histories Ran best thro' the locked fingers and linked arms.

And so the night flew on with its alarms Till in burst one of Palma's retinue;
 'Now, Lady!' gasped he. Then arose
 the two

And leaned into Verona's air, dead-still.
 A balcony lay black beneath until Out, 'mid a gush of torchfire, grey-haired men

Came on it and harangued the people:
 then

Sea-like that people surging to and fro Shouted, 'Hale forth the Carroch—trumpets, ho,

A flourish! runit in the ancient grooves—Back from the bell! Hammer! that whom behoves

May hear the League is up! Peal!
 learn who list,

Verona means not be the first break tryst

To-morrow with the League!'
 Enough. Now turn—

Over the eastern cypresses: discern—
 Is any beacon set a-glimmer?

Rang

The air with shouts that overpowered the clang

Of the incessant carroch, even:
 'Haste—

The Candle's at the gateway! ere it
 waste,

Each soldier stand beside it, armed to march

With Tiso Sampier through the eastern arch!'

Ferrara's succoured, Palma!
 Once again

They sat together; some strange thing in train

To say, so difficult was Palma's place In taking, with a coy fastidious grace

Like the bird's flutter ere it fix and feed.

But when she felt she held her friend
 indeed

Safe, she threw back her curls, began implant

Her lessons; telling of another want Goito's quiet nourished than his own; Palma—to serve, as him—be served,
 alone

Importing; Agnes' milk so neutralized
 The blood of Écelin. Nor be surprised

If, while Sordello fain had captive led Nature, in dream was Palma wholly subjected

To some out-soul, which dawned not though she pined

Delaying till its advent, heart and mind, Their life. 'How dared I let expand the force

Within me, till some out-soul, whose resource

It grew for, should direct it? Every law
 Of life, its every fitness, every flaw, Must One determine whose corporeal Would be no other than the prime escape
 And revelation to me of a Will Orb-like o'er-shrouded and inscrutable Above, save at the point which, I should
     know, Shone that myself, my powers, might overflow
 So far, so much; as now it signified Which earthly shape it henceforth chose my guide,
 Whose mortal lip selected to declare Its oracles, what fleshly garb would wear;
 —The first of intimations, whom to love;
 The next, how love him. Seemed that orb, above
 The castle-covert and the mountain-
     close,
 Slow in appearing,—if beneath it rose Cravings, aversions,—did our green precinct Take pride in me, at unawares distinct With this or that endowment,—how, represt
 At once, such jetting power shrunk to
     the rest!
 Was I to have a chance touch spoil me,
     leave
 My spirit thence unfitted to receive The consummating spell? —that spell so near Moreover! "Waits he not the waking
     year?
 His almond-blossoms must be honey-ripe
 By this; to welcome him, fresh runnels stripe
 The thawed ravines; because of him, the wind Walks like a herald. I shall surely find Him now!"
     And chief, that earnest April morn Of Richard's Love-court, was it time, so worn
 And white my cheek, so idly my blood
     beat,
 Sitting that morn beside the Lady's feet

And saying as she prompted; till outburst
 One face from all the faces—not then
     first
 I knew it; where in maple chamber
     glooms,
 Crowned with what sanguine-heart pomegranate blooms Advanced it ever? Men's acknowledgment Sanctioned my own: 'twas taken, Palma's bent,— Sordello, accepted.
     And the Tuscan dumb Sat scheming, scheming. Ecelin would
     come Gaunt, scared, "Cesano baffles me," he'd say:
 "Better I fought it out, my father's way!
 Strangle Ferrara in its drowning flats,
 And you and your Taurello yonder—what's Romano's business there?" An hour's concern To cure the froward Chief!—induced
     return
 Much heartened from those overmeaning Wound up to persevere,—his enterprise Marked out anew, its exigent of wit Apportioned,—she at liberty to sit And scheme against the next emergence,
     I—
 To covet her Taurello-sprite, made fly Or fold the wing—to con your horoscope For leave command those steely shafts shoot ope,
 Or straight assuage their blinding eager-
     ness
 To blank smooth snow. What semblance of success
 To any of my plans for making you Mine and Romano's? Break the first wall through,
 Tread o'er the ruins of the Chief, supplant His sons beside, still, vainest were the vaunt:
 There, Salanguerra would obstruct me sheer,
 And the insuperable Tuscan, here, Stayed me! But one wild eve that Lady died
 In her lone chamber: only I beside:

Taurello far at Naples, and my sire At Padua, Ecelin away in ire With Alberic. She held me thus—a clutch
 To make our spirits as our bodies touch—
 And so began flinging the Past up, heaps Of uncouth treasure from their sunless sleeps Within her soul; deeds rose along with
     dreams,
 Fragments of many miserable schemes, Secrets, more secrets, then—no, not the
     last—
 'Mongst others, like a casual trick o' the
     Past,
 How . . . ay, she told me, gathering up her face
 —All left of it, into one arch-grimace To die with . . .
     Friend, 'tis gone! but not the fear Of that fell laughing, heard as now I
     hear.
 Nor faltered voice, nor seemed her heart grow weak,
 When i' the midst abrupt she ceased to
     speak
 —Dead, as to serve a purpose, mark!— for in Rushed o' the very instant Ecelin (How summoned, who divines?)— looking as if He understood why Adelaide lay stiff Already in my arms; for, "Girl, how must
 I manage Este in the matter thrust Upon me, how unravel your bad coil?— Since" (he declared) "'tis on your brow —a soil Like hers, there!" then in the same breath, "he lacked
 No counsel after all, had signed no pact With devils, nor was treason here or thero, Goito or Vicenza, his affair:
 He buried it in Adelaide's deep grave, Would begin life afresh, now,—would not slave
 For any Friedrich's nor Taurello's sake!
 What bootéd him to meddle or to make
 In Lombardy?" And afterward I knew
 The meaning of his promise to undo

All she had done—why marriages were
     made, Newfriendships entered on, old followers paid
 With curses for their pains,—new friends' amaze
 At height, when, passing out by Gate
     St. Blaise, He stopped short in Vicenza, bent his
     head Over a friar's neck,—“had vowed,” he
     said, “Long since, nigh thirty years, because his wife
 And child were saved there, to bestow
     his life
 On God, his gettings on the Church.”
     Exiled
 Within Goito, still one dream beguiled My days and nights; 'twas found, the orb I sought To serve, those glimpses came of Fomalhaut,
 No other: but how serve it?—
     authorize
 You and Romano mingle destinies?
 And straight Romano's angel stood
     beside Me who had else been Boniface's
     bride,
 For Salinguerra 'twas, with neck low bent,
 And voice lightened to music, (as he meant
 To learn not teach me,) who withdrew the pall
 From the dead Past and straight revived
     it all,
 Making me see how first Romano waxed, Wherefore he waned now, why, if I relaxed
 My grasp (even I!) would drop a thing effete, Frayed by itself, unequal to complete Its course, and counting every step astray
 A gain so much. Romano, every way Stable, a Lombard House now—why start back Into the very outset of its track?
 This patching-principle which late allied Our House with other Houses—what
     beside

Concerned the apparition, the first Knight
 Who followed Conrad hither in such plight His utmost wealth was summed in his one steed ?
 For Ecelo, that prowler, was decreed A task, in the beginning hazardous To him as ever task can be to us ;
 But did the weather-beaten thief despair When first our crystal cincture of warm air,—
 That binds the Trevisan,—as its spice-belt (Crusaders say) the tract where Jesus dwelt,— Furtive he pierced, and Este was to
 face—
 Despaired Saponian strength of Lombard grace ?
 Tried he at making surer aught made
 sure,
 Maturing what already was mature ?
 No ; his heart prompted Ecelo, " Confront
 Este, inspect yourself. What's nature ?
 Wont.
 Discard three-parts your nature, and adopt
 The rest as an advantage ! " Old strength
 propped
 The man who first grew Podestà among The Vincentines, no less than, while there sprung
 His palace up in Padua like a threat, Their noblest spied a grace, unnoticed
 yet
 In Conrad's crew. Thus far the object
 gained,
 Romano was established—has remained—
 For are you not Italian, truly peers With Este ? " Azze " better soothes our ears
 Than " Alberic ? " or is this lion's-crime From over-mounts " (this yellow hair of
 mine)
 " So weak a graft on Agnes Este's stock ? " (Thus went he on with something of a mock)
 " Wherefore recoil, then, from the very
 fate
 Conceded you, refuse to imitate

Your model farther ? Este long since left
 Being mere Este : as a blade its heft, Este required the Pope to further him :
 And you, the Kaiser—whom your father's whim Foregoes or, better, never shall forego
 If Palma dare pursue what Ecelo Commenced, but Ecelin desists from :
 just
 As Adelaide of Susa could intrust Her donative,—her Piedmont given the Pope,
 Her Alpine-pass for him to shut or ope
 'Twixt France and Italy,—to the superb Matilda's perfecting,—so, lest aught
 curb
 Our Adelaide's great counter-project for Giving her Trentine to the Emperor With passage here from Germany,— shall you Take it,—my slender plodding talent,
 too ! "
 —Urged me Taurello with his half-smile.
 He
 As Patron of the scattered family Conveyed me to his Mantua, kept in bruit Azzo's alliances and Richard's suit Until, the Kaiser excommunicate, " Nothing remains," Taurello said, " but wait
 Some rash procedure : Palma was the link, As Agnes' child, between us, and they shrink
 From losing Palma : judge if we advance,
 Your father's method, your inheritance ! "
 That day I was betrothed to Boniface At Padua by Taurello's self, took place
 The outrage of the Ferrarese : again, That day I sought Verona with the train Agreed for,—by Taurello's policy Convicting Richard of the fault, since we Were present to annul or to confirm,— Richard, whose patience had outstayed its term, Quitted Verona for the siege.
 And now
 What glory may engird Sordello's brow

Through this ? A month since at Ohero slunk

All that was Ecelin into a monk ;
But how could Salinguerra so forget His liege of thirty years as grudge even
yet

One effort to recover him ? He sent Forthwith the tidings of this last event To Ecelin—declared that he, despite The recent folly, recognized his right To order Salinguerra : “ Should he wring

Its uttermost advantage out, or fling This chance away ? Or were his sons now Head

Of the House ? ” Through me Taurello’s missive sped ;

My father’s answer will by me return.
Behold ! “ For him,” he writes, “ no more concern

With strife than, for his children, with fresh plots

Of Friedrich. Old engagements out he blots

For aye : Taurello shall no more sub-
serve,

Nor Ecelin impose.” Lest this unnerve Taurello at this juncture, slack his grip Of Richard, suffer the occasion slip,—

I, in his sons’ default (who, mating with Este, forsake Romano as the frith Its mainsea for the firmland, sea makes
head

Against) I stand, Romano,—in their
stead

Assume the station they desert, and give Still, as the Kaiser’s representative, Taurello licence he demands. Mid-
night—

Morning—by noon to-morrow, making
light

Of the League’s issue, we, in some gay weed

Like yours, disguised together, may precede

The arbitrators to Ferrara : reach Him, let Taurello’s noble accents teach The rest ! then say if I have miscon-
ceived

Your destiny, too readily believed The Kaiser’s cause your own ! ’

And Palma’s fled.
Though no affirmative disturbs the head,

A dying lamp-flame sinks and rises o’er,
Like the alighted planet Pollux wore, Until, morn breaking, he resolves to be Gate-vein of this heart’s blood of Lombardy,

Soul of this body—to wield this aggregate

Of souls and bodies, and so conquer fate Though he should live—a centre of disgust

Even—apart, core of the outward crust He vivified, assimilated. Thus

I bring Sordello to the rapturous Exclaim at the crowd’s cry, because one
round

Of life was quite accomplished ; and he found

Not only that a soul, whate’er its might,
Is insufficient to its own delight,

Both in corporeal organs and in skill By means of such to body forth its
Will—

And, after, insufficient to apprise Men of that Will, oblige them recognize

The Hid by the Revealed—but that, the
last

Nor lightest of the struggles overpast, His Will, bade abdicate, which would not void

The throne, might sit there, suffer be enjoyed

Mankind, a varied and divine array Incapable of homage, the first way, Nor fit to render incidentally Tribute connived at, taken by the by,

In joys. If thus with warrant to rescind The ignominious exile of mankind—

Whose proper service, ascertained intact As yet, (to be by him themselves made act,

Not watch Sordello acting each of them)
Was to secure—if the true diadem Seemed imminent while our Sordello
drank

The wisdom of that golden Palma,— thank

Verona’s Lady in her Citadel Founded by Gaulish Brennus, legends
tell :

And truly when she left him, the sun reared

A head like the first clamberer’s that peered

A-top the Capitol, his face on flame With triumph, triumphing till Manlius came.

Nor slight too much my rhymes—that spring, disspread,

Dispart, disperse, lingering overhead
Like an escape of angels! Rather say, My transcendental platan! mounting gay

(An archimage so courts a novice-queen) With tremulous silvered trunk, whence branches sheen

Laugh out, thick-foliaged next, a-shiver
soon

With coloured buds, then glowing like
the moon

One mild flame,—last a pause, a burst,
and all

Her ivory limbs are smothered by a fall, Bloom-flinders and fruit-sparkles and leaf-dust,

Ending the weird work prosecuted just
For her amusement; he decrepit, stark, Dozes; her uncontrolled delight may mark

Apart—

Yet not so, surely never so!
Only, as good my soul were suffered go O'er the lagune: forth fare thee, put aside

Entrance thy synod, as a god may glide Out of the world he fills, and leave it mute

For myriad ages as we men compute, Returning into it without a break O' the consciousness! They sleep, and I awake

O'er the lagune.

Sordello said once, 'Note,
In just such songs as Eglamor (say) wrote

With heart and soul and strength, for he believed

Himself achieving all to be achieved By singer—in such songs you find alone Completeness, judge the song and singer
one,

And either's purpose answered, his in it Or its in him: while from true works (to wit

Sordello's dream-performances that will Be never more than dreamed) escapes there still

Some proof, the singer's proper life was
'neath

The life his song exhibits, this a sheath
To that; a passion and a knowledge far Transcending these, majestic as they
are,

Smouldered; his lay was but an episode In the bard's life: which evidence you owed

To some slight weariness, some looking-
off

Or start-away. The childish skit or scoff

In "Charlemagne," (his poem, dreamed divine

In every point except one silly line About the restiff daughters!—what may lurk

In that? "My life commenced before that work,"

(Thus I interpret the significance Of the bard's start aside and look askance)

"My life continues after: on I fare With no more stopping, possibly, no
care

To note the undercurrent, the why and
how,

Where, when, of the deeper life, as thus just now.

But, silent, shall I cease to live? Alas For you! who sigh, 'When shall it come to pass

We read that story? How will he compress

The future gains, his life's true business, Into the better lay which—that one flout,

Howe'er inopportune it be, lets out—Engrosses him already, though professed

To meditate with us eternal rest, And partnership in all his life has
found?

'Tis but a sailor's promise, weather-
bound:

'Strike sail, slip cable, here the bark be moored

For once, the awning stretched, the poles assured!

Noontide above; except the wave's crisp dash,

Or buzz of colibri, or tortoise' splash,

The margin's silent: out with every spoil
 Made in our tracking, coil by mighty coil,
 This serpent of a river to his head I' the midst! Admire each treasure, as we spread
 The bank, to help us tell our history Aright: give ear, endeavour to descry The groves of giant rushes, how they Like demons' endlong tresses we sailed
 through,
 What mountains yawned, forests to give us vent Opened, each doleful side, yet on we went Till . . . may that beetle (shake your cap)
 attest
 The springing of a land-wind from the West!
 —' Wherefore? Ah yes, you frolic it to-day!
 To-morrow, and the pageant's moved
 away Down to the poorest tent-pole: we and
 you
 Part company: no other may pursue Eastward your voyage, be informed what
 fate
 Intends, if triumph or decline await The tempter of the everlasting steppe."
 I muse this on a ruined palace-step At Venice: why should I break off, nor sit Longer upon my step, exhaust the fit England gave birth to? Who's adorable Enough reclaim a —— no Sordello's Will Alack!—be queen to me? That Bas-sanese
 Busied among her smoking fruit-boats?
 These
 Perhaps from our delicious Asolo Who twinkle, pigeons o'er the portico Not prettier, bind June lilies into To deck the bridge-side chapel, dropping
 leaves
 Soiled by their own loose gold-meal?
 Ah, beneath
 The cool arch stoops she, brownestcheek! Her wreath Endures a month—a half month—if I make
 A queen of her, continue for her sake Sordello's story? Nay, that Paduan girl Splashes with barer legs where a live whirl
 In the dead black Giudecca proves seaweed
 Drifting has sucked down three, four, all indeed
 Save one pale-red striped, pale-blue turbaned post
 For gondolas.
 You sad disheveled ghost That pluck at me and point, are you advised I breathe? Let stay those girls (e'en her disguised —Jewels in the locks that love no crownet like Their native field-buds and the green wheat spike,
 So fair!—who left this end of June's turmoil,
 Shook off, as might a lily its gold soil, Pomp, save a foolish gem or two, and
 free
 In dream, came join the peasants o'er
 the sea.)
 Look they too happy, too tricked out?
 Confess
 There is such niggard stock of happiness To share, that, do one's uttermost, dear
 wretch,
 One labours ineffectually to stretch It o'er you so that mother and children,
 both
 May equitably flaunt the sumpter-cloth!
 Divide the robe yet farther: be content
 With seeing just a score pre-eminent Through shreds of it, acknowledged happy wights, Engrossing what should furnish all, by rights—
 For, these in evidence, you clearer claim A like garb for the rest,—grace all, the
 same As these my peasants. I ask youth and strength And health for each of you, not more—
 at length

Grown wise, who asked at home that the whole race Might add the spirit's to the body's
 grace,
 And all be dizen'd out as chiefs and bards.
 But in this magic weather one discards Much old requirement—Venice seems a type Of Life,—'twixt blue and blue extends, a stripe,
 As Life, the somewhat, hangs 'twixt nought and nought
 'Tis Venice, and 'tis Life—as good you sought
 To spare me the Piazza's slippery stone, Or keep me to the unchoked canals alone,
 As hinder Life the evil with the good Which make up Living, rightly understood.
 Only, do finish something! Peasants or queens, Take them, made happy by whatever
 means,
 Parade them for the common credit, vouch
 That a luckless residue, we send to crouch
 In corners out of sight, was just as framed For happiness, its portion might have claimed
 As well, and so, obtaining it, had stalked Fatuous as any!—such my project, baulked
 Already; I hardly venture to adjust The first rags, when you find me. To mistrust Me!—nor unreasonably. You, no
 doubt,
 Have the true knack of tiring suitors
 out
 With those thin lips on tremble, lashless
 eyes Inveterately tear-shot—there, be wise Mistress of mine, there, there, as if I
 meant You insult! Shall your friend (not slave) be shent For speaking home? Beside, care-bit, erased,
 Broken-up beauties ever took my taste

Supremely, and I love you more, far
 more Than her I looked should foot Life's temple-floor.
 Years ago, leagues at distance, when and where
 A whisper came, 'Let others seek!— thy care Is found, thy life's provision; if thy race
 Should be thy mistress, and into one
 face
 The many faces crowd?' Ah, had I,
 judge,
 Or no, your secret? Rough apparel—
 All ornaments save tag or tassel worn To hint we are not thoroughly forlorn—Slouch bonnet, unloop mantle, careless go Alone (that's saddest but it must be so) Through Venice, sing now and now glance aside, Aught desultory or undignified,— Then, ravishingest lady, will you pass Or not each formidable group, the mass Before the Basilic (that feast gone by, God's great day of the Corpus Domini)
 And, wistfully foregoing proper men, Come timid up to me for alms? And
 then
 The luxury to hesitate, feign do Some unexampled grace!—when, whom
 but you Dare I bestow your own upon? And hear Further before you say, it is to sneer
 I call you ravishing; for I regret Little that she, whose early foot was set Forth as she'd plant it on a pedestal, Now, i' the silent city, seems to fall Toward me—no wreath, only a lip's unrest
 To quiet, surcharged eyelids to be pressed Dry of their tears upon my bosom.
 Strange
 Such sad chance should produce in thee such change,
 My love! warped souls and bodies! yet God spoke Of right-hand, foot and eye—selects our yoke, Sordello, as your poetship may find!
 So, sleep upon my shoulder, child, nor
 mind

Their foolish talk; we'll manage reinstate Your old worth; ask moreover, when they prate
 Of evil men past hope, 'don't each
     contrive,
 Despite the evil you abuse, to live?— Keeping, each losel, through a maze of lies,
 His own conceit of truth? to which he hies
 By obscure windings, tortuous, if you
     will,
 But to himself not inaccessible;
 He sees truth, and his lies are for the crowd
 Who cannot see; some fancied right allowed
 His vilest wrong, empowered the fellow clutch
 One pleasure from a multitude of such Denied him.' Then assert, 'all men appear
 To think all better than themselves, by
     here Trusting a crowd they wrong; but really,' say,
 'All men think all men stupider than
     they,
 Since, save themselves, no other comprehends
 The complicated scheme to make amends —Evil, the scheme by which, thro'
     Ignorance,
 Good labours to exist.' A slight advance,— Merely to find the sickness you die
     through,
 And nought beside! but if one can't eschew One's portion in the common lot, at least
 One can avoid an ignorance increased Tenfold by dealing out hint after hint How nought were like dispensing without stint
 The water of life—so easy to dispense Beside, when one has probed the centre
     whence Commotion's born—could tell you of it
     all!
 '—Meantime, just meditate my madrigal

O' the mugwort that conceals a dew-drop safe!
 What, dullard? we and you in smothery
     chafe,
 Babes, baldheads, stumbled thus far into Zin
 The Horrid, getting neither out nor in,
 A hungry sun above us, sands that bung Our throats,—each dromedary lolls a tongue,
 Each camel churns a sick and frothy chaf,
 And you, 'twixt tales of Potiphar's mishap,
 And sonnets on the earliest ass that
     spoke,
 —Remark, you wonder any one needs choke
 With founts about! Potsherd him, Gibeonites!
 While awkwardly enough your Moses smites
 The rock, though he forego his Promised Land,
 Thereby, have Satan claim his carcass,
 Figure as Metaphysic Poet . . . ah
 Mark ye the dim first ooings? Meribah!
 Then, quaffing at the fount my courage
     gained,
 Recall—not that I prompt ye—who explained . . .
 'Presumptuous!' interrupts one. You,
     not I
 'Tis, brother, marvel at and magnify Such office: 'office,' quotha? can we get To the beginning of the office yet?
 What do we here? simply experiment Each on the other's power and its intent When elsewhere tasked,—if this of mine were trucked For yours to either's good,—we watch construct,
 In short, an engine: with a finished one,
 What it can do, is all,—nought, how 'tis
     done.
 But this of ours yet in probation, dusk A kernel of strange wheelwork through its husk Grows into shape by quarters and by halves;
 Remark this tooth's spring, wonder what that valve's

Fall bodes, presume each faculty's device, Make out each other more or less precise—

The scope of the whole engine's to be proved ;

We die: which means to say, the whole's removed,

Dismounted wheel by wheel, this complex gin,—

To be set up anew elsewhere, begin

A task indeed, but with a clearer clime
Than the murky lodgment of our building-time.

And then, I grant you, it behoves forget How 'tis done—all that must amuse us yet

So long : and, while you turn upon your heel,

Pray that I be not busy slitting steel Or shredding brass, camped on some virgin shore

Under a cluster of fresh stars, before I name a tithe o' the wheels I trust to do!

So occupied, then, are we : hitherto,
At present, and a weary while to come,

The office of ourselves,—nor blind nor dumb,

And seeing somewhat of man's state,— has been,

For the worst of us, to say they so have seen ;

For the better, what it was they saw ;
the best

Impart the gift of seeing to the rest :
'So that I glance,' says such an one,

'around,
And there's no face but I can read profound

Dislosures in ; this stands for hope, that—fear,

And for a speech, a deed in proof, look here !

"Stoop, else the strings of blossom, where the nuts

O'erarch, will blind thee ! said I not ?
she shuts

Both eyes this time, so close the hazels
meet !

Thus, prisoned in the Piombi, I repeat Events one rove occasioned, o'er and o'er,

Putting 'twixt me and madness ever-
more

Thy sweet shape, Zanze ! therefore stoop ! "

"That's truth ! " (Adjudge you) "the incarcerated youth Would say that ! "

"Youth? Plara the bard ?
Set down

That Plara spent his youth in a grim town

Whose cramped ill-featured streets huddled about

The minster for protection, never out Of its black belfry's shade and its bells' roar.

The brighter shone the suburb,—all the more

Ugly and absolute that shade's reproof Of any chance escape of joy,—some

roof,
Taller than they, allowed the rest detect

Before the sole permitted laugh (suspect Who could, 'twas meant for laughter, that ploughed cheek's

Repulsive gleam ! ) when the sun stopped both peaks

Of the cleft belfry like a fiery wedge,
Then sunk, a huge flame on its socket's

edge,
With leavings on the grey glass oriel-pane

Ghastly some minutes more. No fear of rain—

The minster minded that ! in heaps the dust

Lay everywhere. This town, the minster's trust,

Held Plara ; who, its denizen, bade hail In twice twelve sonnets, Tempe's dewy vale."

"Exact the town, the minster and the street ! "

"As all mirth triumphs, sadness means defeat :

Lust triumphs and is gay, Love's triumphed o'er

And sad : but Lucio's sad. I said
before,

Love's sad, not Lucio ; one who loves
may be

As gay his love has leave to hope, as he Downcast that lusts' desire escapes the springe :

'Tis of the mood itself I speak, what tinge

Determines it, else colourless,—or mirth, Or melancholy, as from heaven or
earth.”

“Ay, that’s the variation’s gist !”
Indeed ?

Thus far advanced in safety then, proceed !

And having seen too what I saw, be bold
And next encounter what I do behold (That’s sure) but bid you take on trust !

Attack

The use and purpose of such sights ?
Alack,

Not so unwisely does the crowd dispense On Salinguerras praise in preference To the Sordellos : men of action, these !
Who, seeing just as little as you please, Yet turn that little to account,—engage With, do not gaze at,—carry on, a stage, The work o’ the world, not merely make report

The work existed ere their day ! In short,

When at some future no-time a brave
band

Sees, using what it sees, then shake my
hand

In heaven, my brother ! Meanwhile where’s the hurt

Of keeping the Makers-see on the alert, At whose defection mortals stare aghast As though heaven’s bounteous windows were slammed fast

Incontinent ? whereas all you, beneath, Should scowl at, curse them, bruise lips, break their teeth

Who ply the pullies, for neglecting you :
And therefore have I moulded, made
anew

A Man, and give him to be turned and
tried,

Be angry with or pleased at. On your
side,

Have ye times, places, actors of your
own ?

Try them upon Sordello when full-
grown,

And then—ah then ! If Hercules first parched

His foot in Egypt only to be marched A sacrifice for Jove with pomp to suit, What chance have I ? The demigod was mute

Till, at the altar, where time out of mind Such guests became oblations, chaplets twined

His forehead long enough, and he began Slaying the slayers, nor escaped a man.
Take not affront, my gentle audience !
whom

No Hercules shall make his hecatomb, Believe, nor from his brows your chaplet rend—

That’s your kind suffrage, yours, my patron-friend,

Whose great verse blares unintermittent
on

Like your own trumpeter at Marathon,— You who, Plataeas and Salamis being scant,

Put up with Aetna for a stimulant—And did well, I acknowledged, as he loomed

Over the midland sea last month,
presumed

Long, lay demolished in the blazing West

At eve, while towards him tilting cloudlets prest

Like Persian ships at Salamis. Friend, wear

A crest proud as desert while I declare Had I a flawless ruby fit to wring Tears of its colour from that painted king Who lost it, I would, for that smile which went

To my heart, fling it in the sea, content, Wearing your verse in place, an amulet Sovereign against all passion, wear and fret !

My English Eyebright, if you are not glad

That, as I stopped my task awhile, the sad

Disheveled form, wherein I put mankind

To come at times and keep my pact in
mind,

Renewed me,—hear no crickets in the Nor let a glowworm spot the river’s

At home, and may the summer showers gush

Without a warning from the missel thrush !

So, to our business, now—the fate of such As find our common nature—overmuch Despised because restricted and unfit To bear the burthen they impose on it—Cling when they would discard it ; craving strength

To leap from the allotted world, at
     length

They do leap,—flounder on without a term,

Each a god's germ, doomed to remain a germ

In unexpanded infancy, unless . . .
 But that's the story—dull enough,
     confess !

There might be fitter subjects to allure ;
 Still, neither misconceive my portraiture Nor undervalue its adornments quaint :
 What seems a fiend perchance may prove a saint.

Ponder a story ancient pens transmit,
 Then say if you condemn me or acquit.
 John the Beloved, banished Antioch For Patmos, bade collectively his flock Farewell, but set apart the closing eve To comfort those his exile most would grieve,

He knew : a touching spectacle, that house

In motion to receive him ! Xanthus' spouse

You missed, made panther's meat—a month since ; but

Xanthus himself (his nephew 'twas, they
     shut

'Twixt boards and sawed asunder) Polycarp,

Soft Charicle, next year no wheel could warp

To swear by Caesar's fortune, with the rest Were ranged ; thro' whom the grey disciple prest,

Busily blessing right and left, just stopt To pat one infant's curls, the hangman cropt

Soon after, reached the portal—on its hinge

The door turns and he enters—what quick twinge

Ruins the smiling mouth, those wide eyes fix

Whereon, why like some spectral candlestick's

Branch the disciple's arms ? Dead swooned he, woke

Anon, heaved sigh, made shift to gasp, heart-broke,

'Get thee behind me, Satan ! have I toiled

To no more purpose ? is the gospel foiled

Here too, and o'er my son's, my Xan-thus' hearth,

Portrayed with sooty garb and features swarth—

Ah Xanthus, am I to thy roof beguiled

To see the—the—the Devil domiciled ?' Whereto sobbed Xanthus, 'Father, 'tis
     yourself

Installed, a limning which our utmost
     pelf

Went to procure against to-morrow's loss ;

And that's no twy-prong, but a pastoral cross,

You're painted with !' His puckered brows unfold—

And you shall hear Sordello's story
     told.

BOOK THE FOURTH

MEANTIME Ferrara lay in rueful case ;
 The lady-city, for whose sole embrace Her pair of suitors struggled, felt their arms

A brawny mischief to the fragile charms They tugged for—one discovering that to twist

Her tresses twice or thrice about his wrist

Secured a point of vantage—one, how
     best

He'd parry that by planting in her
     breast

His elbow-spike—each party too intent For noticing, how'er the battle went,
 The conqueror would but have a corpse
     to kiss.

'May Boniface be duly damned for
     this !'

—Howled some old Ghibellin, as up he turned,

From the wet heap of rubbish where they burned

His house, a little skull with dazzling teeth :
 ' A boon, sweet Christ—let Salinguerra seethe
 In hell for ever, Christ, and let myself Be there to laugh at him ! '—moaned some young Guelf Stumbling upon a shrivelled hand nailed
 fast
 To the charred lintel of the doorway,
 last
 His father stood within to bid him
 speed.
 The thoroughfares were overrun with weed
 —Docks, quitchgrass, loathly mallows no man plants.
 The stranger, none of its inhabitants Crept out of doors to taste fresh air
 again,
 And ask the purpose of a sumptuous train Admitted on a morning ; every town Of the East League was come by envoy
 down
 To treat for Richard's ransom : here you saw
 The Vicentine, here snowy oxen draw
 The Paduan carroch, its vermilion cross On its white field. A-tiptoe o'er the fosse Looked Legate Montelungo wistfully
 After the flock of steeples he might spy In Este's time, gone (doubts he) long ago
 To mend the ramparts—sure the laggards know
 The Pope's as good as here ! They paced the streets More soberly. At last, ' Taurello greets
 The League,' announced a pursuivant,— ' will match
 Its courtesy, and labours to dispatch At earliest Tito, Friedrich's Pretor, sent
 On pressing matters from his post at Trent,
 With Mainard Count of Tyrol,—simply waits
 Their going to receive the delegates.'
 ' Tito ! ' Our delegates exchanged a
 glance,
 And, keeping the main way, admired
 askance

The lazy engines of outlandish birth, Couched like a king each on its bank of
 earth—
 Arbalist, mangel, and catapult ;
 While stationed by, as waiting a result,
 Lean silent gangs of mercenaries ceased Working to watch the strangers. ' This,
 at least,
 Were better spared ; he scarce presumes gainsay
 The League's decision ! Get our friend
 away
 And profit for the future : how else
 teach Fools 'tis not safe to stray within claw's
 reach
 Ere Salinguerra's final gasp be blown ?
 Those mere convulsive scratches find the bone.
 Who bade him bloody the spent osprey's nare ? '
 The carrochs halted in the public square.
 Pennons of every blazon once a-flaunt, Men prattled, freelier that the crested gaunt
 White ostrich with a horse-shoe in her beak Was missing, and whoever chose might Ecclin boldly out : so,—' Ecclin Needed his wife to swallow half the sin And sickens by himself : the devil's
 whelp,
 He styles his son, dwindles away, no help From conserves, your fine triple-curved froth
 Of virgin's blood, your Venice viperbroth—
 Eh ? Jubilate ! Peace ! no little word You utter here that's not distinctly heard
 Up at Ollero : he was absent sick When we besieged Bassano—who, i' the thick
 O' the work, perceived the progress Azzo
 made,
 Like Ecclin, through his witch Adelaide ?
 She managed it so well that, night by
 night,
 At their bed-foot stood up a soldiersprite

First fresh, pale by-and-by without a wound,
 And, when it came with eyes filmed as in swound, They knew the place was taken.
 Ominous
 That Ghibellins should get what cautious Old Redbeard sought from Azzo's sire to wrench Vainly; Saint George contrived his town a trench O' the marshes, an impermeable bar.
 Young Ecelin is meant the tutelard Of Padua, rather; veins embrace upon His hand like Brenta and Bacchiglione.
 What now? The founts! God's bread, touch not a plank!
 A crawling hell of carrion — every tank Choke full! — found out just now to Cino's cost —
 The same who gave Taurello up for lost,
 And, making no account of fortune's freaks, Refused to budge from Padua then, but Back now with Concorezzi — 'faith! they drag Their carroch to San Vital, plant the flag On his own palace so adroitly razed
 He knew it not; a sort of Guelf folk gazed And laughed apart; Cino disliked their air — Must pluck up spirit, show he does not care — Seats himself on the tank's edge — will begin To hum, za, za, Cavalier Ecelin — A silence; he gets warmer, clicks to chime, Now both feet plough the ground, deeper each time,
 At last, za, za, and up with a fierce kick Comes his own mother's face caught by the thick Grey hair about his spur!
 Which means, they lift
 The covering, Salinguerra made a shift

To stretch upon the truth; as well avoid Further disclosures; leave them thus employed.
 Our dropping Autumn morning clears apace,
 And poor Ferrara puts a softened face On her misfortunes. Let us scale this tall Huge foursquare line of red brick garden-wall Bastioned within by trees of every sort On three sides, slender, spreading, long and short,
 — Each grew as it contrived, the poplar ramped,
 The fig-tree reared itself, — but stark and cramped,
 Made fools of, like tamed lions; whence,
 on the edge,
 Running 'twixt trunk and trunk to smooth one ledge
 Of shade, were shrubs inserted, warp and woof,
 Which smothered up that variance.
 Scale the roof
 Of solid tops, and o'er the slope you slide Down to a grassy space level and wide, Here and there dotted with a tree, but trees
 Of rarer leaf, each foreigner at ease, Set by itself: and in the centre spreads, Born upon three uneasy leopards' heads,
 A laver, broad and shallow, one bright spirt
 Of water bubbles in. The walls begirt With trees leave off on either hand; pursue Your path along a wondrous avenue Those walls about on, heaped of gleamy stone, With aloes leering everywhere, grey-grown From many a Moorish summer: how they wind Out of the fissures! likelier to bind
 The building than those rusted cramps which drop Already in the eating sunshine. Stop, You fleeting shapes above there! Ah, the pride Or else despair of the whole country-side —

A range of statues, swarming o'er with Sicilian marvels, that his gurlish wife God, goddess, woman, man, the Greek Retrude still might lead her ancient life rough-rasps In her new home—whereat enlarged so In crumbling Naples marble! meant to much look Neighbours upon the novel princely Like those Messina marbles Constance touch took He took,—who here imprisons Boniface.
 Delight in, or Taurello's self conveyed Here must the Envoys come to sue for
 To Mantua for his mistress, Adelaide, grace;
 A certain font with caryatides And here, emerging from the labyrinth Since cloistered at Goito; only, these Below, Sordello paused beside the plinth Are up and doing, not abashed, a Of the door-pillar. troop He had really left Able to right themselves—who see you, Verona for the cornfields (a poor theft stoop From the morass) where Este's camp O' the instant after you their arms! was made; Unplucked The Envoys' march, the Legate's caval-By this or that, you pass, for they con- cade—duct All had been seen by him, but scarce as Those shading fingers in their iron Sought sheath, He respite from his task? descried he Steadied his strengths amid the buz and aught stir Novel in the anticipated sight Of the dusk hideous amphitheatre Of all these livers upon all delight?

 San Pietro Palace stops us. With them as he had hoped to be with-
     out—
         Such the state Made these the mankind he once raved Of Salinguerra's plan to emulate about?

Because a few of them were notable, Should all be figured worthy note? As well

Expect to find Taurello's triple line
Of trees a single and prodigious pine.
Real pines rose here and there; but,
close among,

Thrust into and mixed up with pines, a throng

Of shrubs, he saw,—a nameless common sort

O'erpast in dreams, left out of the report

And hurried into corners, or at best Admitted to be fancied like the rest.

Reckon that morning's proper chiefs—how few!

And yet the people grew, the people
grew,

Grew ever, as if the many there indeed, More left behind and most who should succeed,—

Simply in virtue of their mouths and
eyes,

Petty enjoyments and huge miseries,— Mingled with, and made veritably great Those chiefs: he overlooked not Mainard's state

Nor Concorezzi's station, but instead Of stopping there, each dwindled to be
head

Of infinite and absent Tyrolese Or Paduans; startling all the more, that these

Seemed passive and disposed of, uncared
for,

'Yet doubtless on the whole' (quoth Eglamor)

'Smiling—for if a wealthy man decays And out of store of robes must wear, all
days,

One tattered suit, alike in sun and shade,

'Tis commonly some tarnished gay brocade

Fit for a feast-night's flourish and no
more:

Nor otherwise poor Misery from her store

Of looks is fain to upgather, keep unfurled

For common wear as she goes through
the world,

The faint remainder of some worn-out
smile

Meant for a feast-night's service merely.'
While

Crowd upon crowd rose on Sordello
thus,—

(Crowds no way interfering to discuss, Much less dispute, life's joys with one employed

In envying them,—or, if they aught
enjoyed,

Where lingered something indefinable
In every look and tone, the mirth as well

As woe, that fixed at once his estimate Of the result, their good or bad estate)—

Old memories returned with new effect:
And the new body, ere he could suspect,

Cohered, mankünd and he were really fused,

The new self seemed impatient to be used By him, but utterly another way

To that anticipated: strange to say, They were too much below him, more in thrall

Than he, the adjunct than the principal.
What booted scattered units?—here a
mind

And there, which might repay his own
to find,

And stamp, and use?—a few, howe'er august,

If all the rest were groveling in the dust?
No: first a mighty equilibrium, sure,
Should he establish, privilege procure

For all, the few had long possessed! he felt

An error, an exceeding error melt—While he was occupied with Mantuan chants,

Behoved him think of men, and take their wants,

Such as he now distinguished every side,
As his own want which might be satisfied,—

And, after that, think of rare qualities Of his own soul demanding exercise.

It followed naturally, through no claim On their part, which made virtue of the aim

At serving them, on his,—that, past retrieve,

He felt now in their toils, theirs—nor could leave

Wonder how, in the eagerness to rule, Impress his will on mankind, he (the fool !)

Had never even entertained the thought That this his last arrangement might be fraught

With incidental good to them as well, And that mankind's delight would help to swell

His own. So, if he sighed, as formerly Because the merry time of life must fleet,
'Twas deeper now,—for could the crowds repeat

Their poor experiences ? His hand that shook

Was twice to be deplored. 'The Legate, look !

With eyes, like fresh-blown thrush-eggs on a thread,

Faint-blue and loosely floating in his
head,

Large tongue, moist open mouth ; and this long while

That owner of the idiotic smile Serves them !' He fortunately saw in
time

His fault however, and since the office prime

Includes the secondary—best accept Both offices ; Taurello, its adept, Could teach him the preparatory one,
And how to do what he had fancied done Long previously, ere take the greater task.

How render first these people happy ?
ask

The people's friends : for there must be one good,

One way to it—the Cause !—he understood

The meaning now of Palma ; why the jar Else, the ado, the trouble wide and far Of Guefs and Ghibellins, the Lombard's
hope

And Rome's despair ?—'twixt Emperor and Pope

The confused shifting sort of Eden tale—Still hardihood recurring, still to fail—That foreign interloping fiend, this free And native overbrooding deity—

Yet a dire fascination o'er the palms The Kaiser ruined, troubling even the calms

Of Paradise—or, on the other hand,
The Pontiff, as the Kaisers understand, One snake-like cursed of God to love the
ground,

Whose heavy length breaks in the noon profound

Some saving tree—which needs the Kaiser, drest

As the dislodging angel of that pest,
Then—yet that pest bedropt, flat head, full fold,

With coruscating dower of dyes.
' Behold

The secret, so to speak, and master-
spring

Of the contest ! which of the two Powers shall bring

Men good—perchance the most good—ay, it may

Be that ! the question, which best knows the way.'

And hereupon Count Mainard strutted
past

Out of San Pietro ; never seemed the
last

Of archers, slingers : and our friend
began

To recollect strange modes of serving
man—

Arbalist, catapult, brake, manganel, And more. ' This way of theirs may,— who can tell ?—

Need perfecting,' said he : ' let all be solved

At once ! Taurello 'tis, the task devolved On late—confront Taurello !'

And at last
He did confront him. Scarcely an hour

When forth Sordello came, older by
years

Than at his entry. Unexampled fears Oppressed him, and he staggered off, blind, mute

And deaf, like some fresh-mutilated brute,

Into Ferrara—not the empty town That morning witnessed : he went up and down

Streets whence the veil had been stripped shred by shred,

So that, in place of huddling with their dead

Indoors, to answer Salinguerra's ends, Its folk made shift to crawl forth, sit like friends With any one. A woman gave him
     choice
 Of her two daughters, the infantile voice
 Or the dimpled knee, for half a chain, his throat
 Was clasped with; but an archer knew the coat—
 Its blue cross and eight lilies,—bade beware
 One dogging him in concert with the pair
 Though thrumming on the sleeve that hid his knife.
 Night set in early, autumn dews were rife,
 They kindled great fires while the Leaguer's mass Began at every carroch—he must pass Between the kneeling people. Presently The carroch of Verona caught his eye With purple trappings; silently he bent
 Over its fire, when voices violent Began, 'Affirm not whom the youth was like That, striking from the porch, I did not strike
 Again; I too have chestnut hair; my kin
 Hate Azzo and stand up for Ecelin.
 Here, minstrel, drive bad thoughts away! sing! take My glove for guerdon!' and for that man's sake
 He turned: 'A song of Eglamor's! '— scarce named,
 When, 'Our Sordello's, rather!' all exclaimed;
 'Is not Sordello famous for rhyme?'
 He had been happy to deny, this time,— Profess as heretofore the aching head And failing heart,—suspect that in his
     stead
 Some true Apollo had the charge of
     them,
 Was champion to reward or to condemn,
 So his intolerable risk might shift Or share itself; but Naddo's precious gift

Of gifts, he owned, be certain! At the close—
 'I made that,' said he to a youth who rose As if to hear: 'twas Palma through the band Conducted him in silence by her hand.
 Back now for Salinguerra. Tito of Trent
 Gave place to Palma and her friend; who went
 In turn at Montelungo's visit—one After the other were they come and
     gone,— These spokesmen for the Kaiser and the Pope,
 This incarnation of the People's hope, Sordello,—all the say of each was said,
 And Salinguerra sat, himself instead Of these to talk with, lingered musing yet.
 'Twas a drear vast presence-chamber roughly set
 In order for the morning's use; full
     face,
 The Kaiser's ominous sign-mark had first place,
 The crowned grim twy-necked eagle, coarsely blacked With ochre on the naked wall; nor lacked Romano's green and yellow either side; But the new token Tito brought had tried
 The Legate's patience—nay, if Palma
     knew What Salinguerra almost meant to do Until the sight of her restored his lip
 A certain half-smile, three months' chieftainship Had banished! Afterward, the Legate
     found No change in him, nor asked what badge he wound
 And unwound carelessly. Now sat the Chief Silent as when our couple left, whose brief
 Encounter wrought so opportune effect In thoughts he summoned not, nor would reject.
 Though time 'twas now if ever, to pause —fix
 On any sort of ending: wiles and tricks

Exhausted, judge! his charge, the crazy
     town,
 Just managed to be hindered crashing
     down—
 His last sound troops ranged—care observed to post His best of the maimed soldiers inner-most—
 So much was plain enough, but somehow struck Him not before. And now with this strange luck
 Of Tito's news, rewarding his address So well, what thought he of?—how the
     success
 With Friedrich's rescript there, would either hush Old Ecelin's scruples, bring the manly flush
 To his young son's white cheek, or, last, exempt Himself from telling what there was to tempt?
 No: that this minstrel was Romano's
     last Servant—himself the first! Could he contrast
 The whole! that minstrel's thirty years just spent
 In doing nought, their notablest event
 This morning's journey hither, as I told—Who yet was lean, outworn and really
     old,
 A stammering awkward man that scarce dared raise
 His eye before the magisterial gaze—And Salinguerra with his fears and hopes
 Of sixty years, his Emperors and Popes, Cares and contrivances, yet, you would
     say,
 'Twas a youth nonchalantly looked
     away
 Through the embrasure northward o'er the sick Expostulating trees—so agile, quick And graceful turned the head on the broad chest Encased in pliant steel, his constant vest,
 Whence split the sun off in a spray of fire Across the room; and, loosened of its tire

Of steel, that head let breathe the comely brown Large massive locks discoloured as if a crown Encircled them, so frayed the basnet
     where
 A sharp white line divided clean the hair;
 Glossy above, glossy below, it swept Curling and fine about a brow thus kept Calm, laid coat upon coat, marble and sound:
 This was the mystic mark the Tuscan
     found,
 Mused of, turned over books about.
     Square-faced,
 No lion more; two vivid eyes, enched In hollows filled with many a shade and streak Settling from the bold nose and bearded
     cheek;
 Nor might the half-smile reach them that deformed
 A lip supremely perfect else—un-warmed, Unwidened, less or more; indifferent Whether on trees or men his thoughts were bent, Thoughts rarely, after all, in trim and train
 As now a period was fulfilled again;
 Of such, a series made his life, compressed
 In each, one story serving for the rest—How his life-streams rolling arrived at
     last
 At the barrier, whence, were it once overpast,
 They would emerge, a river to the end,— Gathered themselves up, paused, bade fate befriend, Took the leap, hung a minute at the height,
 Then fell back to oblivion infinite: Therefore he smiled. Beyond stretched garden-grounds Where late the adversary, breaking bounds,
 Had gained him an occasion, That
     above,
 That eagle, testified he could improve Effectually. The Kaiser's symbol lay Beside his rescript, a new badge by way

Of baldric; while,—another thing that marred Alike emprise, achievement and reward,— Ecclin's missive was conspicuous too.
 What past life did those flying thoughts pursue?
 As his, few names in Mantua half so old;
 But at Ferrara, where his sires enrolled It latterly, the Adelardi spared No pains to rival them: both factions
 shared Ferrara, so that, counted out, 'twould
 yield
 A product very like the city's shield, Half black and white, or Ghibellin and Guelf,
 As after Salinguerra styled himself
 And Este who, till Marchesalla died, (Last of the Adelardi)—never tried His fortune there: with Marchesalla's
 child
 Would pass,—could Blacks and Whites be reconciled
 And young Taurello wed Linguetta,— wealth
 And sway to a sole grasp. Each treats
 by stealth Already: when the Guelfs, the Raven-nese Arrive, assault the Pietro quarter, seize Linguetta, and are gone! Men's first dismay Abated somewhat, hurries down, to lay The after indignation, Boniface, This Richard's father. 'Learn the full
 disgrace Averted, ere you blame us Guelfs, who rate
 Your Salinguerra, your sole potentate That might have been, 'mongst Este's valvassors—
 Ay, Azzo's—who, not privy to, abhors Our step—but we were zealous.' Azzo's
 then
 To do with! Straight a meeting of old
 men:
 'Old Salinguerra dead, his heir a boy, What if we change our ruler and decoy
 The Lombard Eagle of the azure sphere, With Italy to build in, fix him here, Settle the city's troubles in a trice?
 For private wrong, let public good suffice!'

In fine, young Salinguerra's stanchest
 friends
 Talked of the townsmen making him
 amends,
 Gave him a goshawk, and affirmed there was Rare sport, one morning, over the green grass
 A mile or so. He sauntered through the plain,
 Was restless, fell to thinking, turned
 again
 In time for Azzo's entry with the bride; Count Boniface rode smirking at their
 side:
 'She brings him half Ferrara,' whispers flew,
 'And all Ancona! If the stripling knew!'
 Anon the stripling was in Sicily Where Heinrich ruled in right of Constance; he Was gracious nor his guest incapable;
 Each understood the other. So it fell, One Spring, when Azzo, thoroughly at
 ease,
 Had near forgotten by what precise degrees
 He crept at first to such a downy seat,
 The Count trudged over in a special heat To bid him of God's love dislodge from each
 Of Salinguerra's palaces,—a breach Might yawn else, not so readily to
 shut,
 For who was just arrived at Mantua but The youngster, sword on thigh, and tuft on chin,
 With tokens for Celano, Ecclin, Pistore and the like! Next news,—no
 whit
 Do any of Ferrara's domes befit His wife of Heinrich's very blood: a band
 Of foreigners assemble, understand Garden-constructing, levelandsurround, Build up and bury in. A last news crowned
 The consternation: since his infant's
 birth,
 He only waits they end his wondrous girth
 Of trees that link San Pietro with Tomà,
 To visit Mantua. When the Podestà

Ecelin, at Vicenza, called his friend Taurello thither, what could be their end
But to restore the Ghibellins' late Head, The Kaiser helping? He with most to dread

From vengeance and reprisal, Azzo, there With Boniface beforehand, as aware Of plots in progress, gave alarm, expelled

Both plotters: but the Guelfs in triumph yelled

Too hastily. The burning and the flight,

And how Taurello, occupied that night With Ecelin, lost wife and son, I told:

—Not how he bore the blow, retained his hold,

Got friends safe through, left enemies the worst

O' the fray, and hardly seemed to care
at first—

But afterward men heard not constantly Of Salinguerra's House so sure to be!

Though Azzo simply gained by the event A shifting of his plagues—the first, content

To fall behind the second and estrange
So far his nature, suffer such a change That in Romano sought he wife and
child,

And for Romano's sake seemed reconciled

To losing individual life, which shrunk As the other prospered—mortised in his trunk;

Like a dwarf palm which wanton Arabs foil

Of bearing its own proper wine and oil,
By grafting into it the stranger-vine, Which sucks its heart out, sly and serpentine,

Till forth one vine-palm feathers to the root,

And red drops moisten the insipid fruit, Once Adelaide set on,—the subtle mate
Of the weak soldier, urged to emulate The Church's valiant women deed for
deed,

And paragon her namesake, win the meed

Of the great Matilda,—soon they overbore

The rest of Lombardy,—not as before

By an instinctive truculence, but patched
The Kaiser's strategy until it matched The Pontiff's, sought old ends by novel
means.

Only, why is it Salinguerra screens Himself behind Romano?—him we bade Enjoy our shine i' the front, not seek the shade!

—Asked Heinrich, somewhat of the tardiest

To comprehend. Nor Philip acquiesced At once in the arrangement; reasoned,
plied

His friend with offers of another bride, A statelier function—fruitlessly: 'twas
plain

Taurello through some weakness must remain

Obscure. And Otho, free to judge of
both,

—Ecelin the unready, harsh and loth,
And this more plausible and facile wight With every point a-sparkle—chose the
right,

Admiring how his predecessors harped On the wrong man: 'thus,' quoth he,
'wits are warped

By outsidies!' Carelessly, meanwhile,
his life

Suffered its many turns of peace and
strife

In many lands—you hardly could surprise

The man;—who shamed Sordello (recognize!)

In this as much beside, that, unconcerned

What qualities were natural or earned,
With no ideal of graces, as they came He took them, singularly well the
same—

Speaking the Greek's own language, just because

Your Greek eludes you, leave the least of flaws

In contracts with him; while, since Arab lore

Holds the stars' secret—take one trouble
more

And master it! 'Tis done, and now deter

Who may the Tuscan, once Jove trined
for her,

From Friedrich's path !—Friedrich, whose pilgrimage
 The same man puts aside, whom he'll engage To leave next year John Brienne in the lurch, Come to Bassano, see Saint Francis' church And judge of Guido the Bolognian's piece Which, lend Taurello credit, rivals Greece—Angels, with aureoles like golden quoits Pitched home, applauding Ecelin's exploits.
 For elegance, he strung the angelet, Made rhymes thereto; for prowess, clove he not Tiso, last siege, from crest to crupper ?
 Why
 Detail you thus a varied mastery
 But to show how Taurello, on the watch For men, to read their hearts and thereby catch Their capabilities and purposes, Displayed himself so far as displayed these :
 While our Sordello only cared to know About men as a means whereby he'd show Himself, and men had much or little worth According as they kept in or drew forth That self; Taurello's choicest instruments Surmised him shallow.
 Meantime, malcontents Dropped off, town after town grew wiser.
 'How
 Change the world's face ?' asked people;
 'as 'tis now
 It has been, will be ever : very fine Subjecting things profane to things divine, In talk ! this contumacy will fatigue
 The vigilance of Este and the League !
 The Ghibellins gain on us !'—as it happened.
 Old Azzo and old Boniface, entrapped
 By Ponte Alto, both in one month's space Slept at Verona : either left a brace Of sons—but, three years after, either's pair Lost Guglielm and Aldobrand its heir :
 Azzo remained and Richard—all the stay Of Este and Saint Boniface, at bay
 As 'twere. Then, either Ecelin grew old Or his brain altered—not of the proper mould For new appliances—his old palm-stock Endured no influx of strange strengths.
 He'd rock
 As in a drunkenness, or chuckle low As proud of the completeness of his woe, Then weep real tears ;—now make some mad onslaught On Este, heedless of the lesson taught So painfully,—now cringe for peace, sue peace At price of past gain,—much more, fresh increase To the fortunes of Romano. Up at last Rose Este, down Romano sank as fast.
 And men remarked these freaks of peace and war Happened while Salinguerra was afar :
 Whence every friend besought him, all in vain,
 To use his old adherent's wits again.
 Not he !—'who had advisers in his sons, Could plot himself, nor needed any one's Advice.' 'Twas Adelaide's remaining stanch Prevented his destruction root and branch Forthwith ; but when she died, doom fell, for gay
 He made alliances, gave lands away To whom it pleased accept them, and withdrew For ever from the world. Taurello, who Was summoned to the convent, then refused A word at the wicket, patience thus abused, Promptly threw off alike his imbecile Ally's yoke, and his own frank, foolish smile.
 Soon a few movements of the happier sort Changed matters, put himself in men's report As heretofore ; he had to fight, beside,
 And that became him ever. So, in pride

And flushing of this kind of second youth, He dealt a good-will blow. Este in truth Lay prone—and men remembered, somewhat late,
 A laughing old outrageous stifled hate He bore to Este—how it would out-break At times spite of disguise, like an earthquake In sunny weather—as that noted day When with his hundred friends he tried to slay Azzo before the Kaiser's face: and how,
 On Azzo's calm refusal to allow A liegeman's challenge, straight he too was calmed:
 As if his hate could bear to lie embalmed, Bricked up, the moody Pharaoh, and survive
 All intermediate crumbings, and arrive At earth's catastrophe—'twas Este's crash Not Azzo's he demanded, so, no rash Procedure! Este's true antagonist Rose out of Ecelin: all voices whist, All eyes were sharpened, wits predicted.
 He
 'Twas, leaned in the embrasure absently, Amused with his own efforts, now, to trace With his steel-sheathed forefinger Friedrich's face
 I' the dust: but as the trees waved sere, his smile Deepened, and words expressed its thought erewhile.
 'Ay, fairly housed at last, my old compeer?
 That we should stick together, all the
 year,
 I kept Verona!—How old Boniface, Old Azzo caught us in its market-place,
 He by that pillar, I at this,—caught each In mid swing, more than fury of his Egging the rabble on to disavow Allegiance to their Marquis—Bacchus,
 how They boasted! Ecelin must turn their drudge,
 Nor, if released, will Salinguerra grudge

Paying arrears of tribute due long
 since—Bacchus! My man, could promise then, nor wince,
 The bones-and-muscles! sound of wind and limb,
 Spoke he the set excuse I framed for him:
 And now he sits me, slaving and mute, Intent on chafing each starved purple
 foot Benumbed past aching with the altar
 slab—
 Will no vein throb there when some monk shall blab Spitefully to the circle of bald scalps, "Friedrich's affirmed to be our side the Alps"
 —Eh, brother Lactance, brother Anaclet?
 Sworn to abjure the world, its fume and fret,
 God's own now? Dropt the dormitory bar, Enfold the scanty grey serge scapular Twice o'er the cowl to muffle memories
 out—So! but the midnight whisper turns a shout,
 Eyes wink, mouths open, pulses circulate In the stone walls: the Past, the world you hate
 Is with you, ambush, open field—or see The surging flame—we fire Vicenza—glee!
 Follow, let Pilio and Bernardo chafe—Bring up the Mantuans—through San Biagio—safe!
 Ah, the mad people waken? Ah, they writhe
 And reach us? if they block the gate—no tithe
 Can pass—keep back, you Bassanese!
 the edge,
 Use the edge—shear, thrust, hew, melt down the wedge, Let out the black of those black upturned eyes!
 Hell—are they sprinkling fire too? the blood fries
 And hisses on your brass gloves as they tear Those upturned faces choking with despair.

Brave! Slidder through the reeking gate—"how now?"
 You six had charge of her? And then the vow Comes, and the foam spirts, hair's plucked, till one shriek (I hear it) and you fling—you cannot
 speak—
 Your gold-flowered basnet to a man who haled
 The Adelaide he dared scarce view unveiled
 This morn, naked across the fire: how crown
 The archer that exhausted lays you
 down
 Your infant, smiling at the flame, and dies?
 While one, while mine . . .
 Bacchus! I think there lies More than one corpse there' (and he paced the room)
 '—Another cinder somewhere—'twas my doom Beside, my doom! If Adelaide is dead
 I am the same, this Azzo lives instead Of that to me, and we pull, any how,
 Este into a heap—the matter's now At the true juncture slipping us so oft.
 Ay, Heinrich died and Otho, please you, doffed
 His crown at such a juncture! still, if hold Our Friedrich's purpose, if this chain enfold
 The neck of . . . who but this same Ecelin
 That must recoil when the best days begin!
 Recoil? that's nought; if the recoiler
 leaves
 His name for me to fight with, no one grieves!
 But he must interfere, forsooth, unlock His cloister to become my stumbling-block
 Just as of old! Ay, ay, there 'tis again—
 The land's inevitable Head—explain The reverences that subject us! Count These Ecelins now! not to say as fount, Originating power of thought,—from twelve That drop i' the trenches they joined hands to delve, Six shall surpass him, but . . . why, men must twine Somehow with something! Ecelin's a
 fine
 Clear name! 'Twere simpler, doubtless, twine with me
 At once: our cloistered friend's capacity Was of a sort! I had to share myself In fifty portions, like an o'ertasked elf That 's forced illume in fifty points the vast Rare vapour he's environed by. At
 last
 My strengths, though sorely frittered, e'en converge
 And crown . . . no, Bacchus, they have yet to urge
 The man be crowned!
 That aloe, an he durst, Would climb! just such a bloated sprawler first
 I noted in Messina's castle-court
 The day I came, when Heinrich asked in sport
 If I would pledge my faith to win him
 back His right in Lombardy: "for, once bid pack.
 Marauders," he continued, "in my
 stead
 You rule, Taurello!" and upon this
 head
 Laid the silk glove of Constance—I see
 her
 Too, mantled head to foot in miniver, Retrude following!
 I am absolved
 From further toil: the empery devolved On me, 'twas Tito's word: I have to lay
 For once my plan, pursue my plan my
 way,
 Prompt nobody, and render an account Taurello to Taurello! nay, I mount To Friedrich—he conceives the post I kept,
 Who did true service, able or inept,
 Who 's worthy guerdon, Ecelin or I.
 Me guerdoned, counsel follows; would he vie
 With the Pope really? Azzo, Boniface Compose a right-arm Hohenstauffen's race

Must break ere govern Lombardy. It would decline; these would not be

 To root my pines up and then poison me, Young Ecelin—your Prefect's that! Beside, Too precious, certainly.

 Another life's ordained me: the world's How now? Compete

Ay, that patch, surely, green as ever, Thoughts were caprices in the course

I set Her Moorish lentisk, by the stair, Methodic with Taurello; so, he turned,
 To overawe the aloes; and we trod Enough amused by fancies fairly earned Those flowers, how call you such?— Of Este's horror-struck submitted neck, into the sod; And Richard, the cowed braggart, at A stately foreigner—a world of pain his beck,— To make it thrive, arrest rough winds— To his own petty but immediate doubt all vain! If he could pacify the League without Conceding Richard ; just to this was brought That interval of vain discursive thought !

 As, shall I say, some Ethiop, past pursuit Of all enslavers, dips a shackled foot Burnt to the blood, into the drowsy black Enormous watercourse which guides him back To his own tribe again, where he is king ;
 And laughs because he guesses, numbering The yellower poison-wattles on the pouch
 Of the first lizard wrested from its couch Under the slime (whose skin, the while, he strips To cure his nostril with, and festered lips, And eyeballs bloodshot through the desert blast)
 That he has reached its boundary, at last May breathe ;—thinkso'er enchantments of the South Sovereign to plague his enemies, their month, Eyes, nails, and hair ; but, these enchantments tried In fancy, puts them soberly aside For truth, projects a cool return with friends,
 The likelihood of winning mere amends Ere long ; thinks that, takes comfort silently, Then, from the river's brink, his wrongs and he,
 Hugging revenge close to their hearts, are soon Off-striding for the Mountains of the Moon.
 Midnight : the watcher nodded on his spear, Since clouds dispersing left a passage clear,
 For any meagre and discoloured moon
 To venture forth ; and such was peering soon Above the harassed city—her close lanes Closer, not half so tapering her fanes, As though she shrunk into herself to What little life was saved, more safely.
 Heap

By heap the watch-fires mouldered, and beside The blackest spoke Sordello and replied Palma with none to listen. 'Tis your Cause :
 What makes a Ghibellin ? There should be laws—(Remember how my youth escaped ! I trust To you for manhood, Palma ; tell me just As any child)—there must be laws at work Explaining this. Assure me, good may lurk Under the bad,—my multitude has part In your designs, their welfare is at heart With Salinguerra, to their interest Refer the deeds he dwelt on,—so divest
 Our conference of much that scared me.
 Why
 Affect that heartless tone to Tito ? I Esteemed myself, yes, in my inmost mind
 This morn, a recreant to my race—man-kind O'erlooked till now : why boast my spirit's force, —Such force denied its object ? why divorce These, then admire my spirit's flight the same As though it bore up, helped some half-orbed flame Else quenched in the dead void, to living space ?
 —That orb cast off to chaos and disgrace, Why vaunt so much my unincumbered dance, Making a feat's facilities enhance Its marvel ? But I front Taurello, one Of happier fate, and all I should have done,
 He does ; the people's good being paramount With him, their progress may perhaps account For his abiding still : whereas you heard The talk with Tito—the excuse preferred For burning those five hostages,—and broached By way of blind, as you and I approached,

I do believe.'

She spoke: then he, 'My thought Plainlier expressed! All to your profit—nought

Meantime of these, of conquests to achieve

For them, of wretchedness he might relieve While profiting your party. Azzo, too, Supports a cause: what cause? Do

Guelfs pursue Their ends by means like yours, or better?'

When
The Guelfs were proved alike, men weighed with men,

And deed with deed, blaze, blood, with blood and blaze, Morn broke: 'Once more, Sordello, meet its gaze Proudly—the people's charge against thee fails

In every point, while either party quails!

These are the busy ones—be silent thou!
Two parties take the world up, and allow

No third, yet have one principle, subsist By the same injustice; whoso shall enlist

With either, ranks with man's inveterate

foes.
So there is one less quarrel to compose:

The Guelf, the Ghibellin may be to curse—

I have done nothing, but both sides do
worse

Than nothing. Nay, to me, forgotten, reft

Of insight, lapped by trees and flowers, was left

The notion of a service—ha? What lured

Me here, what mighty aim was I assured

Must move Taurello? What if there remained

A Cause, intact, distinct from these,
ordained,

For me, its true discoverer?'

Some one pressed Before them here, a watcher, to suggest

The subject for a ballad: 'They must
know

The tale of the dead worthy, long ago

Consul of Rome—that's long ago for us, Minstrels and bowmen, idly squabbling
thus

In the world's corner—but too late, no
doubt,

For the brave time he sought to bring about.

—Not know Crescentius Nomentanus?'
Then

He cast about for terms to tell him,
when

Sordello disavowed it, how they used Whenever their Superior introduced

A novice to the Brotherhood—('for I Was just a brown-sleeve brother, merrily

Appointed too,' quoth he, 'till Innocent

Bade me relinquish, to my small content, My wife or my brown sleeves')—some brother spoke Ere nocturns of Crescentius, to revoke

The edict issued, after his demise, Which blotted fame alike and effigies,

All out except a floating power, a name Including, tending to produce the same

Great act. Rome, dead, forgotten, lived at least

Within that brain, though to a vulgar priest

And a vile stranger,—two not worth a slave

Of Rome's, Pope John, King Otho,— fortune gave

The rule there: so, Crescentius, haply
drest

In white, called Roman Consul for a jest, Taking the people at their word, forth stept

As upon Brutus' heel, nor ever kept Rome waiting,—stood erect, and from his brain

Gave Rome out on its ancient place
again,

Ay, bade proceed with Brutus' Rome, kings styled

Themselves mere citizens of, and, beguiled

Into great thoughts thereby, would choose the gem

Out of a lapfull, spoil their diadem —The Senate's cypher was so hard to scratch!

He flashes like a phanal, all men catch

The flame, Rome's just accomplished !
 when returned Otho, with John, the Consul's step had spurned,
 And Hugo Lord of Este, to redress The wrongs of each. Crescentius in the stress
 Of adverse fortune bent. 'They crucified Their Consul in the Forum, and abide E'er since such slaves at Rome, that I—(for I Was once a brown-sleeve brother, merrily
 Appointed)—I had option to keep wife Or keep brown sleeves, and managed in the strife Lose both. A song of Rome !'

And Rome, indeed,
 Robed at Goito in fantastic weed,
 The Mother-City of his Mantuan days, Looked an established point of light whence rays

Traversed the world ; for, all the clustered homes Beside of men, seemed bent on being Romes
 In their degree ; the question was, how each Should most resemble Rome, clean out of reach.

Nor, of the great Two, either principle, Struggled to change—but to possess—Rome, still,
 Guelf Rome or Ghibellin Rome.

Let Rome advance !
 Rome, as she struck Sordello's ignorance—
 How could he doubt one moment ?
 Rome's the Cause !
 Rome of the Pandects, all the world's new laws—

Of the Capitol, of Castle Angelo ;
 New structures, that inordinately glow, Subdued, brought back to harmony, made ripe

By many a relic of the archetype Extant for wonder ; every upstart
 church

That hoped to leave old temples in the lurch,

Corrected by the Theatre forlorn That,—as a mundane shell, its world late born,—

Lay and o'ershadowed it. These hints
 combined, Rome typifies the scheme to put mankind Once more in full possession of their rights.
 'Let us have Rome again ! On me it lights
 To build up Rome—on me, the first and
 last :
 For such a Future was endured the
 Past !'
 And thus, in the grey twilight, forth he sprung
 To give his thought consistency among The very People—let their facts avail Finish the dream grown from the archer's tale.

BOOK THE FIFTH

Is it the same Sordello in the dusk As at the dawn?—merely a perished husk
 Now, that arose a power fit to build Up Rome again ? The proud conception

 The work marched : step by step,—a One, of men's whole work, time's com-workman fit pleted plan,

The other, of the minute's work, man's
 first Step to the plan's completeness :
 what's dispersed Save hope of that supreme step which, descried Earliest, was meant still to remain untried
 Only to give you heart to take your own Step, and there stay—leaving the rest
 alone?
 Where is the vanity? Why count as one
 The first step, with the last step?
 What is gone
 Except Rome's æry magnificence, That last step you'd take first?—an evidence You were God: be man now! Let those glances fall!
 The basis, the beginning step of all,
 Which proves you just a man—is that gone too?
 Pity to disconcert one versed as you In fate's ill-nature! but its full extent Eludes Sordello, even: the veil rent, Read the black writing—that collective
 man Outstrips the individual! Who began The acknowledged greatnesses? Ay, your own art
 Shall serve us: put the poet's mimes
 apart—
 Close with the poet's self, and lo, a dim Yet too plain form divides itself from
 him!
 Alcamo's song enmeshes the lulled Isle, Woven into the echoes left erewhile By Nina, one soft web of song: no
 more Turning his name, then, flower-like o'er and o'er!
 An elder poet in the younger's place—Nina's the strength—but Alcamo's the
 grace:
 Each neutralizes each then! Search
 your fill;
 You get no whole and perfect Poet—still New Ninas, Alcomos, till time's mid-
 night
 Shrouds all—or better say, the shutting
 light
 Of a forgotten yesterday. Dissect Every ideal workman—to reject

In favour of your fearful ignorance The thousand phantasms eager to advance,
 And point you but to those within your reach)— Were you the first who brought—(in modern speech)
 The Multitude to be materialized?
 That loose eternal unrest—who devised An apparition i' the midst? The rout Was checked, a breathless ring was formed about That sudden flower: get round at any risk
 The gold-rough pointel, silver-blazing disk O' the lily! Swords across it! Reign thy reign
 And serve thy frolic service, Charlemagne!
 —The very child of over-joyousness, Unfeeling thence, strong therefore:
 Strength by stress Of Strength comes of that forehead confident,
 Those widened eyes expecting heart's
 content,
 A calm as out of just-quelled noise;
 nor swerves
 For doubt, the ample cheek in gracious curves Abutting on the upthrust nether lip:
 He wills, how should he doubt then?
 Ages slip:
 Was it Sordello pried into the work Sofar accomplished, and discovered lurk
 A company amid the other clans, Only distinct in priests for castellans And popes for suzerains (their rule confessed
 Its rule, their interest its interest, Living for sake of living—there an
 end,— Wrapt in itself, no energy to spend In making adversaries or allies),— Dived you into its capabilities And dared create, out of that sect, a soul Should turn the multitude, already
 whole,
 Into its body? Speak plainer! Is 't so
 sure God's church lives by a King's investiture?

Look to last step! a staggering—a shock—
 What's mere sand is demolished, while the rock Endures: a column of black fiery dust Blots heaven—that help was prematurely thrust Aside, perchance!—but the air clears, nought's erased Of the true outline! Thus much being firm based,
 The other was a scaffold. See him stand Butressed upon his mattress, Hildebrand Of the huge brain-mask welded ply o'er ply
 As in a forge; it buries either eye
 White and extinct, that stupid brow; teeth clenched,
 The neck tight-corded, too, the chin deep-trenched,
 As if a cloud enveloped him while fought Under its shade, grim prizers, thought with thought At dead-lock, agonizing he, until The victor thought leapt radiant up, and Will,
 The slave with folded arms and drooping lids
 They fought for, lean forth flame-like as it bids.
 Call him no flower—a mandrake of the earth, Thwarted and dwarfed and blasted in its birth, Rather, a fruit of suffering's excess, Thence feeling, therefore stronger: still by stress Of Strength, work Knowledge! Full three hundred years Have men to wear away in smiles and tears Between the two that nearly seem to touch, Observe you! quit one workman and you clutch Another, letting both their trains go by—The actors-out of either's policy, Heinrich, on this hand, Otho, Barbaross, Carry the three Imperial crowns across, Aix' Iron, Milan's Silver, and Rome's Gold—While Alexander, Innocent uphold

On that, each Papal key—but, link on link, Why is it neither chain betrays a chink?
 How coalesce the small and great! Alack,
 For one thrust forward, fifty such fall back!
 Do the popes coupled there help Gregory Alone? Hark—from the hermit Peter's cry At Claremont, down to the first serf that says Friedrich's no liege of his while he delays Getting the Pope's curse off him! The Crusade—Or trick of breeding strength by other aid Than strength, is safe. Hark—from the wild harangue Of Vimercato, to the carroch's clang Yonder! The League—or trick of turning strength Against pernicious strength, is safe at length.
 Yet hark—from Mantuan Albert making cease
 The fierce ones, to Saint Francis preaching peace Yonder! God's Truce—or trick to supersede The very use of strength, is safe. Indeed We trench upon the Future! Who is found To take next step, next age—trail o'er the ground—Shall I say, gourd-like?—not the flower's display Nor the root's prowess, but the plenteous way O' the plant—produced by joy and sorrow, whence Unfeeling and yet feeling, strongest—thence?
 Knowledge by stress of merely Knowledge? No—E'en were Sordello ready to forego His life for this, 'twere overleaping work
 Some one has first to do, howe'er it irk, Nor stray a foot's breadth from the beaten road.
 Who means to help must still support the load

Hildebrand lifted—"why hast Thou," he groaned,
 "Imposed on me a burthen, Paul had moaned, And Moses dropped beneath?" Much done—and yet Doubtless, that grandest task God ever
     set On man, left much to do: at his arm's wrench, Charlemagne's scaffold fell; but pillars blench Merely, start back again—perchance have been Taken for buttresses: crash every screen,
 Hammer the tenons better, and engage A gang about your work, for the next
     age
 Or two, of Knowledge, part by Strength and part By Knowledge! Then, indeed, perchance may start Sordello on his race—would time divide Such secrets! If one step's awry, one bulge
 Calls for correction by a step we thought Got over long since, why, till that is wrought,
 No progress! and the scaffold in its turn Becomes, its service o'er, a thing to spurn.
 Meanwhile, if your half-dozen years of
     life
 In store, dispose you to forego the strife, Who takes exception? Only bear in
     mind, Ferrara's reached, Goito's left behind:
 As you then were, as half yourself, desist!
 —The warrior-part of you may, an it list,
 Finding real faulchions difficult to poise, Fling them afar and taste the cream of joys
 By wielding such in fancy,—what is bard
 Of you, may spurn the vehicle that marred Elys so much, and in free fancy glut His sense, yet write no verses—you have but

To please yourself for law, and once could please What once appeared yourself, by dreaming these Rather than doing these, in days gone
     by.
 But all is changed the moment you descrie Mankind as half yourself,—then, fancy's trade
 Ends once and always: how may half evade
 The other-half? men are found half of
     you.
 Out of a thousand helps, just one or two Can be accomplished presently: but flinch.
 From these (as from the faulchion, raised an inch, Elys, described a couplet) and make proof
 Of fancy,—then, while one half lolls
     aloof
 I' the vines, completing Rome to the tip-top—See if, for that, your other half will stop
 A tear, begin a smile! The rabble's woes, Ludicrous in their patience as they chose
 To sit about their town and quietly Be slaughtered,—the poor reckless soldiery,
 With their ignoble rhymes on Richard,
     how
 "Polit-foot," sang they, "was in a pitfall now," Cheering each other from the engine-mounts,— That crippled spawling idiot who recounts
 How, lopt of limbs, he lay, stupid as
     stone,
 Till the pains crept from out him one by
     one,
 And wriggles round the archers on his head
 To earn a morsel of their chestnut bread,—
 And Cino, always in the self-same place Weeping; beside that other wretch's
     case,

Eyepits to ear, one gangrene since he plied
 The engine in his coat of raw sheep's hide
 A double watch in the noon sun; and
     see Lucchino, beauty, with the favours free, Trim hacqueton, spruce beard and scented hair, Campaigning it for the first time—cut
     there
 In two already, boy enough to crawl For latter orpine round the southern
     wall, Tomà, where Richard's kept, because that whore Marfisa, the fool never saw before, Sickened for flowers this wearisomest

 And Tiso's wife—men liked their pretty
     liege,
 Cared for her least of whims once,— Berta, wed
 A twelvemonth gone, and, now poor Tiso's dead,
 Delivering herself of his first child
 On that chance heap of wet filth, reconciled To fifty gazers!—(Here a wind below Made moody music augural of woe From the pine barrier)—'What if, now the scene Draws to a close, yourself have really been —You, plucking purples in Goito's
     moss
 Like edges of a trabea (not to cross Your consul-humour) or dry aloe-shafts For fasces, at Ferrara—he, fate wafts, This very age, her whole inheritance Of opportunities? Yet you advance Upon the last! Since talking is your trade,
 There's Salinguerra left you to persuade:
 Fail! then—
     'No—no—which latest chance secure!'
 Leapt up and cried Sordello: 'this made sure,
 The Past were yet redeemable; its work Was—help the Guefs, whom I, howe'er it irk, Thus help!' (He shook the foolish aloehaulm
 Out of his doublet, paused, proceeded calm
 To the appointed presence. The large
     head Turned on its socket; 'And your spokesman,' said
 The large voice, 'is Elcorte's happy sprout?
 Few such'—(so finishing a speech no
     doubt Addressed to Palma, silent at his side)
 —'My sober councils have diversified.
 Elcorte's son! good: forward as you
     may,
 Our lady's minstrel with so much to
     say!
 The hesitating sunset floated back, Rosily traversed in the wonted track The chamber, from the lattice o'er the girth
 Of pines, to the huge eagle blacked in
     earth Opposite,—outlined sudden, spur to crest,
 That solid Salinguerra, and caressed Palma's contour; 'twas Day looped back Night's pall; Sordello had a chance left spite of all.
 And much he made of the convincing
     speech
 He meant should compensate the Past and reach Through his youth's daybreak of un-profit, quite
 To his noon's labour, so proceed till
     night Leisurely! The great argument to bind Taurello with the Guef Cause, body and
     mind,
 —Came the consummate rhetoric to
     that?
 Yet most Sordello's argument dropped flat
 Through his accustomed fault of breaking yoke, Disjoining him who felt from him who
     spoke.
 Was't not a touching incident—so prompt
 A rendering the world its just accompt,

Once proved its debtor? Who'd suppose, before This proof, that he, Goito's god of yore, At duty's instance could demean himself
 So memorably, dwindle to a Guelf?
 Be sure, in such delicious flattery steeped, His inmost self at the out-portion peeped
 Thus occupied; then stole a glance at those Appealed to, curious if her colour rose Or his lip moved, while he discreetly urged
 The need of Lombardy's becoming purged
 At soonest of her barons; the poor part Abandoned thus, missing the blood at heart And spirit in brain, unseasonably off Elsewhere! But, though his speech was worthy scoff,
 Good-humoured Salinguerra, famed for tact And tongue, who, careless of his phrase, ne'er lacked
 The right phrase, and harangued Honorius dumb
 At his accession,—looked as all fell plumb
 To purpose and himself found interest In every point his new instructor
 pressed
 —Left playing with the rescript's white wax seal
 To scrutinize Sordello head and heel.
 Then means he yield assent sure? No,
 alas!
 All he replied was, 'What, it comes to That pöesy, sooner than politics, Makes fade young hair?' To think such speech could fix Taurello!
 Then a flash of bitter truth:
 So fantasies could break and fritter
 youth
 That he had long ago lost earnestness, Lost will to work, lost power to even express
 The need of working! Earth was turned a grave:
 No more occasions now, though he should crave

Just one, in right of superhuman toil,
 To do what was undone, repair such spoil, Alter the Past—nothing would give the
 chance!
 Not that he was to die: he saw askance Protract the ignominious years beyond To dream in—time to hope and time despond,
 Remember and forget, be sad, rejoice As saved a trouble; he might, at his choice,
 One way or other, idle life out, drop No few smooth verses by the way—for prop,
 A thyrsus, these sad people, all the same, Should pick up, and set store by,—far from blame, Plant o'er his hearse, convinced his better part Survived him. 'Rather tear men out the heart Of the truth!'—Sordello muttered, and renewed
 His propositions for the Multitude.
 But Salinguerra, who at this attack Had thrown great breast and ruffling corslet back
 To hear the better, smilingly resumed His task; beneath, the carroch's warning boomed;
 He must decide with Tito; courteously
 He turned then, even seeming to agree With his admonisher—'Assist the Pope, Extend Guelf domination, fill the scope Of the Church, thus based on All, by All, for All—Change Secular to Evangelical'— Echoing his very sentence: all seemed
 lost,
 When sudden he looked up, laughingly almost,
 To Palma: 'This opinion of your
 friend's—
 For instance, would it answer Palma's
 ends?
 Best, were it not, turn Guelf, submit our Strength'— (Here he drew out his baldric to its length)
 —'To the Pope's Knowledge—let our captive slip,
 Wide to the walls throw ope our gates, equip

Azzo with . . . what I hold here? Who'll subscribe

To a trite censure of the minstrel tribe Henceforward? or pronounce, as Heinrich used,

"Spear-heads for battle, burr-heads for the joust!"

—When Constance, for his couplets, would promote

Alcamo, from a parti-coloured coat,
To holding her lord's stirrup in the wars.
Not that I see where couplet-making
jars

With common sense: at Mantua I had borne

This chanted, better than their most forlorn

Of bull-baits,—that's indisputable!'

Brave!
Whom vanity nigh slew, contempt shall
save!

All's at an end: a Troubadour suppose Mankind will class him with their friends or foes?

A puny uncouth ailing vassal think The world and him bound in some special link?

Abrupt the visionary tether burst—What were rewarded here, or what amerced

If a poor drudge, solicitous to dream Deservingly, got tangled by his theme So far as to conceit the knack or gift Or whatsoever it be, of verse, might lift The globe, a lever like the hand and
head

Of—'Men of Action,' as the Jongleurs
said,

—'The Great Men,' in the people's dialect?

And not a moment did this scorn
affect

Sordello: scorn the poet? They, for once, Asking 'what was,' obtained a full response.

Bid Naddo think at Mantua, he had but To look into his promptuary, put Finger on a set thought in a set speech:
But was Sordello fitted thus for each Conjecture? Nowise; since, within his
soul,

Perception brooded unexpressed and
whole.

A healthy spirit like a healthy frame Craves aliment in plenty—all the same, Changes, assimilates its aliment.

Perceived Sordello, on a truth intent?
Next day no formularies more you saw Than figs or olives in a sated maw.

'Tis Knowledge, whither such perceptions tend;

They lose themselves in that, means to an end,

The many old producing some one new,
A last unlike the first. If lies are true, The Caliph's wheel-work man of brass receives

A meal, munched millet grains and lettuce leaves

Together in his stomach rattle loose—You find them perfect next day to produce;

But ne'er expect the man, on strength of
that,

Can roll an iron camel-collar flat Like Haroun's self! I tell you, what was stored

Bit by bit through Sordello's life, out-poured

That eve, was, for that age, a novel thing:
And round those three the people formed a ring,

Of visionary judges whose award
He recognized in full—faces that barred Henceforth return to the old careless
life,

In whose great presence, therefore, his first strife

For their sakes must not beignobly fought.
All these, for once, approved of him, he thought,

Suspended their own vengeance, chose await

The issue of this strife to reinstate Them in the right of taking it—in fact He must be proved king ere they could exact

Vengeance for such king's defalcation.
Last,

A reason why the phrases flowed so fast
Was in his quite forgetting for a time Himself in his amazement that the
rhyme

Disguised the royalty so much: he
there—

And Salinguerra—and yet unaware

Who was the lord, who liegeman !
 ' Thus I lay
 On thine my spirit and compel obey His lord,—my liegeman,—impotent to build Another Rome, but hardly so unskilled In what such builder should have been, as brook
 One shame beyond the charge that I forsook His function ! Free me from that shame, I bend
 A brow before, suppose new years to spend,
 Allow each chance, nor fruitlessly, recur—Measure thee with the Minstrel, then, demur
 At any crown he claims ! That I must cede Shamed now, my right to my especial
 need—Confess thee fitter help the world than I Ordained its champion from eternity, Is much : but to behold thee scorn the post
 I quit in thy behalf—to hear thee boast What makes my own despair ! ' And while he rung
 The changes on this theme, the roof up-
 sprung,
 The sad walls of the presence-chamber died
 Into the distance, or embowering vied With far-away Goito's vine-frontier ; And crowds of faces—(only keeping
 clear
 The rose-light in the midst, his vantage-
 ground
 To fight their battle from)—deep clustered round Sordello, with good wishes no mere
 breath,
 Kind prayers for him no vapour, since,
 come death,
 Come life, he was fresh-sinewed every joint,
 Each bone new-marrowed as whom Gods anoint Though mortal to their rescue : now let sprawl
 The snaky volumes hither ! Is Typhon
 all

For Hercules to trample—good report From Salinguerra only to extort ?
 ' So was I ' (closed he his inculcating, A poet must be earth's essential king)
 ' So was I, royal so, and if I fail,
 'Tis not the royalty, ye witness quail,
 But one deposed who, caring not exert Its proper essence, trifled malapert With accidents instead—good things As heralds of a better thing behind—And, worthy through display of these, put forth
 Never the inmost all-surpassing worth That constitutes him King precisely
 since
 As yet no other spirit may evince Its like : the power he took most pride to test, Whereby all forms of life had been professed
 At pleasure, forms already on the
 earth,
 Was but a means to power beyond, whose birth Should, in its novelty, be kingship's
 proof.
 Now, whether he came near or kept aloof
 The several forms he longed to imitate, Not there the kingship lay, he sees too
 late.
 Those forms, unalterable first as last, Proved him her copier, not the protoplast
 Of nature : what could come of being
 free
 By action to exhibit tree for tree, Bird, beast, for beast and bird, or prove earth bore
 One veritable man or woman more ?
 Means to an end, such proofs are : what
 the end ?
 Let essence, whatsoe'er it be, extend—Never contract ! Already you include The multitude ; then let the multitude Include yourself ; and the result were
 new :
 Themselves before, the multitude turn
 you.
 This were to live and move and have, in
 them,
 Your being, and secure a diadem

You should transmit (because no cycle
     years
 Beyond itself, but on itself returns) When, the full sphere in wane, the world o'erlaid Long since with you, shall have in turn obeyed
 Some orb still prouder, some displayer,
     still
 More potent than the last, of human will,
 And some new King depose the old. Of such Am I—whom pride of this elates too
     much?
 Safe, rather say, 'mid troops of peers
     again;
 I, with my words, hailed brother of the train Deeds once sufficed: for, let the world roll back,
 Who fails, through deeds howe'er diverse, re-track My purpose still, my task? A teeming crust—
 Air, flame, earth, wave at conflict!
     Then, needs must Emerge some Calm embodied, these refer
 The brawl to;—yellow-bearded Jupiter?
 No! Saturn; some existence like a pact
 And protest against Chaos, some first
     fact
 I' the faint of time. My deep of life,
     I know,
 Is unavailing e'en to poorly show' . . .
 (For here the Chief immeasurably yawned)
 . . . 'Deeds in their due gradation till Song dawned—
 The fullest effluence of the finest mind,
 All in degree, no way diverse in kind From minds about it, minds which, more or less Lofty or low, move seeking to impress Themselves on somewhat; but one mind has climbed Step after step, by just ascent sublimed.
 Thought is the soul of act, and, stage by

 Is soul from body still to disengage
 As tending to a freedom which rejects Such help and incorporeally affects

The world, producing deeds but not by deeds,
 Swaying, in others, frames itself exceeds,
 Assigning them the simpler tasks it used To patiently perform till Song produced Acts, by thoughts only, for the mind:
     divest Mind of e'en Thought, and, lo, God's unexpressed
 Will dawns above us! All then is to win Save that! How much for me, then?
     where begin My work? About me, faces! and they
     flock,
 The earnest faces! What shall I unlock By song? behold me prompt, whate'er it be,
 To minister: how much can mortals see Of Life? No more than so? I take the task
 And marshal you Life's elemental masque,
 Show Men, on evil or on good lay stress, This light, this shade make prominent, suppress
 All ordinary hues that softening blend Such natures with the level. Apprehend
 Which sinner is, which saint, if I allot Hell, Purgatory, Heaven, a blaze or blot, To those you doubt concerning! I en-womb
 Some wretched Friedrich with his red-hot tomb;
 Some dubious spirit, Lombard Agilulph With the black chastening river I engulph;
 Some unapproached Matilda I enshrine With languors of the planet of decline—These, fail to recognize, to arbitrate Between henceforth, to rightly estimate Thus marshalled in the masque! Myself, the while,
 As one of you, am witness, shrink or
     smile
 At my own showing! Next age—what's to do?
 The men and women stationed hitherto Will I unstation, good and bad, conduct Each nature to its farthest, or obstruct At soonest, in the world: light, thwarted, breaks
 A limpid purity to rainbow flakes,

Or shadow, massed, freezes to gloom :
 behold
 How such, with fit assistance to unfold,
 Or obstacles to crush them, disengage Their forms, love, hate, hope, fear, peace make, war wage,
 In presence of you all ! Myself, implied Superior now, as, by the platform's side, I bade them do and suffer,—would last
 content
 The world . . . no—that's too far ! I circumvent
 A few, my masque contented, and to
 these Offer unveil the last of mysteries—Man's inmost life shall have yet freer
 play :
 Once more I cast external things away,
 And natures composite, so decompose That ' . . . Why, he writes Sordello !
 ' How I rose,
 And how have you advanced ! since evermore Yourselves effect what I was fain before Effect, what I supplied yourselves suggest,
 What I leave bare yourselves can now invest.
 How we attain to talk as brothers talk,
 In half-words, call things by half-names, no balk
 From discontinuing old aids. To-day Takes in account the work of Yester-
 day :
 Has not the world a Past now, its adept Consults ere he dispense with or accept New aids ? a single touch more may enhance,
 A touch less turn to insignificance Those structures' symmetry the Past has strewed
 The world with, once so bare. Leave the mere rude Explicit details ! 'tis but brother's
 speech
 We need, speech where an accent's change gives each
 The other's soul—no speech to understand By former audience : need was then to expand, Expatriate—hardly were we brothers !
 true—
 Nor I lament my small remove from you,

Nor reconstruct what stands already.
 Ends
 Accomplished turn to means : my art intends New structure from the ancient : as they changed
 The spoils of every clime at Venice,
 ranged
 The horned and snouted Libyan god, upright
 As in his desert, by some simple bright Clay cinerary pitcher—Thebes as Rome, Athens as Byzant rifled, till their Dome From earth's reputed consummations razed
 A seal, the all-transmuting Triad blazed Above. Ah, whose that fortune ? ne'ertheless
 E'en he must stoop contented to express No tithe of what's to say—the vehicle Never sufficient : but his work is still For faces like the faces that select The single service I am bound effect,
 And bid me cast aside such fancies, bow Taurello to the Guelf cause, disallow The Kaiser's coming—which with heart, soul, strength,
 I labour for, this eve, who feel at length
 My past career's outrageous vanity,
 And would, as its amends, die, even die
 Now I first estimate the boon of life, If death might win compliance—sure, this strife
 Is right for once—the People my support.' My poor Sordello ! what may we extort
 By this, I wonder ? Palma's lighted eyes Turned to Taurello who, long past surprise,
 Began, ' You love him—what you'd say at large Let me say briefly. First, your father's charge
 To me, his friend, peruse : I guessed
 indeed
 You were no stranger to the course decreed.
 He bids me leave his children to the saints :
 As for a certain project, he acquaints The Pope with that, and offers him the
 best
 Of your possessions to permit the rest

Go peaceably—to Ecelin, a stripe Of soil the cursed Vicentines will gripe, —To Alberic, a patch the Trevisan Clutches already; extricate, who can, Treville, Villarazzi, Puissolo, Cartiglione, Loria!—all go,
And with them go my hopes. 'Tis lost, then! Lost

This eve, our crisis, and some pains it cost Procuring; thirty years—as good I'd spent

Like our admonisher! But each his bent Pursues: no question, one might live absurd

Oneself this while, by deed as he by
word,

Persisting to obtrude an influence where
'Tis made account of, much as . . . nay, you fare

With twice the fortune, youngster!—I submit,

Happy to parallel my waste of wit With the renowned Sordello's: you decide

A course for me. Romano may abide Romano,—Bacchus! After all, what dearth

Of Ecelins and Alberics on earth?
Say there's a prize in prospect, must disgrace

Betide competitors, unless they style Themselves Romano? were it worth my
while

To try my own luck! But an obscure
place

Suits me—there wants a youth to bustle, stalk

And attitudinize—some fight, more talk, Most flaunting badges—how, I might make clear,

Since Friedrich's very purposes lie here —Here, pity they are like to lie! For me, With station fixed unceremoniously

Long since, small use contesting; I am but

The liegeman, you are born the lieges—
shut

That gentle mouth now! or resume your kin

In your sweet self; were Palma Ecelin For me to work with! Could that neck endure

This bauble for a cumbrous garniture,

She should . . . or might one bear it for her? Stay—

I have not been so flattered many a
day

As by your pale friend—Bacchus! The least help

Would lick the hind's fawn to a lion's whelp—

His neck is broad enough—a ready
tongue

Beside—too writhled—but, the main thing, young—

I could . . . why, look ye!
And the badge was thrown Across Sordello's neck: 'This badge

alone

Makes you Romano's Head—becomes superb

On your bare neck, which would, on mine, disturb

The pauldron,' said Taurello. A mad act,

Not even dreamed about before—in
fact,

Not when his sportive arm rose for the nonce—

But he had dallied overmuch, this
once,

With power: the thing was done, and he, aware

The thing was done, proceeded to declare—

(So like a nature made to serve, excel In serving, only feel by service well!)

—That he would make Sordello that
and more.

'As good a scheme as any! What's to pore

At in my face?' he asked—ponder instead

This piece of news; you are Romano's
Head!

One cannot slacken pace so near the goal,

Suffer my Azzo to escape heart-whole This time! For you there's Palma to espouse—

For me, one crowning trouble ere I

house
Like my compeer.'

On which ensued a strange And solemn visitation; there came

change

O'er every one of them ; each looked on
     each :
 Up in the midst a truth grew, without
     speech.
 And when the giddiness sank and the haze Subsided, they were sitting, no amaze, Sordello with the baldric on, his sire Silent, though his proportions seemed aspire Momently ; and, interpreting the thrill Nigh at its ebb, Palma was found there
     still Relating somewhat Adelaide confessed
 A year ago, while dying on her breast,—
 Of a contrivance that Vicenza night, When Ecelin had birth. ' Their convoy's flight, Cut off a moment, coiled inside the
     flame
 That wallowed like a dragon at his game
 The toppling city through—San Biagio rocks !
 And wounded lies in her delicious locks Retrude, the frail mother, on her face, None of her wasted, just in one embrace Covering her child : when, as they lifted
     her,
 Cleaving the tumult, mighty, mightier
 And mightiest Taurello's cry outbroke, Leapt like a tongue of fire that cleaves the smoke, Midmost to cheer his Mantuans onward —drown
 His colleague Ecelin's clamour, up and down
 The disarray : failed Adelaide see then Who was the natural chief, the man of
     men ?
 Outstripping time, her infant there burst swathe, Stood up with eyes haggard beyond the scathe
 From wandering after his heritage Lost once and lost for aye—and why that rage,
 That deprecating glance ? A new shape
     leant
 On a familiar shape—gloatingly bent O'er his discomfiture ; 'mid wreaths it wore, Still one outflamed the rest—her child's
     before

'Twas Salinguerra's for his child : scorn,
     hate
 Rage, startled her from Ecelin—too late !
 Then was the moment! rival's foot had spurned
 Never that brow to earth ! Ere sense returned—
 The act conceived, adventured, and
     complete,
 They bore away to an obscure retreat Mother and child—Retrude's self not slain ' (Nor even here Taurello moved) ' though pain
 Was fled ; and what assured them most
     'twas fled,
 All pain, was, if they raised the pale hushed head
 'Twould turn this way and that, waver
     awhile,
 And only settle into its old smile—(Graceful as the disquieted water-flag Steadying itself, remarked they, in the quag Oneither side their path)—when suffered
     look Down on her child. They marched : no sign once shook
 The company's close litter of crossed spears
 Till, as they reached Goito, a few tears Slipt in the sunset from her long black
     lash,
 And she was gone. So far the action rash—No crime. They laid Retrude in the font, Taurello's very gift, her child was wont To sit beneath—constant as eve he came To sit by its attendant girls the same As one of them. For Palma, she would blend
 With this magnific spirit to the end, That ruled her first—but scarcely had she dared To disobey the Adelaide who scared Her into vowing never to disclose A secret to her husband, which so froze His blood at half recital, she contrived To hide from him Taurello's infant lived, Lest, by revealing that, himself should mar Romano's fortunes. And, a crime so far,

Palma received that action: she was told Of Salinguerra's nature, of his cold Calm acquiescence in his lot ! But free To impart the secret to Romano, she Engaged to repossess Sordello of His heritage, and hers, and that way doff

The mask, but after years, long years !—
while now,
Was not Romano's sign-mark on that
brow ?'

Across Taurello's heart his arms were locked ;

And when he did speak 'twas as if he mocked

The minstrel, ' who had not to move,'
he said,

'Not stir—should Fate defraud him of a shred

Of his son's infancy ? much less of his youth !'

(Laughingly all this)—' which to aid, in
truth,

Himself, reserved on purpose, had not grown

Old, not too old—'twas best they kept
alone

Till now, and never idly met till now ; ' —Then, in the same breath, told Sordello
how

All intimations of this eve's event Were lies, for Friedrich must advance to

Trent,
Thence to Verona, then to Rome, there
stop,

Tumble the Church down, institute a-top The Alps a Prefecture of Lombardy :

—' That's now !—no prophesying what may be

Anon, with a new monarch of the clime, Native of Gesi, passing his youth's prime

At Naples. Tito bids my choice decide On whom . . .'

' Embrace him, madman !'

Palma cried,
Who through the laugh saw sweatdrops burst apace,

And his lips' blanching: he did not embrace

Sordello, but he laid Sordello's hand
On his own eyes, mouth, forehead.

Understand,

This while Sordello was becoming flushed Out of his whiteness ; thoughts rushed, fancies rushed ;

He pressed his hand upon his head and Both should forbear him. ' Nay, the best's behind !'

Taurello laughed—not quite with the same laugh :

' The truth is, thus we scatter, ay, like chaff

These Guelfs, a despicable monk recoils From: nor expect a fickle Kaiser spoils

Our triumph !—Friedrich ? Think you, I intend

Friedrich shall reap the fruits of blood I spend

And brain I waste ? Think you, the people clap

Their hands at my out-hewing this wild gap

For any Friedrich to fill up ? 'Tis mine—That's yours : I tell you, towards some such design

Have I worked blindly, yes, and idly,
yes,

And for another, yes—but worked no
less

With instinct at my heart ; I else had swerved,

While now—look round ! My cunning has preserved

Samminiato—that's a central place Secures us Florence, boy,—in Pisa's
case,

By land as she by sea ; with Pisa ours,
And Florence, and Pistoia, one devours

The land at leisure ! Gloriously dispersed—

Brescia, observe, Milan, Piacenza first That flanked us (ah, you know not !) in the March ;

On these we pile, as keystone of our arch, Romagna and Bologna, whose first span

Covered the Trentine and the Valsugan ; Sofia's Egna by Belgiano's sure !' . . .

So he proceeded ; half of all this, pure Delusion, doubtless, nor the rest too
true,

But what was undone he felt sure to do,
As ring by ring he wrung off, flung away

The pauldron-rings to give his sword-arm play—

Need of the sword now ! That would soon adjust Aught wrong at present ; to the sword intrust Sordello's whiteness, undersize : 'twas plain He hardly rendered right to his own brain—Like a brave hound, men educate to pride Himself on speed or scent nor aught beside,
 As though he could not, gift by gift, match men !
 Palma had listened patiently : but when 'Twas time expostulate, attempt withdraw Taurello from his child, she, without awe Took off his iron arms from, one by one, Sordello's shrinking shoulders, and, that done, Made him avert his visage and relieve Sordello (you might see his corselet heave The while) who, loose, rose—tried to speak, then sank :
 They left him in the chamber, All was blank.
 And even reeling down the narrow stair Taurello kept up, as though unaware Palma was by to guide him, the old device —Something of Milan—' how we muster thrice The Torriani's strength there—all along Our own Visconti cowed them'—thus the song Continued even while she bade him stoop, Thrid somehow, by some glimpse of arrow-loop,
 The turnings to the gallery below,
 Where he stopped short as Palma let him go.
 When he had sat in silence long enough Splintering the stone bench, braving a rebuff
 She stopt the truncheon ; only to commence One of Sordello's poems, a pretence

For speaking, some poor rhyme of 'Elys' hair And head that's sharp and perfect like a pear, So smooth and close are laid the few fine locks Stained like pale honey oozed from top-most rocks Sun-blanced the livelong Summer'—from his worst Performance, the Goito, as his first :
 And that attend, conceiving from the brow
 And open mouth no silence would serve now, Went on to say the whole world loved that man And, for that matter, thought his face, tho' wan, Eclipsed the Count's—he sucking in each phrase As if an angel spoke. The foolish praise Ended, he drew her on his mailed knees, made Her face a framework with his hands, a shade,
 A crown, an aureole : there must she remain (Her little mouth compressed with smiling pain As in his gloves she felt her tresses twitch)
 To get the best look at, in fittest niche Dispose his saint. That done, he kissed her brow, —'Lauded her father for his treason now,'
 He told her, 'only, how could one suspect
 The wit in him?—whose clansman, recollect, Was ever Salinguerra—she, the same, Romano and his lady—so, might claim To know all, as she should'—and thus begun Schemes with a vengeance, schemes on schemes, 'not one Fit to be told that foolish boy,' he said,
 'But only let Sordello Palma wed,
 —Then !'
 'Twas a dim long narrow place at best :
 Midway a sole grate showed the fiery West,

As shows its corpse the world's end some split tomb—
 A gloom, a rift of fire, another gloom, Faced Palma—but at length Taurello
 set
 Her free; the grating held one ragged jet Of fierce gold fire: he lifted her within The hollow underneath—how else begin Fate's second marvellous cycle, else renew
 The ages than with Palma plain in view?
 Then paced the passage, hands clenched, head erect,
 Pursuing his discourse; a grand unchecked
 Monotony made out from his quick talk And the recurring noises of his walk; —Somewhat too much like the o'er-charged assent
 Of two resolved friends in one danger blent,
 Who hearten each the other against
 heart—
 Boasting there's nought to care for, when, apart
 The boaster, all's to care for. He,
 beside
 Some shape not visible, in power and
 pride Approached, out of the dark, ginglyly
 near,
 Nearer, passed close in the broad light,
 his ear
 Crimson, eyeballs suffused, temples full-
 fraught,
 Just a snatch of the rapid speech you
 caught,
 And on he strode into the opposite dark Till presently the harsh heel's turn, a spark I' the stone, and whirl of some loose embossed thong
 That crashed against the angle aye so
 long After the last, punctual to an amount Of mailed great paces you could not but count,— Prepared you for the pacing back again.
 And by the snatches you might ascertain That, Friedrich's Prefecture surmounted, left
 By this alone in Italy, they cleft Asunder, crushed together, at command Of none, were free to break up Hildebrand, Rebuild, he and Sordello, Charlemagne—But garnished, Strength with Knowledge, 'if we deign Accept that compromise and stoop to give Rome law, the Cæsars' Representative.'
 —Enough, that the illimitable flood Of triumphs after triumphs, understood In its faint reflux (you shall hear) sufficed Young Ecelin for appanage, enticed Him on till, these long quiet in their graves,
 He found 'twas looked for that a whole life's braves Should somehow be made good—so, weak and worn,
 Must stagger up at Milan, one grey morn
 Of the To-Come, and fight his latest fight.
 But, Salinquer's prophecy at height—
 He voluble with a raised arm and stiff, A blaring voice, a blazing eye, as if He had our very Italy to keep Or cast away, or gather in a heap To garrison the better—ay, his word Was, 'run the cucumber into a gourd, Drive Trent upon Apulia'—at their pitch
 Who spied the continents and islands which Grew mulberry leaves and sickles, in the map—(Strange that three such confessions so should hap
 To Palma, Dante spoke with in the clear Amorous silence of the Swooning-
 sphere,— Cunizza, as he called her! Never ask Of Palma more! She sat, knowing her Was done, the labour of it—for, success, Concerned not Palma, passion's votaress) Triumph at height, and thus Sordello crowned—
 Above the passage suddenly a sound Stops speech, stops walk: back shrinks Taurello, bids
 With large involuntary asking lids, Palma interpret. 'Tis his own foot-stamp—
 Your hand! His summons! Nay, this idle damp

Befits not ! ' Out they two reeled dizzily.
'Visconti's strong at Milan,' resumed he,
In the old, somewhat insignificant way—(Was Palma wont, years afterward, to
say)

As though the spirit's flight, sustained thus far,

Dropped at that very instant. Gone
they are—

Palma, Taurello ; Eglamor anon, Ecelin,—only Naddo's never gone !

—Labours, this moonrise, what the Master meant

'Is Squarcialupo speckled ?—purulent, I'd say, but when was Providence put
out ?

He carries somehow handily about His spite nor fouls himself ! ' Goito's vines

Stand like a cheat detected—stark rough lines,

The moon breaks through, a grey mean scale against

The vault where, this eve's Maiden, thou remain'st

Like some fresh martyr, eyes fixed—who can tell ?

As Heaven, now all's at end, did not so
well,

Spite of the faith and victory, to leave Its virgin quite to death in the lone eve.

While the persisting hermit-bee . . . ha !
wait

No longer—these in compass, forward
fate !

BOOK THE SIXTH

THE thought of Eglamor's least like a
thought,

And yet a false one, was, ' Man shrinks to nought

If matched with symbols of immensity—Must quail, forsooth, before a quiet
sky

Or sea, too little for their quietude : '

And, truly, somewhat in Sordello's mood Confirmed its speciousness, while eve slow sank

Down the near terrace to the farther
bank,

And only one spot left out of the night Glimmered upon the river opposite—

A breadth of watery heaven like a bay,
A sky-like space of water, ray for ray, And star for star, one richness where they mixed

As this and that wing of an angel, fixed, Tumultuary splendours folded in

To die. Nor turned he till Ferrara's din (Say, the monotonous speech from a man's lip

Who lets some first and eager purpose slip

In a new fancy's birth ; the speech keeps
on

Though elsewhere its informing soul be
gone)

—Aroused him,—surely offered succour.
Fate

Paused with this eve; ere she precipitate Herself,—put off strange after-thoughts
awhile,

That voice, those large hands, that portentous smile,—

What help to pierce the Future as the
Past,

Lay in the plaining city ?

And at last

The main discovery and prime concern,
All that just now imported him to learn, His truth, like yonder slow moon to complete

Heaven, rose again, and, naked at his feet,

Lighted his old life's every shift and
change,

Effort with counter-effort ; nor the range

Of each looked wrong except wherein it
checked,

Some other—which of these could he suspect,

Prying into them by the sudden blaze ?
The real way seemed made up of all the
ways—

Mood after mood of the one mind in him ;
Tokens of the existence, bright or dim,

Of a transcendent all-embracing sense Demanding only outward influence,

A soul, in Palma's phrase, above his
soul,

Power to uplift his power,—this moon's control,

Over the sea-depths,—and their mass had swept Onward from the beginning and still kept Its course : but years and years the sky
 above

Held none, and so, untasked of any love,
 His sensitiveness idled, now amorn, Alive now, and to sullenness or sport Given wholly up, disposed itself anew At every passing instigation, grew And dwindled at caprice, in foam-showers spilt,

Wedge-like insisting, quivered now a gilt Shield in the sunshine, now a blinding race

Of whitest ripples o'er the reef—found

For much display; not gathered up and,
 hurled

Right from its heart, encompassing the
 world.

So had Sordello been, by consequence, Without a function : others made pretence

To strength not half his own, yet had some core

Within, submitted to some moon, before Them still, superior still whate'er their force,—

Were able therefore to fulfil a course, Nor missed life's crown, authentic attribute.

To each who lives must be a certain fruit

Of having lived in his degree,—a stage, Earlier or later in men's pilgrimage,
 To stop at ; and to this the spirits tend Who, still discovering beauty without
 end,

Amass the scintillations, make one star —Something unlike them, self-sustained, afar,—

And meanwhile nurse the dream of being blest

By winning it to notice and invest Their souls with alien glory, some one day Whene'er the nucleus, gathering shape

Round to the perfect circle—soon or late, According as themselves are formed to
 wait ;

Whether mere human beauty will suffice
 —The yellow hair and the luxurious eyes,

Or human intellect seem best, or each Combine in some ideal form past reach On earth, or else some shade of these, some aim,

Some love, hate even, take their place,
 the same,
 And may be served—all this they do not lose,

Waiting for death to live, nor idly
 choose What must be Hell—a progress thus pursued

Through all existence, still above the food That's offered them, still towering
 beyond

The widened range, in virtue of their bond

Of sovereignty. Not that a Palma's
 Love,

A Salinguerra's Hate, would equal prove To swaying all Sordello : wherefore
 doubt,

That Love meet for such Strength, some moon without

Would match his sea ?—or fear, Good manifest,

Only the Best breaks faith ?—Ah, but the Best

Somehow eludes us ever, still might be
 And is not ! crave we gems ? no penury Of their material round us ! pliant
 earth,

The plastic flame—what balks the mage his birth

—Jacynth in balls, or lodestone by the block ?

Flinders enrich the strand, and veins the rock—

Nought more ! Ask creatures ? Life's i' the tempest, Thought

Clothes the keen hill-top, mid-day woods are fraught

With fervours : ah, these forms are well
 enough !

But we had hoped, encouraged by the stuff Profuse at Nature's pleasure, men
 beyond

These men ! and thus, perchance, are over-fond

In arguing, from Good the Best, from force

Divided—force combined, an ocean's
 course

From this our sea whose mere intestine pants Might seem at times sufficient to our wants.
 —External Power? If none be adequate And he stand forth ordained (a prouder
     fate)
 A law to his own sphere?—need to remove All incompleteness, for that law, that
     love?
 Nay, if all other laws be such, though veiled
 In mercy to each vision that had failed
 If unassisted by its want,—for lure, Embodied? Stronger vision could endure
 The unbodied want: no bauble for a
     truth!
 The People were himself; and, by the ruth
 At their condition, was he less impelled To alter the discrepancy beheld, Than if, from the sound Whole, a sickly
     Part
 Subtracted were transformed, decked out with art, Then palmed on him as alien woe—the Guelf
 To succour, proud that he forsook himself?
 No! All's himself; all service, therefore, rates
 Alike, nor serving one part, immolates
 The rest: but all in time! 'That lance
     of yours
 Makes havoc soon with Malek and his Moors,
 That buckler's lined with many a giant's beard
 Ere long, O champion, be the lance up-
     reared,
 The buckler wielded handsomely as
     now!
 But view your escort, bear in mind your vow, Count the pale tracts of sand to pass ere
     that,
 And, if you hope we struggle through the flat, Put lance and buckler by! Next half-month lacks Mere sturdy exercise of mace and axe To cleave this dismal brake of pricklypear Which bristling holds Cydippe by the
     hair, Lames barefoot Agathon: this felled, we'll try
 The picturesque achievements by and by—
 Next life!'

Ay, rally, mock, oh People,
     urge Your claims!—for thus he ventured, to
     the verge,
 Push a vain mummary which perchance distrust
 Of his fast-slipping resolution thrust Likewise: accordingly the Crowd—as
     yet
 He had unconsciously contrived forget I' the whole, to dwell o' the points . . .
     one might assuage
 The signal horrors easier than engage With a dim vulgar vast unobvious grief
 Not to be fancied off, nor gained relief In brilliant fits, cured by a happy quirk, But by dim vulgar vast unobvious work To correspond . . . this Crowd then, forth they stood.
 'And now content thy stronger vision,
     brood
 On thy bare want; uncovered, turf by turf,
 Study the corpse-face thro' the taint-worms' scurf!'

Down sank the People's then; uprose their Now.
 These sad ones render service to! And
     how Piteously little must that service prove —Had surely proved in any case! for,
     move
 Each other obstacle away, let youth Have been aware it had surprised a
     truth
 'Twere service to impart—can truth be seized,
 Settled forthwith, and, of the captive eased,
 Its captor find fresh prey, since this alit
 So happily, no gesture luring it,
 The earnest of a flock to follow? Vain, Most vain! a life's to spend ere this he chain,

To the poor crowd's complacence; ere
     the crowd
 Pronounce it captured, he describes a cloud
 Its kin of twice the plume—which he, in turn,
 If he shall live as many lives, may learn How to secure—not else. Then Mantua called Back to his mind how certain bards were thrall'd —Buds blasted, but of breath more like perfume Than Naddo's staring nosegay's carrion
     bloom:
 Some insane rose that burnt heart out in sweets,
 A spendthrift in the Spring, no Summer greets—
 Some Dularete, drunk with truths and
     wine,
 Grown bestial, dreaming how become divine.
 'Yet to surmount this obstacle, commence
 With the commencement, merits crowning! Hence Must truth be casual truth, elicited In sparks so mean, at intervals dis-spread
 So rarely, that 'tis like at no one time Of the world's story has not truth, the prime
 Of truth, the very truth which, loosed, had hurled
 The world's course right, been really in
     the world
 —Content the while with some mean spark by dint
 Of some chance-blow, the solitary hint Of buried fire, which, rip its breast, would stream Sky-ward!'

Sordello's miserable gleam Was looked for at the moment: he would dash
 This badge, and all it brought, to earth, —abash Taurello thus, perhaps persuade him
     wrest
 The Kaiser from his purpose,—would attest
 His own belief, in any case. Before He dashes it, however, think once more!

For, were that little, truly service?
     ' Ay—
 I' the end, no doubt; but meantime?
     Plain you spy
 Its ultimate effect, but many flaws
 Of vision blur each intervening cause.
 Were the day's fraction clear as the life's sum
 Of service, Now as filled as the To-come With evidence of good—nor too minute A share to vie with evil! No dispute, 'Twere fittest maintain the Guelfs in
     rule:
 That makes your life's work: but you have to school Your day's work on these natures circumstanced Thus variously, which yet, as each advanced
 Or might impede the Guelf rule, must be moved Now, for the Then's sake,—hating what you loved,
 Loving old hatreds! nor if one man bore Brand upon temples while his fellow wore
 The aureole, would it task you to decide—But, portioned duly out, the Future vied Never with the unparcelled Present!
     Smite
 Or spare so much on warrant all so slight?
 The Present's complete sympathies to break,
 Aversions bear with, for a Future's sake So feeble? Tito ruined through one speck,
 The Legate saved by his sole lightish fleck?
 This were work, true—but work performed at cost Of other work—aught gained here, elsewhere lost.
 For a new segment spoil an orb half-done?
 Rise with the People one step, and sink
     —one?
 Were it but one step—less than the whole face
 Of things, your novel duty bids erase!
 Harms to abolish! what? the prophet
     saith,
 The minstrel singeth vainly then? Old
     faith,

Old courage, only born because of harms,
 Were not, from highest to the lowest, charms ?
 Flame may persist but is not glare as staunch ?
 Where the salt marshes stagnate, crystals branch—
 Blood driesto crimson—Evil's beautified In every shape. Thrust Beauty then
     aside
 And banish Evil ! wherefore ? After all,
 Is Evil a result less natural Than Good ? For, overlook the seasons'
     strife
 With tree and flower,—the hideous animal life, (Of which who seeks shall find a grinning taunt
 For his solution, and endure the vaunt Of nature's angel, as a child that knows Himself befooled, unable to propose Aught better than the fooling)—and but care
 For Men, for the mere People then and
     there,—
 In these, could you but see that Good and Ill Claimed you alike ! Whence rose their claim but still From Ill, as fruit of Ill—what else could knit You theirs but Sorrow ? Any free from
     it
 Were also free from you ! Whose happiness
 Could be distinguished in this morning's press
 Of miseries ?—the fool's who passed a gibe
 "On thee," jeered he, "so wedded to thy tribe,
 Thou carriest green and yellow tokens in Thy very face that thou art Ghibel-lin !"—
 Much hold on you that fool obtained !
     Nay mount Yet higher—and upon men's own
     account Must Evil stay: for, what is Joy ?—to heave Up one obstruction more, and common
     leave

What was peculiar—by such act destroy Itself ; a partial death is every joy ;
 The sensible escape, enfranchisement Of a sphere's essence : once the vexed—
     content,
 The cramped—at large, the growing circle—round,
 All 's to begin again—some novel bound To break, some new enlargement to entreat,
 The sphere though larger is not more complete.
 Now for Mankind's experience : who,
     alone Might style the unobstructed world his-
     own ?
 Whom palled Goito with its perfect
     things ?
 Sordello's self ! whereas for mankind's springs
 Salvation by each hindrance interposed ; They climb, life's view is not at once disclosed To creatures caught up, on its summit
     left,
 Heaven plain above them, yet of wings bereft—
 But lower laid, as at the mountain's foot, While, range on range, the girdling forests shoot
 'Twixt your plain prospect and the throngs who scale Height after height, and pierce mists, veil by veil, Heartened with each discovery ; in their
     soul,
 The Whole they seek by Parts—but, found that Whole,
 Could they revert, enjoy past gains ?
     The space
 Of time you judge so meagre to embrace The Parts, were more than plenty, once attained
 The Whole, to quite exhaust it : nought were gained
 But leave to look—not leave to do :
     Beneath
 Soon sates the looker—look Above, and
     Death
 Tempts ere a tithe of Life be tasted.
     Live
 First, and die soon enough, Sordello !
     Give

Body and spirit the first right they
     claim,
 And pasture thee on a voluptuous
     shame
 That thou, a pageant-city's denizen, Art neither vilely lodged midst Lombard
     men—Canst force joy out of sorrow, seem to truck
 Thine attributes away for sordid muck, Yet manage from that very muck educe Gold; then subject, nor scruple, to thy cruce
 The world's discardings! Though real ingots pay Thy pains, the clods that yielded them are clay
 To all save thee,—would clay remain, though quenched
 Thy purging-fire; who's robbed then?
     Had you wrenched An ampler treasure forth!—As 'tis, they crave
 A share that ruins you and will not save Them. Why should sympathy command you quit
 The course that makes your joy, nor will remit
 Their woe? Would all arrive at joy?
     Reverse
 The order (time instructs you) nor coerce Each unit till, some predetermined mode,
 The total be emancipate; men's road Is one, men's times of travel many;
     thwart
 No enterprising soul's precocious start Before the general march! if slow or
     fast
 All straggle up to the same point at last, Why grudge your having gained, a month ago,
 The brakes at balm-shed, asphodels in blow, While they were landlocked? Speed their Then, but how This badge would suffer you improve your Now!
 His time of action for, against, or with Our world (I labour to extract the pith Of this his problem) grew, that even-tide, Gigantic with its power of joy, beside The world's eternity of impotence To profit though at his whole joy's expense.
 'Make nothing of my day because so brief?
 Rather make more—instead of joy, use grief
 Before its novelty have time subside!
 Wait not for the late savour—leave untried Virtue, the creaming honey-wine, quick squeeze
 Vice like a biting spirit from the lees
 Of life!—together let wrath, hatred, lust,
 All tyrannies in every shape, be thrust Upon this Now, which time may reason
     out
 As mischiefs, far from benefits, no
     doubt—
 But long ere then Sordello will have slept Away—you teach him at Goito's crypt, There's a blank issue to that fiery thrill!
 Stirring, the few cope with the many,
     still:
 So much of sand as, quiet, makes a mass
 Unable to produce three tufts of grass, Shall, troubled by the whirlwind, render void
 The whole calm glebe's endeavour: be employed!
 And e'en though somewhat smart the Crowd for this, Contribute each his pang to make your
     bliss,
 'Tis but one pang—one blood-drop to the bowl Which brimful tempts the sluggish asp uncowl
 At last, stains ruddily the dull red cape, And, kindling orbs grey as the unripe grape Before, avails forthwith to disentrance The portent—soon to lead a mystic dance Among you! For, who sits alone in Rome?
 Have those great hands indeed hewn out a home,
 And set me there to live? Oh life, life-
     breath,
 Life-blood,—ere sleep, come travail, life ere death!

This life stream on my soul, direct, oblique, But always streaming! Hindrances? They pique—Helps? such . . . but why repeat, my soul o'ertops Each height, than every depth profoundlier drops?
 Enough that I can live, and would live! Wait For some transcendent life reserved by Fate To follow this? Oh, never! Fate, I trust
 The same, my soul to; for, as who flings dust, Perchance—so facile was the deed, she chequed The void with these materials to affect My soul diversely—these consigned anew To nought by death, what marvel if she threw A second and superber spectacle Before it? What may serve for sun—what still Wander a moon above me—what else wind
 About me like the pleasures left behind,
 And how shall some new flesh that is not flesh Cling to me? what's new laughter—soothes the fresh Sleep like sleep? Fate's exhaustless for my sake In brave resource, but whether bids she slake
 My thirst at this first rivulet, or count
 No draught worth lip save from the rocky fount Above i' the clouds, while here she's provident Of pure loquacious pearl, the soft tree-tent Guards, with its face of reate and sedge, nor fail
 The silver globules and gold-sparkling grail At bottom. Oh, 'twere too absurd to slight For the hereafter the to-day's delight!
 Quench thirst at this, then seek next well-spring—wear Home-lilies ere strange lotus in my hair!

Here is the Crowd, whom I with freest heart Offer to serve, contented for my part To give life up in service,—only grant That I do serve; if otherwise, why want Aught further of me? If men cannot choose But set aside life, why should I refuse The gift? I take it—I, for one, engage Never to falter through my pilgrimage—Nor end it howling that the stock or stone Were enviable, truly: I, for one,
 Will praise the world, you style mere anteroom To the palace—be it so! shall I assume —My foot the courtly gait, my tongue the trope, My mouth the smirk, before the doors fly ope
 One moment? What—with guarders row on row, Gay swarms of varletry that come and go, Pages to dice with, waiting-girls unlace
 The plackets of, pert claimants help displace, Heart-heavy suitors get a rank for,—laugh At yon sleek parasite, break his own staff
 'Cross Beetle-brows the Usher's shoulder,—why, Admitted to the presence by and by,
 Should thought of having lost these make me grieve Among new joys I reach, for joys I leave?
 —Cool citrine-crystals, fierce pyropus-stone, Are floor-work here!—But did I let alone That black-eyed peasant in the vestibule Once and for ever?—Floor-work? No such fool!
 Rather, were heaven to forestall earth, I'd say I, is it, must be blessed? Then, my own way Bless me! give firmer arm and fleetier foot, I'll thank you: but to no mad wings transmute

These limbs of mine—our greensward was so soft !
 Nor camp I on the thunder-cloud aloft :
 We feel the bliss distinctlier, having
     thus Engines subservient, not mixed up with
     us.
 Better move palpably through heaven—nor, freed
 Of flesh, forsooth, from space to space
     proceed
 'Mid flying synods of worlds ! No ! In heaven's marge Show Titan still, recumbent o'er his Solid with stars—the Centaur at his game,
 Made tremulously out in hoary flame !
     Life ! Yet the very cup whose extreme dull
 Dregs, even, I would quaff, was dashed, at full,
 Aside so oft ; the death I fly, revealed
 So oft a better life this life concealed,
 And which sage, champion, martyr, through each path Have hunted fearlessly—the horrid bath,
 The crippling-irons and the fiery chair.
 —'Twas well for them ; let me become aware
 As they, and I relinquish life, too ! Let What masters life disclose itself ! Forget Vain ordinances, I have one appeal—I feel, am what I feel, know what I feel —So much is truth to me. What Is, then ? Since One object, viewed diversely, may evinee Beauty and ugliness—this way attract, That way repel, why gloze upon the fact ?
 Why must a single of the sides be right ?
 What bids choose this and leave the opposite ?
 Where's abstract Right for me ?—in youth ended With Right still present, still to be pursued,
 Thro' all the interchange of circles, rife Each with its proper law and mode of
     life, Each to be dwelt at ease in : where, to sway
 Absolute with the Kaiser, or obey Implicit with his serf of fluttering heart, Or, like a sudden thought of God's, to start
 Up, Brutus in the presence, then go shout That some should pick the unstrung jewels out—Each, well !
     And, as in moments when the
     Past
 Gave partially enfranchisement, he cast Himself quite through mere secondary states
 Of his soul's essence, little loves and hates,
 Into the mid deep yearnings overlaid By these ; as who should pierce hill, plain, grove, glade,
 And on into the very nucleus probe That first determined there exist a globe.
 As that were easiest, half the globe dissolved,
 So seemed Sordello's closing-truth evolved
 By his flesh-half's break up—the sudden swell
 Of his expanding soul showed Ill and
     Well,
 Sorrow and Joy, Beauty and Ugliness, Virtue and Vice, the Larger and the Less,
 All qualities, in fine, recorded here, Might be but modes of Time and this one sphere, Urgent on these, but not of force to bind
 Eternity, as Time—as Matter—Mind, If Mind, Eternity, should choose assert Their attributes within a Life : thus girt
 With circumstance, next change beholds them cinct Quite otherwise—with Good and Ill
     distinct,
 Joys, sorrows, tending to a like result—Contrived to render easy, difficult, This or the other course of . . . what new bond
 In place of flesh may stop their flight
     beyond

Its new sphere, as that course does harm or good
 To its arrangements. Once this understood, As suddenly he felt himself alone, Quite out of Time and this world: all was known.
 What made the secret of his past despair?
 —Most imminent when he seemed most aware
 Of his own self-sufficiency; made mad By craving to expand the power he had,
 And not new power to be expanded?—
     just
 This made it; Soul on Matter being thrust,
 Joy comes when so much Soul is wrecked
     in Time
 On Matter,—let the Soul's attempt sublime Matter beyond the scheme and so prevent
 By more or less that deed's accomplishment, And Sorrow follows: Sorrow how avoid?
 Let the employer match the thing employed, Fit to the finite his infinity,
 And thus proceed for ever, in degree Changed but in kind the same, still limited
 To the appointed circumstance and dead To all beyond. A sphere is but a sphere—
 Small, Great, are merely terms we bandy here—
 Since to the spirit's absoluteness all Are like: now, of the present sphere we
     call Life, are conditions—take but this among Many; the body was to be so long Youthful, no longer—but, since no control
 Tied to that body's purposes his soul, She chose to understand the body's trade
 More than the body's self—had fain conveyed Her boundless, to the body's bounded lot:
 Hence, the soul permanent, the body
     not,—

Scarce the one minute for enjoying
     here,
 The soul must needs instruct her weak
     compeer,
 Run o'er its capabilities and wring
 A joy thence, she held worth experiencing—Which, far from half discovered even,— lo,
 The minute gone, the body's power let go That's portioned to that joy's acquirement!
     Broke
 Morning o'er earth, he yearned for all it woke—
 From the volcano's vapour-flag, winds hoist Black o'er the spread of sea,—down to the moist Dale's silken barley-spikes sullied with rain, Swayed earthwards, heavily to rise
     again—
 (The Small, a sphere as perfect as the Great
 To the soul's absoluteness)—meditate Too long on such a morning's cluster-chord
 And the whole music it was framed afford,— The chord's might half discovered, what should pluck
 One string, his finger, was found palsystruck.
 And then no marvel if the spirit, shown A saddest sight—the body lost alone Through her officious proffered help, deprived Of this and that enjoyment Fate contrived,
 Virtue, Good, Beauty, each allowed slip
     hence,— Vain-gloriously were fain, for recompense,
 To stem the ruin even yet, protract The body's term, supply the power it lacked
 From her infinity, compel it learn These qualities were only Time's concern,
 And body may, with spirit helping, barred—Advance the same, vanquished—obtain
     reward,

Reap joy where sorrow was intended grow,
 Of Wrong make Right, and turn Ill
     Good below.
 And the result is, the poor body soon Sinks under what was meant a wondrous boon, Leaving its bright accomplice all
     So much was plain then, proper in the
     Past ;
 To be complete for, satisfy the whole Series of spheres—Eternity, his soul Exceeded, so was incomplete for, each Single sphere—Time. But does our knowledge reach No farther ? Is the cloud of hindrance broke
 But by the failing of the fleshly yoke, Its loves and hates, as now when death lets soar Sordello, self-sufficient as before, Though during the mere space that shall elapse
 'Twixt his enthrallment in new bonds,
     perhaps ?
 Must life be ever just escaped, which should Have been enjoyed ?—nay, might have been and would,
 Each purpose ordered right—the soul's
     no whit
 Beyond the body's purpose under it—Like yonder breadth of watery heaven, a bay,
 And that sky-space of water, ray for ray And star for star, one richness where they mixed
 As this and that wing of an angel, fixed,
 Tumultuary splendours folded in
 To die—would soul, proportioned thus,
     begin Exciting discontent, or surelier quell
 The body if, aspiring, it rebel ?
 But how so order life ? Still brutalize The soul, the sad world's way, with muffled eyes
 To all that was before, all that shall be After this sphere—and every quality Save some sole and immutable Great and
     Good
 And Beateous whither fate has loosed its hood
 To follow ? Never may some soul see All —The Great Before and After, and the Small
 Now, yet be saved by this the simplest lore,
 And take the single course prescribed
     before,
 As the king-bird with ages on his plumes
 Travels to die in his ancestral glooms ?
 But where descry the Love that shall select That course ? Here is a soul whom, to affect,
 Nature has plied with all her means—from trees
 And flowers—e'en to the Multitude !— and these,
 Decides he save or no ? One word to
     end !
     Ah my Sordello, I this once befriended And speak for you. Of a Power above you still Which, utterly incomprehensible, Is out of rivalry, which thus you can Love, tho' unloving all conceived by
     man—
 What need ! And of—none the minutest duct
 To that out-nature, nought that would instruct
 And so let rivalry begin to live—
 But of a Power its representative Who, being for authority the same, Communication different, should claim A course, the first chose and this last revealed—This Human clear, as that Divine concealed—
 What utter need !
     What has Sordello found ?
 Or can his spirit go the mighty round, End where poor Eglamor begun ? as Old fable, the two eagles went two ways About the world : where, in the midst, they met,
 Though on a shifting waste of sand, men
     set Jove's temple. Quick, what has Sor-dello found ?
 For they approach—approach—that foot's rebound . . .

Palma? No, Salinguerra though in mail;      With foe and friend for an outstripping They mount, have reached the thresh-      soul, hold, dash the veil      Nine days at least. Then,—fairly Aside—and you divine who sat there      reached the goal,— dead,      He, by one effort, blotted the great hope Under his foot the badge: still, Palma      Out of his mind, nor further tried to said,      cope
 A triumph lingering in the wide eyes,      With Este, that mad evening's style, but Wider than some spent swimmer's if he      sent spies      Away the Legate and the League, con-Help from above in his extreme despair,      tent And, head far back on shoulder thrust,      No blame at least the brothers had in-turns there      curred, With short, quick, passionate cry: as      —Despatched a message to the Monk, Palma prest      he heard In one great kiss her lips upon his breast      Patiently first to last, scarce shivered at,
 It beat. By this, the hermit-bee has      Then curled his limbs up on his wolfskin stopped      mat
 His day's toil at Goito: the new-cropped      And ne'er spoke more,—informed the Dead vine-leaf answers, now 'tis eve, he      Ferrarese bit,      He but retained their rules so long as these Twirled so, and filed all day: the      Lingered in pupilage,—and last, no mode mansion's fit,      Apparent else of keeping safe the road God counselled for. As easy guess the      From Germany direct to Lombardy word      For Friedrich,—none, that is, to guarantee That passed betwixt them and become      The faith and promptitude of who the third      should next To the soft small unfrighted bee, as tax      Obtain Sofia's dowry,—sore perplexed—Him with one fault—so, no remem-      (Sofia being youngest of the tribe brance racks      Of daughters, Ecelin was wont to bribe Of the stone maidens and the font of      The envious magnates with—nor, since stone      he sent He, creeping through the crevice, leaves      Henry of Egna this fair child, had Trent alone.      Once failed the Kaiser's purposes—' we Alas, my friend—alas Sordello, whom      lost Anon they laid within that old font-      Egna last year, and who takes Egna's tomb—      post—
 And, yet again, alas!      Opens the Lombard gate if Friedrich And now is 't worth      knock?') Our while bring back to mind, much less      Himself espoused the Lady of the Rock set forth      In pure necessity, and so destroyed How Salinguerra extricates himself      His slender last of chances, quite made Without Sordello? Ghibellin and Guelf      void May fight their fiercest out? If Richard      Old prophecy, and spite of all the sulked      schemes
 In durance or the Marquis paid his mulct,      Overt and covert, youth's deeds, age's Who cares, Sordello gone? The upshot,      dreams, sure,      Was sucked into Romano. And so Was peace; our chief made some frank      hushed overture      He up this evening's work that, when That prospered; compliment fell thick      'twas brushed and fast      Somehow against by a blind chronicle On its disposer, and Taurello passed      Which, chronicling whatever woe befell

Ferrara, noted this the obscure woe Of 'Salinguerra's sole son Giacomo Deceased, fatuous and doting, ere his
sire,

The townsfolk rubbed their eyes, could but admire

Which of Sofia's five was meant.

The chaps Of earth's dead hope were tardy to collapse,

Obliterated not the beautiful Distinctive features at a crash—but dull And duller, next year, as Gueif chiefs withdrew

Each to his stronghold. Then (securely
too

Ecelin at Campese slept—close by,
Who likes may see him in Solagna lie With cushioned head and gloved hand to denote

The cavalier he was)—then his heart smote

Young Ecelin at last!—long since adult, And, save Vicenza's business, what result

In blood and blaze? ('twas hard to intercept

Sordello till his plain withdrawal.) Stept, Then, its new lord on Lombardy. 'I the nick

Of time when Ecelin and Alberic Closed with Taurello, come precisely news That in Verona half the souls refuse Allegiance to the Marquis and the Count—Have cast them from a throne they bid him mount,

Their Podestà, thro' his ancestral worth.
Ecelin flew there, and the town hence-
forth

Was wholly his—Taurello sinking back From temporary station to a track That suited. News received of this acquist,

Friedrich did come to Lombardy: who missed

Taurello then? Another year: they took Vicenza, left the Marquis scarce a nook For refuge, and, when hundreds two or three

Of Gueifs conspired to call themselves
'the Free,'

Opposing Alberic,—vile Bassanese,— (Without Sordello!)—Ecelin at ease

Slaughtered them so observably, that oft

A little Salinguerra looked with soft Blue eyes up, asked his sire the proper
age

To get appointed his proud uncle's page.
More years passed, and that sire had dwindled down

To a mere showy turbulent soldier,
grown

Better through age, his parts still in repute,

Subtle—how else?—but hardly so astute

As his contemporaneous friends pro-

Undoubtedly a brawler: for the rest, Known by each neighbour, and allowed for, let

Keep his incorrigible ways, nor fret Men who had missed their boyhood's bugbear—'trap

The ostrich, suffer our bald osprey flap A battered pinion—'was the word. In
fine,

One flap too much and Venice's marine Was meddled with; no overlooking
that!

She captured him in his Ferrara, fat And florid at a banquet, more by fraud Than force, to speak the truth; there's slender laud

Ascribed you for assisting eighty years To pull his death on such a man—fate
shears

The life-cord prompt enough whose last fine threads

You fritter: so, presiding his board-
head,

The old smile, your assurance all went
well

With Friedrich (as if he were like to tell!) In rushed (a plan contrived before) our
friends,

Made some pretence at fighting, some amends

For the shame done his eighty years—(apart

The principle, none found it in his heart To be much angry with Taurello)—
gained

Their galleys with the prize, and what remained

But carry him to Venice for a show?
—Set him, as 'twere, down gently—free
to go

His gait, inspect our square, pretend observe

The swallows soaring their eternal curve
'Twixt Theodore and Mark, if citizens Gathered importunately, fives and tens,
To point their children the Magnifico,
All but a monarch once in firm-land, go His gait among them now—'it took,
indeed,

Fully this Ecelin to supersede That man,' remarked the seniors.
Singular!

Sordello's inability to bar

Rivals the stage, that evening, mainly brought

About by his strange disbelief that aught

Was ever to be done,—this thrust the Twain

Under Taurello's tutelage,—whom,
brain

And heart and hand, he forthwith in one rod

Indissolubly bound to baffle God Who loves the world—and thus allowed the thin

Grey wizened dwarfish devil Ecelin,
And massy-muscl'd big-boned Alberic (Mere man, alas!) to put his problem quick

To demonstration—prove wherever's
will

To do, there's plenty to be done, or ill Or good. Anointed, then, to rend and rip—

Kings of the gag and flesh-hook, screw and whip,

They plagued the world: a touch of Hildebrand

(So far from obsolete!) made Lombards
band

Together, cross their coats as for Christ's
cause,

And saving Milan win the world's applause.

Ecelin perished: and I think grass
grew

Never so pleasant as in Valley Rù By San Zenon: where Alberic in turn Saw his exasperated captors burn

Seven children and their mother; then, regaled

So far, tied on to a wild horse, was trailed

To death through raunce and bramblebush. I take

God's part and testify that mid the brake

Wild o'er his castle on the pleasant knoll,

You hear its one tower left, a belfry,
toll—

The earthquake spared it last year, laying flat

The modern church beneath,—no harm in that!

Cherups the contumacious grasshopper, Rustles the lizard and the cushats chirre

Above the ravage: there, at deep of day
A week since, heard I the old Canon say

He saw with his own eyes a barrow burst And Alberic's huge skeleton unheard

Only five years ago. He added, 'June's The month for carding off our first cocoons

The silkworms fabricate'—a double

news,
Nor he nor I could tell the worthier.

Choose!
And Naddo gone, all's gone; not Eglamor!

Believe, I knew the face I waited for,
A guest my spirit of the golden courts!

Oh strange to see how, despite ill-reports, Disuse, some wear of years, that face retained Its joyous look of love! Suns waxed and waned,

And still my spirit held an upward flight.

Spiral on spiral, gyres of life and light More and more gorgeous—ever that face

there
The last admitted! crossed, too, with some care

As perfect triumph were not sure for all,
But, on a few, enduring damp must fall,

—A transient struggle, haply a painful
sense

Of the inferior nature's soling—whence Slight starting tears easily wiped away,

Fine jealousies soon stifled in the play Of irrepressible admiration—not

Aspiring, all considered, to their lot

Who ever, just as they prepare ascend Spiral on spiral, wish thee well, impend Thy frank delight at their exclusive track,

That upturned fervid face and hair put
back!

Is there no more to say? He of the rhymes—

Many a tale, of this retreat betimes, Was born: Sordello die at once for men?
The Chroniclers of Mantua tired their pen Telling how Sordello Prince Visconti
saved

Mantua, and elsewhere notably behaved—

Who thus, by fortune's ordering events,
Passed with posterity, to all intents,
For just the god he never could become.
As Knight, Bard, Gallant, men were never dumb

In praise of him: while what he should have been,

Could be, and was not—the one step too
mean

For him to take,—we suffer at this day Because of: Ecclin had pushed away Its chance ere Dante could arrive and
take

That step Sordello spurned, for the world's sake:

He did much—but Sordello's chance was
gone.

Thus, had Sordello dared that step alone, Apollo had been compassed—'twas a fit He wished should go to him, not he to it —As one content to merely be supposed Singing or fighting elsewhere, while he dozed

Really at home—one who was chiefly
glad

To have achieved the few real deeds he had,

Because that way assured they were not worth

Doing, so spared from doing them henceforth—

A tree that covets fruitage and yet tastes

Never itself, itself: had he embraced Their cause then, men had plucked Hesperian fruit

And, praising that, just thrown him in to boot

All he was anxious to appear, but scarce Solicitous to be. A sorry farce Such life is, after all! cannot I say He lived for some one better thing? this
way.—

Lo, on a heathy brown and nameless hill
By sparkling Asolo, in mist and chill, Morning just up, higher and higher runs A child barefoot and rosy. See! the sun's

On the square castle's inner-court's low
wall

Like the chine of some extinct animal Half turned to earth and flowers; and through the haze

(Save where some slender patches of grey maize

Are to be overleaped) that boy has crost
The whole hill-side of dew and powder-frost

Matting the balm and mountain camomile.

Up and up goes he, singing all the while Some unintelligible words to beat

Thelark, God's poet, swooning at his feet, So worsted is he at 'the few fine locks Stained like pale honey oozed from topmost rocks

Sunblanched the livelong summer,—all that's left

Of the Goito lay! And thus bereft, Sleep and forget, Sordello! In effect

He sleeps, the feverish poet—I suspect Not utterly companionless; but,
friends,

Wake up; the ghost's gone, and the story ends

I'd fain hope, sweetly—seeing, peri or ghoul,

That spirits are conjectured fair or foul, Evil or good, judicious authors think,

According as they vanish in a stink Or in a perfume. Friends, be frank!

ye snuff

Civet, I warrant. Really? Like enough!
Merely the savour's rareness; any nose

May ravage with impunity a rose: Rife a musk-pod and 'twill ache like
yours!

I'd tell you that same pungency ensures An after-gust—but that were overbold.
Who would has heard Sordello's story
told.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE

1864

JAMES LEE

I

JAMES LEE'S WIFE SPEAKS AT THE WINDOW

AH, love, but a day,
 And the world has changed !
 The sun's away,
 And the bird's estranged ;
 The wind has dropped,
 And the sky's deranged :
 Summer has stopped.

II

Look in my eyes !
 Wilt thou change too ?
 Should I fear surprise ?
 Shall I find aught new In the old and dear,
 In the good and true,
 With the changing year ?

III

Thou art a man,
 But I am thy love !
 For the lake, its swan ;
 For the dell, its dove ;
 And for thee—(oh, haste !)
 Me, to bend above,
 Me, to hold embraced !

II

BY THE FIRESIDE

I

Is all our fire of shipwreck wood, Oak and pine ?
 Oh, for the ills half-understood,
 The dim, dead woe
 Long ago
 Befallen this bitter coast of France !
 Well, poor sailors took their chance ;
 I take mine.

II

A ruddy shaft our fire must shoot O'er the sea :
 Do sailors eye the casement—mute, Drenched and stark,
 From their bark—
 And envy, gnash their teeth for hate O' the warm safe house and happy freight —Thee and me ?

III

God help you, sailors, at your need !
 Spare the curse !
 For some ships, safe in port indeed, Rot and rust,
 Run to dust,
 All through worms i' the wood, which crept, Gnawed our hearts out while we slept :
 That is worse !

IV

Who lived here before us two ?
 Old-world pairs !
 Did a woman ever—would I knew !— Watch the man
 With whom began Love's voyage full-sail,—(now, gnash your teeth !)
 When planks start, open hell beneath Unawares ?

III

IN THE DOORWAY

I

The swallow has set her six young on the rail,
 And looks sea-ward :
 The water's in stripes like a snake, olive-pale
 To the leeward,— On the weather-side, black, spotted white with the wind :

' Good fortune departs, and disaster's behind,'— Hark, the wind with its wants and its infinite wail!

II

Our fig-tree, that leaned for the salt-ness, has furl'd
Her five fingers, Each leaf like a hand opened wide to
the world
Where there lingers No glint of the gold, Summer sent for
her sake:
How the vines writhe in rows, each impaled on its stake!
My heart shrivels up, and my spirit shrinks curled.

III

Yet here are we two; we have love, house enough,
With the field there, This house of four rooms, that field red and rough,
Though it yield there,
For the rabbit that robs, scarce a blade or a bent;
If a magpie alight now, it seems an event;
And they both will be gone at November's rebuff.

IV

But why must cold spread? but wherefore bring change
To the spirit, God meant should mate His with an infinite range,
And inherit
His power to put life in the darkness and cold?
Oh, live and love worthily, bear and be bold!
Whom Summer made friends of, let Winter estrange!

IV

ALONG THE BEACH

I

I will be quiet and talk with you,
And reason why you are wrong:

You wanted my love—is that much
true?
And so I did love, so I do:
What has come of it all along?

II

I took you—how could I otherwise?
For a world to me, and more;
For all, love greatens and glorifies Till God's a-glow, to the loving eyes, In what was mere earth before.

III

Yes, earth—yes, mere ignoble earth!
Now do I mis-state, mistake?
Do I wrong your weakness and call it
worth?
Expect all harvest, dread no dearth, Seal my sense up for your sake?

IV

Oh, love, love, no, love! not so, indeed!
You were just weak earth, I knew:
With much in you waste, with many a weed,
And plenty of passions run to seed,
But a little good grain too.

V

And such as you were, I took you for
mine:
Did not you find me yours,
To watch the olive and wait the vine,
And wonder when rivers of oil and wine Would flow, as the Book assures?

VI

Well, and if none of these good things
came,
What did the failure prove?
The man was my whole world, all the
same,
With his flowers to praise, or his weeds to blame,
And, either or both, to love.

VII

Yet this turns now to a fault—there!
there!
• That I do love, watch too long,
And wait too well, and weary and wear;
And 'tis all an old story, and my despair Fit subject for some new song:

VIII

How the light, light love, he has wings
to fly

At suspicion of a bond: How my wisdom has bidden your pleasure good-bye, Which will turn up next in a laughing
eye,
And why should you look beyond?

V

ON THE CLIFF

I
I leaned on the turf,
I looked at a rock
Left dry by the surf;
For the turf, to call it grass were to mock:
Dead to the roots, so deep was done
The work of the summer sun.

II

And the rock lay flat
As an anvil's face:
No iron like that!
Baked dry; of a weed, of a shell, no
trace:
Sunshine outside, but ice at the core,
Death's altar by the lone shore.

III

On the turf, sprang gay
With his films of blue,
No cricket, I'll say,
But a warhorse, barded and chanfroned
too,
The gift of a quixote-mage to his knight,
Real fairy, with wings all right.

IV

On the rock, they scorch Like a drop of fire
From a brandished torch, Fell two red fans of a butterfly:
No turf, no rock, in their ugly stead,
See, wonderful blue and red!

V

Is it not so
With the minds of men?
The level and low,

The burnt and bare, in themselves;
but then
With such a blue and red grace, not theirs,
Love settling unawares!

VI

READING A BOOK, UNDER THE CLIFF

I

'Still ailing, Wind? Wilt be appeased
or no?
Which needs the other's office, thou or I?
Dost want to be disburthened of a woe,
And can, in truth, my voice untie Its links, and let it go?

II

'Art thou a dumb, wronged thing that would be righted, Entrusting thus thy cause to me?
Forbear.

No tongue can mend such pleadings;
faith, requited
With falsehood,—love, at last aware Of scorn,—hopes, early blighted,—

III

'We have them; but I know not any tone
So fit as thine to falter forth a sorrow: Dost think men would go mad without a moan,
If they knew any way to borrow A pathos like thy own?

IV

'Which sigh wouldst mock, of all the sighs? The one So long escaping from lips starved
and blue,
That lasts while on her pallet-bed the nun Stretches her length; her foot comes
through
The straw she shivers on;

V

'You had not thought she was so tall:
and spent,
Her shrunk lids open, her lean fingers
shut

Close, close, their sharp and livid nails * indent

The clammy palm; then all is mute:
That way, the spirit went.

VI

'Or wouldst thou rather that I understand

Thy will to help me?—like the dog
I found

Once, pacing sad this solitary strand, Who would not take my food, poor hound,

But whined and licked my hand.'

VII

All this, and more, comes from some young man's pride

Of power to see,—in failure and mistake,

Relinquishment, disgrace, on every
side,—

Merely examples for his sake, Helps to his path untried:

VIII

Instances he must—simply recognize?

Oh, more than so!—must, with a learner's zeal,

Make doubly prominent, twice emphasize,

By added touches that reveal The god in babe's disguise.

IX

Oh, he knows what defeat means, and
the rest!

Himself the undefeated that shall be:
Failure, disgrace, he flings them you to test,—

His triumph, in eternity Too plainly manifest!

X

Whence, judge if he learn forthwith what the wind

Means in its moaning—by the happy,
prompt,

Instinctive way of youth, I mean; for
kind

Calm years, exacting their accompt Of pain, mature the mind:

XI

And some midsummer morning, at the lull

Just about daybreak, as he looks across

A sparkling foreign country, wonderful To the sea's edge for gloom and gloss,

Next minute must annul,—

XII

Then, when the wind begins among the vines,

So low, so low, what shall it mean but this?

'Here is the change beginning, here the lines

Circumscribe beauty, set to bliss
The limit time assigns'.

XIII

Nothing can be as it has been before;
Better, so call it, only not the same.

To draw one beauty into our hearts'
core,

And keep it changeless! such our
claim;

So answered,—Never more!

XIV

Simple? Why this is the old woe o' the world;

Tune, to whose rise and fall we live
and die.

Rise with it, then! Rejoice that man is hurled

From change to change unceasingly.
His soul's wings never furled!

XV

That's a new question; still replies the
fact,

Nothing endures: the wind moans, saying so;

We moan in acquiescence: there's life's pact,

Perhaps probation—do I know?
God does: endure His act!

XVI

Only, for man, how bitter not to grave
On his soul's hands' palms one fair, good, wise thing

Just as he grasped it! For himself, death's wave;
 While time first washes—ah, the sting!—
 O'er all he'd sink to save.

VII

AMONG THE ROCKS

I

Oh, good gigantic smile o' the brown old earth, This autumn morning! How he sets his bones
 To bask i' the sun, and thrusts out knees and feet
 For the ripple to run over in its mirth; Listening the while, where on the heap of stones
 The white breast of the sea-lark twitters
 sweet.

That is the doctrine, simple, ancient,
 true;
 Such is life's trial, as old earth smiles and knows.
 If you loved only what were worth your
 love,
 Love were clear gain, and wholly well for you:
 Make the low nature better by your throes!
 Give earth yourself, go up for gain
 above!

BESIDE THE DRAWING-BOARD

'As like as a Hand to another Hand:'
 Whoever said that foolish thing, Could not have studied to understand The counsels of God in fashioning, Out of the infinite love of His heart,
 This Hand, whose beauty I praise, apart From the world of wonder left to praise,
 If I tried to learn the other ways Of love, in its skill, or love, in its power.
 'As like as a Hand to another Hand:'

Who said that, never took his stand, Found and followed, like me, an hour,
 The beauty in this,—how free, how fine
 To fear, almost,—of the limit-line!
 As I looked at this, and learned and drew,
 Drew and learned, and looked again, While fast the happy minutes flew,
 Its beauty mounted into my brain,
 And a fancy seized me; I was fain To efface my work, begin anew, Kiss what before I only drew;
 Ay, laying the red chalk 'twixt my lips,
 With soul to help if the mere lips failed, I kissed all right where the drawing ailed,

Kissed fast the grace that somehow slips Still from one's soulless finger-tips

Go, little girl, with the poor coarse
 hand!
 I have my lesson, shall understand.

IX

ON DECK

There is nothing to remember in me, Nothing I ever said with a grace, Nothing I did that you cared to see,
 Nothing I was that deserves a place In your mind, now I leave you, set you free.

Conceded! In turn, concede to me, Such things have been as a mutual
 flame.
 Your soul's locked fast; but, love for a key,
 You might let it loose, till I grew the
 same
 In your eyes, as in mine you stand:
 strange plea!

For then; then, what would it matter
 to me
 That I was the harsh, ill-favoured
 one?

We both should be like as pea and pea ;
It was ever so since the world begun :
So, let me proceed with my reverie.

IV

How strange it were if you had all me, As I have all you in my heart and
brain,
You, whose least word brought gloom or glee,
Who never lifted the hand in vain
Will hold mine yet, from over the sea !

V

Strange, if a face, when you thought of me,
Rose like your own face present now,
With eyes as dear in their due degree, Much such a mouth, and as bright a brow,
Till you saw yourself, while you cried
'Tis She !'

VI

Well, you may, or you must, set down
to me
Love that was life, life that was love ;
A tenure of breath at your lips' decree, A passion to stand as your thoughts
approve,
A rapture to fall where your foot might
be.

VII

But did one touch of such love for me Come in a word or a look of yours, Whose words and looks will, circling,
flee
Round me and round while life
endures,—
Could I fancy 'As I feel, thus feels He ;'

VIII

Why, fade you might to a thing like me,
And your hair grow these coarse hanks of hair,
And your skin, this bark of a gnarled
tree,—
You might turn myself ; should I know or care,
When I should be dead of joy, James Lee ?

GOLD HAIR :

A STORY OF PORNIC

I

Oh, the beautiful girl, too white,
Who lived at Pornic, down by the sea, Just where the sea and the Loire unite !
And a boasted name in Brittany She bore, which I will not write.

II

Too white, for the flower of life is red ;
Her flesh was the soft, seraphic screen Of a soul that is meant (her parents said)
To just see earth, and hardly be seen,
And blossom in Heaven instead.

III

Yet earth saw one thing, one how fair !
One grace that grew to its full on
earth :
Smiles might be sparse on her cheek so sparse,
And her waist want half a girdle's
girth,
But she had her great gold hair.

IV

Hair, such a wonder of flax and floss, Freshness and fragrance—floods of it, too !
Gold, did I say ? Nay, gold's mere dross :

Here, Life smiled, 'Think what I meant to do !'
And Love sighed, 'Fancy my loss !'

V

So, when she died, it was scarce more
strange
Than that, when some delicate evening dies,
And you follow its spent sun's pallid
range,
There's a shoot of colour startles the skies
With sudden, violent change,—

VI

That, while the breath was nearly to seek,
As they put the little cross to her lips,

She changed ; a spot came out on her cheek,

A spark from her eye in mid-eclipse,
And she broke forth, 'I must speak !'

VII

'Not my hair !' made the girl her moan—

'All the rest is gone or to go ;
But the last, last grace, my all, my own, Let it stay in the grave, that the ghosts may know !
Leave my poor gold hair alone !'

VIII

The passion thus vented, dead lay she ;
Her parents sobbed their worst on that,
All friends joined in, nor observed
degree :

For indeed the hair was to wonder at,
As it spread—not flowing free,

IX

But curled around her brow, like a crown,
And coiled beside her cheeks, like a cap,
And calmed about her neck—ay, down
To her breast, pressed flat, without a gap
I' the gold, it reached her gown.

X

All kissed that face, like a silver wedge Mid the yellow wealth, nor disturbed its hair ;
E'en the priest allowed death's privilege,
As he planted the crucifix with care
On her breast, 'twixt edge and edge.

XI

And thus was she buried, inviolate Of body and soul, in the very space
By the altar ; keeping saintly state In Pornic church, for her pride of race, Pure life, and piteous fate.

XII

And in after-time would your fresh tear
fall, Though your mouth might twitch with a dubious smile,

As they told you of gold both robe and pall,

How she prayed them leave it alone
awhile,
So it never was touched at all.

XIII

Years flew ; this legend grew at last
The life of the lady ; all she had done,
All been, in the memories fading fast Of lover and friend, was summed in
one

Sentence survivors passed :

XIV

To wit, she was meant for Heaven, not earth ;
Had turned an angel before the
time :
Yet, since she was mortal, in such dearth
Of frailty, all you could count a crime
Was—she knew her gold hair's worth.

XV

At little pleasant Pornic church, It chanced, the pavement wanted repair,
Was taken to pieces : left in the lurch,
A certain sacred space lay bare,
And the boys began research.

XVI

'Twas the space where our sires would lay a saint,
A benefactor,—a bishop, suppose,
A baron with armour-adornments
quaint,
A dame with chased ring and jewelled
rose,
Things sanctity saves from taint ;

XVII

So we come to find them in after-days When the corpse is presumed to have done with gauds
Of use to the living, in many ways :
For the boys get pelf, and the town applauds,
And the church deserves the praise.

XVIII

They grubbed with a will : and at length
—O cor

Humanum, pectora caeca, and the
rest !—

They found—no gauds they were prying
for,

No ring, no rose, but—who would have guessed ?—

A double Louis-d'or !

XIX

Here was a case for the priest : he heard, Marked, inwardly digested, laid Finger on nose, smiled, 'A little bird Chirps in my ear' : then, 'Bring a spade,
Dig deeper !' —he gave the word.

XX

And lo, when they came to the coffin-lid,

Or the rotten planks which composed it once,

Why, there lay the girl's skull wedged amid

A mint of money, it served for the nonce

To hold in its hair-heaps hid !

XXI

Hid there ? Why ? Could the girl be wont

(She, the stainless soul) to treasure up Money, earth's trash and Heaven's affront ?

Had a spider found out the communion-cup,

Was a toad in the christening-font ?

XXII

Truth is truth : too true it was.

Gold ! She hoarded and hugged it
first,

Longed for it, leaned o'er it, loved it—
alas—

Till the humour grew to a head and burst,

And she cried, at the final pass,—

XXIII

'Talk not of God, my heart is stone !
Nor lover nor friend—be gold for
both !

Gold I lack ; and, my all, my own, It shall hide in my hair. I scarce die loth,

If they let my hair alone !'

XXIV

Louis-d'ors, some six times five,
And duly double, every piece.

Now, do you see ? With the priest to shrive,

With parents preventing her soul's release

By kisses that kept alive,—

XXV

With Heaven's gold gates about to ope.
With friends' praise, gold-like, hingering still,

An instinct had bidden the girl's hand grobe

For gold, the true sort—'Gold is Heaven, if you will ;

But I keep earth's too, I hope.'

XXVI

Enough ! The priest took the grave's grim yield :

The parents, they eyed that price o
sin

As if thirty pieces lay revealed On the place to bury strangers in,
The hideous Potter's Field.

XXVII

But the priest bethought him : " Mill that's spilt "

—You know the adage ! Watch and pray !

Saints tumble to earth with so slight tilt !

It would build a new altar ; that we may !'

And the altar therewith was built.

XXVIII

Why I deliver this horrible verse ?

As the text of a sermon, which no I preach :

Evil or good may be better or worse In the human heart, but the mixtur of each

Is a marvel and a curse.

XXIX

The candid incline to surmise of late
That the Christian faith may be false, I find ;
For our Essays-and-Reviews' debate Begins to tell on the public mind,
And Colenso's words have weight :

XXX

I still, to suppose it true, for my part, See reasons and reasons ; this, to begin :
'Tis the faith that launched point-blank her dart
At the head of a lie—taught Original
Sin,
The Corruption of Man's Heart.

THE WORST OF IT

I

WOULD it were I had been false, not you !
I that am nothing, not you that are
all :
I, never the worse for a touch or two On my speckled hide ; not you, the
pride
Of the day, my swan, that a first fleck's
fall
On her wonder of white must unswan, undo !

II

I had dipped in life's struggle, and out
again,
Bore specks of it here, there, easy to
see,
When I found my swan and the cure was plain ;
The dull turned bright as I caught your white On my bosom : you saved me—saved in vain
If you ruined yourself, and all through me !

III

Yes, all through the speckled beast that I am,
Who taught you to stoop ; you gave me yourself,

And bound your soul by the vows that damn :
Since on better thought you break, as you ought,
Vows—words, no angel set down, some
elf
Mistook,—for an oath, an epigram !

IV

Yes, might I judge you, here were my
heart,
And a hundred its like, to treat as you pleased !
I choose to be yours, for my proper part, Yours, leave or take, or mar me or
make ;
If I acquiesce, why should you be teased With the conscience-prick and the memory-smart ?

V

But what will God say ? Oh, my sweet, Think, and be sorry you did this
thing !
Though earth were unworthy to feel
your feet,
There 's a Heaven above may deserve
your love :
Should you forfeit Heaven for a snapt gold ring
And a promise broke, were it just or meet ?

VI

And I to have tempted you ! I, who tried
Your soul, no doubt, till it sank !
Unwise,
I loved, and was lowly, loved and aspired, Loved, grieving or glad, till I made you mad,
And you meant to have hated and despised—Whereas, you deceived me nor inquired !

VII

She, ruined ? How ? No Heaven for her ?
Crowns to give, and none for the brow That looked like marble and smelt like myrrh ?
Shall the robe be worn, and the palm-branch borne,

And she go graceless, she graced now Beyond all saints, as themselves aver?

VIII

Hardly! That must be understood!
The earth is your place of penance,
then;
And what will it prove? I desire your
good,
But, plot as I may, I can find no way How a blow should fall, such as falls on
men, Nor prove too much for your womanhood.

IX

It will come, I suspect, at the end of life, When you walk alone, and review the
past;
And I, who so long shall have done with
strife,
And journeyed my stage, and earned my wage,
And retired as was right,—I am called
at last
When the devil stabs you, to lend the knife.

X

He stabs for the minute of trivial wrong, Nor the other hours are able to save,
The happy, that lasted my whole life
long:
For a promise broke, not for first words spoke,
The true, the only, that turn my grave
To a blaze of joy and a crash of song.

XI

Witness beforehand! Off I trip On a safe path gay through the flowers you flung:
My very name made great by your lip,
And my heart a-glow with the good
I know
Of a perfect year when we both were
young,
And I tasted the angels' fellowship.

XII

And witness, moreover . . . Ah, but wait!
I spy the loop whence an arrow
shoots!

It may be for yourself, when you meditate,
That you grieve—for slain ruth,
murdered truth:
'Though falsehood escape in the end,
what boots?
How truth would have triumphed!
—you sigh too late.

XIII

Ay, who would have triumphed like you,
I say!
Well, it is lost now; well, you must
bear,
Abide and grow fit for a better day:
You should hardly grudge, could I be your judge!
But hush! For you, can be no despair:
There's amends: 'tis a secret: hope and pray!

XIV

For I was true at least—oh, true enough!
And, dear, truth is not as good as it seems!
Commend me to conscience! Idle stuff!
Much help is in mine, as I mope and pine,
And skulk through day, and scowl in my dreams
At my swan's obtaining the crow's rebuff.

XV

Men tell me of truth now—'False!
I cry:
Of beauty—'A mask, friend! Look
beneath!'
We take our own method, the devil
and I,
With pleasant and fair and wise and rare:
And the best we wish to what lives, is
—death;
Which even in wishing, perhaps we lie!

XVI

Far better commit a fault and have
done—
As you, dear!—for ever; and choose the pure,

And look where the healing waters run,
And strive and strain to be good again,
And a place in the other world ensure,
All glass and gold, with God for its sun.

XVII

Misery ! What shall I say or do ?
I cannot advise, or, at least, persuade :
Most like, you are glad you deceived me—rue
No whit of the wrong : you endured too long,
Have done no evil and want no aid, Will live the old life out and chance the new.

XVIII

And your sentence is written all the
same,
And I can do nothing,—pray, perhaps :
But somehow the world pursues its
game,
If I pray, if I curse,—for better or
worse :
And my faith is torn to a thousand scrapes,
And my heart feels ice while my words breathe flame.

XIX

Dear, I look from my hiding-place.
Are you still so fair ? Have you still the eyes ?
Be happy ! Add but the other grace, Be good ! Why want what the angels vaunt ?
I knew you once : but in Paradise, If we meet, I will pass nor turn my
face.

DÎS ALITER VISUM ;

OR

LE BYRON DE NOS JOURS

I

STOP, let me have the truth of that !
Is that all true ? I say, the day
Ten years ago when both of us Met on a morning, friends—as thus We meet this evening, friends or what ?—

II

Did you—because I took your arm And sillily smiled, ‘ A mass of brass That sea looks, blazing underneath ! ’ While up the cliff-road edged with heath,
We took the turns nor came to harm—

III

Did you consider ‘ Now makes twice That I have seen her, walked and talked
With this poor pretty thoughtful thing, Whose worth I weigh : she tries to sing ;
Draws, hopes in time the eye grows nice ;

IV

‘ Reads verse and thinks she understands ;
Loves all, at any rate, that’s great, Good, beautiful ; but much as we Down at the Bath-house love the sea, Who breathe its salt and bruise its sands :

V

‘ While . . do but follow the fishing-gull That flaps and floats from wave to cave !
There’s the sea-lover, fair my friend !
What then ? Be patient, mark and mend !
Had you the making of your skull ? ’

VI

And did you, when we faced the church With spire and sad slate roof, aloof From human fellowship so far,
Where a few graveyard crosses are,
And garlands for the swallows’ perch,—

VII

Did you determine, as we stepped O’er the lone stone fence, ‘ Let me get Her for myself, and what’s the earth With all its art, verse, music, worth—Compared with love, found, gained, and kept ?

VIII

‘ Schumann’s our music-maker now ; Has his march-movement youth and
mouth ?

Ingres's the modern man that paints;
Which will lean on me, of his saints?
Heine for songs; for kisses, how?

IX

And did you, when we entered, reached The votive frigate, soft aloft Riding on air this hundred years, Safe-smiling at old hopes and fears,— Did you draw profit while she preached?

X

Resolving 'Fools we wise men grow!
Yes, I could easily blurt out curt Some question that might find reply As prompt in her stopped lips, dropped eye,
And rush of red to cheek and brow:

XI

'Thus were a match made, sure and fast,
'Mid the blue weed-flowers round the mound
Where, issuing, we shall stand and stay For one more look at Baths and bay, Sands, sea-gulls, and the old church
last—

XII

'A match 'twixt me, bent, wiggled, and lamed,
Famous, however, for verse and worse,
Sure of the Fortieth spare Arm-chair
When gout and glory seat me there, So, one whose love-freaks pass un-blamed,—

XIII

'And this young beauty, round and sound
As a mountain-apple, youth and truth With loves and doves, at all events With money in the Three per Cents; Whose choice of me would seem profound:—

XIV

'She might take me as I take her.
Perfect the hour would pass, alas!
Climb high, love high, what matter?
Still,
Feet, feelings, must descend the hill:
An hour's perfection can't recur.

XV

'Then follows Paris and full time For both to reason: "Thus with
us!" She'll sigh, "Thus girls give body and
soul
At first word, think they gain the goal,
When 'tis the starting-place they climb!

XVI

"My friend makes verse and gets renown;
Have they all fifty years, his peers?
He knows the world, firm, quiet, and gay
Boys will become as much one day: They're fools; he cheats, with beard less brown.

XVII

"For boys say, Love me or I die!
He did not say, The truth is, youth
I want, who am old and know too much;
I'd catch youth: lend me sight and
touch!
Drop heart's blood where life's wheels grate dry!"

XVIII

'While I should make rejoinder'—(then It was, no doubt, you ceased that least Light pressure of my arm in yours)
"I can conceive of cheaper cures For a yawning-fit o'er books and men.

XIX

"What? All I am, was, and might
be,
All, books taught, art brought, life's whole strife, Painful results since precious, just Were fitly exchanged in wise disgust For two cheeks freshened by youth and sea?

XX

"All for a nosegay!—what came first;
With fields on flower, untried each
side;
I rally, need my books and men,
And find a nosegay: drop it, then,
No match yet made for best or worst!"

XXI

That ended me. You judged the porch
We left by, Norman; took our look At sea and sky; wondered so few Find out the place for air and view; Remarked the sun began to scorch;

XXII

Descended, soon regained the Baths, And then, good-bye! Years ten since
then:

Ten years! We meet: you tell me,
now,

By a window-seat for that cliff-brow,
On carpet-strips for those sand-paths.

XXIII

Now I may speak: you fool, for all Your lore! WHO made things plain in vain?

What was the sea for? What, the grey Sad church, that solitary day, Crosses and graves and swallows' call?

XXIV

Was there nought better than to enjoy?
No feat which, done, would make time break,
And let us pent-up creatures through Into eternity, our due?
No forcing earth teach Heaven's employ?

XXV

No wise beginning, here and now, What cannot grow complete (earth's feat)
And Heaven must finish, there and
then?
No tasting earth's true food for men,
Its sweet in sad, its sad in sweet?

XXVI

No grasping at love, gaining a share O' the sole spark from God's life at strife
With death, so, sure of range above
The limits here? For us and love, Failure; but, when God fails, despair.

XXVII

This you call wisdom? Thus you add Good unto good again, in vain?

You loved, with body worn and weak;
I loved, with faculties to seek:
Were both loves worthless since ill-clad?

XXVIII

Let the mere star-fish in his vault Crawl in a wash of weed, indeed, Rose-jacynth to the finger-tips:
He, whole in body and soul, outstrips Man, found with either in default.

XXIX

But what's whole, can increase no more, Is dwarfed and dies, since here's its sphere.
The devil laughed at you in his sleeve!
You knew not? That, I well believe;
Or you had saved two souls: nay, four.

XXX

For Stephanie sprained last night her wrist,
Ankle, or something. 'Pooh,' cry
you?
At any rate she danced, all say, Vilely: her vogue has had its day.
Here comes my husband from his whist.

TOO LATE

I

HERE was I with my arm and heart And brain, all yours for a word, a want Put into a look—just a look, your part,— While mine, to repay it . . . vainest
vaunt,
Were the woman, that's dead, alive
to hear,
Had her lover, that's lost, love's proof to show!
But I cannot show it; you cannot speak From the churchyard neither, miles removed,
Though I feel by a pulse within my
cheek,
Which stabs and stops, that the woman I loved Needs help in her grave and finds none
near,
Wants warmth from the heart which sends it—so!

II

Did I speak once angrily, all the drear
days

You lived, you woman I loved so well, Who married the other? Blame or
praise,

Where was the use then? Time would tell,

And the end declare what man for you,

What woman for me was the choice
of God.

But, Edith dead! no doubting more!

I used to sit and look at my life

As it rippled and ran till, right before,

A great stone stopped it: oh, the
strife

Of waves at that stone some devil threw

In my life's midcurrent, thwarting
God!

III

But either I thought, 'They may churn and chide

Awhile, my waves which came for their joy

And found this horrible stone full-tide:

Yet I see just a thread escape, deploy

Through the evening-country, silent
and safe,

And it suffers no more till it finds the
sea.'

Or else I would think, 'Perhaps some
night

When new things happen, a meteor-
ball

May slip through the sky in a line of
light,

And earth breathe hard, and landmarks fall,

And my waves no longer champ nor chafe,

Since a stone will have rolled from its place: let be!'

IV

But, dead! All's done with: wait who may,

Watch and wear and wonder who will.

Oh, my whole life that ends to-day!

Oh, my soul's sentence, sounding still,

'The woman is dead, that was none of his;

And the man, that was none of hers,
may go!'

There's only the past left: worry that!

Wreak, like a bull, on the empty coat,

Rage, its late wearer is laughing at!

Tear the collar to rags, having missed
his throat;

Strike stupidly on—'This, this and this,

Where I would that a bosom received the blow!'

V

I ought to have done more: once my
speech,

And once your answer, and there, the
end,

And Edith was henceforth out of reach!

Why, men do more to deserve a friend,

Be rid of a foe, get rich, grow wise,

Nor, folding their arms, stare fate in the face.

Why, better even have burst like a thief

And borne you away to a rock for us two

In a moment's horror, bright, bloody and brief,

Then changed to myself again—'I slew

Myself in that moment; a ruffian lies

Somewhere: your slave, see, born in his place!'

VI

What did the other do? You be judge!

Look at us, Edith! Here are we both!

Give him his six whole years: I grudge

None of the life with you, nay, I loathe

Myself that I grudged his start in advance

Of me who could overtake and pass.

But, as if he loved you! No, not he,

Nor anyone else in the world, 'tis
plain:

Who ever heard that another, free

As I, young, prosperous, sound and sane,

Poured life out, proffered it—'Half a glance

Of those eyes of yours and I drop the glass!'

VII

Handsome, were you? 'Tis more than they held,

More than they said; I was 'ware and watched:

I was the 'scapegrace, this rat belled
The cat, this fool got his whiskers scratched :

The others ? No head that was turned, no heart

Broken, my lady, assure yourself !
Each soon made his mind up ; so and so Married a dancer, such and such Stole his friend's wife, stagnated slow, Or maundered, unable to do as much,
And muttered of peace where he had no part :

While, hid in the closet, laid on the shelf,—

VIII

On the whole, you were let alone, I
think !

So, you looked to the other, who acquiesced ;

My rival, the proud man,—prize your pink

Of poets ! A poet he was ! I've guessed :

He rhymed you his rubbish nobody
read,

Loved you and doted you—did not I laugh !

There was a prize ! But we both were tried.

Oh, heart of mine, marked broad with her mark,

Tekel, found wanting, set aside, Scorned ! See, I bleed these tears in the dark

Till comfort come and the last be bled :
He ? He is tagging your epitaph.

IX

If it would only come over again !

—Time to be patient with me, and probe

This heart till you punctured the proper vein,

Just to learn what blood is : twitch the robe

From that blank lay-figure your fancy draped,

Prick the leathern heart till the—verses spirt !

And late it was easy ; late, you walked Where a friend might meet you ;

Edith's name

Arose to one's lip if one laughed or talked ;

If I heard good news, you heard the
same ;

When I woke, I knew that your breath
escaped ;

I could bide my time, keep alive, alert.

X

And alive I shall keep and long, you will see !

I knew a man, was kicked like a dog From gutter to cesspool ; what cared he

So long as he picked from the filth his prog ?

He saw youth, beauty, and genius die,
And jollily lived to his hundredth year.

But I will live otherwise : none of such
life !

At once I begin as I mean to end.

Go on with the world, get gold in its strife, Give your spouse the slip, and betray

your friend !

There are two who decline, a woman
and I,

And enjoy our death in the darkness
here.

XI

I liked that way you had with your curls Wound to a ball in a net behind :

Your cheek was chaste as a quaker-girl's,
And your mouth—there was never,

to my mind,

Such a funny mouth, for it would not
shut ;

And the dented chin, too—what a
chin !

There were certain ways when you spoke, some words

That you know you never could pronounce :

You were thin, however ; like a bird's Your hand seemed—some would say, the pounce

Of a scaly-footed hawk—all but !

The world was right when it called you thin.

XII

But I turn my back on the world :
I take

Your hand, and kneel, and lay to my lips.

Bid me live, Edith! Let me slake Thirst at your presence! Fear no slips!
'Tis your slave shall pay, while his soul
endures,
Full due, love's whole debt, summum jus.
My queen shall have high observance, planned Courtship made perfect, no least line Crossed without warrant. There you
stand,
Warm too, and white too: would this wine Had washed all over that body of
yours,
Ere I drank it, and you down with it, thus!

ABT VOGLER

(AFTER HE HAS BEEN EXTEMPORIZING UPON THE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT OF HIS INVENTION)

I

Would that the structure brave, the manifold music I build, Bidding my organ obey, calling its keys to their work, Claiming each slave of the sound, at a touch, as when Solomon willed Armies of angels that soar, legions of demons that lurk, Man, brute, reptile, fly,—alien of end and of aim, Adverse, each from the other heaven-high, hell-deep removed,— Should rush into sight at once as he named the ineffable Name, And pile him a palace straight, to pleasure the princess he loved!

II

Would it might tarry like his, the beautiful building of mine, This which my keys in a crowd pressed and importuned to raise!
Ah, one and all, how they helped, would dispart now and now combine, Zealous to hasten the work, heighten their master his praise!

And one would bury his brow with a blind plunge down to hell, Burrow awhile and build, broad on the roots of things, Then up again swim into sight, having based me my palace well, Founded it, fearless of flame, flat on the nether springs.

III

And another would mount and march, like the excellent minion he was, Ay, another and yet another, one crowd but with many a crest, Raising my rampired walls of gold as transparent as glass, Eager to do and die, yield each his place to the rest: For higher still and higher (as a runner tips with fire,
When a great illumination surprises a festal night—Outlining round and round Rome's dome from space to spire) Up, the pinnaced glory reached, and the pride of my soul was in sight.

IV

In sight? Not half! for it seemed, it was certain, to match man's birth, Nature in turn conceived, obeying an impulse as I;
And the emulous heaven yearned down, made effort to reach the earth, As the earth had done her best, in my passion, to scale the sky: Novel splendours burst forth, grew familiar and dwelt with mine, Not a point nor peak but found and fixed its wandering star; Meteor-moons, balls of blaze: and they did not pale nor pine, For earth had attained to heaven, there was no more near nor far.

V

Nay more; for there wanted not who walked in the glare and glow, Presences plain in the place; or, fresh from the Protoplast, Furnished for ages to come, when a kindlier wind should blow, Lured now to begin and live, in a house to their liking at last;
